TOBACCO

ESTABLISHED 1886

SOLE ORGAN OF THE WHOLESALE AND RETAIL TOBACCO TRADE

Vol. LXIV. No. 1 NEW YORK, OCTOBER 18, 1917. PER ANNUM, $2.00 SIX MONTHS, $1.00

TOBACCO TRADE LEADS

Oldest and most American of the industries of the United States, the tobacco trade is no "slacker" when it comes to promoting the sale of Liberty Bonds. In helping to make the second issue a tremendous success, the Liberty Loan Committee for the Tobacco Trade of the Second Federal Reserve District is a leader. Work has been done that attests the patriotism of men engaged in the tobacco business. Up to Tuesday night, the bond purchases promoted by this active and patriotic committee amounted to $3,744,000, exceeding considerably the showing made by representatives of any other industry in the district. A most excellent start has been made. And the splendid effort, kept up so long as the campaign lasts, will be productive, not only of greater credit for the tobacco trade but also of direct benefit for every one who buys a Liberty Bond.

There shouldn't be any disposition to let the "big fellows" do it all. Every retailer, however small his business may be, can manage advantageously to purchase at least one bond. Every clerk behind a cigar counter should avail himself of the opportunity to buy. A Liberty Bond bought is better than money in the savings bank. A purchase on the installment plan is an incentive to thrift.

If he is minded to buy, no difficulty need stand in the way of any man. Nowhere can one secure a safer, more desirable investment than a Liberty Bond.

SHIPPING CONDITIONS

WASHINGTON, October 15.—Government experts here have the following to say about the present ocean shipping conditions. Shipping to United Kingdom ports continues easy. For attractive cargo, rates are somewhat lower, due to a certain extent to the fact that export license requirements are temporarily interfering with the forwarding of commercial cargo.

To French and Italian ports rates are steady, but firm space is more plentiful and licensed shipments, or those not requiring licenses, can be cleared promptly.

Greek line steamers are not yet in service, although two chartered boats are advertised to the ports of Piraeus and Saloniki for sailing late this month. United States Government licenses and Letters of Assurance from the British Embassy are required before shipping can be arranged.

To Holland no shipping space is immediately available. To Denmark and Norway bookings are being made, subject, of course, to licenses. To Sweden shipping at present is interrupted and some ships now loaded will have to discharge their cargoes owing to the impossibility of obtaining the necessary export permits.

To South American ports rates are lower and space readily obtainable. To the Orient, Australia and New Zealand rates are generally firm. However, there is an upward tendency in rates to Oriental ports, owing to a considerable movement of cargo, so that space is being fully engaged well in advance. The movement is principally overland via Pacific ports.

PRICE ADJUSTMENT CONTINUES.

Throughout the country, during the past two weeks, hundreds of daily papers have published news stories of one sort or another, pertaining to prices advanced on cigars, cigarettes and tobacco. From almost every point of view the situation has been depicted. It has been explained again and again that the increased cost of raw material, the higher wages paid, the difficulties of transportation and the greater outlay for incidentals, have forced prices up. And war taxes have to be added. The dealer who stays in business must ask more for his goods. Failure to do so now amounts to a declaration of intent to become bankrupt.

Attempts to maintain all old prices are ruinous. Conditions are changed. No consumer, reasonably now may expect to buy goods so cheaply as he did before the war.

THE FIRST WEEK'S WORK

To our Committeemen and Co-Workers:

I am exceedingly gratified to report that the yield of the first week of our campaign for Liberty Loan subscriptions amounts to not less than $3,400,000.

This is indeed a splendid record for an industry that has just been loaded with an additional sixty or seventy million dollar tax burden.

This manifestation of intense patriotism is something that every tobacco man and the entire industry may well be proud of.

Let us keep up the good work with increased energy during the remaining twelve days of the campaign and let us make every effort to place the tobacco trade on the top of the industrial list. To reach that goal

We must endeavor to secure the subscriptions not only of the companies that we are interested in, but of every officer, manager, clerk and employee connected with them;

We must continue our personal canvass of manufacturers, jobbers, and leaf dealers;

We must enlist the services of every salesman in order to reach the retail trade;

We must arrange for shop meetings in order to reach the workingmen; and

We must not neglect any opportunity to secure a subscription whether from a tobacco man, supply man or any other person or concern.

And so let us enter upon the second week of this campaign with a strong determination to do our full duty to the Government and to make a record for our industry.

And please do not fail to send your subscription to our Secretary from day to day, who will forward them to the respective banks indicated, and see that the tobacco industry receives due credit for same.

Cordially and sincerely yours,

Edward Wise,

Chairman.

MENOCAL'S CONTRIBUTION

The President of Cuba Sends 100,000 Havana Cigarettes to Be Smoked by American Soldiers in France.

Victor Hugo Barranco, special agent in New York, of the Cuban Government writes to The Sun, saying:

"I have the pleasure of advising you in behalf of the Hon. Mario G. Menocal, President of the Republic of Cuba, that he has made a personal contribution of 100,000 Cuban cigarettes for the brave American soldiers now in France.

"These cigarettes, which have just arrived, have been turned over to the quartermaster's department, United States Army, in this city, for transmission abroad."

Commenting on this notable contribution, The Sun says:

"If the head of another Government is prepared to manifest his solicitude for the comfort of American soldiers in such a practical way surely Americans with sons and brothers and sweethearts and friends on the way to the front will not be slow to do their bit."

In 1882 Mario Menocal, then in his sixteenth year, was sent to school in the United States, studying first in the Chautauqua Institution, later at Maryland Agricultural College. In 1884 he entered Cornell University, graduating from the School of Engineering four years later. In 1895, soon after the outbreak of the Cuban revolution, he presented himself to Gen. Maximo Gomez, asking to be enlisted in the ranks of the insurgents.

"What are you, anyway?" asked the General.

"An engineer," replied Menocal.

"Ah, that's good," said the General. "A fellow who knows how to build railroads ought to be good at destroying them."

Menocal was assigned the command of Col. Alejandro Rodriguez, but was given no rank. A few days later Rodriguez's force encountered a Spanish column and a lively skirmish ensued. Menocal, after remaining idle at his Colonel's side for some moments, asked impatiently, "When do I begin to fight?"

At that instant an insurgent fell dead in front of him.

"There you have a gun and a place to fill," answered Rodriguez, and Menocal, seizing the rifle from the grasp of the fallen patriot, took part in the fight.

A few days later he was made a Captain. This was the beginning of his distinguished military career. He became a leader in the war for independence and rose to the rank of General. And while he was fighting and leading fighters he learned what tobacco—or the lack of it—means to a soldier.

During the Spanish-American War, the present President of Cuba was the Major Menocal who performed such good service with the American troops.

According to reliable reports, the Schulte stores have adopted a similar schedule which goes into effect shortly.

Individual retailers throughout the country, according to reports received by the T. M. A., are making similar advances.

"Many of the nickel cigars," said Secretary Dushkind of the T. M. A., "are still being retailed at the old prices, to wit, a nickel each, but quite a number of standard brands have been raised to 6c." Secretary Dushkind thinks that the time is ripe for the cigar manufacturers to get $42.50 their nickel goods, which amount would only be a fair price for cigars, considering the increased taxes and the extraordinary cost of production occasioned by the war conditions. "Nothing," said Mr. Dushkind, "would suit the retailer better than to pay $42.50 for his nickel goods and sell them for 6c. The consumers cheerfully would pay the additional penny. In fact they are expecting such increase."

Andrew Harsch, a Cigar Manufacturer of Le Roy, N. Y., Died After Being Ill for About Three Months.

The death of Andrew Harsch, a well known resident of Le Roy, N. Y., occurred recently at his home on Myrtle street after an illness of about three months. He was born in Germany in 1842 and when nine years old came to America, taking up his residence in Syracuse. In that city, about eleven years later, he married Miss Sophia Overmiller. Later they moved to Le Roy, where up to a year ago Mr. Harsch was engaged in the manufacture of cigars. He was a member of St. Peter's Church.

Besides his wife he leaves ten children, Andrew of Rochester, George of Le Roy, William of the National Army at Camp Dix, and Mrs. Charles Granger of Buffalo, Mrs. Charles Rider of Batavia, Mrs. William Rich, Mrs. James Maire, Mrs. Jacob Kinne, Mrs. Calvin Smith and Mrs. Ira Smith, all of Le Roy.

Tobacco Fund Increased $538.90

"Tobacco Fund Night" at Murray's restaurant on West 42d street, New York, Sunday evening, added $538.90 to the Sun Tobacco Fund for American soldiers in France. At a merry auction, many things from eggs to millinery were sold at war prices. Pat Kyne himself starred as auctioneer of the many edibles and other articles which had been donated.

But before the evening was over he enlisted the services also of Alice Furness, one of the pretty girls of Gus Edwards' revue at the Martinique; Julius Tannen and Mollie King, the Pathé star. Tannen, who has long been a booster for the fund, did a big day's bit, for he had passed the afternoon at Governors Island, where he entertained the soldiers. Miss Furness was one of the most successful auctioneers who has appeared in these parts in a long time. She sold a handsome knitting bag at a record price. Knitting bags are in demand these days.

A topnotch programme was given by singers, dancers and comedians. Ruby Norton of "Furs and Frills," with her songs; the dancing of Peg Rafferty, and Lea Armstrong's South African Kaffee Jazz were among the big hits, but every number in the all star list was encored.

John M. Faulhaber, general manager of the National Vaudeville Artists Association, and John Barrington co-operated with Mr. Kyne and his assistants in making the evening a big success. Each of them furnished several of the acts. Magistrate Corrigan made a corking good speech for the fund.

The United Cigars Co. has declared the regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent on the common stock, payable November 15.

AN UNEXPECTED STRIKE

Cigar Makers in the Tuval Factory Quit Work Without Warning—Higher Wages Demanded—Operations Probably Will Be Resumed Soon.

Making, as it does, high grade clear Havanas exclusively, the Tuval factory has the reputation for paying top notch wages to cigar makers. It seems, however, in these days that even the best paid men are minded to ask for more. Marcelino Perez & Co. had an unpleasant little surprise, Wednesday morning, a week ago. About 10 o'clock, without saying a word, the workmen walked out of the factory. Later, a committee appeared and explained that the men had "gone on a strike to get more money." Otherwise, it was admitted, there was no cause to complain.

Marcelino Perez offered to compromise by paying $1 per thousand more on four sizes. But the strikers were insistent on securing a general increase of $2 per thousand.

The strike still continues but there is a promise now that work will be resumed, in a few days, if not sooner. Coming at a time when holiday orders were pouring into the factory, the strike, to say the least, is a grievous inconvenience. But Marcelino Perez & Co., making up so far as possible for lost time, will do their best to expedite deliveries.

AT THE AMSTERDAM SALE

Prices Obtained for Java Tobacco Were Higher Than Expected—Interesting Comparison of Prices.

Frank W. Mahin, American consul at Amsterdam, reports that a public sale of 9,362 packages (one package equals 179 pounds) of Java and 3,066 of Brazilian tobacco was held in Amsterdam on September 14. The result was higher prices than had been expected where competition existed, but in some other cases buyers had agreed upon a certain maximum which they would offer, and this reduced prices in those instances below previous estimates.

The highest prices for Java, those above the estimates, where competition was active, were from 115 to 200 Dutch cents (46 to 80, American) per half kilo (1.1 pounds). The previous estimate in these two cases was 110 and 135½ Dutch cents, respectively.

The lots affected by the agreement among buyers to make maximum offers were sold as low as 95 Dutch cents (38 American) per half kilo, while some of these lots were withheld from sale altogether.

The Brazilian tobacco brought 136 Dutch cents (57 American) per half kilo; previous estimate, 118 Dutch cents.

The quality of the tobacco was very good. There were no foreign buyers.

FAVORS RIVER TRAFFIC

J. M. Buckner the Big Tobacco Exporter Tells How and Why He Utilized Water Transportation.

Regarding the use by him of inland water transportation, J. M. Buckner, of Louisville, the big tobacco exporter, writes as follows:

"I note that a bulletin recently issued by the Food Administration makes the statement that I sold 40,000,000 pounds of tobacco to the French Government which was shipped by water to New Orleans and thence to France.

"This is partly the truth. I did sell to the French Government even more than 40,000,000 pounds of tobacco, as I have been their representative here for a year.

"My reason for shipping the tobacco by water was that I bought the tobacco all up and down the Ohio river, from Cincinnati to Cairo and in Indiana tributary to the Ohio river.

"The great car shortage last Spring necessitated my making arrangements to get this tobacco to New Orleans by water. As we had vessels there to load the tobacco for France, and as the railroads could not furnish cars and as the French Government needed the tobacco in order to keep their factories going in France, I was compelled to get the tobacco to New Orleans to catch these steamers; so I arranged with the Inland Navigation Co., at St. Louis, which has steel barges propelled by gasoline engines, each barge taking from 600 to 900 hhds., to take this tobacco to New Orleans. When the tobacco arrived in New Orleans in some instances it went alongside of the steamer and was loaded from barge to steamer; that is, if the steamer was ready to receive the cargo, and when this was not done the cargo was taken off the barges and loaded on the docks pending the arrival of the steamer.

"I ship large amounts of tobacco all over the world and am working to try to assist the river traffic and not be compelled to depend on the railroads. This steel barge left Paducah on Friday morning and arrived in New Orleans the following Monday, being only four days; in fact, it made better time than a freight train, and the great advantage was that all the cargo arrived at one time and could be checked by the shipping clerks much easier when it was loaded on the vessels than it could have been checked if it had been shipped by railroads, as the cars arrive at different times.

"I see no reason why the river traffic should not be encouraged on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; in fact, it looks like to me the Government is not on the job and the railroads are holding up the shippers.

"I expect to handle large amounts of tobacco next year for various governments, and I will probably represent France and Sweden and sell considerable tobacco to Spain, also large amounts to Denmark and Norway, and it is my intention to have factories located on the river front where I can have the barge stop in front of the factories and load the tobacco from the factories direct into the barges."

CROP PERCENTAGE

WASHINGTON, October 15.—The composite condition of all crops of the United States on October 1 or at time of harvest was 2.4 per cent. higher than their ten-year average condition on that date, as compared with a condition of 2.5 per cent. above the average on September 1, according to experts of the Department of Agriculture. Final yields per acre of crops last year were about 4.9 per cent. below average. The index number of aggregate crop yields this year is about 7.7 per cent. greater than last year. This year the total acreage cultivated in crops is about 3 per cent. more than last year.

The total production of tobacco this year compared with last year is estimated at 108 per cent. The estimated percentage of yield per acre of condition on October 1, or at harvest on tobacco, was 107.2 per cent., and the change from September 1 estimates was an addition of 0.1 per cent.

Figures of the department show that the level of prices paid producers of the United States for the principal crops decreased about 0.9 per cent. during September; in the last nine years the price level decreased about 2.4 per cent. during September. On October 1 the index figure of prices was about 69.3 per cent. higher than a year ago, 116.1 per cent. higher than two years ago, and 104.1 per cent. higher than the average of the last nine years on October 1.

The Aurora Loose Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Co., with a capital of $20,000 has been incorporated at Aurora, Ind. The directors of the new company are: John A. Downard, Fillmore Wingate, James Thompson, John O. Hamilton and Martin L. Kirkpatrick.

TALE OF THREE THIEVES

Told in Court at the Trial of Jacob Greenberg, a Hartford Dealer Accused of Buying Stolen Tobacco.

Charged with the offense of having bought knowingly about 1,300 pounds of tobacco stolen from the farm of Mrs. Mary Larsen at Glastonbury, Conn., Jacob Greenberg, a tobacco dealer, had his trial in the Supreme Court in Hartford, last week. State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn appeared for the prosecution and A. C. Bill defended.

Three men who recently pleaded guilty in the same court to charges of having stolen the goods involved and are awaiting sentence on the charges were the chief witnesses against Greenberg.

Ike Moyger, one of the three men awaiting sentence, testified to a conversation in which, he alleges, Greenberg suggested that Moyger should steal small quantities of tobacco from barns. Greenberg told Moyger he could make considerable money in that way. Moyger admitted, under cross-examination, that he had been buying tobacco about the State and selling it to Greenberg at a profit of half a cent a pound. Moyger then told of stealing three loads of tobacco from the farm of Mrs. Mary Larsen, Glastonbury, between 11 p. m. and 3 a. m. one evening in December, 1916, delivering it to Greenberg, getting a check for $140 in payment, cashing the check in Hartford and then leaving the city as a fugitive.

Richard J. McAuliffe, cashier of the Southern New England Telephone Co. office in this city, was called to the stand to testify that a telephone listed as Charter 518-3 was used by both Jacob Greenberg and Dr. John Greenberg.

William Moran, manager of the Meriden Telephone Exchange, was called to introduce the record of a call, December 9, 1916, at 3:11 a. m., from the depot at Meriden to Charter 518-3, Hartford.

Louis Sonowsky, another of the men awaiting sentence, told of calling up the accused by telephone from Meriden and telling him that he had run away from Hartford and wanted something done about the charge of theft on which he was sought by the Hartford police. He testified that Greenberg responded: "Don't worry. Everything will be all right. I'll fix it up so that you'll be home soon." During a later telephone call from New York, he said, Greenberg told him he had better not call him up any more. On cross-examination he said he was sure of the voice over the telephone, though he had only heard it once before.

Harry Freedman, last of the trio, told a similar story of the thefts and described a trip through St. Louis, Chicago and Cleveland following the stealing of the tobacco.

TOBACCO TOO VALUABLE

To Lose This Year Through Any Lack of Effort—Wisconsin Farmers Urged to Heat Their Sheds.

EDGERTON, Wis., October 12.—The week has brought but very little weather suitable for curing the tobacco crop, it being far too cool and unseasonable for October. Unless a change to warmer conditions comes soon growers should resort immediately to artificial heating of their sheds if they expect to save much of the later harvested portion of the crop. A few charcoal pots burned beneath the hanging leaf would accomplish wonders in assisting in the curing. Tobacco is too valuable this year to warrant any neglect or carelessness on the part of the farmers. To allow any portion of the crop to become fat stems from freezing in the sheds cannot but result in a loss, for buyers will certainly not receive such damaged leaf at contract price, nor do they want it at any price. So the growers are again urged to look carefully after their sheds.

The sampling of the 1916 packings is about completed and the goods are finding a ready market in the eastern centers, there being very little to offer the trade by local packers.

The shipments out of storage reach 250 cases and four cars of bundles from this market since last report.—Edgerton Reporter.

SHORTENING THE WAR.

No more convincing argument could be made to the people of Germany of the hopelessness of victory being obtained by continued fighting than a great oversubscription to the Liberty Loan demonstrating not only the tremendous power of America but the fact that the American people are wholeheartedly in favor of prosecuting the war with vigor and willing to finance our Government to the limit.

Every purchase of a Liberty Loan Bond not only supplies the sinews of war but it shoots a fact into the German mind—the fact that the American people are behind the American Army and behind the American President, and that there is no end to this war except the achievement of the ends that America is fighting for. Every purchaser of a Liberty Loan Bond does something to end the war, does something to shorten the war.

When you shorten the war you shorten the terms of our soldiers who serve in France; you save many from death and suffering and privation. You save others from the dangerous voyage across submarined seas and the dangers of service in Europe. The success of the Liberty Loan will be a shortening of the war and a saving of American lives. We have given our sons to battle, we must lend our dollars to back them up, to make them powerful and effective, and as safe and as secure as may be.

"NO PAPERS, NO JOBS"

There are thousands of Americans who are willing to fight for their country but unwilling for unnaturalized foreigners to stay safely here and take their places in industry.

This incipient disaffection should be nipped in the bud by removing the cause.

Abraham Lincoln met the difficulty by telling resident aliens to fight for the country sheltering them in its critical hour—or leave it within sixty days.

That plan is hardly feasible today. We have a labor scarcity. We need all the labor we can get.

The better plan is to preserve the reservoir of labor from all but the drain of war and simply force a more equitable draft by refusing employment to aliens, until taking out a first papers renders them liable to service with our own.

This would not cripple industry, since as many workmen would be left at home as escaped the call, but the quotas would be fairly distributed, and real or fancied cause for complaint removed.

This idea is behind a campaign instituted by the Travelers' Protective Association of America who are seeking the endorsement of the Unietd States Chamber of Commerce to induce employers of labor to deny employment to any and all resident aliens who refuse to take their stand upon an equality with our citizens for the defense of the United States, by making application for naturalization papers.

This method would undoubtedly—unofficially and without embarrassing the administration—render effective service to the country in helping solve the labor scarcity problem, in bringing the alien to a full realization of the value of citizenship, and inasmuch as it entails formal renunciation of allegiance to former rulers, would tend to lessen, if not entirely stop, loose utterances which militate against the national plans.

The slogan of "No papers, no job," as adopted by the association, may be taken as the ultimatum of United States industry to the unnaturalized.

AGAINST PRICE CUTTING.

In his statement before the Federal Trade Commission, K. H. Addington, of the Benjamin Electrical Manufacturing Co., of Chicago, made the following powerful plea for a law to protect the producer from the price cutting retailer:

"Now, are we in business by sufferance? No. But how could we be put out of business? In no way legally; in this way illegally: Let any one of our competitors buy up a sufficient stock of our product, distribute it over this country and advertise at a cut price. He would absolutely destroy our sales organization and our business. No one has thought of doing it; no one would dare to do it, because if for no other reason we are adequately protected by that law as old as the English language itself—the law of torts, which enters into this proposition from the top to the bottom.

"An organized effort to injure would create an actionable right which we could readily protect. It is no less malicious, no less harmful, and certainly should be no less actionable, where the instance is not an organized thing, but an individual purpose in any community, because the harm is just the same, just as certain, and it is purely a question of proportion. As a matter of fact we are suffering from that very situation today, not to the extent of serious financial loss. We are growing, and growing rapidly, all the time, but we could grow faster and we could furnish our product more cheaply, if we could do as we did before the Miles decision put these jobbers, all of them, all down the line, under contract to take our goods only on the stipulation that they maintain a uniform price. Give us that right by a definite and certain law, clear in its vision, and carry that into every business in this country. That does not possess a monopolistic feature. You create a real, permanent basis for the soundest sort of competition."

A MILD CIGAR

How sweet to me is the breath of the sea,
And the seaman's cheerful song!
How soothing is sleep, on the mighty deep,
When the ship glides calmly along!
But sweeter to me, and more soothing far,
Is the fragrant breath of my mild cigar!
In the dim twilight of an autumn night,
A walk in the country lane,
When Nature fair wafts her censer there,
Refreshes the soul again;
But all my peace and delight 'twould mar
To walk there minus a mild cigar!
I love to go thro' the frost and snow,
When the air is crisp and clear,
To the Serpentine, with a flask of wine,
To skate with my Katie dear;
But, tho' dear to me these pleasures are,
The dearest still is the mild cigar!

A Tobacco Freight Rate Controversy

Mayfield, Ky., Shippers Protest Against the Tariff of the Illinois Central Railroad —The Tentative Report of Examiner McGehee of the Interstate Commerce Commission—The Southern Classification — Decision Will Be of Great Importance to the "Black Patch"

WASHINGTON, October 12.—In a tentative report by Examiner McGehee, of the Interstate Commerce Commission in connection with the complaint filed by the Mayfield & Graves County Commercial Club, of Mayfield, Ky., against the Illinois Central against the rates maintained by the latter on the shipment of unmanufactured tobacco from Mayfield to New Orleans, it is held that the rates are not unreasonable.

The conclusions in a tentative report are not to be considered as the last word on the matter by the Commission, although it is to be presumed that a tentative report so carefully prepared and presented to counsel on both sides of the case for their scrutiny previous to the argument of this particular case, may safely be considered as meeting with the approval of at least a majority of the members of the Commission. However, the decision and order of the Commission in any case is not announced until after the case has been submitted on brief or argued. In either argument or brief counsel have, in this way, a better idea of the view which the Commission takes of the case, and is the better prepared to iron out any differences which may appeal to them as compared with the views expressed by the Examiner who has written up for the Commission on the tentative report.

In the case at issue, Docket No. 9663, it was outlined by witnesses in the case that Mayfield is in the center of what is known as the "black patch" or dark-fired tobacco district of Kentucky, and comprises 30 or more counties. Approximately 80 per cent. of this dark-fired tobacco is exported, and there is a heavy movement of such exportations through the port of New Orleans. Mayfield is said to be the largest market in the entire district, shipping out about 20,000,000 pounds annually, as compared with annual shipments from Paducah of about 10,000,000 pounds. The contention was that the rates were unreasonable as compared with rates from Cairo, although there is no appreciable export movement of export tobacco from Cairo, for the reason that the city mentioned is not in a tobacco section.

The rate on unmanufactured tobacco in hogsheads, any quantity, Mayfield to New Orleans, is 30 cents, for a distance of 539 miles; from Paducah and Cairo, 27 cents. Prior to September 15, 1915, the rate from Mayfield was 25 and from Paducah and Cairo, 22 cents. It was the contention that Mayfield should take the Paducah rate.

In support of the above contention it was shown that on all class and on many commodities the rate from Mayfield and Paducah are the same, tobacco being the exception. From the evidence it appeared that while Mayfield for its 539 miles distance pays 30 cents, Nashville enjoys a rate of 27 cents for a distance of 623 miles; Evansville, Henderson and Owensboro, approximately 700 miles each distant from New Orleans, pay 30 cents; Louisville, for a distance of 787 miles, pays 32 cents; Maysville, 972 miles, Lexington for 836 miles and Cincinnati 917 miles, each take a rate of 34 cents. It was also shown that a 17-cent rate is enjoyed by both Mayfield and Paducah on unmanufactured tobacco, moving in hogsheads, any quantity shipments to Memphis. The tentative report is, in part, as follows:

"The increase in the rates from Mayfield, Paducah and Cairo to New Orleans in 1915 was a part of a general readjustment which defendant made at that time in its rates on unmanufactured tobacco. The revision was undertaken because defendant considered that many of its rates on unmanufactured tobacco were lower than conditions warranted. According to defendant, the present rates from Paducah and other river points cited by complainant, to New Orleans are abnormally low and have been brought about by an active, compelling competition of water carriers. Within recent months approximately 100 carloads of tobacco have moved from Paducah to New Orleans by water.

"The southern classification, which governs traffic from Mayfield to New Orleans, rates unmanufactured tobacco, in hogsheads, any quantity, fourth class, but by exceptions to the Classification defendant provides a rating of sixth class. The fourth class and sixth class rates from Mayfield to New Orleans are 42 cents and 29 cents, respectively. Exhibits introduced by defendant show that the rate from Mayfield to New Orleans compares very favorably with rates from other interior tobacco-producing points in the "black patch" to the various Atlantic and Gulf Ports and to interior concentrating and manufacturing points.

"The movement of tobacco from Mayfield is generally in carloads and the average carload weight is said to be approximately 28,000 pounds, and the value from $2,800 to $4,200 per car. Based on a weight of 28,000 pounds, the present Paducah-NewOrleans rate yields $84 per car, or 5.6 cents per car mile. It is said to be necessary for the carriers to provide special facilities, including cranes and platforms, for handling tobacco in hogsheads. According to the defendant tobacco is loaded and unloaded by it at a cost of approximately $5.50 per car.

"While there is probably no movement of lumber from Paducah to New Orleans it is shown that the present Paducah-NewOrleans lumber rate would yield a per car revenue of about $90. From Dyersburg, Tenn., a point on defendant's line about 50 miles south of Mayfield, there is a considerable movement of cottonseed meal to New Orleans and the average carload yields a per car revenue of $57. The value of cottonseed meal is approximately one-fifth that of unmanufactured tobacco.

"It was stated by witness for complainant that an English tobacco firm 'located at Paducah in preference to Mayfield on account of the advantage in freight rates.' According to defendant this firm was actuated in locating at Paducah in preference to Mayfield by reasons wholly foreign to freight rates and having to do rather with the question of securing suitable space for the location of its warehouse."

CHRISTMAS GOODS SCARCE

Says Smoke, the house organ of the Capital City Tobacco Co. of Atlanta:

"Christmas and holiday packages this year are going to be extremely scarce. In fact, we are almost tempted to offer a prize for any dealer who gets them at all.

"We have tried everywhere to get for our trade something in the way of holiday packages —something a little different, even if only with just a few red holly berries printed on it.

"But the truth of the matter is there are no 'Merry Christmas' packages in sight this year. We have been unable to get them from any source. They are just not making them.

"It's about all the average factory can do to get out its regular orders for regular goods. Some of them can't even do that.

"There will be a few Christmas goods. It wouldn't be a real Christmas without a package or two of cigars that had just a little more fancy paper about them and perhaps with the box made in a little different shape—the flat and long kind, for instance.

"But smoke on this: Whatever Christmas goods you get by ransacking the trade will cost you from $1 to $5 per thousand more than the regular goods.

"Then if you should happen to get them they may cost you even more than that. We are looking for the new Federal revenue bill to pass Congress before January 1 and probably as early as December 1, so that the extra revenue to be paid the United States Government will be added to your Christmas bill in the event you are lucky enough to get any Christmas goods at all.

All of which is going to make your Christmas packages, if you get any, cost more than they have cost you heretofore.

Moreover, several factories are now closed down on account of strikes, and there are rumors of a prospective strike in Tampa, which may come most any time.

"So now, Mr. Dealer, here is the moral of all this:

"Don't go chasing after red ribbons and holly leaves, but take what you know you can get.

"As far as positive knowledge goes now the only thing available is the 'regular package,' and—take it from us—the man who gets all he wants and needs of the regular goods for his Christmas trade is going to be an exceedingly lucky individual.

"We wish we had Christmas goods for you. We've done our honest best to get them for you, and we have so far met with failure.

"If anything bobs up we'll let you know in a minute. But don't get up any false hopes."

Throughout North Carolina, tobacco of all kinds continues to bring record prices, the lower grades relatively outdistancing higher quality offerings in bringing unprecendented returns to producers.

IT MAY BE SAD AND COSTLY

When Your Clerk or Salesman Misrepresents Goods Sold for You

Copyrighted by Elton J. Buckley.

How shall an employer with agents, salesmen and other representatives protect himself from trouble occurring through inadvertent, ill advised, improper, untrue and even fraudulent representations and statements made by employes, say about the employer's goods? These statements go wrong, and the customer, of course, always blames the employer for having such salesmen. And sometimes the customer begins suit, again always against the employer.

These questions are brought up by the following letter:

TRENTON, N. J.

We have had in our employ a salesman named ———. His services proved unsatisfactory through his drinking, and last August we gave him a month's notice. He was very resentful and as we found afterward, did several spiteful tricks against us during the last month in our employ. One of these was to guarantee a lot of second tires which he was instructed to sell without a guarantee. We have not yet heard how many of these he sold with the guarantee of 3,500 miles, but already thirteen customers have come back for adjustments, claiming a guarantee from this salesman. At first we thought it bogus, but several of these buyers had witnesses to their guarantees, so we now believe that he guaranteed the tires in order to revenge himself on us. The tire was a cheap first which was sold for a low price and probably most of them will not run 3,500 miles. We have held up the adjustments until we could see where we were at. Are we liable on the fraudulent act of this salesman? Naturally we wish to keep faith with the public, but in a case like this we may be swamped with adjustments which will cause us a heavy loss. E. N. C.

This is a typical illustration of what a dishonest or malicious or careless or ignorant salesman can do to his employer, for this correspondent is bound by his salesman's act without a doubt. A principal is responsible for the acts (this includes representations) of his agent so long as the agent acts within the scope of his employment. "Scope of employment" means this: Jones is a salesman in a retail store. All he is there for is to sell goods. Suppose some day in a financial transaction which is none of his business he calls somebody up and tells him that his employer will guarantee somebody's account. The employer would not be liable, because the clerk acted outside the scope of his employment, which was merely to sell goods.

But in the case submitted and in almost every case where an employe makes untrue representations about merchandise the employer is bound because the clerk or salesman is acting within the scope of his employment, which is to sell goods and, of course, to make representations about them.

That makes an employer almost at the mercy of his salesmen and clerks. Few employers, I think, fully realize that.

A clerk in a dry goods store mistakenly or carelessly guaranteed to several customers a large quantity of delicately dyed fabric. The guarantee was that the color would not change or run. The fact was that this was American dyed stuff and the clerk had expressly been told not to guarantee it. It was held here that the store was bound by the guarantee.

A wholesale jeweler sold a quantity of plated gold rings through a salesman who through a misunderstanding guaranteed them to be solid gold. A retailer who bought some of them under the impression they were low karat gold sold them as solid goods and got into a fierce newspaper scandal and all sorts of trouble. He sued the wholesaler, who tried to get out of it on the ground that the salesman had no authority to guarantee the rings to be solid. The court held this to be no defense. The salesman had acted within the scope of his employment, and the employer was bound.

There are a great many cases along the same line. An automobile salesman guaranteed that a certain car would give twenty-two miles to the gallon of gasoline. If this sale had been made under the usual iron-clad printed form used by most manufacturers there might not have been much to the claim, but as the parties were close friends it slipped through without. It was practically a verbal sale. The customer rejected the car on the ground that at best it would not give more than fourteen miles. The employer of the salesman took the position that the guarantee was void because the salesman had no authority to make it, but the court held that it was within the scope of an automobile salesman's employment to state to a prospective customer how much mileage it would give to the gallon of fuel, and the employer was therefore bound.

In most of these cases the employer had not been careless. He had either not instructed the salesman to do what he had done or had explicitly instructed him to do something else. The salesman did what he did without the slightest express authority, but the courts have always held that even the clearest instructions by employer to employe made no difference if the employe in violating them acted within the scope of his employment.

The only protection which the employer has against this sort of thing is to get the right kind of salesmen and give them the clearest possible instructions what to say about the goods they sell. Many employers attach tags or labels to goods containing as much of a description as they can so as to leave as little as possible for the salesmen to say.

URGES THE USE OF SHORT TERM PAPER

WASHINGTON, October 16.—For various reasons which it considers good in the best interest of commercial practice the Federal Reserve Board is advocating the use of short-time commercial paper, to run, say for not longer than four instead of the present short time six months.

Among the reasons which it advances for the proposed change is the anticipated heavy demands which will be made upon the Federal Reserve banks, making it desirable that the commercial banks throughout the country should have in their portfolios a maximum amount of paper that can be rediscounted with Federal Reserve banks and, this because of the fact that the latter banks can only rediscount paper which has not more than 90 days to run. By this proposed change the Federal Reserve banks anticipate that they will be able to rediscount about 75 per cent. of paper in the hands of commercial banks, whereas with paper running six months, they would not be able to rediscount more than 50 per cent. at any one time.

It is also anticipated that the suggested change would greatly improve the banking conditions of the country, giving them a turnover three times a year instead of twice, and giving credits consideration a like number of times. The borrower whose credit is good, it is pointed out, would have nothing to fear and no reasonable ground for complaint while the borrower with doubtful credit may find it strengthened by more frequent and frank conversations with his bankers. It is urged that an insistence on the adoption of this four months paper will improve the credit situation throughout the country in a very short time, that responsible borrowers will have greater assurances of credit and that the banks themselves will be in a better condition to meet contingencies. It is understood that the suggestion meets with the approval of the bankers.

Reports from the Fourth District, Cleveland, indicate that the tobacco crop has withstood the recent spell of unfavorable weather and is in good condition.

The probabilities are that the tobacco crop in the Richmond or Fifth District will show abnormally increased cash returns. Notwithstanding the fact that earlier in the season the tobacco growers were somewhat pessimistic due to the adverse fertilizer conditions with which they were confronted, the yield is 15 per cent. higher than it was last year, and the prices are not only high, but what may well be termed "fancy." The reports from the Kentucky district also indicate there is a very large production.

GUESSING IN BILLIONS.

Outside of the regular revenues, Congress has provided from war taxes and bond issues approximately $18,000,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30 next. It has appropriated on war account $17,700,000,000. Yet leading members of Congress are freely predicting a deficit of a billion dollars before next summer, and some of them a deficit of three billions.

Does nobody have any idea within a billion? Is anybody taking the slightest account of what is appropriated and what can be effectively expended before July?

When the excess of merchandise exports over imports is the maximum measure of loans needed by the Allies, is everybody sure that the $7,000,000,000 checked off to that account will more than be used up when the export excess is running under $4,000,000,000 a year? Is the $694,000,000 for aviation a continuing appropriation, or not even enough to be used before July? Is the shipping appropriation of over a billion also a continuing appropriation, or is it supposed that the material and labor and yard facilities are so abundant that it can all be expended in ship construction before July?

These are some of the obvious questions cropping out all through the list, and there is no answer from Congress save that nobody knows.—New York World.

"A GENTLEMAN'S CHOICE"

The Strand Cigarette—And What Is Predicted for It—A New Company Successfully Obtaining Fashionable Patronage.

"Old Man Opportunity" did not have to rap twice when the Strand Cigarette Co. offered a good chance to S. E. Applegate. Ambitious to be a top-notcher, determined to achieve big success in the cigarette business, Applegate was "up and coming." He regarded the future. He looked ahead. He could see great possibilities in the Strand cigarette. And he "went to it."

Parenthetically, it may be said that Applegate knows cigarette sales lore, forward and back. He was more than a successful cigarette salesman. He was a trade developer, a campaign manager, a man who "got results." He had ideas. Energy is his middle name. He could plan displays. He could attract trade. His work was productive of unexpectedly large business.

Brought into the world at Unionville, Mo., on August 15, 1882, he lived up to the reputation of his native State. He acquired information, if he did "have to be shown." He disregarded Horace Greely's advice. He went East, New York attracted him. He entered the tobacco business in 1900, not ostentatiously but with the determination to make good. Started on the road, as a traveler for "Siedenberg" he was assigned to Pennsylvania and Maryland. He covered his territory, he developed new business, he made friends, he got orders wherever orders were obtainable. Some years later, he was numbered among the alert and forceful young men whose mission was to make the Milo brand more famous. Next he was the star salesman for Contopoulo Bros. Notably in Baltimore and other places, he introduced the Contopoulo brands and caused them to be big sellers. In a few months, mostly in new territory, he sold 750,000 Contopoulo cigarettes. But his ambition wasn't satisfied. He wanted to be something more than a salesman. He desired to be identified in an important way with a company that made Turkish cigarettes of the finest quality.

Eventually, an opportunity was presented. The chance, he had hoped for, was offered him. Associated with the Strand Cigarette Co. as vice-president and sales manager, Applegate is ready now to plan and work harder and better than ever before. For he can see what a future the Strand Cigarette Co. has. Expert in judging cigarettes, he knows values. He realizes that into the manufacture of Strand cigarettes goes the choicest Turkish tobacco that money can buy, today.

Of Strand cigarettes, there is but one grade, the very highest. The fixed policy of the Strand Cigarette Co. is to use the best. In producing tobacco, neither expense nor pains are spared. The blending is done with the utmost care. Throughout each process of manufacture, all else is subordinated to quality.

The officers of the Strand Cigarette Co., Inc., are A. F. Grasshof, president, S. E. Applegate, vice-president and W. C. Ely, secretary and treasurer.

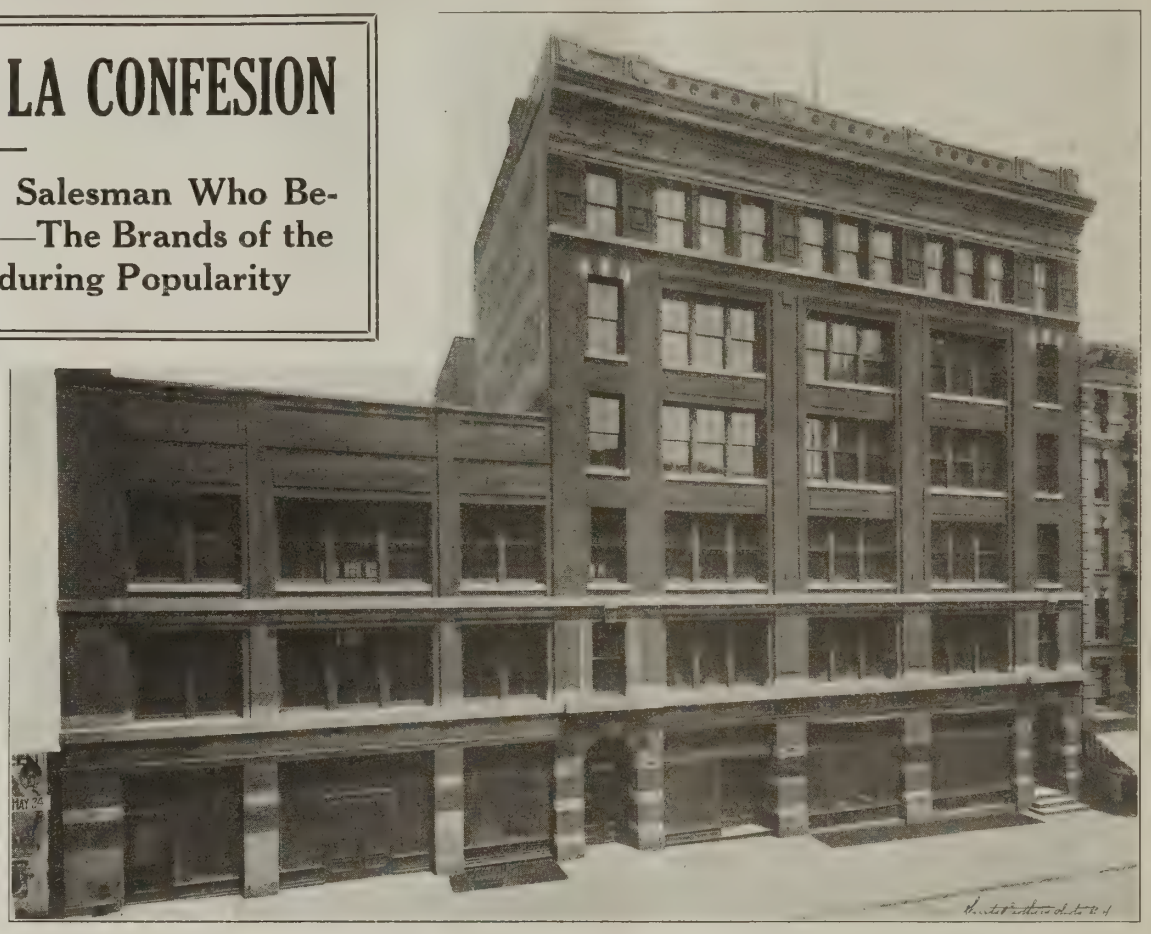
S. E. Applegate, Vice-President of the Strand Cigarette Co.

A noted traveler and quite a collector of works of art, President Grasshof of the Strand Cigarette Co. has made the director's room, in the offices of the company, at 17 West Forty-second street, a repository for valuables that would be given a place, gladly, in the art gallery of a multi-millionaire. The more important of these art treasures are Japanese tapestries and swords. One ancient but well-preserved Japanese tapestry, valued at many thousand dollars, depicts a legendary hero awaiting burial. Around the bier are gathered the family and retainers of the daimio; above and in the background, in order of their rank, are grouped the priests and the nobility of the district. Aside from its historic value, this tapestry is said to be one of the best attestations of ancient Japanese art. Another piece of tapestry, appraised at $3,000, represents the finest work of a noted Japanese artist who died a few years ago.

On the wall hangs a daimio's two-handed sword, having a huge handle and scabbard of carved walrus ivory. The size of the sword and the wonderful carvings on the ivory scabbard, inspired a collector to offer $5,000 for the weapon of a prince of Old Nippon. A court sword, smaller but made more valuable by ancient imperial association, hangs above the door.

The swords and tapestries, the oriental furniture and bric-a-brac are much admired by visitors. And the offices of the Strand Cigarette Co. are visited by important people. Officers of the U. S. army and navy, Canadian, British, French, Russian and Italian officers on temporary duty in New York, come in numbers, all desirous of securing Strand cigarettes. And when duty calls the officers away, almost invariably they write, from their new stations, ordering quantities.

One officer in the British aviation service, who wrote, ordering a large supply, stated that he couldn't do without Strand cigarettes.



Introduced at clubs, fashionable hotels, restaurants and cabaret places, Strand cigarettes immediately obtained favor.

So much success has attended preliminary work done in New York and Philadelphia, it is predicted that Strand cigarettes quickly will attain a vogue throughout the country.

And Applegate, realizing what an opportunity he has, is very busy.

THE SIGNIFICANCE OF LA CONFESION

A Texas Story—A Star Cigar Salesman Who Became a Great Manufacturer—The Brands of the Benito Rovira Co. Have Enduring Popularity

The Up-to-date Factories of the Benito Rovira Co.

El Arabe and La Confesion, leading brands made by the Benito Rovira Co., long have been numbered among the best sellers, especially in the prairie States and in the Southwest.

'Way back in the days when "Free Grass" was a political issue in Texas, a sensational murder case was tried in Hamilton. In a remote part of Hamilton County, a cattle buyer named Harkins was found dead, with a bullet in the back of his head. Supposedly, Harkins had been murdered for his money. Earlier that day, it was known, the cattle buyer had in his possession a buckskin pouch containing nearly a thousand dollars. "When the body was discovered, the pouch was missing and not a thing could be found in the pockets of the murdered man."

Testimony given by the "three Tate boys" and their cousins "Joe" and "Jeff" Runnels caused "Will" Ellery to be arrested.

At the trial, "Jeff" Runnels swore positively that he had seen Ellery ride away from the scene of the crime. On the witness stand, one of "the Tate boys" told practically the same story. The similarity of the testimony aroused suspicion in the mind of Ellery's attorney. In a scathing cross-examination, he tried "to trip them up," but they were wary. At noon, when the court adjourned for an hour, the counsel for the defense was disheartened.

Meanwhile, "Joe" Runnels, excluded from the court room until he should be called to testify, had improved the opportunity to step across the street and take a few drinks. By noon he was just drunk enough to be quarrelsome. A political argument started. Hard words were exchanged. "Joe" Runnels attempted to draw his knife. However, before he could unsheathe it, he was hit over the head with a whiskey bottle.

Taken upstairs to a bedroom in the hotel, he was attended by a doctor who happened to be the brother of Ellery's attorney.

Convinced of his client's innocence, yet feeling sure, from the way the case was going, that the jury would bring in a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, the lawyer hardly knew what to do.

He was so disturbed, mentally, that he didn't care to eat. While the others lunched, he gulped down a cup of coffee and hastily left the dining room. He wanted to smoke. He hurried to get some cigars. He bought four and immediately lighted one.

Leisurely making change, the clerk at the cigar counter gossiped concerning the row that had occurred, a short time before, in the bar room.

The lawyer stood there, smoking and listening, until he was informed that his brother, the doctor, was dressing the wounds of Joe Runnels.

Grabbing the change that the clerk handed over, the attorney turned and ran upstairs. But the doctor had given orders that no one should be allowed to enter the room where Runnels was.

"I'm very busy now. But I'll see you when I get through," was the message the doctor sent to his brother.

Descending the back stairs, the lawyer went into a yard, behind the little hotel. Nervously walking around the yard, he smoked and thought as hard as he could.

Finally, the smell of burning paper reminded him that he had not removed the band from his cigar. Detaching the partly burned band, he was about to throw it away. But as he looked at the scorched bit of paper, he paused. He scratched his head, he muttered something, he waited and thought.

He did not come out of his reverie until he heard his brother coming down the back stairs.

"What did you want?" the doctor said.

"I just wanted to find out how badly Joe Runnels was hurt," the lawyer answered, "but another idea struck me this minute."

"Joe was knocked unconscious. He won't recover from his daze for an hour or so at the earliest. It's an ugly wound he got," the doctor explained, "he won't be able to go on the witness stand this afternoon."

"If that's the way it is, and you can come over to the court house an hour from now, I think you can help me a lot towards winning that case."

"How?"

The lawyer leaned over and whispered in the doctor's ear.

"I'll do it, count on me; I'll be there, sure," replied the doctor.

Receiving his brother's promise, delaying only long enough to give the doctor two cigars, the lawyer returned to the court room. Court reconvened. The cross-examination of the stubborn witness was resumed, with the result, apparently, that the jury was more firmly convinced of the prisoner's guilt.

Called to the witness stand, the second of "the Tate boys" repeated the story previously told. His testimony, elicited by the prosecuting attorney, made the case against Ellery seem stronger.

When the counsel for the defense had a chance to begin cross-examination, he went at it, "hammer and tongs." He made the witness angry and half afraid.

Just then the doctor quietly entered the court room. Almost unobserved, he tiptoed over to where his brother stood. Not until he handed the counsel for the defense a sheet of legal cap folded did he attract attention.

Seeming to be somewhat surprised, the lawyer took the paper, unfolded it and proceeded to read it, intently, without saying a word.

Having read the document, he refolded it, smiling grimly the while, and thrust the paper, somewhat ostentatiously, into his pocket.

Resuming the cross-examination, he seemed to play with the witness as a cat does with a mouse.

For a while he put questions suavely. Then suddenly he roared out: "Don't you know it's useless to lie? You are aware that Joe Runnels had his head smashed in a bar room row today. You saw that paper handed to me a few minutes ago. Don't you know that I have a confession in my pocket?

The court room was electrified. The attention of all was centered on the witness who shivered and shrank as the accusing finger of the counsel for the defense was pointed at him.

"If Joe's confessed, it's all up," gasped the Tate boy, "yes, Joe killed Harkins. We took the money and divided it. Because Will Ellery went by a few minutes before, we agreed to say he did it."

Thus made, the admissions of the Tate boy prefaced a revised explanation of how the crime was committed. Between sobs, the guilty witness told where the stolen buckskin pouch, containing part of the money, was hidden.

There was no doubt, then, about Ellery's innocence.

The prosecuting attorney congratulated the counsel for the defense. "It was fortunate though that your brother brought you Joe's confession when he did."

"See here," said Ellery's lawyer, as he produced a cigar, "what I had in my pocket was a La Confesion. That folded paper the doctor gave me is just a surgical report of Joe's injuries. Look at it! Read it! It states that Runnels is unconscious.

The fame of La Confesion cigar does not date from the day it was used melodramatically at a murder trial in Texas. Nor was the incident recorded especially influential in promoting sales. La Confesion sales are accelerated by merit, rather than by any notoriety. Widely distributed, possessing enduring popularity, La Confesion cigars have been favorites in various parts of the country for many years.

The demand for La Confesion brand, wide spread and continuous, is a perennial tribute to the ability of Benito Rovira. His record in the cigar trade is indeed a cause for pride.

A native of Barcelona, Spain, Benito Rovira came to New York in 1872. For five years, he applied himself diligently; he became thoroughly informed concerning the making of good cigars; he proved that he was dependable; he displayed marked aptitude; but, he did not attract unusual notice until 1877, when he started out as a salesman for R. Monne & Bro., then regarded as cigar manufacturers of small importance. Because of Rovira's ability as a salesman, and because of his insistence that cigars supplied to customers should be good, the little factory employing a few people developed and grew. In five years' time, almost entirely through the efforts of Benito Rovira, the expanded business of R. Monne & Bro. required a working force of 300. Benito Rovira was acknowledged to be "one of the squarest and most capable cigar salesmen in the United States."

The firm of Ghio & Rovira was formed in 1883, Benito Rovira being the working partner. He supervised the buying, superintended the manufacturing and extended sales. In fact he managed very largely the entire operations of the firm.

A most excellent judge of tobacco, an expert manufacturer and a salesman seldom equalled, he kept the business going very successfully. His idea always was to make good cigars, to have but a few brands, to entrust the distribution of his output to dealers of proven capability. In the best sense of the word, he was conservative; extremely careful to maintain the quality of his product, quick to meet every obligation, zealously guarding the reputation of his house and goods.

In former years the Ghio & Rovira factories were at 207-11, and 214-16, East 38th street, New York. In 1904, in their entirety, Benito Rovira acquired the interests of his partner. Being sole owner, he changed the name of the big business to the Benito Rovira Co. Then with the company he associated his two sons, Joel B. (who had been with the business since 1894) and Herbert A. (who had joined the sales force in 1903.) Since then, Benito Rovira and his two sons have been, as they now are, sole owners of the Benito Rovira Co.

Caused by the expansion of business was the move from East 38th street, to East Sixty-second street, farther up-town. It was no ordinary move, for the new factories of the Benito Rovira Co. are among the largest and best in New York. Specially built for cigar manufacturing purposes, commodious, sanitary, supplied with every up to date improvement as regards lighting, ventilation and protection against fire, the big factories exemplify cleanliness and efficiency.

El Arabe and La Confesion, leading brands of the Benito Rovira Co. for many years, are cigars of staple importance, noted for their dependability, not only in quality but also in continuity of sales. In various localities El Arabe and La Confesion have the prestige that attaches to the largest sellers. Everywhere they are recognized as standard goods. Among the more important distributions are S. Bachman & Co., San Francisco; Morey Mercantile Co., Denver; O'Malley, Liddy Co., Kansas City; Boern-Stewart Co., Dallas; Skinner & Knecht, Los Angeles, E. Eppstein & Co., Dallas, and the Hart Cigar, of Portland, Ore. Of Benito Rovira clear Havana brands, the Wood-Pollard Co., of Boston, is a notable distributor.

What distinction as a sure seller El Arabe can acquire is shown by the records of one "not very large" store situated on what might be called a back street in New York. On West Broadway, the Smith store afterwards under the management of Connor & Einarson, sold upwards of 100,000 El Arabes every year.

Coming out now in a specially fine Connecticut shade grown wrapper, the reliable El Arabe is a cigar that will appeal, immediately and strongly, to almost every progressive dealer in New York.

While Benito Rovira, was a cigar salesman unexcelled, his sons have shown that they are inheritors of their father's ability. H. A. Rovira, now on the Pacific Coast, sent in some notably big orders last week. J. B. Rovira, who calls on the trade in the Middle West, and Southwest, has to his credit some of the most desirable accounts in the business.

SOME SHOUTING FOR CHICAGO

Chicago, October 15.—Big and little, over 800 cigar factories help Chicago "to smoke up." Besides, there are 35 tobacco and snuff factories located here. In value, this year, Chicago's tobacco trade will approximate $29,000,000. As a jobbing point it is one of the best in the United States. Here are located several great cigar and grocery houses that cover a vast amount of territory and who employ several hundred salesmen. The total jobbing business done is enormous and the firms are going farther away from home and increasing their field of distribution all the time.

Chicago is the world's greatest center for the production and distribution of food products. Preeminence has long been held in the meat-packing industry and in the grain business, but it was not fully realized until recent years that Chicago also excelled in a score of other lines and that its importance as a food market was not merely local but international. The city's geographical location gives it many advantages.

Chicago today is the greatest railway center in the world, and from this city is operated one-third of the mileage of the entire country.

The largest butterine manufacturers in the world are located here.

The Chicago district, being one of the greatest iron and steel producing areas in the world, has naturally a complementary importance in the transformation of these materials into machinery and tools. In certain well-known lines of machinery Chicago is the recognized manufacturing center of the country and the products of its factories are used wherever men have progressed beyond the hand-labor stage.

Heavy machinery of all kinds and for all purposes is built in Chicago. Mines, mills and machine shops in the remotest parts of the earth are equipped with machinery which bears, or ought to, the legend "made in Chicago." In the very important field of conveying and transmission machinery the position of Chicago is approaching or has equaled its supremacy in agricultural machines.

Chicago manufactures more than $30,000,000 worth of furniture a year, and as a marketing and distributing center for products of this class has no equal in the United States. No other city approaches it in quantity of output, and there are only four or five States that produce more than this city. Nearly every furniture manufacturer of consequence in the country has samples of his product displayed in the permanent exhibition buildings maintained in the city, as a result of which nearly everything worth while in the furniture line may be found in this market.

In the manufacture and sale of confectionery Chicago has attained a commanding position. Some of the largest and most successful candy factories in America are located in this city. Their products are shipped to all parts of the world.

Chicago is the home of some of the largest and most successful contracting organizations in the world. Nowhere can higher efficiency, stronger resources, greater responsibility or more complete equipment be found in this industry than in the Western metropolis, whether applied to the erection of buildings or other forms of construction.

Chicago is the market place for more coal than any other city in this country, and is believed to be the largest coal market in the world. This does not mean, of course, that the quantity consumed in the Chicago district is larger than any other equal area, though that probably is also the case. It means that more coal passes from seller to buyer in Chicago than in any other city.

As a financial and investment center, Chicago's prestige has increased since the European war began. The reasons are many, but all may be summed up in the statement that 1915-16 has been a period of unparalleled growth in all lines of industry, trade and finance. Uncle Sam has attained the position of a big creditor, with the rest of the world coming to him for needed money.

Chicago leads all American cities in the production of telephone instruments and in the manufacture of telephone cable. It is possible to purchase here an entire telephone equipment of any capacity—power, poles, wire, instruments, switchboards, etc.—from stocks carried by the leading houses, and it is claimed this is something that cannot be done in any other American city.

As an illustration of efficiency in this regard it is noted that in 1908, when the exchange, operated by the French Government and handling the telephone traffic of Paris, was destroyed by fire, a Chicago company outstripped all competitors for the rebuilding, and this was accomplished in less than sixty days.

Chicago is the headquarters of the Bell interests, as well as of the independent interests, and its electrical and telephone products are shipped to all parts of the world. The vast resources of the city in this respect are displayed in buildings specially designed for practical demonstration.

Chicago is not only a great grain receiving market, but has become a milling center of no small importance. The annual production of flour in this city, according to the latest figures, is about 1,200,000 barrels. This is a substantial gain over the production a few years ago, although there has been no increase in the number of mills.

Chicago's hotels and restaurants have, of course, shared in the prosperity. To its natural location, to its position as the nation's greatest railroad center, and above all to the highest degree of efficiency in the work of its hotel proprietors and managers Chicago owes its title of "the convention city."

Chicago is the largest beer producing center in the country, having in operation about fifty brewing plants, although they are not all under separate management. The trade is chiefly local, and the quantity shipped out is counterbalanced by the quantity shipped in from outside plants, estimated at about 500,000 barrels a year. St. Louis and Milwaukee are the most important centers for the shipping trade, having half a dozen concerns which handle a big volume in this line.

Chicago's $8,000,000 Field Museum, when completed, will be the largest institution of its kind in the world. It will consist of three stories and a basement and cover a territory equivalent to four downtown city blocks.

Chicago roasters prepare, and they and other Chicago wholesalers distribute, approximately one-fourth of the coffee consumed by the American people. They handle about half the consumption

Canadians Were Large Buyers of Remedios

The Havana Leaf Market a Scene of Activity—Factories Will Be Kept Busy Sure for the Rest of the Year—The Damage Done in Pinar del Rio—A Holiday Did Not Stop the Production of Cigars

HAVANA, October 12.—The Secretary of Agriculture reported yesterday that the recent hurricane had ruined 1,000 tobacco barns (their contents including some of this year's crop), besides many seedbeds in the province of Pinar del Rio. It will now depend upon weather conditions, Government help extended to poor vegueros, and the individual exertions of the larger planters what crop will be had in 1918 in Vuelta Abajo, Semi Vuelta and a part of the Partido sections.

The leaf market has been very active this week. Canadian manufacturers have made liberal purchases, aggregating over 3,000 bales of Remedios leaf principally. Not many new buyers have made their appearance from the United States, so possibly we may see a lull again temporarily, but because available stocks are limited prices are bound to be firmly maintained.

Receipts of leaf tobacco from the country:

	For two weeks ending Oct. 4, 1917	Since Jan. 1, 1917
	Bales	Bales
Vuelta Abajo	18,440	136,233
Semi Vuelta	362	8,341
Partido	2,817	28,596
Remedios	13,291	98,484
Totals	34,910	271,654

Exports per steamship Mexico totaled 487 cases, containing 2,238,145 cigars, which were consigned to the following countries, viz.: To Great Britain, 1,077,190; to United States, 842,380; to Denmark, 89,750; to Canada, 73,375; to British Africa, 47,500; to Uruguay, 29,650; to the Argentine Republic, 27,000; to Portugal, 21,500; to the British East Indies, 14,000; to Australia, 10,000; to Brazil, 5,000; and to the French West Indies, 800 cigars.

Exports of leaf tobacco, from the port of Havana, during the week ending September 29, totaled 3,505 bales, which were distributed to the following countries, viz.: To all ports of the United States, 3,169; to Canada, 207; to Uruguay, 78; and to Valparaiso, Chile, 51 bales.

Among the leaf buyers recently arriving in Havana were: Wm. Presnail, of the Harper, Presnail Cigar Co., of Hamilton, Ont., and José Negreira, of José Negreira, of New York. Charles E. Beck, of C. E. Beck & Co., returned with his family, from New York, by way of Key West.

The cigar factories are all busy at present, principally for Great Britain and the United States, and as the American importers are now urging shipments with the utmost dispatch for the coming holidays, there is enough activity. As we celebrated the 10th of October, "El Grito de Yara," ordinarily there would have been no work done in cigar factories. But the cigar makers were willing to work and several factories kept their doors open on the holiday. Today is no legal holiday in Cuba, although various societies are celebrating what is called here "La fiesta de la Raza," commemorating the discovery of America.

Semi-monthly statistics of the second half of September are somewhat discouraging, as there was a decrease of nearly 3½ million cigars in our exports, as compared with the same period of 1916.

Ben Rothschild and Julius Fernbach left for Chicago this week, after purchasing nearly 1,000 bales of leaf.

Leslie Pantin again was a big buyer for account of Canadian and American clients.

M. T. Irving, W. Ambrose and A. F. Presnail returned to Hamilton, Ont., last Wednesday, having acquired about 3,000 bales of leaf for the Tuckett Cigar Co.

Mark A. Pollack is extremely busy registering the tobacco purchased for account of his American customers.

Wm. Presnail only tarried one day in Havana. He returned to his Canadian home as soon as he had bought a few hundred bales of leaf, as he did not like the prevailing high prices in our market.

Romeo y Julieta has no abatement in the receipt of orders from every country; besides the unfilled ones will keep this factory busy for more than the rest of this year.

Partagas reports no diminution in its former activity of executing orders.

Hoyo de Monterey is working with a full house on a splendid order slate.

H. Upmann is as busy as could be expected at this season of the year.

Punch is all right, as the orders on hand are sufficient to keep this factory busy for the rest of this year.

Belinda is doing well, only regretting that the scarcity of cigar makers, for regalia sizes, may delay the filling of orders temporarily.

Calixto Lopez & Co., in their Eden factory, are also well supplied with orders; therefore are working strong with all hands at present. They are way ahead in their exports, as compared with last year.

ROSAM.

Secretary of State J. I. Lyon, of Oklahoma, has recently issued a charter at Guthrie to the Anti-Tobacco League of America, formed by the Rev. J. W. Bowles, of Lambert, Okla.; A. E. Sale and Cornelius Bowles, of Enid, Okla. The avowed purpose of this league is to conduct an educational propaganda to teach the evils of tobacco, and to influence the prohibition and sale of it. Of course there is a clause particularly aimed at the cigarette.

The Extra Penny Now Is the Price of Success

Up-State Dealers Procure Supplies of Small Change—The Ordeal an Internal Revenue Agent Must Endure—Druggists Figure on Increases—According to "the Code of Trade Etiquette"—Tobacconists Drafted—What Are Cigarette Tubes?—Helmar Attains Greater Popularity—A Remaining Indian

New York State Capitol District, October 15.—"Those long lines of chaps you see there at the paying teller's window are not getting checks cashed," explained a Capitol District banker last Saturday, "and they are not drawing payroll money either. Instead, they are cigar and tobacco dealers, for the most part, simply securing $5 and $10 worth of pennies for change to meet the new revenue prices!" And a glance at faces proved him right.

Clickety-click, click, click—wazo! Typewriters, mimeographs, rotographs and just the ordinary parkerpengraphs are snapping like a battery of mitrailleuses in the crowded rooms of the Albany office, Fourteenth Internal Revenue headquarters. Never before, not excepting the busy days of '98, when the Spanish War upset the orderly process of Government business, has the Federal building staff here been so stumped with inquiries, collections and detail. Collector Roscoe Irwin himself is working forty-eight hours every day. All the boys in the other rooms are doing the same. On the streets are other squads of deputies. Everybody connected with the department in this district, from Harlem to Herkimer, has just about all he or she can do.

"Wow!" yelled one of the local walking revenue men, "this thing is getting on my nerves. Most of the big tobacco and liquor houses have their stock and inventories all ready for the preliminary estimates of tax. But the little dealers! Oh, oh, oh! Why, I have to wade through wop joints crammed to the roof with walnuts, lemons, bananas and such, merely to get at four or five packs of cigarettes and the same number of tobacco and cigar boxes! Whether or not the dealer may have sufficient stock in excess of the Government allowance, I have to get an estimated inventory anyway. And, of course, the poor boob doesn't understand what in the deuce I want, though he may be somewhat awed by my authority and let me go ahead and count him up. If it wasn't for that very fear of the czar power overhead, I really think some of these rainbow-shirted Antonios would put the keen-kutter between my lung and rib as I slam the door!"

Albany druggists are rather rattled by the war tax. Besides their troubles with regular drug stock, perfumes, cosmetics and the many side issues of a big store, the tobacco increases bother. Most of the cigar-drug men are up a tree. On South Pearl street, the Branche Drug Co. have raised each item of cigar, tobacco and cigarette stock from 1 to 2 cents. On North Pearl, the Morris Drug Co. has likewise crossed the rubifoam. All three stores of the Warner Drug Co. have announced small increases. While the A. B. Huested Co. sell all 5-cent cigars and cigarettes for 6 cents, 10-cent goods for 12 cents. Uptown druggists are following the lead of the big fellows, so it looks like temporary prosperity for the pinched penny, anyway.

Hamido Hadjubdulah, that famed acrobatic Arab, would have to go some to equal the twistings of the trade on the retail price situation. Some dealers seem pleased to retain their business upon the former basis of one cigar for one nickel. Others appear to think 6 cents each, two for 10 will do. And still others believe 6 cents straight, with a few of the saucy $40 brands in the 7-cent brigade, is all right, too. But the six for a quarter seems to be entirely extinct, except where it is blooming as a former two-fer. Cigarets, sometimes "cigarettes" or "sigarets," according to location and price, are now up 1 penny, 2 pennies or even 3 pennies on the packet, depending precisely upon the tone of the neighborhood. Five-cent cigarettes, too, are usually 6 cents. Ten-centers are both 11 and 12. Fifteen-cent brands are 16, 17 and even 18 cents per packet. While the 20, 25 and higher goods are being sold for whatever the dealer thinks is right, in one, two, three, out-goes-she jumps. And the consumers? Well, they have been educated to pay exactly what the retailer asks. Because? Just because most consumers are in some soaking business game themselves right now!

"Everything is in confusion," replied Frank Dearstyne to an inquiry about how the large jobbing house of the Dearstyne Brothers Tobacco Co., Albany, were weathering the turmoil. "Yes," he continued, "we have been all upset by the rapidity of the change to conform with the law. Our prices have advanced at wholesale to meet the necessary increases. All the big factories have advised us about the new lists, but the A. T. Co., has requested us to delay price advances upon their cigarette products until they issue the new packets with the smaller quantities of smokes. However, all these things adjust themselves in time. There's nothing to get excited about."

Signs in the window of the Bruce Macdonald Co., 110 State street, Albany, informed sidewalk smokers that old prices on all tobacco products would prevail until Monday last. Heading for one of the framed announcements was the top of the first inside page of last week's TOBACCO, with the news that the war revenue bill had passed. Considerable business resulted from the extension of the new price period over the Saturday pay day.

"Ever hear about a loidy getting on a crowded street car with a nickel in her hand to pay the fare, and then, because the conductor didn't see her, keep the coin in her glove as a souvenir of the occasion?" Walter Branche wanted to know about this. "I'll tell you why," he went on, "for the same idea probably lurked in the mind of the wife of a customer of mine.

"This man bought a sufficient supply of R-B and Bulletin cigars of me to last several weeks. But when in the neighborhood one day last week I took a look at his stock. It was gone! Cleaned out! 'Gee,' thinks I, 'here's a chance to cop a few cigars for a rush order!'

"And the customer, surprised that the stock was exhausted, agreed the moment was ripe for an entry in the triplicate copier. We were still talking about the quick disposal of the previous supply, when the man's wife entered. 'Here,' says she, 'what do you want to order all those cigars for? We've got a lot of those goods upstairs!'

"Then she took us both to the floor above, where the family lived, to show us how nicely she had cached the entire lot, with a mass of other cigar, tobacco and cigarette stock, right behind the highboy bureau.

"When her husband meekly inquired the reason, she put her finger to her lips with a, 'Sh, those revenue men won't find it here!'

"But it didn't take long for the husband and myself to convince her that this was moonshine and strictly improper, according to the code of trade etiquette. It might work on a trolley, we told her, but not when Uncle Sam was the conductor."

"Lots and lots of my small customers will be wiped out by the changes in the trade," remarked Fred Peters, as he removed the blanket from his horse, ready for the day's trip with the sub-jobbing wagon. "It seems to be the plan of the day to remove the little fellow. Now, I'm not kicking. It's no use. Yet it does seem a shame to make the chap who orders just a few dozen tobaccos and cigarettes two or three times a week stand this gaff of the penny increase, or sixty cents the dozen. They'll lose their trade to the dealers who sell this stuff as a come-on at cut-rates for the benefit of more important merchandise. Oh well—Giddap!"

Both of Albany's two tobacco factories announce complete changes in their selling prices. With the revision of costs, Francis Shields & Son, of Church street, and the Ben Payn's Sons Tobacco Co., of Broadway, put their paper wrapped white and blue smoking and chewing brands in the five cent class. These have been standard here for years as the largest four cent sellers at retail. Foil goods, formerly five cents, are now six at retail, sixty cents the dozen by gross or less at wholesale.

In an awful hurry, Uncle Gib Cohn rushed into an Albany Broadway store the other morning. "Let me see this week's TOBACCO," he implored, "Want to see about those revenue changes there." So he took a quick glance through the official news of the week, and departed with "Thanks, I've got it!" Meaning, no doubt, the news, not the paper. Even leaf men read a reliable trade journal occasionally!

Since Cuyler Ten Eyck practically retired from the cigar pastime in the Arkay Building, Albany, his son has carried on the business. To get a little attention, the lad has been offering Blackstone panetelas and Que Placer cazadores at 7 cents each, box of 50 for $3.40. Other similar prices have been in vogue from day to day upon all popular brands. But it doesn't seem to pay, so the youngster will gradually close out all the stock, empty the pockets of his adding-agent, and return the key of the big front door to the lord of the land.

Unofficial advices, guaranteed by General Rumor, say that the Pike & Capron Co., Lodge and State streets, Albany, will remodel the State street front of their liquor house for a modern cigar store. At the present time Manager Pete DeGroot doesn't care to announce his plans, but it is said the old ale vault will be continued in the rear, with entrance, as now, on Lodge street. Cigar and bottle business, operated for years and years in the old fashioned lobby front, will be temporarily continued until the exact details of the new venture are determined.

"Sure I marked 'em up," replied Gil Thompson, of Thompson & Hare, Clinton Square, Albany. "Then, there was so much kicking, I marked 'em down again! My cigarettes sold for six, twelve, and seventeen cents for a little while. Customers, though, thought they were being honswoggled. So, to save my face, I put 'em back to five, ten, and fifteen cents the packet. And there they are!"

There is absolutely no doubt about it! Al Fonda is the cleverest amateur sign and card writer in the Capitol District! For proof, see his window glass and interior price cards for this week's sale of French Briar Seconds for 27c. at the retail store of G. W. Van Slyke & Horton, 471 Broadway, Albany. To introduce a little novelty in the work, Al has used small white cards, say 8 by 10, with a screen backing of vertical pin stripes of green. Six inch figures of the magic "27" in bold black ink concentrate the attention upon the goods offered.

Called to Chicago by the illness of his daughter, Bill Hallenbeck has been furloughed from the M. J. Canaday force for a time. Some of the fixtures for the new cigar stand at the east entrance of the Hotel Ten Eyck are arriving. Building delays have caused serious disappointment to the Ten Eyck folk, but the various changes made necessary by the completion of the house will undoubtedly be under full swing in a week or two. Meantime, M. J. and the boys are working upon their Government inventory, and prices have "riz" to 6, 12, and 17 cents on five, ten, and fifteen cent cigarettes.

Among the draft lads at Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts, are two more Albany tobacconists. In the newspaper photographs recently taken at the big cantonment you will find Bill Knapp, Jr., son of Alderman Knapp, the Pine Hills dealer. From the South End, M. P. Flood had to leave his business for the training camp. Before going, some of Matt's brother retailers got together and made him accept a suitably engraved ring for a remembrance.

Going up one street and down another, making hurried visits to every cigarette retailer in the Capitol District, the sales force of the American Tobacco Co. are now endeavoring to persuade all dealers to maintain former prices on the brands of the firm. Aiding the effort is Pall Mall Jordan, from headquarters. All tobacconists are requested

El Arabe Is A Reliable Leader

Better than any argument is proof supplied by the cigar itself.

Examine El Arabe. Inspect the workmanship. Scrutinize the shade-grown wrapper. Be assured concerning the filler. Test the quality of the tobacco. Note how even the burn is. Ascertain the aroma. See what satisfaction the cigar will give you.

El Arabe appeals especially to smokers who prefer mild cigars.

Superior quality tells. Excellence speaks for itself. Merit is a solid foundation for enduring popularity.

Back of El Arabe is the experience of many years. The Benito Rovira Co. specializes in the manufacture of good cigars.

El Arabe justifies confidence. It accelerates sales. Customers who try the brand come back for more. Knowing smokers appreciate Cuban workmanship. They enjoy the flavor of choice tobacco. They realize the value of El Arabe.

"That's why" dealers find it profitable to handle the brand. That's why El Arabe is proving so satisfactory.

Sacramento Retailers Assert Themselves

Use Space in Daily Papers to Advise Smokers Concerning Price Advances — Plan Not Entirely Favored in San Francisco — The Position of the Jobbers — S. Siebenhauer Passes—The Fritz Bros. Co. Makes Important Changes—Dealers Feel the Effect of the War Tax

San Francisco, October 10.—After a period of considerable activity in both wholesale and retail trade there is a lull in the cigar trade, owing to the absorbing interest taken in the new war taxes. Everybody is busy taking stock and drawing out the statements required by the Internal Revenue Department. Some of the retailers seem to be considerably mystified by certain clauses in the blanks furnished by the department, but it not clear why there should be any trouble in making out these statements, which seem plain enough, even to a layman. Actually, there is more mystification among the deputies at the Internal Revenue office, over the blanks, than among the trade, according to several members of the trade who have visited the department in search of light.

One feature of the result of the war taxes stands out very clearly, and that is, that a number of the weaker members of the retail cigar trade will not be able to stand the pressure of smaller profits, incident to higher costs of goods. This, however, is not alarming to the cigar jobbers for they know that, in the weeding out of the small dealer, dependent on a limited trade and large profits for a living, the trade, generally, will lose only those whose credit is poor and chances of continuance in business doubtful. "It's the old story."

The price question occupies a great deal of attention, and various are the plans for meeting a very difficult situation. The Retail Cigar Dealers' Association of Sacramento, has taken the bull by the horns and published a manifesto in the daily papers, advising the public that owing to the new Government war tax, the members of that association have decided to raise the prices of all cigars and tobaccos, which has already gone into effect. Concerted action to that effect in San Francisco, will meet with opposition from some of the jobbers here. These jobbers assert that should a general move be made by retailers in this city to establish a selling price of 6c, instead of 5c for certain of the usual nickel brands, the wholesale prices will be raised accordingly. In other words, the jobbers are not willing to bear all the extra cost imposed by the war taxes, but expect the retailer to bear his portion of the burden. In any event, it is doubtful if a six cent seller would prove a success in San Francisco, where pennies are still looked on with suspicion.

The San Francisco branch of The Fritz Bros. Co., has made some changes in the personnel of its staff. E. H. Abbott, formerly with the big Sacramento Valley firm of McCormick-Saeltzer Co., of Redding, Cal., is now working the Sacramento Valley, Mendocino and Humboldt counties for the firm, with special attention paid to La Armidas, making his headquarters at Redding. H. R. Morrison and J. C. Castro are the company's city salesmen, while C. J. Sterroch is the office manager and credit man. J. J. Hoffman, the manager of the firm here, still keeps to the road for the company and has Nevada and the mines under his special supervision, covering his territory in his speedy racer. Wallace Fritz, first vice-president and factory manager of The Fritz Bros. Co., is expected to arrive here on a visit to the Coast and this territory in particular.

The cigar trade in the East will be pained to learn of the passing away of S. Siebenhouer at the age of 67 years. Mr. Siebenhauer was well known to Eastern cigar houses, having been at one time representative for Ybor y Manrara, of Tampa and Theobald & Oppenheimer, of Philadelphia. Before his connection with those firms he had been a member of the wholesale cigar firm in this city, of Falkenstein & Co. The deceased was a man well thought of in the cigar trade and was possessed of a very kindly heart that expressed itself in unobtrusive ways. Sam Newmark, the prominent cigar dealer of this city, learned the cigar business under his tutelage in the '80's and has many pleasant recollections of him.

E. G. Ames, of the General Cigar Co., has come here from New York to make his headquarters at the company's offices. From there he will make tours of inspection of all the

Gompers Urges the Purchase of Liberty Bonds

A Patriotic Appeal Made to Independent Retailers—Testimonial to Ochs Presented by Hunter—An Invitation to Co-operate in Price Adjustment—A Visiting Delegation of News Dealers.

Lew Gompers, president of the Independent Retail Tobacconists' Association, strongly urging the purchase of Liberty Bonds, made a speech that was the feature of the retailers' meeting at Terrace Garden, Thursday evening.

The meeting opened at 9 o'clock with about twenty members present.

Present also was a committee of ten representing the stationers and newsdealers. who had a mass meeting at Cooper Union last week. H. H. Hunter read a communication from the superintendent of high schools in Mount Vernon, N. Y., sent to retail dealers regarding the selling of tobacco in all forms to youths under 18 years of age. This letter cited the law recently passed. President Gompers said it would be well for every one to make a careful note of this warning and to heed it strictly.

Otto Jonas brought up for discussion the recent announcement that it was expected the United Cigar Stores Co. would purchase the Loft Candy Co. within the near future. Jonas said this would in all probability mean that coupons would be given with candy. An attack on the coupon followed, and it was finally decided that at the next meeting of the association representatives of New York grocers' and confectioners' associations would be invited to attend in order to organize a general campaign against the coupon.

President Gompers said that when he attended the meeting of the Liberty Loan Committee last week, President Edward Wise, of the United Cigar Stores Co., called him aside and asked him why the retailers would not try and co-operate in price raising. Mr. Gompers stated that he replied to the effect the retailers were waiting for the United to start the increase going. Mr. Wise said that the United had started, but that retailers had not followed. Wise cited, as an example, the time when the United increased prices on double packages of cigarettes to 30 cents. He went into retail stores, placed 30 cents on the counter, asked for a double pack of cigarettes and in each case 5 cents was pushed back to him with the reply, "The United is the only one charging this rate."

Mr. Gompers then told the members that Mr. Wise said the United would increase prices on cigarettes, Monday, October 15, 1 cent on each package. Charles Dushkind also told Mr. Gompers that Schultes would increase on Thursday, October 18. A general talk by the members followed, concerning the price conditions, and many interesting arguments were heard. O. Abramowitz said prices would simply have to be pushed up if the retailers ever expected to exist, and others agreed. Retailer Levine from Brooklyn said that he had increased cigarette prices a few weeks ago and had found no trouble with his trade. Mr. Levine advised the retailers to increase prices and forget the United coupon. His customers never mentioned it, he said. And the discussion continued.

H. H. Hunter, speaking with fervor, presented to Ike Ochs, who was president of the Retail Tobacconists' Association for seven years, a framed set of resolutions on behalf of the organization. Mr. Hunter spoke in the warmest manner of what Mr. Ochs had done for the association during his terms as president.

Mr. Ochs, visibly moved by the presentation, responded by saying he would always treasure the resolutions as a valued gift and token of sincere appreciation. He said it was only little he had done for the organization, and that he often wished he could have accomplished more. The resolutions were signed by the officers, committee members and H. H. Hunter.

A committee was appointed to see the various tobacco companies on behalf of the retailers of New York, to make an appeal for relief from present conditions and to ask for careful consideration of 33 per cent profit to retailers. The committee consists of Lew Gompers, H. H. Hunter, Ike Ochs, A. Hirtenstein, O. Abramowitz, L. S. Beller and Mr. Levine. The committee will wait until the United and Schultes increase before seeing any of the companies.

Liberty Bond posters were distributed to members for display in their windows and subscription blanks were also given out.

PACIFIC COAST NOTES

The Question That Discourages the Boston Jobber

"Where Am I At?"—Price Adjustment Reaches from Comedy to Tragedy—Exert Greater Efforts to Promote Liberty Bond Sales—John A. Dooley Passes—Wails Because of Delayed Freight—Manilas Are Staples Now in Boston

Boston, October 16.—An information bureau has been established by all the jobbers, for the benefit of their customers, to aid them in making out returns, also to give them the new prices and packings of the cigars, cigarettes and tobacco. A book published on the above subjects would be a big seller. The thing that puzzles the retailer is: "How can I exist when it costs me 18 per cent. to do business, and the present selling prices show a gross of 12 to 15?"

If you want to go bankrupt, sell at present prices; if you want to stay in the game, boost the retail prices. Don't wait to see what the other fellow is going to do; you know what you've got to do, so do it now.

Most of the retailers are selling the New England brands at 10 cents each, and the nickel cigars at 5 cents each, not six for 25 cents. The big chain stores are selling them at 10 cents, three for 25 cents. This is some jump from 7 cents each; cigarettes at 6, 12, 16, 25 and tobacco at 6, 11, 25. These odd prices the public has been educated to pay by the fact that bread, 5-cent packages of candy, Uneeda biscuits, and other articles that advanced some months ago. It was kind of the manufacturers to do this, as it makes it much easier for the tobacco dealer to get odd cent prices. About the only article I have discovered that you can buy at the old price is yeast cakes; they are still selling at 2 cents.

Behind each dark cloud the sun is shining, and when this price adjustment is over and business goes along again on schedule, the pleasant rays of softened sunshine will be beaming upon the trade. Things will be in better shape than ever before in the history of the cigar and tobacco business.

The whole cigar, cigarette and tobacco game has been wrong for years. In no other line of commerce have the members worked as hard and loyally as they have in the tobacco business. Long hours, long credits and worries. It was the case of the jobbers getting everything in the way of discount, free deals and advertising from the manufacturers, and they in turn gave all this away to the retailer, who in turn passed it on to the consumer, who did not know how small was the margin of profit the retailer was getting, but believed that a legitimate profit was being made, no matter how low the dealer sold.

When the retailer finds out that it is easy to get higher prices for the staples, he can spend many unhappy hours figuring how much money he would have had if he had charged higher prices.

The Black & White Cigarette Co. got out a soldier's kit that is one of the most sensible and logical soldier's gifts that I have seen. It contains 100 Black & White cigarettes, one package of Black & White tobacco, one 50-cent briar pipe, package of pipe cleaners and lighter, packed ready for mailing. This sells at $1.50.

Myer Yeretsky, of the La Integridad fame, received a postal card from his nephew, Ralph Yeretsky, who formerly called on the retail trade, selling Kingdales and La Integridads. Ralph enlisted as soon as war was declared and is now "somewhere in France."

The Liberty Bond issue is away behind on the schedule of what must be sold each day to reach the quota desired. The cigar and tobacco trade responded handsomely to the first issue, and many of the jobbers have again subscribed for the second loan, but the employees have not purchased as readily as it was hoped they would. Many bought these bonds on weekly payments, and have not got them all taken care of, and many of them have lost by draft someone in their family who was helping to support the house, and this has left the burden on those behind. What extra money that could be used for purchasing Liberty Bonds is being used in other directions.

The many friends of John A. Dooley will be surprised and pained to learn of his sudden death by accident at his home in Boston last week. John was particularly well known to the trade. For eight years he was with the old firm of McGreenery Bros. and Manning when they were on Hanover street. Resigning from there, he went with Joseph McGreenery when he opened a cigar factory, making the Poet cigar, and was with him up to his death. He was a loyal employee and a devoted father. He leaves a wife and four children.

L. D. Mayhew, of the American Tobacco Co., called on the jobbers here last week.

William Walker, of the cigar department of S. S. Pierce Co., is on a Western trip.

Irvin Studwell, treasurer of the Charles B. Perkins Co., was in New York City last week. The Giants played the White Sox on two of the days that Studwell was in the metropolis.

"Where are my goods?" is the yell from the jobbers. "I paid your bill twenty days ago, and the goods have not showed up yet." They are "somewhere in transit," that's all. Where that is the railroad censor refuses to divulge. "They're on their way" is all you can tell your customers, and you might as well cross it off your customer's order, and not chase your boy from jobber to jobber, as he is in the same boat as you are.

Express shipments are being held up. They are a little better than freight, but just as uncertain.

Little cigars selling 10 for 15 cents are getting scarcer, more so each day, and the prices of the goods that are being delivered drive them into the 18-cent class. High price of tobacco and labor is the answer. Stuff that the manufacturers would not buy a year ago this same bunch is breaking their necks to get, and bidding their heads off. As to labor, that is supreme. An owner of a factory must address all his help as Mr. and Miss. No angry words of reproach can escape his lips, or Blewie! Blewie! they all walk out on him, and go across the street to another factory, where the owner receives them as prodigal sons and daughters. Some game this manufacturing is today! It is only the factory with capital that is able to stand the gaff, and how long they will be able to do this depends on the retailer being able to get the right prices for his merchandise.

Baker Brothers, the Broad street jobbers, are putting out the Glorifier, 10-for-25-cent package of little cigars, made by the Kraus Cigar Co., New York City. This is an extra large smoke, made of Connecticut shade-grown tobacco, and a blended filler. It is a wonderful smoke for the money, and for the length of time the salesmen of Baker Brothers have been working on this Glorifier package the duplicates have encouraged them to double their efforts.

M. J. Ford, the well-known cigar broker, is winning laurels as a golf player. He has a wonderful collection of trophies won this past Summer, and added another last Saturday at the Commonwealth Links. As soon as he gets a few more, Edward L. Cauley is to take him on in an 18-hole match, for the honors in the cigar circles.

Eight for 25 cents is now the standard price for Manila Londres here. The 10-for-25-cent price now is ancient history. Manilas at five cents, six for a quarter, is also being widely featured by the retailers. The jobbers are able to buy a long filler Manila cigar, so that it can be sold at $35, and the retailers see the possibilities in giving their trade a good smoke at six-for-a-quarter price.

The five-cent Manila is here now as a staple proposition.

"DIFFERENCES OF OPINION."

On only one question was there any sign of friction at the convention of the Northwestern Cigar and Tobacco Association. Some thought that jobbers and salesmen should not be admitted to membership, while others took the opposite view. But then, "Difference of opinion makes horse racing." In every respect the convention was a success and all worked harmoniously to bring about good and lasting results. It showed that all factors of the trade had a sincere desire to get together and abolish those things that were a detriment to the business and promote those things that were for its benefit. These meetings are always productive of good, as they bring men together to exchange their views on different subjects and gives them a broader grasp on affairs. The Northwestern Cigar and Tobacco Association is in capable hands, and as soon as it gets down to business it will undoubtedly become a power in the trade.—Smoke.

A Dozen Facts and Suggestions From a Successful Cigarette Manufacturer to the Progressive Retailer:

1. As the Turkish cigarette has now become one of your principal assets in the retail business, always feature Quality.
2. Be convinced that QUALITY has proved itself in the brand you intend to feature.
3. After you have selected a winning brand, concentrate on that brand, and talk it to your customer.
4. By satisfying your customers with QUALITY, you not only please them, but also hold their trade.
5. Cigarette sales are not "secure business" for the retailer when based only upon the medium of advertising.
6. Every package of MELACHRINO cigarettes sold by you, sells many more for you—gratis.
7. MELACHRINO cigarettes have the acknowledged approval of QUALITY from all experts of Turkish tobacco.
8. MELACHRINO quality will always live—when advertised brands cease to sell.
9. MELACHRINO cigarettes, unlike any other brands, are big sellers in all the markets of the world.
10. Measure your profits by QUALITY—the same as you will measure your volume of cigarette sales by featuring MELACHRINO.
11. Keep your MELACHRINO cigarettes attractively displayed at all times on your shelves and counters and in your windows and watch your cigarette sales grow.
12. All retailers crave high class custom. MELACHRINO cigarettes will bring it to your store.

Publicity and Price Fixing in Philadelphia

A Clarification of the War Tax Situation — A Few Rude Jolts from the Newspapers—Weitzenhofer Little Educational Tour—This Isn't a Year for Fancy Packages—Figuring on Profits in Ambler, Pa.

PHILADELPHIA, October 16.—A couple of rude jolts from the newspapers, and perhaps some serious talking among dealers, seems to have clarified the war tax situation locally in so far as the retailers are concerned. Even the professional price cutters are coming around, and present indications are that within another week the dear old consumer will have had transferred to his shoulders the entire burden of the tax. In other words, the retailers have decided not to become benevolent institutions for the distribution of tobacco among the civilian stay-at-homes.

Following the lead of the United stores, which announced general increases on cigarettes this week to make up for the excess war tax, nearly all the big retail tobacconists in Philadelphia have joined the procession. The Schulte stores will increase prices on Thursday of the present week. In some instances dealers are also charging enough to make up for the encroachments of increased manufacturers' prices, but most of them are content merely to pass along the war tax.

Publicity—even unfavorable publicity—is sometimes a good thing. As a result of the situation described last week in this correspondence, due to an increase by small, outlying dealers, while the big fellows with few exceptions stuck to the old prices, there was a general howl. Several of the local newspapers took it up, and as usual got all twisted around as to their facts. Thus the Public Ledger gravely asseverated that retailers were only paying $35 a thousand for cigars and could well afford to absorb the tax. It was even intimated that in some instances cigars were selling below $35. Perhaps there is such a price, but it would be difficult to convince the retailer it is for a cigar. H. C. Regester, of 1345 Walnut street, got het up by the first Ledger article and handed them these few words: "The manufacturer has raised the price of his cigars twenty cents a hundred during the last six months; that is, on five-cent cigars. Increased cost of material and labor necessitates this increase. But the dealer has to suffer and ultimately the consumer."

The real showdown came, however, when Charles Weitzenhofer, of 2945 Germantown avenue, who was among the first to pass along the tax, decided to run a little tour of education. Armed with a complete collection of leading brands of cigars, cigarettes, smoking and chewing tobaccos just purchased from his jobbers, and armed likewise with the receipted bills for said supplies, he visited all the newspaper offices and showed them just what happened to be what. He was quoted as saying that the big dealers are crushing out the little fellows.

Dan Ostrow, one of the first downtown dealers to increase prices, is congratulating himself today on having the courage of his convictions. But they had him worried for a time last week, when certain big retailers were running around to manufacturers complaining about other retailers increasing.

One of the interesting side lights to the situation is the work of dealers in small suburban communities near the city. A smoker of a widely advertised ten-cent straight cigar told us the other day that he paid an Ambler dealer 14 cents for one of these smokes.

"And they'll probably go higher," said the storekeeper, "Soon's I get time to figure out my returns."

However, to talk about something more cheerful, many of the local manufacturers intend to pass up the Christmas gift box this year. Hark to one of them!

"What's the use of going to enormous expense to put out gift boxes with little gewgaws and so on all over 'em? We're oversold about—well, modesty forbids mention of the exact number of millions. Orders are coming in faster'n we can fill 'em. If we made the cigar any more attractive people wouldn't smoke anything else."

Seriously, many of the manufacturers are convinced that at the present prices of materials it would be foolish to put money into fancy packages. With the army camps filling up, demand is increasing due to the many soldiers' tobacco and cigarette funds.

The southwest corner of Marquette avenue and 10th street, Minneapolis, has been leased by M. J. Peppard for 99 years to Morris Pflaum, president of G. Pflaum and Sons, cigar manufacturers, and Benjamin Zimmer, of the Twin City Mission Furniture company. The lessees intend to erect a $200,000 building on the site.

Tampa Needs 2000 More Cigar Makers

All the Factories Rushed with Orders—Trying to Get Additional Men—Manufacturers Add War Tax to Invoices—Transferred from Montreal, Jose M. Gonzalez Succeeds Rafael Ybor as Cuban Consul—A Committee Sent to Washington

TAMPA, October 14.—Although they are doing everything possible with working forces on hand and trying to get additional men, the local factory managers are experiencing great difficulty in filling their holiday orders, which continue to come in in large volume. They will strain themselves to the limit, however, and reach Christmas week with the best record obtainable under the circumstances.

The growing demand for Tampa-made cigars calls for a largely increased number of workmen, and continued efforts will be made to get them for future service. At a get-together meeting held last week under the auspices of the Tampa Merchants' Association, Colonel Hugh C. Macfarlane, "father of West Tampa," said: "Our factories need at least 2,000 cigarmakers at present, and our citizens should aid them in getting them. The industry was established here through the co-operative efforts of old citizens, and the citizens of today should co-operate with equal enthusiasm in assisting the manufacturers to solve their various problems." The meeting, called for the purpose of evolving plans for securing recognition for Tampa in connection with war preparation work, was the most enthusiastic and result-producing held in the city for several years. It probably will result in a strong committee being sent to Washington to remain until something definite is done regarding the location of an army, aviation or some other camp near the city.

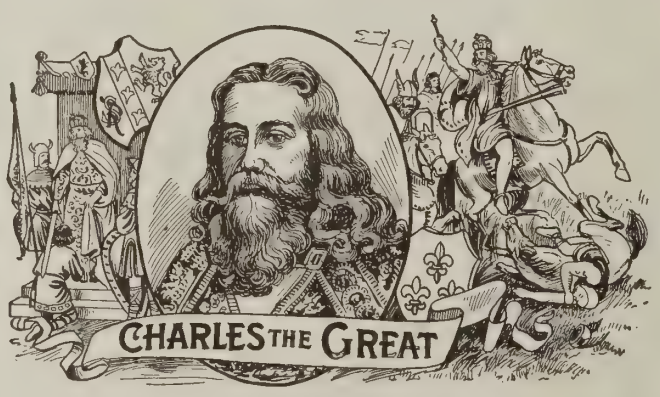
J. M. Catchcart, collector of internal revenue, who was in the city throughout last week, stated that his department would be as liberal as possible with the manufacturers and others with reference to enforcement of the war revenue law.

After serving his country at Montreal for a period of four years, Jose M. Gonzalez has returned to Tampa in the capacity of acting consul of Cuba, taking the place of Rafael Ybor, who has been in service at Havana for some time. Sr. Gonzalez is greatly impressed with improvements made in the city since he went to Canada.

In order to meet the burden of the war revenue bill a majority of the manufacturers, it is said, expect to add the tax to their invoices. "That is what we intend to do," said A. L. Cuesta, Jr., of Cuesta-Rey & Co., "and I understand that others will do likewise."

ADVANTAGEOUSLY UTILIZING AUTO TRUCKS.

A motor-truck company in Charlotte, Mich., learned that farmers in that locality were short of harvest help. A local business organization had endeavored to meet the situation by persuading clerks and factory workers to subscribe a day's work for the farmers, 85 days being subscribed in a few hours. But the situation had to be dealt with in a bigger way. So the motor-truck plant was closed down one day and every employee worked in the harvest fields. Farmers co-operated by telling how many men each of them needed, and the workers were taken to the farms in 50 automobiles. When they were brought back at night, the women of Charlotte served them a dinner. The men received $2.50 per day each and contributed the money to the Red Cross. Motor trucks were used in hauling crops from the field. Time lost in the factory was made up by working two half holidays on Saturday.



TWO-THIRDS OF THE WORLD'S TOBACCO SUPPLY.

The total production of tobacco in the United States annually amounts to more than 1,000,000,000 pounds. We make enough to give ten pounds to every man, woman and child in the United States. We produce about two-thirds of all the tobacco used by mankind. Our chief competitors are found in the countries of Europe. Russia grows one-fourth or one-fifth as much as we do, and the product of Austria-Hungary and Germany in normal times is in the neighborhood of 200,000 pounds, which is far less than the amount they consume.

The new Hotel Statler in St. Louis, will be opened November 10.

Prevention of Tobacco Wilt

WASHINGTON, October, 15.—Experts of the Department of Agriculture say that crop rotation is the only method which will give satisfactory results in controlling tobacco wilt. This decision has been reached after tests conducted by the department's experts over a series of years in the flue-cured tobacco district. By cropping badly infested land for five years with crops not affected by the wilt, the extent of injury to tobacco from the disease was reduced from 80 per cent to less than 10 per cent.

In arranging rotations, the department specialists point out, care must be taken not to grow other plants attacked by the wilt organisms. The plants susceptible to attack which should be avoided in the rotations include tomato, Irish potato, and peanuts. Ragweed, which is very common in the flue-cured district, also is attacked by the wilt and it is important, therefore, that this weed be kept down and, if possible, eradicated. The crops shown by the tests to give satisfactory results in rotations are corn, cotton, wheat, rye (as a cover crop), sweet potatoes, cowpeas, grasses, red clover, and crimson clover. Oats were not included in the tests but it does not seem likely that this crop is affected by the wilt.

The tests made by the Department of Agriculture indicate that on badly infested land the growing of crops not attacked by wilt for four or five years will give better results than only three years of such cropping. The three-year period, however, greatly reduced the amount of wilt. The specialists believe that on badly infested soil a good general rule is not to grow tobacco oftener than once in every five years. After the disease has been brought under control, however, tobacco probably may be grown safely every fourth year. Under no circumstances should two crops of tobacco be grown in succession on infested soil.

To keep the wilt off farms not already infested, it is recommended that seed beds be thoroughly burned to insure complete sterilization and that care be taken not to allow surface drainage from infested farms to reach the seed bed or the tobacco land. Great caution should be used in securing plants or farming implements from farms on which the wilt is present. Tobacco stalks or stems from infested farms should not be used as a fertilizer on healthy soils. Every effort should be made to prevent infested soil or diseased plant material in any form from reaching the farm.

Tobacco wilt produces definite symptoms in the leaves, the stalks, and the roots of the tobacco plant. When plants are attacked the leaves droop in an umbrella-like manner and the stalk shows yellowish to black streaks when the bark is stripped. When diseased stalks are cut across with a knife, slimy ooze appears. The disease also brings about decided decay of the root system. The organism responsible for the disease enters the plant through the root and eventually brings about a plugging of the vessels, thus cutting off the water supply from the leaves and causing them to perish.

In the experiments carried on by the Department of Agriculture various acids, alkalis, and neutral salts, including fertilizer materials, were applied to the soil by varying methods and in varying quantity, and a large number of germicides were used. Subsoiling with the plow and by use of dynamite was also employed to see if such treatment would reduce the amount of wilt. In none of these tests were the results sufficiently encouraging to hold out hope of controlling the disease, and crop rotation therefore is believed to be the only practicable remedy.

A NOTABLE GATHERING

Many Distinguished Guests Enjoyed the Cuban Night at the Allied Athletic Bazaar at the Hotel Majestic.

The most distinguished gathering of Cubans in New York for many years assembled on Tuesday evening for "Cuban Night" at the Allied Athletic Bazaar in the Majestic Hotel. Among the distinguished Cubans and Cuban-Americans who accepted invitations to attend were General Emilio Nuñez, Vice-President of Cuba; Dr. Carlos Manuel de Céspedes, Cuban Minister to the United States, and Mme. de Céspedes, who came from Washington as guests of the Southern Commercial Congress; Dr. Leopold Dolz y Arango, Consul General of Cuba to the United States, and his consular staff; Col. Aurelia Hevia, former Secretary of the Interior in the Cuban Cabinet; Col. Collazo of the Cuban Army, who is in this country on a military mission, and practically the entire Cuban-American colony of New York.

The entertainment, which was followed by dancing, began at 8:30 in the grand ballroom of the Majestic, and all the receipts were turned over to the Cuban Red Cross. After the reading of a cable message of greeting from President Menocal to Miss Dolores Fonseca, who was in charge of the arrangements, a musical program was given wherein all the participants were natives of Cuba, most of them temporarily in New York on their way to Europe to continue their studies. Among those who participated were Señorita Maria Adams, Señor Carlos Garcia and Señorita Angela Morales, all of whom are graduates of the Musical Conservatory of Havana, and who have been designated by the Cuban Government as beneficiaries of the Government's endowment fund for the advancement of the arts; Señor C. Gonzales Bosch, and Mme. Joaquina Greve. Three acts of vaudeville from the Palace Theatre followed the musical entertainment and preceded a dancing program.

The Majestic grand ballroom was decorated with the Cuban and other Allied flags, and at the conclusion of the program Mme. Renée Shollet led the audience in singing the "Marseillaise" and "The Star Spangled Banner."

SHOUTING FOR CHICAGO

of the Mississippi Valley, which in turn is about half that of the whole country.

Chicago is the great headquarters for fireworks, both in the manufacturing and selling ends of the industry. The volume of trade handled last year was about up to the average, and orders were received by local concerns from all parts of the country.

The flavoring extract industry in Chicago has been developed to large proportions, and some of the leading concerns in the country engaged in this line are located here. It is difficult to obtain statistics relating to this business exclusively, as the large houses in many instances are producers of allied lines, such as baking powder, spices and perfumes.

Nearly one-half the pianos made in the United States last year were made in the thirty factories in Chicago and the dozen or more factories operated elsewhere by corporations whose executive offices are in this city.

Chicago has long been regarded as the great central grain and provision market and clearing house of the world. There are other important markets in Winnipeg, Liverpool, London, Paris, Berlin, Budapest, Genoa, Sydney and Buenos Aires, but none of them equals the Chicago market.

Chicago maintains its supremacy as the greatest center of the packing industry. The chief outlet for food producing animals in this country is wholesale slaughtering and meat packing. Such industries usually are associated with great central markets. The system of centralized live stock markets in the United States is the largest single factor in the marketing of meat animals, and the system is peculiar to this country, no other having developed such markets for live stock.

Chicago's packing industry today is more than twenty-five times as large as it was fifty years ago, and more than $1,000,000 in cash is paid out daily for cattle, hogs and sheep at the stockyards.

Everybody knows that this industry is very large, but not everybody realizes its magnitude and what it means to Chicago. In one square mile of territory, including the yards and the packing houses, there are employed between 40,000 and 50,000 men, representing a population of 200,000 to 250,000, or one-tenth of the city's total. This is a city in itself.

The estimate takes no account of the additional thousands of merchants, trades and professions in that vicinty supported directly by the packing and live stock industry.

The following is a table explanatory of the output of Chicago's industries during 1916, prepared by the Association of Commerce:

Slaughtering and packing	$512,000,000
Agricultural equipment	50,000,000
Foundry products	116,000,000
Men's clothing	93,640,000
Printing and publishing	109,707,000

Several thousand cigars were stolen from the cigar store of R. A. Schneider, 220 South Sixteenth street, Omaha, Saturday night. Entrance to the store was obtained through a cellar window.

Henry Eversondoing, proprietor of the Iroquois Cigar Co., at No. 172 East North street, Buffalo, filed a voluntary bankruptcy petition last week, giving liabilities of $2,596.38 and assets of $574.30.

T. G. Hutto, Tampa representative of the American Tobacco Co., has gone to Fort Screven, to report for the examination for entrance into the aviation corps. He expects to be sent to Texas for training.

Between four and six millions of dollars will be collected by the Maryland Collector of Internal Revenue through the new war tax. The district comprises Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia and the law affects nearly 3,000 liquor dealers and 10,000 cigarette and cigar dealers.

Mel. Tannenholtz, of Tannenholtz Bros., of West Thirty-eighth street, New York, is doing his "bit." He is now in Uncle Sam's service down at Yaphank, L. I., where he is working hard to fit himself for the "trip to Berlin," as he expressed it. Everybody who knows Mel. Tannenholtz, has the best of wishes for him.

Symons Bros. & Co., wholesale grocers, of Saginaw and Flint, Mich., have decided to erect a new building for their wholesale grocery business, in Omaha, Mich., this fall. Plans for the new structure are now in the hands of contractors and work will be started at once. The building will be so constructed that additions can be put on at any time. The building will have a full basement and will be three stories in height. It will be of brick and stone. The structure will have a 100 foot frontage on Wright avenue and will extend to the railroad track on the back.

John J. Flaherty, manager of the United store in the Flatiron Building, says the increase on cigarettes has taken better with the people than he at first thought it would. The prices were put up Monday and even before that customers were dropping an extra penny on the counter as other retail dealers throughout the city had already added the extra cent. John J. says that with few exceptions, the smokers have accepted the new price without a quibble. Being a dyed-in-the-wool Giant rooter, Mr. Flaherty was extremely downcast at the result of the World Series. He saw three of the games and he says he can't see where the best team won.

J. C. M. Enslen, formerly of the Melachrino sales force, was in town for a few days last week, to bid friends and relatives farewell before leaving for Camp Borden, in Canada. He is now in the English Royal Flying Corps and after a short training at Camp Borden, he will leave for England.

E. S. Rouse, of Hopper, McGaw & Co., the big cigar dealers of Baltimore, had to undergo an operation at the Church Home Infirmary on October 3. His many friends will be pleased to know that he is rapidly recovering. Mr. Rouse has been manager of the cigar department for the past fifteen years.

F. H. Henderson, of the Henderson Tobacco Co., of Lexington, Ky., has purchased from G. F. Vaughan, of the G. F. Vaughan Tobacco Co., the Bennett Tobacco factory located on Hayman avenue. It will be equipped with modern appliances, and used by the Henderson Tobacco Co. for handling Burley tobacco this season.

The House of Henry Straus has taken over the Leonard Hotel Cigar stand in Lexington, Ky., formerly operated by the J. B. Moos Co. This is the second cigar store operated in that city by the Henry Straus firm, the other being the stand in the Phoenix Hotel. Both of these stores will be under the management of Charles L. Straus.

The campaign to secure money for tobacco funds for soldiers, recently started in Proctor's theatres, is showing a constant gain. At the playhouse in Mount Vernon, N. Y., where the campaign was opened, the sum of $1,338 was secured within a week. The appeals for funds in Mt. Vernon were made from the stage usually by a city official.

T. V. F. (the very finest) a shadegrown wrapped cigar, distributed by Grosvenor Nicholas & Co., Inc., is having a wonderful sale, in fact so large that the factory cannot supply the demand. Several customers, not quite familiar with the initials, ask the salesman for the cigars with initials, not infrequently requesting B. V. D.

The parish house of St. Michael's Church, 225 West 99th street, New York, has been practically turned over to soldiers and sailors. The club rooms formerly used by the Young Men's Guild and other organizations are now used as reading and rest rooms by sailors. A canteen has been established and all kinds of cigarettes, cigars and smoking tobacco are on display.

The Liggett-Riker-Hegeman stores are featuring a new soldier's smoking kit, consisting of the following: 100 Black & White cigarettes, a ten cent tin of Black & White smoking tobacco, a Briar pipe, a fuse lighter with three extra sparkers, an extra fuse and a dozen pipe cleaners. The Kit sells for $1.50 and is all packed and ready for shipment to soldiers. Introduced but a few days ago, the Kit is selling very fast.

Little of importance was done at the meeting of the Hoboken Tobacconists' Association at Odd Fellows' Hall last Thursday night. Chairman Philip Silverman appointed a committee of five men to confer with tobacco dealers throughout Hoboken as to the new scale of prices, and this committee will report back at a special meeting of the association, to be held to night at Odd Fellows' Hall.

The penny has come back into its own and it is competing with jitney as the most popular American coin. War taxes on tobacco, cigarettes, perfumeries, and other luxuries, have raised the price of these commodities a cent or two from the normal "even" prices. As a consequence pennies are in great demand. There has been a run on the banks and the Treasury for pennies that is unprecedented.

Some time ago it was reported that in the selection of employees, the Van Noy Interstate Co. discriminated against "the chosen people." Just to prove how untrue such a statement was, it is shown that the Van Noy Interstate Co. gives employment to no less than 1,500 Hebrews. In addition to numerous stands in railway stations, East and West, the company has stands at the military camps at Mineola and Yaphank, L. I.

The Clarksville, Tenn., tobacco market has been quiet. Deliveries are light, with sales of only scattered lots. This is the winding up of the fiscal tobacco year, and all the warehousemen are preparing for the coming crop, which will begin to arrive soon. Indications point to a higher price this year for tobacco than for years, and the quantity will be better, as the present year has been ideal for raising tobacco. Curing is in process. A great number of barns have been burned during the firing period.

The new campaign of the Independent Retail Tobacconists' Association to secure a larger attendance at meetings was started last week. At the suggestion of Manny Neuwirth, secretary, the association had cards printed, urging retailers to attend. "This association wants to help you in your fight for an individual existence," is one of the pertinent paragraphs on the cards. The cards are being sent out monthly by Dave Saqui, A. Hirtenstein and Sig. Weil, in statements going to retail dealers.

Luther H. Farrington, of the Winston, Harper, Fisher Co., of Minneapolis, is on an auto trip to the Pacific Coast, and will probably not return before November 1. The Cigar and Tobacco Journal says: "He is chaperoning his son, who suffered a nervous breakdown after his strenuous study at the Officers' Reserve Camp, resulting in a decree of his physician that he must 'live in the open' for at least six weeks. Father and son therefore set out in an auto and will stop en route as their fancy dictates."

Every smoker should bear in mind as he lights pipe, cigar or cigarette, that what to him is a mere casual pleasure easily obtained and costing little, is an actual necessity to our lads in the trenches, hard to obtain, if at all, and in France not of the quality or character to which they are accustomed. The need of tobacco and its uses with the fighting forces have been descanted upon by medical men, soldiers and laymen until every man, woman and child in the United States should be aware of its importance.

The new window displays made for the Old King Cole Cigar Co., by the Rex Window Display Co., are now ready and among the dealers who will have the new display are: Harry Cohen, 115 West 116th street, New York; Toongel Bros., 3650 Broadway, New York, and Blum Cigar Co., Flushing avenue, Broadway, Brooklyn. Some of the phrases on the new posters read, "For he who knows," "The Peer of Tampa, "The cigar of the Bon Vivant." Business with the Old King Cole Co. is on a steady increase and the demand for Remingtons and Old King Cole speaks well for the quality.

James J. Grathwol, of the Best & Russell branch, at Minneapolis, looks for a return to conditions which prevailed fifteen years or more ago, when the ten-cent cigar was much smaller than the ten-cent cigar sold in recent years, the 3-for-25 cent cigar being still smaller, and when the cigar that has been selling in recent years for 15 cents, or 2-for-25 cents, went to the retailer at $85, which meant the elimination of the 2-for-25 cent price. He also expects to see all the big dealers in the nickel line today go to $40. "I don't see," he adds, "how these cigars can be made of present quality and sold for $37.50."

Tom Gray, representative of Ruy Lopez & Co., returned this week from an extensive trip through Ohio, Michigan, Indiana and other Western states. He was highly enthusiastic over conditions as he found them and he said: "I have been a salesman for 45 years and never before during all that time, did I find business as fine as it is right now. Everyone is buying larger quantities of cigars than ever before. The army camps and cantonments in the West have been responsible for a large amount of this unusual business. And I think that the holiday orders this year will be the greatest ever."

NOTES AND QUOTES

Mark Levine, of H. Duys & Co., Inc., is calling on the trade up State. Sam Levine left on Tuesday night on a southern trip.

The Hotel Irving, at 26 Gramercy Park, New York City, has been leased by David H. Knott, who controls a large chain of hotels in Gotham. The Irving is a 100-room house.

"The first shall be last and the last shall be first," quoted the devout citizen. "It makes no difference to me how you arrange 'em," replied the expert commercialist. "I'll get mine either way. I'm the middleman."—Washington Star.

Now is the time that a husband who smokes can say to the wife who remonstrates: "But would you have your husband be a slacker? No! A thousand times no! I will do my bit for my nation, if I have to smoke five packages of cigarettes a day!"

The Oxford, N.C. tobacco market is on the biggest boom in its history, says the Public Ledger. It is truly a runaway bull market. Prices on all grades of leaf seem to be advancing every day. Green tips and dark lugs are sensationally high. Lugs which used to sell for $3 and $4 now sell for from $20 to $25 per hundred. Green tips that in olden times went begging for $2 and $3 now sell for $20 to $27. The oldest inhabitant never saw anything like it before.

The activity in the leaf tobacco markets of Virginia continues and from all quarters come the reports that the buyers seem to be more and more anxious each day to secure the weed, says the Richmond Times-Dispatch. All bright stocks for cigarette manufacturing are especially in demand and bright wrappers are selling in Danville and other bright markets at higher figures than have been known since 1875. The few sales of the dark leaf in the markets that confine themselves largely to this style indicate that the darks, too, will be on a boom when they get well on the market. This is especially true of the sun-cured goods.

Increase production but not acreage—that is the method to follow in tobacco growing the coming season. And it is the method that assures biggest money returns at least cultivation cost. This leaves other acres for other crops, equally necessary and equally profitable with tobacco. Now is the time for sowing winter grain and cover crops, and there is no need to reduce their area, for they will be out of the way in time for next year's tobacco. Indeed, the wheat acreage can be materially increased —as it imperatively needs to be—without at all curtailing the tobacco output. Applying to the whole of tobacco the art of "making two blades of grass grow where only one grew before" will do the trick.—Southern Tobacco Journal.

"Time was when the men of the Wheeling district preferred the long, slim stogie to the short, fat cigar, a pipe or cigarette. Wheeling's stogie factories were kept busy supplying home trade, and in most instances some little effort had to be put forth to do this," says the Wheeling News. "Wheeling and vicinity still contain thousands of stogie smokers, and always will, but since the time when the price of the weed was raised the stogie smoking habit has been slowly decreasing instead of increasing, as it would be expected. Thousands of men, young and old, have gradually begun to pull away from the habit of purchasing stogies, while others purchase a few on occasions that are few and far between. Instead of the stogie the man or young man of today is purchasing cigars and cigarettes."

The chewer may go to his tobacconist and purchase a 5 cent or 10 cent cut of his favorite brand, which is of the same general dimensions as of old, measured as a plane surface. It is when the chewer finds his daily stipend running out at 3:45 in the afternoon that his suspicions are apt to be aroused in connection with the tobacco deal. By applying tests in connection with thickness of his plug he makes the discovery that the plug which grew thin during the Spanish war and never recuperated, has again shrunk in thickness or thinness. The ease with which it is divided into convenient chews by his incisors is conducive to going deeper into the plug. The danger of one "biting off more than he can chew" is said to have been effectually eliminated by tobacco manufacturers. —Springfield, Mo., Leader.

A ten-acre tobacco crop at Donerail, Ky., sold a few days ago for $3,250, and another of fourteen acres for $3,000.

The Council of the American Pharmaceutical Association has instructed Treasurer Whelpley to purchase $10,000 worth of Liberty Bonds.

A druggist was killed in his store at Cheyenne, Wyoming, by a train that jumped the track and demolished the side of the building.

Because of the difficulty of importing sufficient suitable wood, the British Government has restricted the use of packing cases in the export trade.

George York, of Seattle, formerly with M. Melachrino & Co., will succeed C. F. Kingery, resigned, as country salesman for Hemenway & Moser, at Spokane.

J. S. Pillow, who has a farm two miles north of Reidsville, N. C., sold to tobacco raised on 1¼ acre for $519. This is at the rate of more than $400 per acre. He averaged $37 for a load.

Tacoma is becoming a Mecca for cigar salesmen, each one trying to beat the other fellow in getting brands on sale at Camp Lewis, where 45,000 men of the new national army will be trained.

The California Drug Clerks' Association has adopted a wage scale, the minimum monthly salary for licentiates being placed at $115 a month up to January 1, 1918, after which a minimum of $125 will be asked.

G. W. Buehler, representing the Pandora cigar, manufactured by the Erlich Mfg. Co., and W. J. Levenhagen, of the Rovig Cigar Co., who are covering the territory adjacent to Seattle, report fine business for Pandoras.

John Du Charme Bagley, of the J. J. Bagley Co., Detroit, Mich., has resigned the management of the company's Seattle office and has entered the service of his country. Mr. Bagley is fourth in command on one of Uncle Sam's speedy submarine chasers.

Woolley & Co., of Seattle, the Manila importers, have added a new Manila cigarette under the brand name of Los Angeles. It sells 20 for 15c. The indications are that the business in this cigarette will soon reach the same proportions as that of the Los Angeles cigar. Woolley Co. report having hard work to keep the trade supplied, one shipment being almost sold out before another is received.

An unusual convention is held at Dayton, O., this week. The wives of members of the selling force of the National Cash Register Company are assembled for a three days' discussion of problems connected with their husband's business. The object of the convention is to give the wives of the salesmen a better understanding of the business in which their husbands are engaged, thereby enabling them to co-operate more fully and extend to their husbands a greater degree of encouragement.

The removal of the export embargo from a long list of articles if sent to countries other than the European Neutrals and Central Powers, will permit the exportation without license of approximately $700,000,000 worth of merchandise per annum. An analysis by The National City Bank of New York of the list of articles from which the ban is thus removed, indicates that they aggregate approximately $750,000,000 in value in the exports of the fiscal year 1917, and that only about 5 per cent. of them went to the European countries to which their exportation is still restricted.

RURAL CO-OPERATION

There Are About 12,000 Farmers' Purchasing and Marketing Associations in the United States.

WASHINGTON, October 15.—The number of farmers' purchasing and marketing organizations in the United States is placed at about 12,000. Of these, 5,424 gave reports of their activities. The creameries and cheese factories reporting numbered 1,708. They do an annual business of $83,360,648, and have an average membership of 83 farmers. The 1,637 farmers' grain elevators and warehouses reporting were located in 23 states, doing a total annual business of $234,529,716. They have an average membership of 102 farmers. The 871 fruit and produce organizations do an annual business of $140,629,918. The annual volume of business of 213 cotton organizations is $34,392,258; of 275 co-operative stores, $14,552,725; of 43 tobacco organizations, $6,746,270; of 96 live-stock associations, $9,482,592. The gross volume of business for all organizations reporting was $625,940,448.

Minnesota leads the states in the number of purchasing and marketing organizations among farmers. Of the total number reporting, 18 per cent were located in that state. Iowa stood second, Wisconsin and North Dakota next in order. Farmers' elevators, creameries and cheese factories and live stock shipping associations are the principal types of co-operative effort in these states.

Fruit and produce associations are the chief forms of co-operative activity in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana. The farmers' grain companies are next in rank. In California 60 per cent of the organizations handle fruit and produce. Cotton associations lead in Texas, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia; fruit and produce organizations second. Tobacco associations are found chiefly in Kentucky. Creameries form the larger share of farmers' co-operative enterprises of the New England States.

THE DAVENPORT RETAILERS.

At the annual meeting of the cigar retailers of Davenport, Iowa, a most pleasant affair, by the way, the following officers were elected:

President—Bert Hayes.
First vice president—George H. Martin.
Second vice president—Fred Finch.
Secretary—E. B. King.
Treasurer—W. A. Hickey.

The election was followed by a number of short talks by various members of the association concerning the work of the association and a discussion of conditions in the tobacco trade.

TWO "DOWN AND OUTS."

George Taylor, formerly a jockey who was paid $10,000 a year, died in a box stall at Churchill Downs at the age of 70, "without funds." Much more pathetic is the case of the former Italian opera singer who was discovered recently at middle age, scrubbing the floor in an American hotel. Taylor contrived at least to enjoy throughout his life the company and the scenes he loved. To die at a racetrack, within earshot of the rataplan of racing "plates," and in a stall, the temporary home of stake winners, is at least to escape the poignant sorrow of the man or woman who dies in exile.

HILO VISIBILITY

Is'nt it so? Isn't it true that the sign in the street car, Omaromar, has a superior visibility for you when you swing on a strap than when you sit in the seat?

Your Nose Knows this may be right on a line with your own nose before you notice it at all! Why? Simply because it has what airmen call high visibility, over your head.

Go along Main street. What do you see? Cornices of sixteen story buildings, signs on second story windows? Not much!

You're like me. I'm like you. You see what I see. I observe, as a rule, the things you, too, notice. We're average.

Then why in the deuce do you put your store and window signs and cards 'way up there above Jack's and Jimmy's lids?

Get 'em down, get 'em down, men! Put your window bulletins especially where folk can read them.

People passing, always intent upon personal, selfish interests, else hurried and worried, or sauntering and curious, each represent a dime or a quarter in your buy-box.

So get 'em in! Make 'em read your brief, very brief, bright and vivid advertisements.

How? By placing the announcements below the level of the normal man's eyes. Never more than four and one-half to five feet over side walk surface.

For huming beings have a tendency to walk along with their orbs downward. You do yourself, don't you? You may not find much money, still, you have the natural method, just like your customers, of noting things close to the ground.

Humor this trait. Have your best bets near the bottom of your windows. And have the accompanying price-cards, descriptions, and so on, right there!

THE SMOKER.

Dan Wharton asked an old resident, Silas Titcomb, if he could smoke a quarter segar. Old Silas lit up like a oil well on fire, shifted his cud an' said: "Oh, hell! Say, young feller, I've even smoked 'em closer than that!"

PROTEST FROM DOUGLAS

Regarding the Appointment of a Demonstration Agent —Developing a Tobacco District.

There is indignation in Georgia, according to the Savannah News. "Douglas and Coffee counties people are up in arms against W. W. Croxton, general passenger agent of the Atlanta, Birmingham & Atlantic Railroad, over an interview from him touching the tobacco industry in south Georgia, which recently appeared in the Georgia daily papers under a Tifton date line, in which it was stated that the A., B. & A. had appointed one W. E. Lea of Timmonsville, S. C., as demonstration agent for the road to assist the tobacco growers in south Georgia, and that the road would advocate a large increase in acreage of tobacco in Tift, Irwin, Ben Hill and Colquitt counties and would establish a central tobacco warehouse for these counties.

"The people of Coffee county say that it was greatly through the influence of the A., B &. A. R. R. officials that a number of Douglas people this year, at considerable expense, built a tobacco warehouse in Douglas and succeeded in launching the first tobacco market in Georgia, which was a complete success, and the prices obtained here this year were as good as at any other tobacco markets in other tobacco growing states, and now the stockholders of this warehouse are planning to greatly enlarge their facilities at Douglas.

"They say that in establishing the tobacco market in Douglas they encountered no opposition except from W. E. Lea, who owns a tobacco warehouse in Timmonsville, S. C., and who fought the Douglas warehouse with all his might, and now the Coffee county people think it's an unfair blow for the A. B. & A. to employ this particular man as demonstration agent, who will endeavor to build up other sections and fight Coffee county."

COST OF DELIVERY IS REDUCED.

Great savings have been effected in eighty cities where the public has cut down the abuse of deliveries by stores. In other words, the plan of "carrying your own packages home" in these cities of a combined population of about 14,000,000 has greatly reduced expenses and made it easier for the stores in these times when labor is scarce. Such records as are available show that the merchants of thirty-two cities, with a total population of 6,929,841, have reduced the number of regular retail deliveries in accordance with the commercial economy board's suggestions. In many of them, in place of the usual four or five deliveries, the number has been cut to one, which the board has recommended as the proper arrangement. In others, the merchants have begun their effort to eliminate waste by reducing deliveries to two a day, with the object of reaching the one-delivery system gradually, as the necessary changes can be brought about. By various means, special deliveries are being widely discouraged.

TEN DOLLARS A PACKAGE.

Evidence of the demand for American tobacco among our fighting forces in France is supplied by the following correspondence. During a recent tobacco crisis in the American training camp in France, several Sammies in Paris were similarly affected. A certain lucky Sammy found two packages of tobacco in his kit, shinned up a tree, auctioned them off and received $10 a piece for the packages."

UP STATE INFORMATION

to keep selling rates down to five, ten, fifteen and twenty-five cents until the new packages replace the old goods.

One of the curiosities of the smaller cigarette packet is the Mecca. Some smokers have already noticed the flap cut-out in the bottom of the famous slide box. When the new stamps are ready for the packets of eight cigarettes, the manufacturers' packers may simply turn up the cute little card strip, and the box is then ready for eight smokes without a rattle!

"There," indicated a jobber, "is a peculiar item in the reading of the new revenue law. It says a cigarette tubes shall be taxed two cents per hundred. What are cigarette tubes? Are they meerschaum, amber, bakelite, rubber, and horn tubes or are they merely the paper tubes, a la Russe Who knows?"

Lists from the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co Winston-Salem, N. C., inform the trade that Prince Albert is, and will be, worth 6 cents in the ba and 11 cents in the tidy tin. Camels will remain a the present price of 12 cents retail.

In the State Capitol District at least, Comrad Belt's Helmar cigarette seems to be selling bette than ever before. Increases are reported by nearl every jobber and retailer on this old brand, s Vice-President Belt should smile. Helmar is Belt' pet feature, it is said, for it was Belt himself, at directors' meeting of the Lorillard Co., who origi nally devised the translation of Helmar from th former Ramleh. Belt had carelessly reversed th spelling on a scratch pad during a discussion o ways and means at the time of the Boston Raml title case. After a long, hard look at the appear ance of the new word, Belt arose and addressed th meeting: "Gentlemen," he exulted, "I have it We'll use Ramleh upside down! Helmar is th name!" And it was, forthwith, immediatel adopted by the Board.

In this column of runs, hits and errors, one ex tremely serious mistake was made last week! An it was about the first smoker, too! For the asser tion was avowed that there were no more wooder Indians in Albany. This is disproved. Correcte by the ancient and famous warrior at 1183 Broad way, North Albany. There he stands, through sur and snow, like Sitting Bull at Little Big Horn What matters it that he is cracked from eagl feather to moccasin? That is merely a certificat of his antiquity, his extreme old age, such as pos sessed by any real Indian who never attended th pale-face dance at Carlisle. And someday, perhaps the boys in blue, around the neighborhood of th North Albany car barns, will induce Eddie Burns the chief's boss, to put him, too, in his reservation lodge!

APPEALING TO EVERYBODY

We are defending our rights as a free Nation. We are resolved that there shall be an end of brute force in international affairs. What Germany's victory would mean to the world is plain. There would be no right except might, no peace save at the price of humiliations too bitter to be borne. Small nations could not exist. There would be no sanctity to a pledge, no solemnity to a covenant. With the dominance of Prussian militarism, the Anglo-Saxon struggle for free institutions and liberty, persisting from Runnymede to Yorktown, with its Magna Charta, its Bill of Rights, and its Declaration of Independence, will have been in vain. It is to prevent this, to defend our rights and to make possible an orderly and just peace in the world that we are at war. The Nation calls on its citizens for high and noble service. On some it calls for service in the field; on others for service at home; on all, it calls for financial support.—D. F. Houston, Secretary of Agriculture.

FOOD CONTROL AND WHAT IT REALLY MEANS

By James H. Collins

Speaking recently at a meeting of State Food Commissioners and his personal staff, Herbert Hoover gave a striking explanation of the part that food control plays in war.

He said that European nations went into the war giving little thought to the subject of food. Even Germany with all its preparations had not foreseen the significance of this factor. With millions of men taken from production and thousands of square miles of fertile fields laid waste by armies the world's cupboard quickly began developing a bareness like that of Mother Hubbard. Country after country went to the cupboard to get a bone and found a diminished supply.

This made it necessary to organize food supply and distribution, and the various countries tried various methods. They fixed maximum prices and minimum prices, regulated the production and distributing trades and put their people on rations. Those countries which established earliest and best methods of food control secured the greatest efficiency in war. The best system, on the whole, is still that of Germany, and she has been able to maintain efficiency with a food supply which in some of her enemy countries might be most embarrassing. Russia, with perhaps the greatest possibilities of food production in Europe, did nothing at all, and out of Russia's food situation grew her revolution.

Mr. Hoover said that whether we like it or not we must deal with the food problem of war in one of two ways. There is not enough food to go around if we stick to the lavish methods of peace times. Rising prices, coupled with depreciation of money, due to issues of war bonds in every country, which make the purchasing power of money shrink, compel us to adjust the food supply to the world's appetite either by controlling that supplyin ways that lead to economy and make it suffice or by letting wages rise as prices rise to keep pace roughly with fluctuations. Even an amateur economist can see at a glance that food control is better than wage increase, because wage increase in a crude force operating slowly, unevenly and with great injustice and suffering to millions of workers. The wages of many workers do not rise—the professional men, clerical workers, public employees and so forth. Russia tried the experiment of letting wages adjust themselves to the diminishing food supply, and it did not work. Russia was brought to a state bordering on anarchy by the intolerable pressure of the food situation on the ordinary peaceful citizen.

Therefore, whether we like it or not—this is a favorite phrase of the Food Administrator and typifies the impersonal attitude he takes toward these great economic problems—whether we like it or not we must meet the food situation in one way or the other, and food control seems to be the lesser of two evils.

This viewpoint explains most of the work thus far done by the United States Food Administration. From August 10, when President Wilson signed the food law, until today much of the work of the Food Administration has centered upon the organization of food control machinery. The farmer, the grain man, the miller, the baker, the packer, the grocer, the wholesaler and

LET EVERYBODY BUY

When existing conditions in the tobacco industry are considered, the showing made by the Liberty Loan Committee for the Tobacco Trade of the Second Federal Reserve District, most strongly appears to be an attestation of sincere patriotism combined with indefatigable business ability. Up to Tuesday night, the Liberty Bond sales promoted by the energetic committee amounted to $8,285,950.

But there is need of additional effort. To make the second Liberty Loan the success that it should be, each true American must do all he can.

In the concluding days of the campaign there is no excuse for slacking.

To aid the nation to win this war each citizen is morally obligated to do something.

Even though he be "as poor as Job's turkey," he is called upon to display his loyalty.

When one, having $2 in his possession, rather easily can arrange to buy a Liberty Bond, any failure to purchase is an evasion of personal responsibility.

Having money, he who refuses to buy Liberty Bonds exposes himself.

Being an absolutely safe investment, constantly earning four per cent. interest, a Liberty Bond purchase isn't a gift to the government; it isn't a sacrifice; buying a Liberty Bond doesn't in any way impair a man's financial condition. A Liberty Bond bought is a purchase that can be converted into cash at desire.

Liberty Bonds are assets that every business man in this country should be proud to have.

Buy Liberty Bonds. Urge your friends and neighbors to buy. Be patriotic and thrifty. Be a man, willing to do your part. Buy!

EVERYBODY'S MONEY IS NEEDED

"Out of a total of over one hundred million Americans suppose that one half, or 50,000,000, of them were each able to purchase one fifty dollar Liberty Bond. This would make a total of only $2,500,000,000—a half billion short of the minimum amount set for the second Liberty Loan. Even if 50,000,000 subscribers could be recorded, and this number is too many to hope for, many other Americans would have to subscribe large amounts to make up the total. The success of the Liberty Loan will be a blow to Germany; it will insure our soldiers the best of equipment for their protection and hasten the return of peace. It is also the best investment ever offered the public. Can you afford not to subscribe for at least one bond?"

A Further Hearing of the "Fifteen Per Cent Case"

Washington, October 23.—The Interstate Commerce Commission late last night issued a statement of the greatest interest to shippers of every commodity in the country, when they set for further hearing, namely on November 5, the Fifteen Per Cent. Case for eastern railroads. In a letter addressed to George S. Patterson, representing the eastern roads the Secretary of the Commission says:

"I am instructed by the Commission to advise you that after conference the Commission is of the opinion that the carriers in the Eastern District represented by you before the Commission at the informal conference held on October 17, 1917, are in error in suggesting what is virtually, and for most practical purposes, a continuance for at least 60 days of the Fifteen Per Cent. Case. The Fifteen Per Cent. Case is still open and before the Commission. If your suggestion is well grounded that further financial relief is needed by the carriers, it is obvious that such relief should be had promptly in order that transportation demands in time of war may be fully met.

"In its report of June 27, the Commission referred at some length to war conditions. The Commission reached the conclusion that only part of the requested increase should then be awarded, stating that the things which the carriers 'believed would happen have not happened.' But the Commission added: 'None of us know what the future may develop, . . . if it shall develop that the fears which have prompted the carriers are realized or that their realization is imminent, we shall be ready to meet that situation by such modification or amplification of the conclusions and orders herein reached and entered as are shown to be justified.'

"The gist of your suggestion of October 17th is that the situation above referred to has now arisen; it is suggested that operating revenues do not now adequately overcome mounting costs. If this be so, the Commission's stated purpose of meeting that situation will not have been attained by adopting your suggestion of a hearing 60 or 90 days hence. The Commission is emphatically of the opinion that the evidence necessary to establish the full truth should be presented, without delay, in order that the carriers may be maintained in a position to do their full war duty.

"The record submitted in June indicated that the condition of the carriers in New England was less favorable than in any other section of the country. The Commission is impressed with the desirability of being promptly advised as to their present situation, particularly as regards their ability to meet the increased cost of railway fuel.

"Since the outbreak of the war carriers and shippers alike have with praiseworthy alacrity co-operated to improve the efficiency of our transportation system. The results have been marked; but there is room for still further elimination of waste and increase of efficiency. On the other hand, there have been many misleading statements and publications with respect to the financial condition of the carriers, particularly in the Eastern District. The exact situation, should, in our opinion, be at once disclosed before the Commission and to the public.

"The Commission will therefore set down for further hearing the Fifteen Per Cent. Case, so far as carriers in the Eastern District are concerned, on November 5, at 10 o'clock in Washington, D. C."

What shippers are expected to say, in the meantime, is unreported.

WIND JAMMERS WON'T DO

United States Sailing Vessels Not Allowed to Enter the War Zone—Gaston, Williams & Wigmore Had Two Schooners Laden with Tobacco.

Two sailing vessels owned by Gaston, Williams & Wigmore, Inc., which were loaded with tobacco for shipment to France, have been compelled to discharge their cargoes and arrange to sail for ports where war hazards are non-existent. It was reported, Monday, that the Government had communicated with Gaston, Williams & Wigmore, stating that these vessels would not be permitted to sail for France. This is in line with a recent order that sailing vessels would not be allowed to go into the submarine zone.

The schooners Clara F. Donnell and Henry F. Kreger were fully loaded with tobacco. The tobacco was being shipped abroad to fill an order placed by the French Government last Spring. It was stated at the offices of Gaston, Williams & Wigmore that their tobacco contract contained a clause whereby they were to be paid on a basis of f. o. b. warehouse, and the task of ocean transportation rested entirely with the French.

OVER TOBACCO STOCKS

DeLancey Nicoll Sues a New York Brokerage Firm for $187,207.45—A Breach of Contract Alleged.

De Lancey Nicoll has begun an action in the New York Supreme Court against the members of the brokerage firm of Tower & Sherwood, of No. 7 Nassau street, New York, for $187,207.45 which he alleges is due him for breach of contract in failing to deliver certain shares of stock he had ordered purchased for him.

Mr. Nicoll, who is attorney for tobacco interests, asserts he conducted a marginal account with the defendants prior to their assignment, on May 7 last, and had ordered them to purchase 10,000 shares of stock of the British-American Tobacco Co., Ltd., 100 shares of Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co., 264 shares of MacAndrew & Forbes Co., 2,500 shares of common of the Interborough-Metropolitan and 1,000 shares of preferred stock of the same company. The market value of the stocks was $363,242.

According to Mr. Nicoll, the brokers had agreed to deliver the stocks on demand when payment of the balance due was made. His debit balance was $153.13, and he says that when he undertook to get possession of the securities he learned they were pledged with various banks to secure loans in excess of his debit balance. The banks, according to Mr. Nicoll, had sold the stocks and applied the proceeds to meet the loans.

These transactions took place prior to July 8, 1915, and since then the brokerage firm has been insolvent, said Mr. Nicoll. On May 7, 1917, Arthur M. Sherwood and Frederick H. Tate, members of the firm, assigned the interests of the concern to Archibald R. Watson, according to the plaintiff.

Because of the non-delivery of the stocks, Mr. Nicoll alleges he had to purchase corresponding securities for $340,341 and sues for the difference between that amount and his debit balance.

A CIGAR MAN MURDERED

Fred Boehm Shot by Oscar Landnesser in a Crowded Court Room at Hammond, Ind.

Fred Boehm, one of the owners of the Imperial cigar store in Muncie, was shot and killed in the crowded police court room at Hammond, Ind., Wednesday morning, by Oscar Landnesser, who had been on trial.

Immediately on being acquitted of a minor charge Landnesser stepped from the dock, whipped out two revolvers and began firing into the crowd that was in the room. Boehm was killed. Myrtle Peffer, a policewoman, was wounded. The crazed man fired twice at City Judge Fred Barnett, but missed the magstrate both times.

The motive for the shooting was that Landnesser had been made frantic with rage because he had been prosecuted.

MAYOR EDWIN W. FISKE OF MOUNT VERNON, N. Y.

A man who, most notably, has assisted in procuring smokes for soldiers. Personally, he has given many thousand cigarettes and cigars to Mount Vernon boys now in the United States Service. Officially, he inaugurated at Mount Vernon the practice now observed in all the Proctor theaters at every performance; which collection of contributions for the smokes for soldiers' fund daily results in securing thousands of dollars.

Besides being interested in the Imperial cigar store and the Braun hotel cigar stand, Fred Boehm, with his brother, Joseph, was also engaged in the restaurant business at Gary. The murdered man was 35 years old and unmarried. He was well connected and well liked in Muncie. He belonged to the B. P. O. E.

The National Humidor Cigar Box Co., capitalized at $40,000, has been organized in Grand Rapids, Mich. The president and treasurer is Walter Ioor; vice-president, Thomas G. Alvord; secretary, E. W. Aument; directors, the officers and John D. Case, Joseph Renihan, James F. Knowlton and Frank J. Cook. The company will control patents issued to Theodore G. Alvord on a humidor cigar box and will have the boxes manufactured under contract on a royalty basis. The box has a false front with space for a sheet of porous paper to keep the cigars moist.

H. G. Hicks, a director of the Henry Clay-Bock & Co., is on a trip as far as Buffalo and Canada. He will be away about two weeks.

ANOTHER FUND STARTED

To Provide Tobacco and Other Comforts for the Men in the Forest Regiments—C. L. Pack Heads the Committee.

WASHINGTON, October 22.—Tobacco funds are springing up everywhere overnight. Now comes an announcement from the American Forestry Association of the establishment of the American Forestry Relief and Comfort Fund for the purpose of providing the men of the forest regiments with tobacco and for providing relief during the period of the war and for one year thereafter for the dependent families of the soldiers, and for such other comforts as the soldiers may need.

The organization of this work and the collection of the funds are in charge of the following committee: Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Forestry Association, chairman; Percival S. Ridsdale, secretary of the association; Robert P. Dunn, of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association; W. R. Brown, of the Lumber Committee of the Council of National Defense, and William L. Hall and A. W. Potter, of the United States Forest Service.

HOSPITAL TESTIMONY

He fought and suffered. He saw the hardest sort of service in the trenches. From actual experience, he can depict war conditions as they are. He knows what soldiers have to endure. He doesn't need to be told how ardent is a wounded man's desire for a smoke. Be advised by one who has been "through the mill." Give heed to this hospital sketch made by Sergeant Arthur Guy Empey.

The dying man began to mutter. The nurse bent over him. She had a writing pad and a pencil in her hand. She whispered to him: "Dearie, the mail is going out. Do you want me to write a note home to the folks—just a short note telling them that you are all right and will be with them in a couple of months?"

The patient answered.

"Home! Folks? I've never had any since I was a kid. Home! My God, how I wish I had one!"

The writing pad in the nurse's hand was wet. The bandage on my shoulder was wet. Perhaps the blood was soaking through. But blood is red.

The voice of the wounded man again: "I want—want—I want a——"

The nurse: "What do you want, boy? What can I get for you—a nice cool drink?"

"A DRINK? No; I want a smoke! Where's my makings? I want a fag—a smoke—a smoke!"

She looked at the doctor. He nodded. She left the patient and came over to me. She whispered to me: "Have you a cigarette, my dear, for that poor boy? We are all out—have not received any for ten days. If the people at home only realized what a godsend tobacco is for these poor wounded lads they would send them out. They are as important as shells."

I told her to look in my kit bag. She looked through it and found one, all out of shape—a Goldflake.

With joy in her eyes she went back to her patient, gently put the cigarette between his lips and lighted it.

A contented sigh, two or three weak puffs and the lighted cigarette fell out of his mouth on to the sheet. He was asleep.

It was getting late. I fell asleep. When I woke up it was morning.

The bed on my right was empty. The nurses in the ward had red eyes. They had been crying.

I turned an inquiring gaze to the Jock on my left. He solemnly nodded and his mouth twitched. I thought he was going to cry, but suddenly he looked at me, tears in his eyes, and said, "Aw, go to ——!" and turned over on his side.

Do the men in the trenches want smokes?

Do the men in the trenches want them? They need them! They cry for them! They must have them!

ACKNOWLEDGING THE CORN

Maize, or Indian corn, in its present form represents one of the great achievements of primitive planters. It came originally, it is now generally accepted, from southern Mexico, and was eaten there by the Maya tribes. At first it was nothing more than a coarse grass on which were tiny ears reserbling the top of the wheat stalk. Each grain had its own envelope of husk. Occasionally even now, grains of corn are found which have their individual husk, thus showing how the maize of our day reverts to type. The plant was essentially tropical, and even now after centuries of culture in the temperate zone it is sensitive to frost.

The tribes of northern America, forced to adapt it to their climate if they would use it at all, gradually, in the course of generations, evolved a reasonably cold-proof plant. There has been crossbreeding since by white farmers, yet as a matter of fact, the corn culture of the present day is practically as it came from the hand of the Indian.

All the kinds of corn which evist today are described in the accounts of the white settlers. Black and red corn, the white corn, the golden yellow corn, the soft sweet variety—the so-called gummy corn of the Indians,—all are mentioned. The culture of corn was more than farming with the Indians—it was a religion. The selection of the seed for the next planting was done with such care, the various colorings were so studied and modified that there grew up a veritable maize tradition, which was a part of the religious life of the tribes.

Corn was the staple ration of Davy Crockett. Like all other backwoodsmen of that day, he carried a supply of it, parched and ground; and, like the Indians, he could travel days together through the depths of the forest on no other diet than a small handful of it mixed with a little water. It was a saying of his that if a man had a gun and ten pounds of parched corn he could easily live a year. The white men early learned from the Indians, who were able to withstand the fatigues of warpath and hunting trail because of this simple and quickly assimilated food. The corn, rich in starch and protein, parched until it was made quickly digestible, was mixed with water. A cupful of this most simple of all the elixirs had the effect of almost instantly strengthening the tired body.

"The nutritive value of corn is almost the equivalent of that of wheat; and what wheat was to the armies of old, corn could be both to the army and to the people of the United States," says Robert H. Moulton, in The Nations Business.

"The Government of the United States is now urging upon the American people that they add at least one-fourth part of corn meal to wheat flour in the making of bread. This is practicable and feasible; it is not a new and untried measure; it has aleady stood the test of use on this continent; for corn has been used in the form of a fine flour for centuries by various tribes of Indians, and when well enough ground it compares favorably with the wheaten product."

A SMOKER'S COMPLAINT

Though above the sun is shining,
And the birds sing in the trees,
While the clouds with silvery lining
Scud before a pleasant breeze.
Though on every side are flowers,
Bright with variegated hues,
Watered by the summer showers,
And the early morning dews.
Though kind Nature spreads her beauties
With rich bounty 'neath my eyes,
Though I'm free from worldly duties,
Yet I utter frequent sighs.
Why then, am I not enjoying
All these beauties as I roam?
True, the cause is most annoying,
For I've left my pipe at home.

From Poverty to $20,000 a Year

A Cigar Factory Employee Who Made the Jump

L. Wolfe Gilbert, popular song writer, author of "Waiting for the Robert E. Lee," "Lily of the Valley" and others, enjoys an annual income of $20,000 from his royalties. But he was not always so prosperous. Prior to breaking into the song game, he worked in the Antonio Roig & Langsdorf cigar factory in Philadelphia, and received a weekly stipend of $7. Although he never mastered the art of making cigars, he attempted to make smokers for himself and succeeded after a fashion. When he finished rolling a cigar usually he had something that resembled a carrot.

Instead of paying strictest attention to his work, Gilbert used to try to write parodies when the foreman was not looking. Whether his parodies, like his cigars, were more than the foreman could stand, Gilbert never knew. But the foreman fired him.

His folks urged him to apologize to the foreman and try to get his job back, but Gilbert could not see things in that light and started for New York, where he continued to write parodies and nearly starved for awhile.

The end of the first week found him broke and hungry. He wondered if he hadn't made a mistake in not going back after the job, for the parody market seemed dead, and he felt about the same.

In New York, one day while Gilbert was trying to figure out how to make connections with a meal, light or heavy, he bumped into his dad, who asked him how he was geting along.

"Fine," answered Gilbert, smiling bravely and attempting to assume an air of prosperity.

Gilbert, Sr., seemed skeptical. He gave the boy a cigar and urged him to come with him.

It isn't so enjoyable to smoke even a good cigar when one has a stomach that is painfully empty. But as he puffed away, young Gilbert endeavored to maintain his bluff.

When, sorrowfully, his father departed, Gilbert re-commenced skirmishing to secure a meal. He sure did know what dire poverty was, for months.

L. WOLFE GILBERT

Bad times, however, finally came to an end when Gilbert found a publisher willing to take a chance with some of his original songs. Then Gilbert wrote "Waiting for the Robert E. Lee" and money began to roll in.

Gilbert is seldom seen today, without an expensive cigar between his teeth. He smokes about twenty cigars a day. Every time he starts to write a new song he lights a cigar, and in his latest hit, "Lily of the Valley," he refers to cigars in the second verse.

"What booze is to some writers, cigars are to me," Gilbert said. "I guess cigars are responsible for most of my good ideas and hits, and sometimes I wonder what I would do without them."

If Gilbert gets most of his ideas from cigars and is able to pull down $20,000 a year as a result, maybe some of us with slender pay envelopes are losing a lot by not putting more faith in choice cigars.

TO UNIONIZE NEW YORK

The Plan of Organized Cigar Makers—Many Delegates to Meet Next Sunday—Secretary Brown Speaks.

The Cigarmakers' International Union in Greater New York held a joint meeting last Sunday at Bohemian Hall, 523 East 73d Street, New York, for the purpose of bringing organized and non-union workers together; 103 delegates from non-union and organized shops were present. Morris Brown, secretary of Local Union 144, said, concerning the meeting, and its object: "We want to bring about a uniform bill of prices advantageous both to the manufacturers and to the men and women engaged in the industry. We do not want to appear antagonistic toward the manufacturers as we want them to secure living profits also. But we think that conditions with the cigar maker, living conditions I mean, have been such that something must be done to secure higher wages. We all know about the increased costs of living and with the wages cigarmakers have been receiving, they simply could not continue going along as they have been."

Another meeting will be held at the same hall next Sunday and a larger attendance is expected. Following the meeting, the union will take concerted action in an endeavor to unionize all open shops, and also bring the union label to organized shops, which, heretofore have not used the label, although the hands were members of the union.

TO EXPEDITE ITS WORK

Three Divisions Have Been Made of the Interstate Commerce Commission Now Composed of Nine Members.

WASHINGTON, October 22.—Because Congress, before adjournment, enacted a law allowing the Interstate Commerce Commission nine members instead of seven as formerly, and because increased work was forced upon the Commission, reorganization is going on with a view to expediting the cases before the commission.

At a general session of the Commission, held a few days ago, it was ordered that the Commission be divided into three divisions numbered, respectively, Division 1, Division 2, and Division 3.

It was further ordered that Commissioners McChord, Meyer, and Aitchison shall constitute Division 1; that Commissioners Clark, Daniels and Woolley shall constitue Division 2; and that Commissioners Harlan, Hall and Anderson shall constitute Division 3. It was decided that each division shall have power and authority to hear, determine, order, certify, report, or otherwise act as to any of the work, business, or functions assigned or referred to it.

The divisions have been made so that the entire Commission in the future, will not have to sit and hear a case. The cases will be heard by one of the three divisions, each hearing cases for so many days at a time, and the future hearings to come before the different divisions in rotation. This, it is expected, will help speed up the work, so that while a certain division is hearing cases the other two divisions can be reviewing cases which they have already heard and writing opinions on the same.

The agency plan of the United Cigar Stores Co., which has proved so successful in the East and middle West, has been extended to the Pacific Coast territory. Within two months at least twenty-five United Cigar Stores agencies will be in operation in California. The United now has more than 450 agencies, all of which have been established within the last eighteen months. About 300 of these are in the eastern States and the remainder in the Chicago territory.

Albert P. Wadleigh of Merrimac, Mass., manager of the Dutra Tobacco Co., who is a candidate for representative in the Merrimac-Amesbury-Salisbury district, was called for examination by the district draft exemption board Saturday, and failed to pass the physical examination, being rejected. He is widely known and was state councilor of the Jr. O. U. A. M., being one of the leading members of the order at present. His rejection by the draft board is important politically, for were he accepted, he could not remain in the representative fight very well and the field would have been left open for someone else.

Ziegler's Visit May Mean Much to Allentown

The importance of the Tobacco Corporation of America is much appreciated in Allentown, Pa. Leading business men there are eager to have the big Tobacco Corporation numbered among the dependable industries of the city. To induce and insure the location of additional cigar factories in Allentown, they are working hard. Desirous of securing for Allentown the prestige and advantage that would come from the constant shipment of goods having a nation wide distribution, they keep "pegging away." To make Allentown a center of production, they are toiling zealously. Perceiving the possibilities of the situation, knowing well what a greatly increased output of cigars would mean to Allentown, the Chamber of Commerce there improves every opportunity to persuade the Tobacco Corporation of America.

William Ziegler, Jr., president of the Tobacco Corporation of America, accompanied by Vice-President Max Krielsheimer, visited Allentown last week. The purpose of the visit was to investigate. President Ziegler wanted to see if it was advisable to proceed with plans that had been made, tentatively. Met by C. B. Huntress, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, the head of the big company was shown what the town had to offer.

At a luncheon, at the Elks Club, Thursday, various matters pertaining to factory sites and shipping facilities were discussed. In the evening, he was the guest of honor at a dinner at the Hotel Traylor. Reuben J. Butz, president of the Allentown Chamber of Commerce presided at the dinner, and the principal men of the city were present.

Remaining in Allentown three days, Ziegler did not ignore any opportunity to obtain information. Though he has not been associated with cigar manufacturing for a great length of time, Ziegler rather surprised those with whom he talked, he was so well posted concerning the cigar business.

Until an official announcement is made, there will be no disclosure concerning what the Tobacco Corporation of America will do in the way of extending its facilities in

WILLIAM ZIEGLER, JR.
President of the Tobacco Corporation of America

Allentown. But the plans under consideration, which, chiefly directed toward securing efficiency in manufacturing and making distribution quicker and more economical, will likewise provide for a great expansion of business. For La Sultana brand is increasing both sales and prestige and the Duke of Flanders promises to tremendously popular.

Estimates of United States Tobacco Production

WASHINGTON, October 20.—Crop estimates for October 1 indicate that tobacco throughout the entire tobacco producing territories of the country will aggregate 1,243,023,000 pounds, as against an estimate on December 1 last year of 1,150,622,000 pounds, or an increase in favor of the present year of 21,837,000 pounds. The increase is even more marked when compared with the average production for the five-year period, 1911-1915, which was only 983,723,000 pounds. The estimate places the crop of this year 108 per cent. over that of 1916.

Kentucky leads with an estimated production on October 1 of 431,242,000 pounds, as compared with 423,520,000 on September 1, and the condition of the crop has increased from 82 to 91 per cent. during the month. North Carolina stands second with a percentage increase from 78 to 85 per cent., or from 207,852,000 to 218,117,000 pounds, as against an estimate on December 1, 1916, of 176,000,000 pounds. The third in importance is Virginia, with an increase in percentage from 82 to 86 and in quantity from 137,216,000 to 140,483,000 pounds, as compared with the December, 1916, estimate of 129,200,000 pounds.

The three States above referred to are the only ones showing production estimated at more than a hundred million pounds. Of those below that mark, Ohio stands first with an estimated crop of 98,675,000 pounds, as compared with that of 91,775,000 pounds on September 1, and with 95,000,000 for the estimate of December 1, 1916. The increase in the percentage condition of the Ohio crop was from 81 to 87 per cent. October 1 over September 1. Although Tennessee shows an increase in condition from 84 to 94 per cent. as compared with that of September 1, the quantity will, if the October estimate is final, be only 81,710,000 pounds, as against an estimate on September 1 of 85,728,000 pounds, and as compared with the estimate of December 1, 1916, of 81,760,000 pounds.

Next in quantity stands Pennsylvania, and again, while the condition stands 90 per cent. as against 85 per cent. on September 1, the quantity shows a decrease from 59,465,000 to 59,013,000, although it is still well in advance of the estimate of December 1 of last year, which was only 49,096,000 pounds. South Carolina shows an increase in percentage from 76 to 88 per cent. in quantity from 56,515,000 to 57,015,000 pounds, a wonderful increase over the estimate of December 1 last of 20,280,000 pounds. The only other State showing a production estimated at over half a million pounds is Wisconsin, which shows up with a decrease in percentage condition from 80 to 75 and in quantity from 55,642,000 to 52,164,000 pounds, and as against the December 1, 1916, estimate of 55,753,000 pounds. Connecticut shows up with a decrease from 91 to 85 per cent. in condition, with 33,966,000 pounds as against 34,343,000 pounds in September and as against the estimate of December 1 last year of 33,186,000 pounds. Maryland shows an increase in condition from 83 to 89 per cent., in quantity from 21,602,000 to 22,654,000 pounds, which is well over the estimate of 19,635,000 pounds on December 1, 1916.

Other States showing an estimated production of over a million pounds on October 1 are Massachusetts with 11,283,000 as against 11,541,000 pounds in September and 12,118,000 pounds on December 1 last year; the condition shows a decrease from 88 to 84 per cent. New York shows an increase in condition from 83 to 89 per cent., and in quantity from 4,298,000 to 4,388,000 pounds, but is yet below the December estimate last year of 4,551,000 pounds. The condition of the West Virginia crop has increased during the month from 80 to 85 per cent., and in quantity from 9,040,000 to 9,137,000 pounds. This, however, is far below the estimate of December 1 last year, which was reported as amounting to 12,690,000 pounds. Georgia shows an increase in condition from 85 to 89 per cent., and in quantity from 1,461,000 to 1,496,000 pounds, which is not yet up to the standard of last year with 1,534,000 pounds. While the Florida crop shows an increase in condition percentage from 85 to 90 per cent., the estimated quantity remains stationary at 3,240,000 pounds. Missouri, while showing a slight increase in condition from 78 to 89 per cent., shows a decrease in quantity from 3,300,000 to 3,257,000; this is still above the estimate of December 1 of last year, which was 3,040,000 pounds.

States showing productions of less than a million pounds, but still with an increase over estimates of September 1, include New Hampshire with an increase from 160,000 to 171,000 pounds, Vermont from 159,000 to 170,000 pounds, Illinois from 589,000 to 604,000, Texas from 128,000 to 134,000 pounds.

Louisiana and Arkansas remain stationary as to quantity, but while the production in Louisiana stands at 218,000 pounds on both September and October 1, the crop condition has decreased from 84 to 65 per cent.; on the other hand, while the crop quantity of Arkansas remains at 208,000 pounds, the condition has increased from 79 to 90 per cent. Alabama shows a decrease from 135,000 to 134,000 pounds, but with an increase in condition from 81 to 89 per cent.; Texas shows an increase in quantity from 128,000 to 134,000 and in crop condition from 77 to 80 per cent.

ADVOCATING WORKMEN'S HEALTH INSURANCE.

Labor federations among our Allies in Europe have urged the immediate adoption of workmen's health insurance.

At the conference in Leeds, England, to formulate minimum standards for labor to be incorporated in the peace treaties at the end of the war, reports the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, the following resolution was adopted:

"Countries which have not yet enacted insurance laws regarding sickness, invalidity, old age and unemployment should pledge themselves to do so within the shortest period."

The delegates to this conference represented the trade union federations of England, Italy, Belgium and France.

More than $4,000,000,000 worth of tobacco has been sold at Kinston, N. C., in less than two months' time. Tobacco board of trade figures given out last week placed the value of the weed marketed since the season's opening at $4,121,101.47.

Don't Agree Regarding Price Advances

The Different Camps of Retail Cigar Dealers in San Francisco—The New H. Bercovich Store—The William Cluff Co. Having Great Success with Del Moro—C. Webster McCormick Has Reason to Be Enthusiastic—Tapping the Red, White and Blue Barrels.

San Francisco, October 17.—During the past week there was some curtailment of purchasing by the retailers, owing to the unsettled state of the price question incident to War Revenue taxes. This is the problem that overshadows everything else, at present, with the dealers. It is evident that behind the veil of business courtesy a lack of harmony exists. There are, for instance, the Retail Cigar Dealers' Association of San Francisco, the chain stores and the strictly independent dealers who have not aligned themselves with either of the other elements. Notices of a new scale of prices have been posted up in all of the stores owned by members of the Cigar Dealers' Association; the United Cigar Stores have a different schedule; the Gunst stores exhibit a notice stating that temporary prices have been established, until the whole price question has been readjusted; while the unattached dealers are sitting tight awaiting the course of events.

At present the situation seems to be that, among the chain stores, the "United" and the H. Bercovich Co. are standing together, while the Gunst stores seem to be in accord with the Retail Cigar Dealers' Association. Thus there promises to be a pretty fight between the hostile camps of retail cigardom in San Francisco, which shows what discord a War Revenue tax can create.

It is reported on good authority that the Tobacco Company of California will soon announce a new schedule of prices on cigarettes, which, while affecting price and size of package of most lines, will not apply to Pall Mall and La Marquise. Bull Durham will also remain as a five-cent seller.

There will be no change in Imperial cigarettes, made by the John Bollman Co., and they will still retail at the old 10-cent figure.

The H. Bercovich Co. is rushing to completion the company's new store, at the corner of Fourth and Market streets, in the California Theatre Building, a most elegant structure just erected on a corner that sold to the present owners for the largest price ever paid for a piece of land in the city of San Francisco. As a location for a cigar store, this corner is one of the choicest in the city, and the H. Bercovich Co. is to be congratulated on securing it as the location for the company's twelfth store in San Francisco.

The William Cluff Co. has closed negotiations for the new Liberty Loan cigar, a nickel seller, manufactured by the Havana Importing Co., of Chicago. Shipments of this cigar are expected to arrive next week and will be distributed by the company in its usual energetic style. The William Cluff Co. had a fine exhibit at the late State Fair at Sacramento, showing all lines handled by the company. This the company was enabled to do by reason of having an exclusive concession for the sale of cigars on the grounds of the fair, the exhibit being in charge of Jot. C. Wood, manager of the company's cigar department.

A shipment of the new "two-for-fifteen" sellers has been received by the William Cluff Co. It's the Del Moro, made by the Gonzales, Fisher Co., of Tampa, Fla., and the first issue secured repeat orders.

L. S. Lowrey, in charge of the cigarette department of the Tobacco Company of California for this division, has returned from a trip including Fresno and Sacramento. He found conditions there very good, with every promise of a lively holiday trade to follow.

Captain Robert R. Morgan, of the U. S. Transport service, has been collecting the donations of smokables secured from patriotic smokers by the red, white and blue barrels placed at the entrance of some of the chain stores, and has receipted for the first clearing of the H. Bercovich Co.'s barrels.

Ed. Whiting, manager of Reiss Bros. & Co., has been away in the South for several weeks, but is expected home in a few days, after which he will depart on his regular Fall trip through Arizona and the Southwest.

C. Webster McCormick is in town again, but not for long, as he leaves in a few days for the Northwest, Denver and Salt Lake City. It is quite possible, should his trip be prolonged, that he will keep going eastwards and land in New York for the holidays. Mr. McCormick is enthusiastic over the new Army and Navy size of the Webster cigars, which are taking well with the public.

In Sacramento and Fresno there is a good deal of confusion over the price question, incident to the new War Revenue tax. Retail cigar establishments there are quite divided in their opinions of what is best in the way of arranging prices to the consumer. However, the situation seems to be clearing, with the United Cigar Stores and the Samuels stores likely to come to some understanding and thus avoid an unnecessary conflict.

The American Tobacco Co. has had demonstrators at work in front of Market street cigar stores, showing the making of Lucky Strike cigarettes.

OWNED BY THE ENEMY

Supplies Purchased and Stored in This Country by Agents of Germany—Large Quantities of Tobacco May Be Seized.

Washington, October 22.—The Government is taking energetic steps to locate stocks of cotton, sugar, tobacco, metals and other articles held in this country for Germany. Vast quantities of such materials are stored at points on the Atlantic seaboard and elsewhere, and under the provisions of the Trading with the Enemy Act, this Government has authority to requisition them.

One of the principal duties of A. Mitchell Palmer, who has just been appointed Alien Property Custodian, will be to prepare an accurate inventory of alien property of this character.

This bureau is obtaining data. Certain stocks in warehouses in New York and its vicinity recently seized by Secret Service agents are being listed, and in a few days it will be possible to make an accurate estimate of the value of that property, which is said to be large. Every effort will be made to place the material at the disposal of the American Government as fast as it can be located.

Large stocks of tobacco have been located in warehouses at Atlantic seaports.

Before we declared war on Germany, the British Order in Council, placing an embargo on tobacco consigned to Holland, tied up a large supply loaded on vessels ready for shipment. Some was allowed to remain on interned vessels until recently, when the Government need of transports necessitated the storage of the contraband material in warehouses.

Officers of the Cincinnati Cigar and Tobacco Association have announced a plan which will be placed in operation immediately for the purpose of boosting the membership of that organization. Active membership dues of $5 a year for dealers and $10 a year for jobbers will be continued, but it is proposed to seek to develop a very large associate membership at the nominal dues of $1 a year without initiation fees. According to the plans announced an invitation will be extended to every clerk and others in any way connected with the cigar and tobacco business to join the association in this manner and take an active part in the development of mutual interests in Cincinnati. Much credit for the success of the first celebration of a Cigar Day in Cincinnati is being given to the Committee of Active Workers which included Rawlins D. Best, Webb Hill, Harry T. Davis, C. B. Whitlock, J. A. Strobl and David Straus.

Tobacco Culture in the Cagayan Valley

In the Old Days of the Spanish Monopoly Every Grower Was Under Supervision of an Unpleasant Sort—First Class Philippine Leaf Once Sold for $112, Gold, Per Quintal—The Philippine Government Today is Encouraging the Planter to Employ Improved Methods.

However desirable for tobacco culture the soil and climatic conditions may be, growers are unlikely to secure the best results if antiquated or careless methods are employed.

Until recently, at least, the tobacco grower in the Cagayan Valley was inclined to be "primitively conservative." He did things "according to the custom of his father." Possibly he was not quite so industrious or painstaking. For, in grandfather's day prevailed the government monopoly. While this monopoly was in force the natives in the Cagayan tobacco districts were subjected to great inconveniences and hardships. Each family was compelled to grow 4,000 plants and deliver the entire crop to the agents of the Government. If a smaller amount was raised, no part of the crop could be reserved for the use of the planter, and a fine was imposed when the crop was short. After the crop was harvested the leaves were selected and bought by Government agents, and bundles of inferior leaves were rejected and burned. Native houses were searched for concealed tobacco and fines and penalties imposed on those who did not comply with all the requirements of the monopoly. Early in the nineteenth century many riots and disturbances arose out of the difficulties in meeting the harsh provisions of the law.

Winner of the first prize in the Exposition Parade

From 1781 to 1882, the Filipino planters of Cagayan and Isabela grew tobacco at the muzzle of a gun. Every family was under the orders and supervision of a government employee, and the worker who disregarded the rules laid down for operations in the fields generally had administered to him a few smarting cuts with a bejuco. This slave driving resulted in first-class tobacco. During the 101 years that the Philippine tobacco monopoly was maintained, the Spanish government rigorously supervised the work done in the tobacco fields of the Cagayan Valley. It was more than represented by appraisers in the provinces of Isabela and Cagayan. "The chief appraiser, styled 'interventor', resided in the capital of the province and had at his orders various subordinates called 'alumnos aforadores.'

"These operated by districts composed of various towns, and in each town there was a 'caudillo' (head man), who was at the same time 'gobernadorcillo' (little governor), who, together with the 'teniente' (overseer) of the tobacco fields, exercised the office of inspector of cultivation and was remunerated by a percentage of the crop.

"The chief appraiser issued the order fixing the date upon which the first tobacco seed plot should be planted, for there were several, alternately generally every fortnight.

"These were common seed plots and occupied at least one-half a hectare of land each. Their care and weeding were in the hands of the men, the women, and the children of their respective towns, while the able-bodied men engaged in plowing their lands and preparing them for transplanting the tobacco."

Speaking of this strict supervision, a Spanish writer has said:

"Thanks to it, the tobacco seedlings were obtained in proper season. The lands were prepared with three plowings, at intervals of fifteen days each, and the transplanting was done, commencing with the highlands in the second half of November and ending with the lowlands in the first half of January, a period during which it is well known that the transplanting should be done. There is a common adage that says: 'Mas vale llegar á tiempo que vendar un ano' (It is better to arrive in time than to round about for a year); and following this most true maxim, we may say: 'He who sows in time has an almost certainty of reaping a good crop.'"

In a hectare (2½ acres) say 10,000 plants would be set. If the field is given fair cultivation, the yield per hectare is about 200,000 leaves. From a plant, usually, 12 leaves are taken and eight leaves are yielded by the two suckers.

According to quality, here is tabulated the average proceeds from tobacco leaves from 1 hectare of land:

Of the first class, 1 bale.
Of the second class, 3 bales.
Of the third class, 6 bales.
Of the fourth superior class, 20 bales.
Of the fourth current class, 12 bales.
Of the fifth class, 8 bales.

In Manila, in 1882, during the last year of the monopoly, the Spanish sold first-class Cagayan tobacco at $112 (gold) per quintal. In 1905, in Manila, Cagayan tobacco, "suitable for cigar purposes," was bought for less than $9 per quintal.

What happened, between 1882 and 1905, most eloquently is told by the figures which show the difference between $112 and $9.

Not by the tyranny associated with the old monopoly, but by encouragement and practical instruction the Philippine Government is helping to restore the prestige of tobacco grown in the valley of the Cagayan.

The plans include a comprehensive campaign of agricultural demonstration, the construction of roads, the encouragement of cinematographs, tobacco growing contests, sanitary surveys, rural credit societies, warehousing facilities, perfection of land titles, expositions; in short, everything which will develop a more sound economic, social and physical situation among the 28,000 families in and Cagayan Valley, who are chiefly dependent on tobacco production.

The opening gun in this laudable campaign was fired in July when the first Annual Tobacco Exposition was held at Ilagan, Province of Isabella, by the Isabella Exposition Association with the cooperation of the Insular and Provincial governments. Realizing the importance of the project, Philippine Collector of Internal Revenue James J. Rafferty loaned the services of Colin M. Hoskins, special deputy in his office, to assume the post of director general of the fair. The Exposition was surprisingly successful. Thousands of tobacco planters visited the provincial capital during the four days of the fair. Splendid exhibits of filler, binder and wrapper tobaccos were presented, for which attractive cash prizes and diplomas were awarded. In addition, agriculturists and craftsmen representing each municipality exhibited fine specimens of general agricultural and industrial products, and live stock. For the purpose of advancing the better babies campaign which is being waged throughout the archipelago, the Philippine Health Service conducted the first Baby Show held in that region. The Bureau of Forestry, which won the highest award among the Government exhibits, had a highly educative display setting forth the forest resources of the district. The feature of this exhibit which attracted wide attention was the erosion model showing graphically the need for a forestation of hills bordering on agricultural lands.

A BIRD'S-EYS VIEW OF THE CAGAYAN VALLEY

This picture shows a stretch of the Cagayan Valley, taken at Ilagan, Isabela province. The hundreds of acres in between the river which can be seen in the distance are flooded annually to a depth of from 4 to 40 feet, and the subsiding waters leave an alluvial deposit several inches in thickness to enrich the soil. That is why fertilizers are unnecessary and unknown in the Cagayan Valley tobacco district.

Well realizing the fact that dry instruction makes small impression, knowing that the best possible ment and pleasures, the Exposition officials arranged a varied program. Not the least of the education is that which is accompanied by amusediversions was the contest for the Queen of the Exposition, which was followed by elaborate coronation ceremonies. A band contest, in which musical organizations from all over the province participated, ran through the four days and added to a carnival spirit. Perhaps the feature which appealed most to the public was the moving picture theatre which was set up. Never having enjoyed this form of entertainment before, packed houses greeted the performances for 15 days, before, during and after the Exposition. Open mouthed amazement was shown at the sight of the hundreds of vari-colored electric lamps which illuminated the Exposition grounds by night.

Great satisfaction was expressed by the participants in the Exposition over its happy outcome, which surpassed their expectations, in view of the fact that the whole affair was prepared in two months. The municipal officials and committees have already expressed their intention of making next year's Exposition far surpass the one of this year and preparations for it are already under way.

HAULING TOBACCO IN THE CAGAYAN VALLEY

The Cagayan River when the water is high is impassable and when it is low it is impassable except for the flat-bottom cargo boats called "barangayanes" which are used to haul all freight up and down river. In this picture the 'pilote" is taking advantage of the brisk evening breeze.

A DEAL THAT "FLIVVERED"

Showing the Plight of a Man Who Trusted a Partner Too Far

Copyrighted by Elton J. Buckley.

A case has just transpired within my knowledge which involves some of the dangers both of partnership and of giving loose financial statements to creditors. I have written considerable on both subjects, but this particular case throws light on them from a new angle, and, anyway, too much cannot be written on subjects so vitally important.

A and B formed a partnership about eighteen months ago to carry on a retail and wholesale business. A had been a retailer, B a broker. They executed articles of agreement covering their partnership, both being represented by counsel.

The firm opened a store, or rather took over and enlarged the store that had been operated by A. A ran it, and B took charge of the finances.

For several months nothing special happened. The business gained slowly but steadily, seeming to be perfectly healthy in every part, and with good prospects. About six months ago they got a chance at a piece of business which meant good profits and a valuable new connection if they could swing it. It also meant buying rather more heavily than their somewhat limited credit had allowed them to do. They talked it over and decided to try and increase their line of credit. B went to the two jobbers with whom they did most of their business and asked for a very substantial increase in their line. The jobbers asked to be shown, whereupon B went back to his office and without consulting A drew up a statement which contained one serious shortcoming.

To make this shortcoming clear I must explain a little. Of course, being a partnership statement, this contained the items of both A's and B's personal assets. One of B's assets was an undivided interest in his father's estate, which he estimated would be worth about $8,000. He had borrowed $5,000 on this, however, and of course his equity was only $3,000. In the financial statement, made to obtain the new credit, B included his interest in his father's estate as worth $8,000 instead of $3,000. It appeared afterward that he did this because he expected to pay the $5,000 loan off shortly from money which his wife was expecting from another source. I need hardly say that this was utterly without excuse.

The statement was satisfactory and the new credit was extended. The new contract proved somewhat of a lemon, and in a little while the new firm found itself in deep waters. One day, when A and B were discussing their situation, B told A how he had put in his interest in his father's estate and confessed that the money his wife expected had not come and probably would not now come. A strongly urged B to go to the jobbers who had been victimized and tell them about it. B did not go, and though it was equally A's duty to go, he did not go either. The firm managed to get along for a couple of months longer and then went into bankruptcy.

In due time the truth came out, and what happened points my moral and adorns my tale.

A and B were arrested for false pretense and

"A Fellow Who Picks Up a Million"

Can Afford to Buy Good Cigars in Philadelphia—Arguments of Retail Dealers—The Tribulations of Small Manufacturers—Imported Goods Have Increased Sales—Higher Prices for Cigarettes

PHILADELPHIA, October 19.—All arguments on the part of retail dealers against passing the tax on to the consumer in so far as cigars are concerned went by the board this week. Having made up their minds that it is altogether unnecessary in these or any other days to continue doing business at a loss, the leading manufacturers of nationally advertised nickel smokes took the bull by the horns—this is straight stuff, however, and no bull—and tacked on a little increase of from $3 to $5 per, each and a thousand cigars. This brings the top price to $43 a thousand and about the lowest to $41.

Which brings us sadly to the singing of a swan song. Some time ago mention was made of the fact that the "little feller" is getting out of the cigar making business owing to rising prices, both of tobacco and everything else, not to mention the rising wages paid in the munitions factories. Now we hear that the said little feller is almost extinct for the simple reason that he cannot buy tobacco at prices that will net him a fair return on his money.

To the outsider it might seem strange that in this set of circumstances it is the little fellow who is now selling cheaper than the big manufacturers. Of course, the first answer is that the national advertiser sells something that sells quickly and gives the retailer a speedy turnover, and as a consequence the retailer won't pay as much for the little known brand. The other answer is that many small manufacturers still doing business at the old stand were well stocked up, and some of them make no secret of the fact that they will close up shop when that stock is exhausted, unless tobacco takes a tumble to itself.

It may be that there is a tumble in the offing, but if so we can't see it, nor can most of the shrewd buyers in this vicinity who keep their ears glued to the well known ground. It has been common knowledge for a long time that the cigar makers were holding off increases until they saw the amount of the tax, and, therefore, the jumps this week caused little surprise.

But a large howl is being made by the buyer here over the action of a few retailers in jumping ten cent cigarettes to 15 cents straight or two for a quarter, while the majority of dealers sell at 12 cents straight and some as low as eleven cents.

However, in spite of high cost of living the dear old American smoker who likes the fawncy brands and don't mind paying top prices for them is smoking more'n ever. Our authority is William Taylor, of the N. J. Dalton Co., perhaps the leading importing firm in this city. Although the Dalton Co. has no salesmen outside the city, its orders for the fragrant weeds at two bits a throw and up (and down, but not very far down, in these times), are on the increase.

Coates Coleman, who also caters to an exclusive box trade, is finding business on the increase. Perhaps it's because there are more smokers, but this increasing sale of high priced goods does not indicate falling off in the nickel smokes, meaning the six centers that used to be a nickel. J. L. Gaine, who has transferred his presence and affections from the Leach Co. to the Peermont Cigar Company's 11th and Market street store, remarked to us the other day that he has the solution. "A fellow who picks up a million or some little trifle like that in war brides stops smoking hava-necticuts," sez he, "but he still feels that he ought to buy the cheaper grades to show he's democratic and to pass off on his friends. Besides, he can accidentally light one, take a single puff and throw it away with a stage grunt of disgust. The grand old bluff, you know."

DESIRABLE STORE LOCATION IN WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, October 22.—The United Cigar Stores Co. will open another store here. The new store will be located at the corner of 11th street and Pennsylvania avenue, formerly occupied by a saloon. The site is a preferred one on the avenue.

Important Sales of Havana Leaf Reported

Commission Merchants Busily Engaged in Registering and Receiving Purchases —Very Little Remedios First and Second Capaduras on the Market—Vuelta and Partido Resagos in Fair Supply—Cigar Factories Working to Capacity on Holiday Orders.

HAVANA, October 19.—Owing to the registration and weighing of the previous purchases of leaf tobacco during the last fortnight, commission merchants here have been less regretful of the fact that only a few Northern buyers made their appearance. Otherwise they would not have known how to fill commitments and attend to their customers at the same time. Very little Remedios, first and second Capaduras, is offered for sale, unless the prospective buyer is willing to pay considerably higher prices for the lots remaining. Most dealers are unwilling to part with their holdings at the established figures. It looks as if the latecomers this year will find considerable difficulty in securing any considerable quantity of these grades. Of course, those manufacturers who are trading with their connections here for years may be sure of having orders filled to a certain extent, although they may not get the accustomed quantity.

Vuelta Abajo fillers and Partido resagos are still in fair supply, but the buyers must not be too exacting in their demands. Owing to the preponderance of the shade-grown Connecticut and other domestic wrappers in the United States there has been less inquiry for Partido resagos, and the crop this year furnished more than has been demanded so far. Colas of Vuelta Abajo and the low grades of Remedios are in demand by Havana cigarette manufacturers, and prices are not only stiff, but show an advancing tendency.

How the crop in 1918 may turn out finally depends on weather conditions during the next three or four months, and it would be unwise to make prognostications at present.

Sales of leaf tobacco during the past two weeks totaled 29,238 bales, or divided into: Vuelta Abajo and Semi Vuelta, 10,714; Partido, 3,004, and Remedios, 15,520 bales.

Buyers were: Americans, 16,360; Canadians, 2,887; exporters to South America, 1,664, and local manufacturers of cigars and cigarettes, 8,327 bales.

Exports of cigars from Havana, per Ss. Jalisco, totaled 501 cases, containing 2,105,340 cigars, which were consigned to the following countries, viz.; To the United States, 1,034,600; to Great Britain, 903,815; to the Argentine Republic, 58,500; to Canada, 45,500; to Australia, 30,000; to British Africa, 25,025, and to Portugal, 7,900 cigars.

Exports of leaf tobacco during the past week from the port of Havana, including some shipments not previously reported, totaled 12,893 bales, which were distributed to the following countries, viz: To all ports of the United States, 7,060; to Canada, 719; to Spain, 3,450; to the Argentine Republic, 1,634, and to Uruguay, 30 bales.

Among leaf buyers arriving in Havana were Ambrosio Torres, of Sanchez & Haya; Delfin Rodriguez and foreman, Isidro Grandazzo, of Salvador Rodriguez, all of Tampa; also Manuel Vega, of Manuel Vega, and C. Puente, of C. Puente & Co., both of Chicago.

Antonio Allones, of Allones, Lt., owners of the Ramon Allones factory, returned last week from his excursion to the United States and Canada, well satisfied with the kind reception he received everywhere, and bringing along quite a good number of orders. He was accompanied by Thomas F. Healy, who recently became the happy father of a charming girl baby, named Rose Margaret.

Business with cigar factories continues to be brisk, and there is no lack of orders on account of the approaching holidays, principally from the United States and Great Britain, as the orders from other directions are only of a secondary nature, with the exception of Spain, which still is calling for additional shipments of cigars.

J. F. Berndes Co., S. A., issued the following circular this month, viz.:

"Due to circumstances connected with the present European war, Charles E. Berndes, vice-president and a member of the executive committee of the company, has presented his resignation to a general meeting of shareholders. At the same meeting Jose R. Jurdan, a Cuban citizen, was elected to fill said vacancy.

"At present there are neither interests nor officers in this company of enemy nationality. (Signed) Rene Berndes, President."

During the past week the principal buyers were: Leslie Pantin, 4,457; Mark A. Pollack, 4,173; J. Bernheim & Son, 3,723; C. del Peso & Co., 2,891; El Cuno, 2,577; Cuban Land & Leaf Tobacco Co., 2,222; Walter Sutter & Co., 1,931; Jose Suarez & Co., 1,635; Havana Production Co., 1,591; Manuel Suarez Co., 1,257; Allones, Ltd., 798; F. Lozano, Son & Co., 750, and Calixto Lopez & Co., 637 bales of leaf tobacco.

The chief sellers were: Leon & Delgado, 1,980; Rodriguez, Mendez & Co., 1,800; B. Diaz & Co., 1,705; Garcia & Co., 1,591; Manuel Suarez & Co., 1,422; Ruperto Leon, 1,304; Selgas & Co., 1,277; M. Abella & Co., 1,148; Jose F. Rocha, 1,053; Jose C. Puente & Co., 1,017; Gutierrez & Foyo, 730; Tomas Benitez y Leon, 650; Suarez Hnos, 524; Herrera, Calmet & Co., 505; Peso & Co., 443; Miguel Gutierrez e Hijo, 428; Muniz Hnos, 400; I. Kaffenburgh & Sons, 300; Pastor Sanchez, 263, and Manuel Garcia Pulido, 229 bales of leaf tobacco.

Romeo y Julieta is as busy filling orders as never before since the year 1914.

Partagas is behind on orders for Australia and South America, as the American and British calls have the preference at the moment.

Hoyo de Monterrey continues to be working strong for New York and Spain.

H. Upmann does not complain, as orders are fully up to expectation.

Punch now hopes to be able not to reduce even the number of its cigarmakers in the new year to come.

Calixto Lopez & Co. report the same cheerful news of being busy to their full capacity, as the orders on hand are plentiful in every direction.

Belinda has excellent orders from its American customers.

RECEPTION TO CESPEDES

Cuban Minister to the United States the Guest of Honor at a Well Attended Luncheon at the Biltmore.

Dr. Carlos Manuel de Céspedes, Cuban Minister to the United States, was the guest of honor Wednesday of the Fifth Avenue Association, at its luncheon for "our Cuban Allies," the first of the season, at the Biltmore. Each of these affairs during the coming months will honor one of the Allies, Cuba being first chosen by reason of her close proximity to this country, and her almost immediate entrance into the war against Germany following the United States. Accompanying Minister de Céspedes, who arrived from Washington Tuesday night, was Dr. Joaquin R. Torralbas, first secretary of the Cuban Legation here. A number of distinguished Cubans now in New York were at the speakers' table, and Mayor Mitchel was designated to welcome the Minister in behalf of the Association. Editors of numerous Latin-American publications likewise were invited by Chairman Joseph Osler, of the Luncheon Committee

An interesting feature of the luncheon was the singing of the Cuban national anthem, the "Himno Bayamo," by Senorita Adelina Aldred, of the Hippodrome Company. Those at the speakers' table were Minister de Céspedes, Vice-President Emilio Nunez of Cuba, Mayor Mitchel, Theodore Rousseau, President R. G. Cooke of the Fifth Avenue Association, Ancell H. Ball, Corporation Counsel Lamar Hardy, Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith, George McAneny, who was the toastmaster; Collector Byron C. Newton, Col. Cosmo de la Torriente, of the Cuban Army; Dr. Torralbas, Lieut.-Col. de Cardenas, Col. Aurelio Hevia, Senor Armando Andre, Dr. George Frederick Kunz, Louis Wiley, Sir George H. Reid, former Premier of Australia, H. B. Bond, of the Liberty Loan Committee. Dr. Leopoldo Dolz, Cuban Consul General, and Felipe Taboada, of the Cuban Consulate here.

UTILIZING LIBERTY BONDS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—By a decision of the Treasury Department, liberty loan bonds will be accepted as security for payment of floor taxes on tobacco. Under the regulations issued by Secretary McAdoo, liberty loan bonds will be accepted at face value in amount equal to taxes due.

The decision to accept liberty bonds in equal amount to the taxes as security for payment of the taxes within seven months, not only saves taxpayers the cost of corporate surety bonds, but also enables them to draw interest uninterruptedly from the date of the liberty bonds.

Floor taxes are to be collected from all persons, firms, corporations and associations engaged in the sale of tobacco, cigars, etc., except in a few instances in which the law makes exemptions.

The decision, itself, sent to all collectors by Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Roper, is as follows:

Section 1002 of the War Revenue Act approved October 3, 1917, provides as follows:

"That where additional taxes are imposed by this Act upon articles or commodities, upon which the tax imposed by existing law has been paid, the person, corporation, partnership, or association required by this Act to pay the tax shall, within thirty days after its passage, make return under oath in such form and under such regulations as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall prescribe. Payment of the tax shown to be due may be extended to a date not exceeding seven months from the passage of this Act, upon the filing of a bond for payment in such form and amount and with such sureties as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may prescribe."

In answer to inquiries, collectors are informed that they may accept, in lieu of surety bonds, as security for the payment of floor taxes covered by Section 1002 of the act approved October 3, 1917, Liberty Bonds of the United States equivalent to the actual amount of the taxes due.

Henry Ford has taken $10,000,000 in Liberty bonds. This will help to get a good many men in the trenches by Christmas.

Some Up-State Dealers Are Marking Time

Others Are Marking Up Prices—Albany a Big Buyer of Liberty Bonds—An Explanation That Is Not Quite Complete—A "General All Around Cleaner"—More Smoke in the Quinn Mystery—A Cigar Box Manufacturer's Troubles—Moe Blatner's Remarks in Munich—A Wet Road at Watervliet—The Increased Cost of Corn Cobs.

New York State Capitol District,
October 22, 1917.

Those quarter-horses, the poor sports of the cauliflower camouflage on the racing turf, are buying Liberty Bonds with their last Summer's ten-ter-two, earned on the slips and falls within the paddock! So, when even the down-an'-outers are doing their bits for the Secretary of the Treasury, some of the bigger boys have become ashamed of theirselfs, as Jim Irwin remarks, and they are coming to the stretch for the Liberty Loan with a "don't-know-what-you're-sellin'-but-I'll-take-two-boxes" sort of response.

This has helped to put Albany in the top of the list with that other live moneybund, Newark, N. J. For these two towns stood even last week for the entire New York district.

Troy was pretty well along, too, though Schenectady fell to the foot. But when General Manager Emmons, of the General Electric Works over there, threatened to expose the baidyabatis for the garter-snake slackers they were, many chaps came to the front with their dollars and sense.

So, you see, there's no doubt about the Capitol District comin' through the rye with more millions than either Uncle Sam or his nephew McAdoo actually wants from this footstool of Valhalla.

Business, of course, has been seriously interrupted by the drive of the determined collectors. Registers have become a trifle rusty, though the oil in the returned funds of the Liberty Loan will certainly produce quicker cash action than ever, just so soon as the folk recover from the phantasmagoria of five billion dollars!

When Judge Hylan, of New York, told the reporter to come back at 2 o'clock, he quite evidently got the habit from the Revenue Office. Two o'clock, though, is entirely too soon to return to the Federal bureau for information about some clauses of the war act. Even the Tsun Cheng Chop—or Chinese O. K.—of the Mohammeds of the force is impossible to obtain right now on these decisions.

"Trouble is," declared Jobber Fred Lewis, of Saugerties, N. Y., "this price adjustment business puts the trade all up in the air. Nobody knows just where things really are in the line of actual costs and selling figures. So we're simply marking time until conditions automatically return to something like normal understanding of the situation."

Six inches of solid type in Albany newspapers are devoted as a write-up about the price intentions of the local United stores. Whether or not the United management will fancy the assortment of facts and fictions in regard to their supposed policies announced by the press remains for the company to decide.

Such twisted talk as this was published Tuesday night in the Albany Evening Journal: "Cigarettes in the 5, 10 and 15-cent packages were increased 1 cent today, making the retail prices in the United Stores 6, 11 and 16 cents. Tobacco in 10-cent tins and packages increased 1 cent. An exception to this increase is cigarettes in packages of 20, which will be sold at the old prices."

According to that explanation the cigarettes in twenties, like Camels, Fatimas, Meccas, Richmond Straight Cuts, Lord Salisburys and all the other large selling double packs would stand no advance whatsoever!

But the facts are different. Nickel, or 6-cent, cigarettes pay only four-tenths of a cent in the present 50 per cent inventories. Ten, or 11-centers, pay eight-tenths. After November 3 they pay full 80 cents per 1,000 increase, or $2.05 the 1,000, net. This places a one and six-tenths of a cent increase on cigarettes in packages of twenties, and the United will undoubtedly get 12 cents for these goods, just the same as everyone in the retail business.

Another interesting statement given out by the United is this: "Five-cent packages of tobacco remain unchanged." Very good. But practically all the larger manufacturers now obtain $7.20 the gross for this style of packing. Reduced to items, this is just 5 cents per package wholesale. Perhaps, though, the United intends to attract the consumer with the former price until the tobacco people issue the reduced sizes at the old standards, 4 and 5 cents.

Still another item of note: "Plans are being made to encourage the purchase of cigars by the box and tobacco by the pound. In this way it is believed that considerable labor costs will be saved in doing away with smaller packages."

Once more: "Cigars that sold three for a quarter are now 10 cents straight. By the box they will cost the consumer 9½ cents, and by the hundred 9 cents."

And in regard to candy: "With the growth of prohibition the United Cigar Stores managers have noticed an increased demand for candies. As a result, the stores are adding stocks of candies of the better grades."

"Looks as though every little thing is at a temporary standstill," sighed Melachrino Davis, as he buckled the flap on his order book and clipped his Faber in the proper place. "Why," sez he, "Royal Nestors and Melachrinos are selling with the best of their class, but that penny increase seems to have knocked the cigarette out around here during the past week or ten days. But the boys will be back, smoking more than ever before, within the present month, or I'll miss my guess."

That make-up man on the Albany Republican evening newspaper knows Gene Murray! How so? Take a look at the Monday issue, page 10. There is our old friend Gene in black and white half-tone, at a right-face to a movie ad about "Rasputin, the Black Monk—Thurs., Fri., Sat." And "The Soul of Satan—Mon., Tues., Wed." Overhead is a Sapolio cut, with the famous Monday-to-Sunday advice relative to the "General All-Around Cleaner."

Gene seems to be looking intently at this combination of Black-Monk-Soul-of-Satan-All-Around-Cleaner affair. He's looking so earnestly and interestedly that he attracts attention to the description of himself under his picture.

So, reading down, you'll find that Gene Murray—Eugene T. Murray, if you please—is the famed fellow who used to retail cigars and such on North Pearl street, near the New Kenmore. Now he's running—running is right—for re-election as Alderman of the Twelfth Ward.

And the reason he's the General-All-Around-Cleaner is just because he happens to be chairman of the city's northern street and sewer committee, and the lad, also, who's cleaning up Landside Park, more favorably known as Sheridan Park since Gene took hold of the cleaning thereof. No wonder, then, that this old-time cigar man, who smiles as he scrubs, is placed by the make-up artist right in the midst of a brand-new job—the All-Around-Cleaning, etc., of the Soul-of-Satan-and-the-Black-Monk!

"If it isn't scarce help it's shortage of cedar-veneer," observed H. A. Wolfram, the Watervliet cigar-box maker. "First one thing, then another, all the time, just now. One day we have the girls to paper and label the boxes, and then the Southern mills disappoint us with the wood. We can't turn out enough boxes for the Capitol District, and still we have daily inquiries from large New York City manufacturers endeavoring to secure outside assistance with their rush, especially the present holiday rush for fortieths. At the Watervliet plant we have eleven building lots, with tremendous floor space, but we can't deliver the goods just now. However, we'll take it calmly. I'll help some by smoking a pipe. I keep ten of them a-going in alternate laps all day."

Only two doors away from the North Albany cigar store of Frank Quinn, 1134 Broadway, is Engine 8 of the city fire department. Early Monday morning, however, the firemen were called to the store after $1,500 in damage had been done. Battalion Chief Shattuck thought the incident so peculiar that he started an investigation. Another incident which determined the action is the fact of a $300 judgment entered against Quinn by the owner of the building, J. A. Fisher. This occurred Saturday, and the store was then closed by a City Court marshal, who took a $500 fire policy on the stock and fixtures to protect the judgment.

Twice previously the store was raided by police, who charged Quinn with gambling. Meantime Quinn has evaporated, and Detective Bain is looking for footprints.

Paul is back! You remember he went away from a certain store at 2 o'clock last week. And he promised to return and finish his story at 4. Well, he's back!

He brought Department Sales Manager Lewis with him from the offices of the General Cigar Company, New York. For Paul, you know, is now selling Owls and White Owls.

"Yes, we're in good shape to turn out cigars like the Owl for a nickel, and the White Owl for six cents," assented Boss Lewis. "We have lots of Sumatra, fine Sumatra, at fairly reasonable prices, and we're going to push this White Owl proposition."

Then Paul quoted TOBACCO's comment upon the Leave-It-to-Jane Midnight Owl dinner, word for word, after which the Lewis-Wessels party adjourned to another meeting up the street.

Do you know Moe Blatner? No, he's not a cigar manufacturer, though he formerly leased a portion of his Green street premises to the J. W. Stevens factory. Well, Moe went to Europe before the soccer football tournament started over there, and he eventually landed in Munich, Germany. After enjoying a 25-mark lunch, Moe crooked his stick on arm and wandered into a cigar emporium.

"Give me some good cigars," requested Moe, and the dealer handed out a bunch of fried and roasted smokes which evidently came out of the Kaiser's kitchen.

"Nein, nein," says Moe, talkin' Amerikanischer-Schweizer. "Give me some that are not so hausfreund," or words to such effect.

So the patient Deutsche-Landwehrite put away the package numberer "47" and reached 'way up yonder for another lot labeled "49," or some other one of the 57 varieties.

"But these are just the same," objected Moe; "they're all too dry. Haven't you something else?"

"Na, na," denied the dealer, "dese seegar iss somedings elser. Dey haf kom py dot shelfer mooch lonker. Dey iss oldster!"

Without further kick Moe put down the four marks demanded for the tinder, and proceeded to leave Munich to the tune of "Yankee Doodle Dandy."

Those busy boys of the P. Lorillard Co. have produced an exceptionally handsome window design for the Branche Drug Co., 4 South Pearl street, Albany. It is centered with a large Murad girl, and it is surrounded with the other cigarette and tobacco brands of the old firm. Inside, business is fairly good just now, though price readjustments have retarded trade for a few days.

Some of the greater cigarette producers, figuring upon old prices, don't consider the tiny match box, free to all except dealers.

Gloomy Gus was a Laughing Looie in comparison with George Fox last Friday night. That's why Adjutant Wilson wondered what in the world had happened to George's Daikoku, or Jap-luck, to produce such a melancholy letter as was received by Wilson's staff at the W. D. C. pipe offices on Saturday morning.

Perhaps the weather in New York City wasn't quite as woeful as the six-inch snow in Maine, the bitter blizzard in Ohio, and the rotten rain in northern New York State on that terrible day!

For when George pulled into the Hotel Ten Eyck in Albany at 10:30 Friday night, even DeWolf Hopper, Willie Collier and Fatty Arbuckle pulling their snappiest stuff couldn't have produced a tiny titter from the once gleeful George!

Whazamatter? Howdithappen? Shucks, man, didn't you see that trail of juice up-the-steps and down-the-lobby to the elavator of the handsome hall of the Ten Eyck? And didn't you notice the once, twice and thrice-over the brilliant lobbyists of the haughty

Minnesota Dealers Setting a Lively Pace

Business is Picking Up Splendidly in Minneapolis and St. Paul—Cigar Salesmen Fatten Their Order Books in the Twin Cities—Advances in Prices Cause No Diminution of Trade—What the Different Stores Are Featuring—Many Brands Obtaining Attractive Displays

MINNEAPOLIS and ST. PAUL, October 19.—Perceive the wealth of Minnesota. The crops this year have been the biggest in the State's history and prosperity is hitting everybody. Cigar men anticipate great holiday business. Several dealers, having already booked very handsome orders, are acquiring the arts and graces of multi-millionaires.

L. Altman, of R. Gangenie & Co., makers of Lucella mild Havanas, paid his customers his last visit of the year.

"Billy" Rosenfeld, the Charles the Great representative, was hustling things along for his house. He was showing the new Corona Chica size, 50 cigars packed in tins.

Ira Farr is now associated with Joe St. Marie in the candy jobbing business. But he continues to represent Garcia & Vega in Minnesota.

"Pipe" the lines carried by L. E. Carson at the West Hotel stand: Kingdale, La Integridad, El Planco, S. Palo and Apropo. These are Lester's leaders and are shown in many sizes.

N. R. Price, the owner of the popular cigar department in the Powers Mercantile Company store, is doing a good business on the Luciana brand, made by the Harris-Schwarz Co. of New York.

Brackett's, the high-class grocery store, is doing wonders on their Creswell brand of cigars.

At the Liggett store, 5th and Hennepin, they are selling cartons of 200 cigarettes—Camels and Lucky Strikes—for 90 cents, and Omars and Fatimas for $1.30.

In a lot of the down town stores are noticed very striking electric signs, featuring the popular brands on this market. This idea was originated by Louis Nathanson, head of the Louis Nathanson Co. stores.

Stone-Ordean-Wells, Minneapolis branch, reports a great shortage of Charles Denby's, one of the biggest sellers on this market. Manager Striblin just can't keep enough in stock to supply the trade.

The Personal Cabinet packing of Pall Mall cigarettes is now displayed by many dealers. It contained several sizes of the Pall Mall cigarettes and retails for $15. The small boxes of 10's, 50's and 100's are all packed in one large cabinet box that makes an attractive showing.

Ramon Dobler, representing Park & Tilford, was here on his way to the copper range in Michigan.

Frank Lopez, of Garcia & Vega, also looked the trade over, doing rather well.

Fred Suss, of R. Steinecke & Co., spent the week here. Fred does a business in the Twin Cities that reaches over the three-million mark each year. He had to stop taking orders, as his house is "sold up" and has standing orders that will carry them well into the new year. It has been a long time coming for Fred, but at last he has hit it lucky.

Max H. Grosse has a big display of Falk's London Sherbet tobacco.

"No. 25 A," the new 35-cent cigarette of S. Anargyos, is now being placed with the trade.

Tanforan quality smokers are making a hit. They are sold in many stores.

Dulce cigars from the newly formed Havana Products Co., of Key West, are carried by a lot of dealers. Ben Lesser makes this territory.

Camel cigarettes are now being packed without the tin-foil wrapping.

Carl Thomas has his new store in the Boston Block in full swing. This is store number two for Carl. It was formerly owned by Rex Lofgren, who went broke a few weeks back. Previous to Lofgren the Short Bros. Cigar Co. had the store.

Harry Alces, representative of Charles S. Morris & Co., came in, on his last trip this year. He has many good accounts here and got a fat bunch of orders.

The Andrews Hotel has a big showing of El Verso and Mi Lola cigars.

Joe Carlisle, Prince Hamlet himself, blew in with the first snow of the season. Joe came up from Iowa to see how the brand is going and, after a few days with his distributors, he left for Omaha.

Pinzon, from the factory of M. Perez & Co., Key West, is selling well at the several stores of Louis Nathanson Co.

The Americus brand of Francisco Torre & Cia is going fast. C. W. McFarlane and J. Patten are doing great work through the Western Grocery Co., the distributors of this brand.

Lucky Strike cigarettes are now packed one dozen packages to the carton. That is 240 cigarettes in place of 200.

Charlie Cameron, representing the Waldorf-Astoria Segar Co., was a visitor here, booking orders for imported cigars.

The New Optimo is in all the cases and has a seady sale.

The stores of Nathanson Bros. are showing in all their windows the Club Quality and Club Life brands of little cigars made by Harris-Schwarz Co.

Melachrinos have a great number of window displays. Herbert Coe, head of the sales force, is due here for a visit with the local salesman.

Tuvals and Romeo Garcia are the leaders with the Sweeny Cigar Co. at the Dyckman Hotel.

Ida Shook showed La Integridads in her display this week. It was put in in honor of Harry Alces, the factory representative.

Smokes for the soldiers are being collected by the Minneapolis Cigar Dealers' Association and the Minneapolis Daily News. Many large shipments have already been forwarded to France for the "boys in the trenches."

La Tudo, made by R. Steinecke & Co., is featured by W. S. Conrad & Co.

Carl Thomas, at Yerxa's, gave Fred Suss just before he left an order for 62,000 Normas, mild Havanas.

Themelis Rose Tip cigarettes are carried by a lot dealers. A nifty electric window sign is being used at present to advertise this brand.

Charlie Gleason, on Sixth street, is showing La Sultanas in his window.

Liggett's, on Nicollet avenue, has a big display of Black and White cigars, cigarettes and tobaccos.

Two brands that are heavily displayed at present are Cyro and Mozart. Both have a large following and dealers report them on the increase.

Harry L. Harris, of Chicago, became a member of the Minneapolis Cigar and Tobacco Dealers' Association on his visit here. So did L. Altman, of New York.

Carl's Havana Specials at 5 cents are selling strong at the Yerxa stand of Carl Thomas.

One of the biggest sellers on this market is the 10-cent Winecke & Doerr panatela. Every dealer, large and small, carries this brand. It is made in New York by the house of Steinecke.

Louis Nathanson Cigar Co. in its several stores are doing well with the Primanos of R. Steinecke & Co., carried in many sizes. Extra Value, a 5-cent brand made by Garcia Diaz & Co., of Tampa, is also selling well.

The Press Club and Francisco Gayo, made by Randall & Landfield, of Chicago and Benton Harbor, Mich., is sold by Brewster Smith.

Little cigars in packages have a big run in Minneapolis. All the dealers carry a full line.

Van B. Clark, the owner of the large cigar department in the Vendome Hotel, is a regular fellow. He is always glad to see you, and before leaving he "thanks" you for calling on him. It's not often you find a buyer like Van.

The Minneapolis Cigar and Tobacco Dealers' Association has a membership of several hundred retail and wholesale cigar dealers, salesmen, druggists and candy and fruit store owners. Several fine speeches were made at this meeting by the leading merchants of the city. Harry Alces, of Charles S. Morris & Co., New York, and Harry L. Harris, of Harris, Schwarz & Co., New York, also addressed the meeting. Until factory prices are settled or packages are changed, it was voted to sell at the above prices.

The Minneapolis Cigar and Tobacco Dealers' Association met last week at a luncheon in the Kaiserhof. Price conditions were discussed. The result of this meeting was that retail selling prices were advanced as follows:

5	cent	cigarettes	to 7	cents.
10	"	"	" 13 "	or 2 for 25 cents.
15	"	"	" 18 "	or 2 for 35 cents.

Over in St. Paul was found lots of exciting news. Also we found that it was dangerous to ride on street cars during the strike. We saw several wrecked in the heart of the city at night, and we watched mobs of strikers parading the streets. Business in St. Paul—as in Minneapolis—is hitting a high mark, and everybody is encouraged concerning the future of the cigar business.

Fraunce's Tavern, made by Ruy Suarez & Co., New York, is selling nicely in the N. St. Marie store.

The 6-cent Flora Mia of A. Santaella & Cia is hitting in the .300 class with some of the down-town dealers.

Marcus Feder, all the way from Cleveland, talked to the large dealers on the merits of a 2 for 15 cents cigar. Marcus found business good.

In the windows of several of Harry Johnson's stores is seen the Armor mixture, three-ounce package selling for 25 cents, made by Falk.

Art Drews, in the Arcade, says business is improving right along. Art is aiming to carry all brands asked for by customers.

At Winecke & Doerr's Roberts street cigar store is a very neat display of Demuth pipes. An electric display sign draws crowds to the window.

Riz La Croix and Zig Zag cigarette papers are being sold by the dealers for 7 cents.

Gus Kafka, in the Metropolitan Theatre building, says the Duc De Tampa of Garcia Diaz & Co., is making a big hit with his trade.

Ramon Dobler, the Middle West representative of Park & Tilford, spent almost a week making the rounds of the St. Paul trade. This being his first trip here he got many nice orders for Mi Favorita and the imported brands carried by his house.

St. Paul, like almost every city in the United States, is raising several funds and otherwise collecting smokes for the boys in France. The largest of these funds is the one started by the Pioneer Press and Despatch. Several thousand dollars has been contributed to the "smoke fund" so far.

Mozarts and Loveras are H. W. Johnson's big leaders. These brands have the call over all others at the down-town stores run by Johnson.

The St. Paul Drug Co., which operates a chain of stores, is featuring Websters, Lovera and Mi Favorita cigars.

All the brands controlled by Grommes & Ullrich of Chicago, are on sale at the St. Paul Hotel cigar stand. Harvesters and El Roi Tans also sell well.

Americus has made a big hit locally. McFarlane & Patten, of the sales force of Francisco Torre & Co. did great work here in the interests of this brand. They moved from here to Minneapolis.

Look them over—they all called on their last trip of the year: Fred Suss, Harry Alces, Frank Lopez, Harry L. Harris, L. Altman, Billie Rosenfeld and Issy Mayer.

At Short's, Sixth and Roberts streets, a sign painter has been busy painting Muriel, Coraza and Sigh Draft signs on the windows.

Garcia Grandes sell notably. Jack Dunnett, manager for Noyes Bros. & Cutler, surely picked a winner when he took this brand.

Star, the "standard for 46 years" and Bull Durham, the "makings of a nation," are being heavily advertised on the billboards and in the newspapers.

Two new sizes of the Romeo Garcia brand, selling at 2 for 25 cents, Queens and Aristocrats, are taking hold in great shape with R. R. Roberts' trade. Romeo

Patriotism and Profits

Many people believe that patriotism consists entirely of waving flags, cheering our troops and singing the National anthem. Patriotism—real patriotism—is something more.

President Wilson said, "Patriotism consists of some very practical things—practical, in that they belong to the life of every day and in that they are connected with commonplace duty."

It is our belief a good big measure of patriotism is in our commonplace duty to resist any temptation to exploit the purses of the people during these turbulent times.

We believe our practical and patriotic duty is not to exact undue profits nor to enact the role of profiteer.

We believe that commonplace patriotic duty should go hand in hand with common every day commercial practice, and the very fact that Congress is levying a tax on undue profits proves that the lawmakers of this country are of a like mind.

So, that as long as our manufacturing department, with its unrivaled resources and facilities, can hold the cost of production of our nickel line to its present basis, we believe it our duty to not deviate from our present price policy on our nickel product.

Under prevailing conditions we are making a fair profit on these cigars, and the distributor and dealer also obtain a legitimate return for their activities.

The consumer is not being mulcted, but is receiving the greatest measure of value and quality possible for us to produce at the price.

Now we do not pretend to be able to forecast the future.

We are not prophets.

We do not know what time and conditions over which we have no control may bring forth.

We may be forced to make some revisions in either our prices or sizes, but at no time, present or future, under no conditions, now or in the days to come, will we attempt to create a barrage of high price behind which we can safely hide and force the consumer to pay the limit.

The creating of high price without giving the consumer a corresponding increased value, is a bit of camouflage, and nickel cigars wearing a six cent mask have no place in our scheme of things.

The six cent cigars that we have produced are real six centers and carry every bit of value possible for the price.

If it comes to pass that higher prices must obtain for five cent or six cent cigars, we will make our product measure up to the price and not down to the market—but we will stay in the nickel market as long as our present quality can be legitimately maintained.

If circumstances make it inevitable that our nickel product must go to six cents, the trade and the consumer may rest assured that the cigars will be worth six cents.

If smaller sizes at a nickel are more desirable, the same assurance of value will obtain.

But we will not cross this bridge until we come to it.

KEEP UP THE QUALITY is one of the big important factors in preserving the principles embodied in the Policy of this Company.

In these days of rapid-fire changes in the cigar business, it needs not only a Policy to shape our course, but it is also essential that this Policy must have a Conscience.

This begets Confidence—the confidence of every man engaged in handling and marketing our product and the confidence of every man who consumes it.

We know what Consumer Confidence means—we know that confidence on the part of the public in our product and prices spells a healthy growing demand for all the cigars we can produce—honestly, honorably and with a conscience.

We are determined to deserve—and to that end, we have nailed our Flag of Policy to the mast of Public Confidence—now and for all time.

GETTING THE MONEY IN MOBILE.

A dapper young man walked into a downtown cigar store the other afternoon, laid a thin dime on the counter and demanded a package of "Desert Pony" cigarettes.

Instead of getting the cigarettes he received an icy stare from the usually obliging cigar clerk, with the information that the cigarettes to which he referred were 12 cents.

"Since when?" demanded the H. C. L. victim.

"Today," replied the cigar clerk, haughtily convincing in his tone that no one but an ignoramus could have asked such a foolish question when it must be known by everyone that the tobacco companies of the country have been staggering for months under great burdens of losses, all on account of the war.

'Well, gimme," meekly exclaimed the young man, as if completely squelched by the dictatorial powers of the aromian world, "a package of the old reliable tobacco, the kind that you use with the 'makin's.'"

He laid a heavy jitney on the case and gazed triumphantly at the selling agent across the counter, pleased with himself that he was beating the tobacco magnates and doing himself a good turn in cutting down expenses.

"That tobacco, sir, is six cents. It also went up today," exclaimed the clerk in a tone as unsympathetic as that of a man pulling an ace from the hole.—Mobile Item.

TRADE IN THE TWIN CITIES

Garcia is the leading seller with the house of Roberts.

La Muna appetizers, packed 5 for 25 cents, made by Gans Bros., have a big display in the store of Gus Kafka.

Winecke & Doerr are showing the 10-cent Dutch Masters, made in Grand Rapids, Mich., by the Johnson Cigar Co. Their leading clear Havana, La Venga, is holding up well.

St. Maries News Co., on 5th street, is showing a large variety of sizes of the celebrated Tadema brand in a fine window display. A representative of the Tadema factory called on the trade during the past week.

Marks Bros. are putting to the front the Flor de Odin, made by Lubensky Bros. & Kleiner, of Grand Rapids, Mich.

Murads and Deities have a big space in all the window displays of Harry Johnson's stores.

At the Exchange Bank building a very fine retail stand, owned by Ed A. Luethge, is doing a big business. Ed is one of St. Paul's popular young men. He carries a big stock and features the goods of Ruy Suarez & Co. and Welcher Bros.

R. R. Roberts has a full window devoted to the London Life cigarette. "R. R. R. Specials" and La Donzella, from the factory of Harris, Schwarz & Co., are his leading five-cent sellers.

Garcia & Vega received a big boost when genial Frank Lopez circulated amongst the trade on his visit here.

The Coraza cigar factory, which was moved here from Milwaukee early in the year, has closed and will be moved back to the Cream City.

The St. Paul Cigar Dealers' Association got together and raised all cigarette prices. Goods are now being sold on the following scale:

All 5 cents cigarettes 10 cents or 2 pkgs. for 15 cents.
" 10 " " 15 " " 2 " 25 "
" 15 " " 20 " " 2 " 35 "
" 20 " " 25 "
" 25 " " 30 "
" 30 " " 35 "
" 5 " tobacco 6 cents.
" 10 " " 12 "
" 5 " papers 8 cents.

A. & S. Valentine & Son, of Philadelphia, have notified all their customers here of an advance in price on all the Valentine brands.

El Radio, controlled here by Noyes Bros. & Cutler and made by Gans Bros., is traveling at a great clip. In a short period of time it has become one of the staple 5-cent sellers in St. Paul.

A letter from Merriam Segars Inc. has arrived here stating that when the full tax goes into effect all Merriam brands will be increased in price. Hustling John Merriam makes this field and has a lot of customers here.

Tom Short pulled off a great cigarette sale a few days ago. He bought 230,000 cigarettes at the W. S. Conrad Co. fire sale and dumped them all in his window. Oasis, Nebo and Lucky Strike double packages were sold at 6 cents and Omars and Fatimas went at 10 cents. The lot lasted two days. While a few of the cigarettes were damaged, the greater part of the stock was in good condition, and the bargain hunters went to it with a rush.

All over town one sees nothing but Mozart, Coraza and Garcia Grande displays. A great deal of time and money has been spent on these brands to bring them to the front.

St. Paul and Minneapolis gave the First Minnesota Infantry a great send-off when it left for Berlin via Camp Logan, Texas, last week. Both cities were decorated in honor of the Boys of 1917, and the crowds that watched them depart were the biggest that ever turned out to review a parade in Minnesota.

Fred Forceen, who has been with Thos. Short for several years, has been drafted.

Falk's tobaccos and cigarettes are big sellers. Ernie Heyman, who has charge of this territory, now has a local sales force to help him take care of the large increase of business.

Short smokes, in packages of 10 for 15 cents and 10 for 25 cents, are fast becoming big sellers. Little Loveras of Jose Lovera & Co., La Real of Merriman Segars Inc., and Club Quality and Club Life of Harris-Schwarz Co., all have a big call.

Pete Reinhardt, formerly of Chicago, now residing in St. Paul, has deserted the cigar field and is doing well in the paper box board business. But he keeps in touch with all the boys that hit St. Paul and gets all the information he can about the trade in the Windy City. H. L. H.

As announced October 24, the United Cigar Stores Co. has redeemed coupons in the amount of $15,668.72 for the Sun Tobacco Fund and the Schulte stores $6,725.49.

ON PRICE MAINTENANCE

Hearing Resumed Before the Federal Trade Commission —Wise Argues That No Article of Merit Has Ever Suffered From Price Cutting.

WASHINGTON, October 24.—Hearings were resumed here yesterday before the Federal Trade Commission in the matter of the maintenance of resale prices. It is expected that the hearings will continue over several days.

During the morning session yesterday, Congressman Kelley, of Pennsylvania, Maj. G. P. Putman, of New York, G. H. Montague, of New York, and Jason Rogers, of New York, were the principal speakers.

At the afternoon session, Edmond E. Wise, representing the R. H. Macy Co., of New York, opposed the maintenance of resale prices. He took up, as before the Congressional Committee last winter, when the Stephens Resale Price Bill was under consideration, the Victor talking machine, Ingersoll watch, Arrow collars, and like commodities.

Mr. Wise argued that no article of merit has ever suffered from price cutting. He made the proviso, however, that the backers of the article had not stopped their advertising which, he pointed out, was a great factor in the case.

A DEAL THAT FLIVVERED.

conspiracy to defraud. B because he was actually guilty of the fraud, and A because he concealed it after he knew about it. Neither has been tried as yet, but since the facts are admitted, it seems reasonably clear that both will be convicted. With some knowledge of the facts, I cannot see what possible defense either one can have.

There is another phase to the transaction. In making up the statement and giving it to the jobbers, B without doubt acted as agent of A, because he was his partner and that was exclusively his part of the work. In other words, civilly A was as culpable as B, and therefore when both men go through bankruptcy and ask the court for their discharge so they can engage in business again in their own names, the court will probably refuse discharge, not only to B, but to A, because A is legally as guilty as B. The result of which will be that A, who in a sense was innocent, at least until he knew of the fraud and concealed it, will for the balance of his business career have to hide behind somebody else's name.

The moral, if you are a partner, is not to give up so absolutely to your partner matters which, if not done right, can get you into difficulties, especially the making of representations about the firm's financial standing. And there is another moral, which I have so often taught before: put nothing in a financial statement but hard, cold, present fact.

Put some of those profits in Liberty Bonds. They're safe and sure.

"SMOKES"

There are good gifts and golden gifts and great;
And gifts that show a nation's pride and care,
And some that in a soldier's estimate
Are made for ornament and not for wear.
But here's a gift to send to "Over There"
That only honest gratitude provokes—
If you aim to really please the Sammies over seas,
Send 'em Smokes!
In the name of all things friendly,
Send 'em Smokes!

There are fine gifts and gracious gifts and good,
But here's a little gift of homeliness
That tells a man a mate has understood,
That makes the space between a trifle less.
It's like a cheering word in time of stress,
A whiff of old-time fellowship and jokes.
If you'd lend a bit of ease to a Sammy over seas,
Send 'em Smokes!
In the name of all things friendly,
Send 'em Smokes!

Much Money Circulates in Chicago

Hold-Up Men Know Where to Go When They Want to Grab the Coin—Two Cigar Stores Raided by Bandits—Many Salesmen Busy—Dealers Mark Up Prices and Urge Factories to Rush Goods—Business Is Lively and Hope Pervades "the Windy City."

CHICAGO, October 20.—Everyone in the cigar trade here is hard at work adjusting prices and putting business on a more profitable basis. While it has been hard to get the consumer used to the odd-cent price, he is now aware of the fact that he has to pay more for his favorite smoke, be it cigars, cigarettes or tobacco. The trade of Chicago held off for some time in raising prices, but dealers finally were forced to it because most goods have been costing wholesale more than what they were selling for when retailed. Business is good and dealers are asking factories to rush on holiday orders. Salesmen are here in "droves" and things have been boosted since the war revenue bill became a law. All the dealers have their stock lists ready to fill just as soon as the Government sends them the second notice. While the larger dealers and jobbers will have to pay out quite a sum, they are not kicking, as they are passing the "buck" along to the smoker, who will have to stand the increases.

Issy Mayer has been here all week, cleaning up for the year. He has Gans Bros.' brands placed with several good houses. Mayer says they are now eating out of his hands, and that he has had a most wonderful trade. His Christmas packing of La Muna, both in the 1/40's and 1/100's packages has made a big hit, and he states his factory "is all sold out" for the holidays on these fancy boxes.

Starting October 15 all retail prices were boosted as follows: Five-cent tobaccos, 6 cents; 10-cent tobaccos, 11 and 12 cents; 5-cent cigarettes, 6 cents; 10-cent cigarettes, 12 cents; 15-cent cigarettes, 18 cents; 20-cent cigarettes, 25 cents; 25-cent cigarettes, 30 cents; 30-cent cigarettes, 35 cents.

To help the game along, United Cigar stores raised to the above prices, which will be a big help to the trade.

Things reached such a point that the dealers were forced to shove up the prices, and other raises will take effect very shortly. Riz La Croix cigarette papers are now 8 cents, while Zig Zag has gone to 10 cents. Cigars remain at the old selling prices for the present.

Fred Suss, representing R. Steinecke & Co., passed through on his way to West Baden for a rest. He is through for the year. His factory is all sold out and won't accept any more orders.

Gene Lilienfeld, of Lilienfeld Bros., has gone to Tampa to help arrange the new prices on Corinas.

In all of the stores of Albert Breitung are very neat little metal drums put out by the Women's Section of the Navy League, to help our sailors' fund. It stands on the counter of each store and is held in place by a strong chain. They are not taking any chances with the hold-up fellows on this deal.

A. A. Derrig, one of the "El Roi Tanners" here, is making them step lively at the wholesale house of Reid, Murdock & Co., distributers of El Roi Tans. A. A. is some hustler and he "sure has his brand selling big." Success is due him, as he is a real mixer and jolly good fellow.

Harry Loung, of Haas Bros., Cincinnati, is in town working hard on his various brands.

William Waldmann, of Francisco Arango & Co., Tampa and Key West, returned from a trip to Omaha and Kansas City. When we met him "Bill" was all wreathed in smiles. He landed some big accounts. Barkalow Bros., of Omaha, and Fred Lederman, of Kansas City, two of the best in the Middle West. And some orders he got. Cases of them.

Record was made during the week of a deed by which the Havana-American Co. conveyed to the American Cigar Co., the parent company, its property at the southeast corner of Twelfth and Robey streets. On the property is a modern cigar factory that covers a space of 504 by 124 feet of ground.

Hoosier Sweet Smokes, 2 for 5 cents, high-grade stogies, are selling big. This brand is owned by Harry Totten, who also is the owner of "It's a Bear," 5 for 10 cents stogie. They are made for him by Edwards & Kildow, of Alexandria, Ind. Harry was one of the first subscribers that TOBACCO ever had. The old firm of Totten & Flagg were the people who put "Battle Ax" plug on the market. Totten has been in the game ever since.

Clark Cutler, of the Preferred Havana Tobacco Co., has been showing the fine places some wonderful packings of the imported "Eden" brand. Boxes of 100 cigars that retail for $50. He is also showing their new Francisco A. Bauces, clear Havanas made in Tampa. Bauces is one of the highest price brands of clear Havanas made.

Harry L. Harris, of Harris-Schwarz Co., makers of Romeo Garcia, mild Havanas, has returned to Chicago headquarters.

Five bandits walked in on a friendly little game in Sol Van Praag's cigar store at 2226 Wabash avenue one day this week and walked away with full hands, about $850 in all. And the gamesters, putting on poker faces, stood pat and refused to report the loss.

The most important of outside leases this week covers the southwest corner of Michigan avenue and 18th street—Auto row—which has been leased to the Brown Cigar Stores Co. for 15 years from May 1 next at a term rental of $36,000, to be occupied as a retail cigar store. It will give the lessee four stores, the others being in the St. Regis Hotel, Clark street and Chicago avenue, and Clark and Kinzie streets.

Breitung's latest store at Washington and La Salle streets is now completely remodeled. The entire outside of the building is covered with handsome plate

THREE STATES—This is a favorite brand among smokers who insist on a High-Grade Mixture. It contains the very best grades of Kentucky Burley, Virginia and Louisiana Perique, and is made after an old formula that never fails to satisfy the demand for a blend of these fine tobaccos.

YALE—This famous old brand is a mixture of Long Cut and Granulated Plug Cut; its unique blend of Virginia, Turkish, Havana and Perique is especially pleasing.

GARRICK—This famous brand is known all the world over and has a host of friends in America among high-grade smokers who prefer a mild, "light" tobacco of top-notch quality.

Tampa Sees More Pleasing Prospects

Fear of a General Strike Has Been Dispelled—Wages Paid Cigar Makers in All the Factories Are Equalized—Hustling to Fill Holiday Orders—Saloons Again Opened—Humboldts Shipped to France

TAMPA, October 21.—Cause for fearing a general strike seems to have been dispelled by the settlement of differences last week, and the belief is growing that peace will reign for some time. Because of the unusual rush of holiday orders and extreme difficulty in filling them, the strike threats had worried manufacturers and citizens generally for some time. The fairness of the manufacturers to their employes is becoming more evident, as they have yielded a number of points to them during the present year in spite of the condition of the trade.

Alvarez and Mendez last week expressed a shipment of 10,000 of the Humboldt cigars to France, receiving the order from the government through the New York office. The cigars will be sold at the American army camps and this initial order is expected to be followed by many larger ones. The Tampa factories expect to do a good business with the troops in France after the holiday rush is over.

Jose Lovera states that the year has been an unusually good one at this factory, the output of the choice Lovera brands being larger than ever before.

Matthew W. Berriman, of Berriman Bros., is in receipt of a letter from his son, George, who is now in service abroad. "The letter did not indicate the country in which my boy is at present," said Mr. Berriman, "but it conveyed the pleasing information that the youngster is making good."

Jose Lozano, of the Lozano factory, is calling on the southern trade.

Gus Martinez has returned from a southern trip in behalf of LaNorma, Martinez and other brands of the J. M. Martinez Co.

For some time a hard fight has been waged to prevent the opening of saloons in the business center of the city, the county commissioners turning down the petitions of liquor dealers for licenses on the ground that they did not present a sufficient number of signatures to petitions. After repeated efforts, however, the liquor men won out, and their places are operating as usual.

Celestino Corral, of Corral, Wodiska & Co., was among the recent visitors from Havana. Mr. Corral, who buys all the leaf for the well-known firm, reports that prices for high-grade leaf are steadily advancing.

Business at the Salvador Rodriguez, Charles the Great factory, is rushing as usual, and Don Salvador and his force are experiencing difficulty in meeting the demands.

The local newspapers, the Times and Tribune, have for some time been waging successful campaigns for the "Smokes for Soldiers" fund. Contributions have been sent in from all sections of the State, and interest in the movement to give the boys the advantage of wooing My Lady Nicotine is steadily increasing.

WAR SAVINGS AND WAR LOANS.

The gross yearly income of the country's industrial population is commonly placed at $40,000,000,000. Estimates of the net income saved for investment, made at the recent meetings of the American Bankers' Association, ranged from $5,000,000,000 to $8,000,000,000.

These are figures applying to ordinary times and they are doubtless moderate. In these times of greatly increased wages they must fall below the actual mark, even in the face of the higher prices and under no great effort at individual economy. With a practised economy made general, the country should be able to take care of Mr. McAdoo's estimated total Government borrowings for this fiscal year of $14,000,000,000.

It used to be said of America that when it took to wearing its old clothes it could place the world under tribute. It can be said now that under a similar practice of economy America is equal to any Government borrowing required to escape falling under tribute to the Kaiser.

The immediate task in hand, however, is not to raise $14,000,000,000, but $3,000,000,000 as a minimum and $5,000,000,000 as a maximum. These are large enough figures for the moment. The rest will take care of itself in its own time. But individual economy is now the word, as it must be for future loans. As it is or is not practised we shall have the difference between easy success and comparative failure in the Government's war calls upon the people's savings. —New York World.

Adjusting Prices Throughout the Country

At a meeting of the cigar manufacturers of Easton, Pa., the following increase was made: All 5-cent cigars will hereafter be $36 a thousand, and all 10-cent cigars $60 a thousand.

Nashville tobacco dealers have revised their prices on cigarettes again, so that consumers are only required to meet the war tax, instead of paying the dealers an additional profit.

After selling for three days at 6 cents a package, the price of cigarettes in Greenville, N. J., went back down to the old prices. The increased prices of 12 and 18 cents have been reduced to the old prices.

In Manchester, N. H., cigarettes that used to sell at 25 cents cannot be purchased at less than 30 cents. All the 10-cent brands will retail at 11 cents, and the 5-centers have gone up to 6 cents.

At Lancaster, Pa., a retail tobacco dealers' association was organized. Prices on all grades of cigarettes and tobacco were advanced. The advance on cigars will be determined when the retailers get the revised schedules of prices from the manufacturers.

In Charlotte, N. C., cigarettes and cigars that have in the past sold for 5 cents were advanced to 6 cents, while cigarettes and cigars which formerly brought 10 cents now bring 12 cents, and some special brands from 13 to 15 cents. Cigars which sold for "three for a quarter" were advanced to 30 cents, or 10 cents straight.

At Poughkeepsie, N. Y., cigarettes and cigars went up in price, following a meeting of retail dealers Friday evening in Columbus Institute at which a Poughkeepsie branch of the Retail Council of the Tobacco Merchants' Association was formed. About fifty dealers were present. John A. Sorg was elected chairman, James A. Kerr secretary, and John Rose treasurer.

Members of the Lansing, Mich., retail tobacco dealers' organization disclaim having signed any agreement to boost the prices of tobacco and candy. They do say, however, that at their meeting they came to a gentlemen's agreement after war taxes, increased cost of manufacture and tobacco and sugar, had compelled them to ask for increased prices or go out of business.

In Burlington, Vt., the Chittenden County Retail Tobacco Dealers' Association has been organized and the following officers elected: President, P. T. Donovan; vice-president, R. J. Blais, of Winooski; secretary, Sam B. Conant; treasurer, Edward Brown. Besides a committee was appointed to interview all the retail tobacco dealers in the county, with a view to their joining the new organization. The work of this committee will begin at once. Members of the committee will visit all the "little" dealers in tobaccos, with the object of getting them to adopt a uniform price in the sales of their goods. The price of a membership card is $1.

Elyria (O.) cigar dealers are seriously considering raising the price of the 5-cent cigar to 6 cents and a corresponding raise on all other grades.

In New Britain, Conn., a new schedule of prices was put into effect by the tobacco retailers. Goods that formerly sold for 5 cents now cost 6 cents, and 10-cent goods cost 12 cents.

Hazleton (Pa.) retail tobacco dealers have posted notices at their places of business notifying the trade of an increase in the prices of all brands of cigarettes. Other advances will be made in the various grades of tobacco.

In Webster, Mass., 5-cent packages were advanced to 6 cents, 10-cent to 12 cents and the 15-cent boxes go to 18. The rate isn't general, and in some stores the old prices still apply. It is expected that all will fall in line within a day or two.

Because the saloon keepers and the United Cigar store of Fort Wayne refused to sell cigars at 6 and 12 cents, instead of 5 and 10, all tobacco dealers and drug stores lowered their prices to the old standard. The present prices will remain until Nov. 3.

In Sacramento, Cal., all 5-cent cigarettes are raised to 8 cents a pack, or two for 15 cents; 10-cent cigarettes will sell for 15 cents, or two for 25 cents; 15-cent cigarettes will hereafter be sold for 20 cents for the small packs, or two packages for 35 cents.

In Albany, N. Y.: "Some brands of cigars that formerly sold for 5 cents have been advanced to 6; those that sold for 6 and 7 cents have been advanced 1 cent. Cigars that sold six for a quarter are now five cents straight. Cigars that sold three for a quarter are now 10 cents straight. By the box they will cost the consumer 9½ cents each and by the hundred 9 cents. The reduction on cigars will be noticed only in box or hundred lots."

In Aurora, Ill., it is said: "Probably the best way to remedy the matter will be to raise the prices of the 5-cent cigars to 6 cents, and so on. Ten-cent smokes at 12 cents and 15-centers at 18 would give us a margin with which to continue in the manufacturing business, otherwise we retire or go broke. When the smoker realizes that it is not a desire on the part of the manufacturer to increase his own margin of profit, they will readily see the necessity for some action."

LOOKS LIKE READY MONEY.

Declaring that Jacksonville looked like ready money to him, and that he believes the city is now on the home stretch which will put her in the lead of other Southern cities, Frank Paul, district manager for El-Roi-Tan, who is stopping at the Hotel Mason, says that his impression of Jacksonville has decidedly changed since his last visit, and that he foresees great prosperity in store for the city.

Mr. Paul travels over six Southern States, and is in a position to tell when a city has taken on new life or whether it is decadent or stagnant.

W. D. C. Advertising Campaign 1917-1918

W. D. C. advertisements are now appearing in "The Saturday Evening Post," "Literary Digest," "Collier's Weekly," Railroad Men's Magazine," "Country Gentleman," "Hoard's Dairyman," "Breeder's Gazette," "Army and Navy Journal," and in many college publications.

The campaign will run for nine whole months. Generous space is being used in all mediums—all half pages and quarter pages. More than four million people will read these W. D. C. advertisements in the magazines alone.

Another big Wellington advertising campaign is now running in the Canadian newspapers.

The pipes of all nations are introduced and illustrated in the magazine advertisements—the Peace Pipe of the Indian—the Hooka of the Turk—the old Church Warden of the pioneers—the Whalebone of the Esquimaux, etc.

Watch for these W.D.C. Wellington advertisements in the magazines—cut them out and paste them in your windows.

Go over your stock and see that you have a full line of W. D. C. pipes—feature the Wellington in your counter displays—cash in on this big country-covering W. D. C. advertising campaign.

Don't let another season go by without carrying a full line of W. D. C. pipes—the Wellington in particular. Tie up with the largest pipe manufacturer in America and your pipe business will grow in a way you never thought possible.

Regarding the Outlook

Conditions in the tobacco trade are somewhat improved, this week. Retailers, finally forced to it, raised cigarette prices a cent and in some cases two cents. Most of the dealers followed the United. Some had previously taken the "bull by the horns" and put on the extra penny. No serious loss of business has been felt because of the advance in prices.

In New York City, The Cigar Makers' International Union has started a campaign to unionize all shops. Several manufacturers were hit by strikes, although they had only recently granted a wage increase. The threatened general strike in Tampa being averted, relief was felt throughout the country.

Now that cigarette prices have increased, cigar manufacturers and retail dealers are discussing the feasibility of advancing prices on cigars. Some maintain that there should not be a nickel cigar on the market, since the cost to the retailer now ranges from $37.50 to $42.50. Others contend that the smoker will not stand for an increase on all cigars. But the argument is used that a real cigar smoker will never switch to cigarettes, because he is asked a cent or two more on his favorite cigar.

With the revenue tax settled it is the general opinion that conditions should be practically normal in a short time.

There is a reported shortage of tobacco throughout the country, but the average manufacturer has a sufficient supply stored away to carry him over the critical period. Transportation, both on land and sea, is still retarded by war conditions and some manufacturers and leaf dealers are securing all the imported tobacco they possibly can, fearing the War Department will commandeer the ships now used in transporting tobacco from Cuba and other ports.

Christmas packings were discussed about town this week and it was the general opinion that there would be comparatively few special boxes for the holidays. The cost is prohibitive and in many cases the material is not available. Looking at it from all angles, the tobacco industry is no worse off than other lines of business.

WHAT FOOD CONTROL MEANS

retailer, the traveling salesman and the canned goods broker have gone to Washington in bodies representing the best men and the best minds in their respective trades and have conferred there not only with the Food Administrator himself, but with leading men in their own lines who are acting as volunteers on the Food Administration. Sometimes they have gone with fear in their hearts or resentment at the prospect of government interference in their business affairs. But there is something in Washington which quickly dissipates fear and resentment and leads these men to offer their unanimous support to food control measures.

"Whether we like it or it," they are told, "this is the situation. Business cannot go on as usual in war times because the law of supply and demand is thrown out of operation. These are the conditions, and here is the only remedy that has been found in countries with greater experience in war than we have yet had. What do you think about it, gentlemen?"

What the business men think is shown in every case by their action in recognizing the necessity for food control. They have promised their patriotic co-operation and are readjusting their trade organization and methods for loyal support of Food Administration policies.

With sensible food control it is possible to handle the other two outstanding problems of food supply in war. One is increased production, and the other is economical use of food. With stable prices, absence of speculation and the temporary surrender of individual trade advantages the farmer can have an assurance of prices ample enough to encourage larger planting and live stock raising. And by these same safeguards thrown round the food supply the consumer is made willing to economize in food and is also able to purchase the necessities of life at prices which are at least reasonable and, what is more important, do not suffer wild fluctuations.

This is food control in a nutshell. Whatever fear or hostility there may be in the country over food control arises entirely from misunderstanding of what food control really means, why it is necessary and how it is being carried out. In no case does this feeling persist after real food control has been explained.

ANENT "DEPRECIATION AND DEPLETION."

WASHINGTON, October 22.—Daniel C. Roper, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, has just sent the following communication to collectors relative to all dividends paid out of amounts set aside to cover depreciation and depletion.

Referring to the practice of certain corporations of declaring dividends out of reserves set aside to meet depreciation and depletion of property, and of advising stockholders that such dividends represent a distribution of capital assets, your attention is directed to the ruling made herein as follows:

All such dividends received by stockholders declared out of such reserves accumulated subsequent to March 1, 1913, constitute income to the stockholder under the Act of September 8, 1916, and must be accounted for in returns of net income.

A stockholder's investment is in the stock of a corporation. If he disposes of his stock for more than its fair market value on March 1, 1913, or its cost if acquired since that date, the profit realized must be returned as income; if he disposes of it at a loss, the loss sustained is deductible from gross income within the limits of the taxing act. In computing the profit or loss sustained there must be taken into account dividends paid from reserves accumulated prior to March 1, 1913, which were not returned as income for the year in which received, under the provisions of the Act of September 8, 1916.

All rulings in conflict herewith are hereby revoked.

GREENBERG SENTENCED

Hartford Dealer Who Bought 40 Bales of Stolen Tobacco Gets from One to Two Years in Prison.

Convicted of buying forty bales of tobacco stolen from Mrs. Mary Lassen, of Glastonbury, Conn., Jacob Greenberg, a tobacco dealer of Hartford, was sentenced by Judge William S. Case in the superior court at Hartford to serve a term in the Connecticut State prison from one to two years.

Isaac Moiger, Harry Friedman and Samuel Sinovsky, the three men who stole the tobacco from Mrs. Lassen's shed, December 8, 1916, were also sentenced—Moiger to jail for six months and Friedman and Sinovsky placed on probation.

B. M. Holden appeared as lawyer for Moiger, Jacob Schwolsky for Friedman, and Nathan O. Freedman for Sinovsky, who drove the taxicab in which the tobacco was transported.

The forty bales of tobacco which the three men confessed to have stolen belonged to Mrs. Mary Lassen, of Glastonbury. The tobacco was taken on the night of December 6, 1916. Moiger was the mover as to the stealing, and he engaged Sinovsky, who had a jitney, and Friedman was taken along to help. The tobacco was brought to Hartford. The next night it was taken to East Hartford and put in a shed near Greenberg's warehouse, and on the morning of December 8 it was moved from the shed to Greenberg's warehouse and Greenberg paid for it with a check for $140. Moiger at the trial testified that Greenberg had told him that he could take one or two bales from the sheds of different farmers, that the thefts, because of the small quantity thus taken, would never be noticed. Greenberg said: "You bring it to me and I will 'bury' it."

Greenberg stoutly made denial that he had knowledge the tobacco was stolen property, but the jury found against him.

Harry A. Bliss, of Hartford; former Selectman Charles E. Goodrich, of Glastonbury; Charles C. Donovan, of Hartford; Senator Herman P. Koppelmann, of Hartford, and Edward A. Buckland, of Manchester, spoke to the court in Greenberg's behalf, testifying to his good character.

The motion to set aside the jury's verdict which found Greenberg guilty of receiving property was argued before Judge Case by Senator Henry H. Hunt. Mr. Hunt reviewed the testimony and argued that the verdict was against the weight of the evidence. Mr. Hunt also argued that the verdict was the result of passion and prejudice. In reply to Mr. Hunt's argument Prosecuting Attorney Alcorn also reviewed the testimony and said it all showed the guilt of Greenberg.

The State's attorney said that in his opinion Greenberg should be sentenced to prison, and the judge asked if the State's attorney had any recommendation to make as to Moiger, Friedman and Sinovsky. The State's attorney said they had confessed and but for them Greenberg might not have been apprehended, and he considered Greenberg the more guilty of any, because if the others had not had a place to put the stolen property the likelihood was they would not have stolen it. They pleaded guilty and testified on the State's side of the case without any promise and they had no reason to expect clemency, but the State's attorney told the judge he thought the men were entitled to clemency.

Judge Case said he had a good deal of sympathy for Friedman and Sinovsky, and some for Moiger, but none for Greenberg.

The motion to set aside the verdict was denied.

THE STRIKE IN PATERSON

Union Makes Demand for an Increase of $1.10 per Thousand—Manufacturers Refuse—Men Out.

The Paterson, N. J. Cigar Manufacturers' Association held a meeting last Thursday night in the Branch Hotel, and decided not to grant the demands of the cigar makers for an increase of $1.10 per thousand cigars, claiming that their employes had not been fair in the manner in which they presented their demands, and that the increase was not warranted. The manufacturers decided to throw open their shops for the men to return whenever they saw fit. Their secretary was empowered to communicate with the secretary of the Cigar Makers' Union, to notify the cigar makers of this fact. The manufacturers will entertain a committee from the cigar makers' union at their meeting this Thursday evening, if the union so desires.

A meeting of the Cigar Makers' Union, of this city, was held Friday morning at 10 o'clock, and the members decided to remain firm in their demands for the increase over their old bill of prices. A committee was appointed to visit the labor organizers of Paterson, and make known to them their side of the issue involved. As a result of the strike, many of the local cigar makers are leaving Paterson, as there is plenty of work in other cities for men of their trade, the announcement made by the cigar makers states. The members who remain in Paterson will be cared for.

The purchase of what has been known as the Shattuck building on east Oak street, Sparta, Wis., by the Jefferson Leaf Tobacco Co., which has instituted extensive repairs and changes threin, for the purpose of installing a stemming department in their business, marks a decisive step forward by this enterprising and progressive firm.

Varied Prices Confuse the Bostonese

But Retailers Are Doing Excellent Business Selling Smokes for Soldiers—D. H. Moulsdale Cashes Some Sizable Baseball Checks—Hi Hammer Isn't Knocking—Wammer Takes a Whirl Around the Hub—The Virtues of a Moistener—Hyneman Bros. Feature Hoffman House and Flor de Intal—Trade Buys Many Liberty Bonds.

Boston, October 22.—The varied prices that cigars, cigarettes and tobacco are sold at, in different parts of Boston, cause the consumers to be all "balled up." Ten cents straight, 9 cents, three for a quarter, 8 cents straight are what popular New England brands of cigars are sold for, and prices on cigarettes! Well, one can't keep track of them. They are changing every 20 minutes. By and by these things will be regulated and joy will reign again, but this "Where am I at?" game at present has every one in the trade, including the smoker, up in the air.

It seems that the jobbers are going to find collections "darn slow" from now until after the holidays. The trade is loaded up with stock; most of it not paid for yet, and they have to "cough up" to Uncle Sam for the revenue. Then, on top of that, there is always a lull before the holiday season gets under way. So it looks like tough sledding for Mr. Jobber. However, it may not be so bad this year, because mothers, fathers, wives, sisters, brothers and sweethearts are sending to France comfort kits, which include smokes. Signs are in the windows of all of the live retailers, reiterating what Uncle Sam says: "If you want to get the boy's Christmas gift to him in time, it must be mailed no later than November 15." This has stimulated business, and the retailers all say that they were agreeably disappointed in the way their sales have kept up. It was expected they would fall off, on account of so many boys being away, but the boys who are away are smoking more than they ever did, and most of the smokes are coming from home.

There will be a big shortage of 1/40s this Christmas. Many of the large jobbers have been advised not to expect their usual holiday allotment, as the factories are away behind on regular orders, and it is a physical impossibility to get out any more goods than they are producing.

The local factories are not promising anything, but the 1/40's is a very important bulk in their sales during the holidays, and special effort is being made to put these out.

Billy O'Brien, of the 7-20-4 fame, is the most popular man in town, on "occasions." These are when he can deliver to the hungry jobber a fair-sized shipment of 7-20-4's. Other times Bill cannot be found; he is "Somewhere in America."

Henry Wemmer, of Diesel-Wemmer, Lima, Ohio, makers of the famous El Verso and San Felice cigars, paid his initial visit to Baker Bros., the Boston distributors of his famous brands. All the factories of Diesel-Wemmer Co. are working to their limit, but are millions behind on orders for El Versos and San Felice.

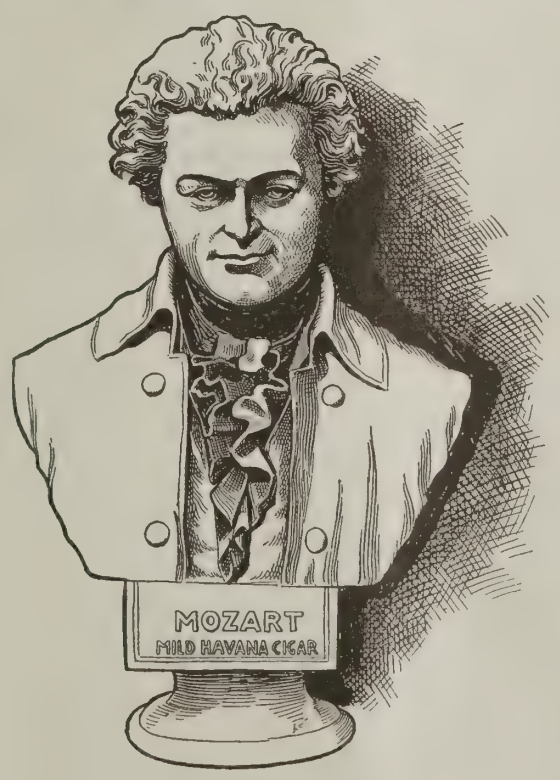
Joseph P. Manning Co. is always up to the minute on merchandise. Manning salesmen are showing to the trade a 20-inch 2½ round clay moistener. It is made of Mexican clay especially for the house of Manning. It not only keeps the cigars in proper smoking condition, but the use of the moistener makes less the loss of broken cigars by handling, and the customer will go out of his way in the winter time to get a fresh cigar and one that won't break in his pocket. The salesmen are selling them fast.

Hi Hammer, representing Corral Wodiska, was in our midst, and Hi said that, after stopping off at Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, he was going to hike to the factory. His firm wrote him not to guarantee any deliveries for the rest of the year.

D. H. Moulsdale, of Sanchez & Haya, was here recently and received several checks, and good-sized ones, from a number of friends of his in New York City that were on the losing end of the World Series. Next to hunting, baseball is Moulsdale's choice of outdoor sports. Of indoor sports he declares himself in on everything except knitting.

Hyneman Bros., the Federal street retailers and jobbers, have a full window of Hoffman House Bouquets and another of the Flor de Intal brand of Manila cigars, that they control for this section. Both of the brands mentioned are big sellers.

The trade has subscribed very liberally to the Second issue of Liberty Bonds. Chairman Ellis, of the Cigar and Tobacco Dealers' Liberty Bond Committee, says that the subscription so far totals more than the previous issue, and many jobbers have contributed large amounts, in excess of the first issue.



Ensign Ahearn, formerly manager of the cigar department of G. W. Armstrong Dining and News Company, is now serving on the transport St. Louis. He was in Boston for a day last week, after completing his first trip across.

The United Drug Company is holding its annual convention in this city. All of the Rexall agents in the United States and Canada are attending.

Hubbell & McGowan, the Back Bay druggists, are featuring a one-cent sale, and are offering some attractive buys in cigars, cigarettes and pipes.

BIG HOTEL EXECUTIVES

Promoted and Changed Around—An Official Re-Arrangement in the Bowman System—Good Work Rewarded.

A reorganization of the executive departments of several hotels controlled by John McE. Bowman, of New York City, has been announced with an explanation that the changes were with a view to strengthening the organization.

The principal change was the appointment of Geo. W. Sweeney as managing director of the Hotel Ansonia, New York City. Mr. Bowman is president of the company operating the Ansonia, which for some time past has been conducted under the active management of Frank W. Harriman and Gustav Oberndorfer. Mr. Oberndorfer has been made assistant manager of the Hotel Manhattan.

Ray S. Hubbell, a well-known young hotel man who was formerly with the Waldorf-Astoria and the Hotel Gotham, New York City, and more recently with the Carls-Rite, Toronto, and the Gratiot Inn, Port Huron, Mich., has been added to the executive staff of the Ansonia. He will be assistant manager, and Hiram Cavanagh, who has been with the hotel for some time, will fill a similar post.

Mr. Sweeney is vice-president and managing director of the new Hotel Commodore and has been superintending the construction work on that hotel for almost a year past. He will continue to look after the Commodore in addition to his new duties.

It is also reported by The Hotel World that the Hotel Pontchartrain at Detroit has become a link of the Bowman chain and that Mr. Harriman will be manager.

Returns on Playing Cards

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 22.—Daniel C. Roper, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, has sent the following order to collectors in connection with the regulations of tax imposed on playing cards, the affixing of taxpaid stamps of the old rate, and assessment and collection of additional tax due on and after Oct. 4, 1917.

Title VIII, Schedule A, Act of October 3, 1917 imposes upon every pack of playing cards containing not more than 54 cards, a tax of five cents in addition to the tax of two cents per pack imposed by the Act of August 28, 1894, which becomes effective and such additional tax attached to all playing cards manufactured or imported and sold or removed for sale on and after October 4, 1917. This additional tax does not apply to cards manufactured and removed taxpaid prior to October 4th in the hands of the jobbers and retail dealers, unless the packs to which the stamps affixed have been broken and the cards repacked in new cases, in which event the dealer so packing same would be liable to the tax as in the case of an original manufacturer under the provisions of T. D. 1100.

Section 1001 provides that any person, corporation, or association liable to any tax imposed under this Act, or for the collection thereof, shall keep records and render under oath such statements and returns and comply with such regulations as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

Section 1006 provides that where a tax imposed under this act, payable by stamps, is an increase over existing rates, stamps on hand in the offices of collectors and the Bureau of Internal Revenue may be used until the supply is exhausted, and manufacturers or importers having such stamps on hand may use same, and the additional tax due under this Act shall be assessed.

Under authority of the above sections, the following regulations are hereby promulgated:

Every manufacturer and importer of playing cards will render to the collector of the district wherein the factory is located, a sworn inventory in duplicate on or before October 31, 1917, showing the number of packs of playing cards, entering separately the number of stamped and unstamped packs on hand at the beginning of business October 4th, and likewise the number of attached and unattached stamps at the rate of two cents. These inventories may be rendered on Form 215, modified to suit the nature of the article, or in typewritten form.

On October 31st, or within ten days thereafter, every manufacturer or importer will render under oath in duplicate, a return covering the period October 4th to 31st inclusive, showing the number of packs of cards manufactured or imported; the number withdrawn taxpaid; the name and address of each person, firm or corporation to whom such cards may be consigned or sold; the number and total value at the rate of two cents of stamps affixed, and the additional tax of five cents per pack due thereon.

This return will be rendered for each subsequent month on the last day thereof, or on the tenth day of the succeeding month, until the supply stamps at the old rate on hand is exhausted.

This return will be rendered for each subsequent month on the last day thereof, or on or before the tenth day of the succeeding month, until the supply stamps at the old rate on hand is exhausted.

Forms for rendering these returns may be obtained upon application to the Collector of the district; or manufacturers or importers if they so desire, may make up such monthly return upon the typewriter, provided it conforms in detail with the prescribed.

Collectors will carefully verify these inventories and returns and enter for assessment on their lists, Form 23, the additional tax at five cents shown due from manufacturers or importers until the stock of stamps at the rate of two cents held by the taxpayer has been exhausted. Thereafter every manufacturer and importer will be required to render such return for each month during continuance in business, but the additional tax will not be noted thereon as all stamps purchased from the collector on and after October 4th will be sold and accounted for at the new rate.

One copy of the inventory and of each monthly return will be forwarded to this office by the collector and the other copy retained in his office.

On and after October 4th collectors selling stamps on hand of the rate of two cents, will overprint same, require payment and account therefor at the rate of seven cents per pack, as outlined in Mem. 1621 of September 20, 1917.

BENEFITS OF BASKETS.

A great improvement has recently been made in the handling of tobacco on the warehouse floors of the Smithfield market. Instead of piling the tobacco on the floors as has been the custom heretofore, baskets are used and the tobacco is never put down on the floor. It is placed on the baskets when unloaded in the packing house of the buyer. By using this method the tobacco is kept clean, there is no waste, and a great saving is made in handling it. Since every buyer knows he is going to get what he buys he can pay a slightly better price for it.—Smithfield Herald.

The new shade grown wrapped El Arabe, made by the Benito Rovira Co., is being placed throughout the city with excellent results by five new salesmen under the direction of W. W. Weeks.

Sam. Silver, New York City representative of the Old King Cole Co., has announced his engagement to Miss Estelle Brande, of Brooklyn. The date of the wedding has not been set.

A. J. Mitchel, representing Julius Klorfein, is in New York this week, having come on from Cleveland. He is looking for more cigars, and will probably return to Cleveland next week.

Kohlberg & Co., manufacturers of the Ko-Co and La Encico, have leased an additional floor in the building located at 223 East 80th street. The new space is needed because of a general increase in business.

Eugene Stoltz, representing Simon Batt & Co., is in Tacoma. F. Peterson is in Des Moines and Tom Torbert is still in San Antonio, where he is securing large orders from the army camp there.

The A. H. T. Cigar Co., of Lakeland, Fla., doesn't seem to be bothered by the government tax, and all their cigars are selling at 5 cents each. This company now sells goods in 127 towns in Florida.

President Goldberg, of Simon Batt & Co., is expected to return from his trip, this week. Business increases constantly for Simon Batt & Co., and this month's business is far ahead of the same period last year.

The Romeo y Julieta cigar factory in Havana, acquired, in the month of September, 4,028 bales of Vuelta Abajo tobacco, including receipts on account of previous purchases, and including a few vegas bought in Havana.

The Stickney-Hoelscher Cigar Co., of St. Louis, is now pushing Tuvals, with great success. The account with this company was opened by G. W. Stocking, Western representative of Marcelino Perez & Co., three weeks ago, when he was working his way east to New York. Repeat orders have been received ever since.

Displayed in the window of the United Store in the Flatiron building, last week, was the handkerchief purchased by President Edward Wise last August, at an auction for the benefit of the Sun's tobacco fund. Mr. Wise paid $500 for the handkerchief, which was embroidered by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. The display attracted great attention.

The cigar makers employed by Sol. Furgatch & Co. went on strike last Thursday, asking for an increase of $2 per thousand. It was only two weeks ago that they received a dollar increase. In addition to the increase, the hands want the shop unionized. A meeting of local unions was held last Sunday and it is expected a general demand for unionized shops in New York, will follow. Furgatch is holding out.

J. B. Back, the Brooklyn manufacturer, is settling down to work in his new factory at 449 Fulton street, Brooklyn. At the present time he has 18 cigar makers at work, but so soon as the factory is in full operation he will employ additional hands. A constant increase in business made it necessary to secure more factory space. Back continues to operate his retail store on Court street.

Retail dealers in Brooklyn put up cigarette prices Monday a week ago. Brought to realize that they must either advance prices or go out of business dealers have added a penny to the amount charged for a package of cigarettes. With few exceptions the consumer is paying the new price without a murmur. He is not so hard to deal with as a great many retailers supposed he would be.

Otto Eisenlohr & Bro., of Philadelphia, have leased from Harry Elston, of Norristown, for a period of five years, five stories in what is known as the Elston Building, in Norristown, Pa., and plans are being perfected for turning the building, with the exception of the first floor, into a cigar manufactory. It is expected that operations will commence about November 1. The number of hands may reach 400.

When Leo Lehman, New York salesman for Salvador Rodriguez went after the Washington Heights trade some months ago, he found most of the dealers opposed to selling, as they expressed it, "Stuff in cans, what do you think this is a grocery store?" But Sam Baron, located at 3667 Broadway, agreed to take a thousand Charles the Great. Now Baron has sales of Charles the Great cigars amounting to $700 a month. His shipments come direct from Tampa.

R. McClemens, of Reymer & Bros., of Pittsburgh, visited New York this week, calling on Julius Klorfein. Reymer & Bros. need more Garcia Grandes than they have been receiving, as the demand is continuous. Mr. Schwarz, of Wallace & Schwarz, Cleveland, also came to New York this week in an effort to secure additional deliveries of Garcia Grandes. Because of the demand for his cigars, Klorfein has issued orders to all his salesmen not to accept any new accounts until after January, 1918.

John J. Flaherty, manager of the Flatiron store, received a card from a soldier in France on which he wrote: "I'm almost afraid to write your name on this card, for fear the censor will not pass it." Nothing German about my name, replied John J. The selling of Liberty Bonds at the Flatiron store has been a remarkable success and on several occasions, the supply was sold out. The demand was not only for $50 bonds, but for $100 bonds also. "No red tape; give us your fifty dollars and we will give you a bond," the sign says. John J. finds that business shows no let up, these days.

Meeting Thursday night at Odd Fellows' Hall, members of the Hoboken Tobacconists' Association decided upon a scale of prices which will for the time being, at least, continue in effect in Hoboken as concerns smokers' articles. A copy of the list is to be mailed to every retail tobacconist in the mile-square city. President Silverman said that the scale of prices decided upon last night was only temporary and due to the unsettled condition of the market. Some of the cheaper cigarettes will continue at five cents per package, but none will retail at ten cents, excepting one or two brands. Fifteen-cent cigarettes will sell at seventeen cents. R. Grippe was elected vice-president of the association, in place of E. Kaplan, the former incumbent.

Jacob Sitzer, a jobber of Millerton, N. Y., is visiting the Metropolis.

NOTES AND QUOTES

J. M. Lanfield, representing Mendel & Co., is in San Francisco.

Florida sand is full of potash says Prof. S. E. Collison. We knew all that lie about Florida sand would have some effect sometime.—Tampa Tribune.

Governor Philipp, of Wisconsin, who signed the Anti-Trading Stamp and Coupon law, is the thirteenth Governor to sign a bill doing away with trading stamps and coupons.

The Stewart County Tobacco Warehouse Co. has been incorporated at Nashville, Tenn., with a capital of $2,500. The incorporators are Ed Walters, J. T. Reynolds, F. C. Ezell, W. E. Robertson and W. E. Swann.

Around Lancaster, Pa., practically all of the 1917 tobacco crop has been harvested and as a whole, it is one of the best ever raised in the country. Many of the buyers have been withdrawn from the field. Tobacco farmers will not listen to offers at this time, expecting to see much higher prices later on than have been offered.

"Business papers of the progressive type have undergone great changes and developments in the past few years. In the olden days the trade journal was considered almost a parasite. Today it is a necessary adjunct both as a disseminator of news and general information and as a valuable auxiliary in the merchandising end of business."—Class.

A heavy, warm rain in Paducah, Ky., is hoped for, it is needed to bring tobacco in order before the sap is thoroughly dried out so the colors will be more uniform. Large buying interests are going ahead with preparations for handling the crop. Farmers generally are talking and expecting high prices, but little trading is being done in Paducah. Buying likely will not start before the middle or latter part of November.

Highest prices in the history of the Rocky Mountain, N. C. market were paid for the golden weed during the past week, the average being $30.06 per hundred pounds. The sales for the week were 1,800,000 pounds. The total sales for the 1917 season to date have been 12,600,000 pounds, at a price average of 27.23 cents per pound, another record breaking price. The total sales in pound for the season are also the greatest in the history of the market.

J. P. Morgan says: "The loan is going to be a success. Of course, it means a great deal of hard work—hard work right up until October 27. But if this hard work is done; if the American people understand the size of the task, then there should be no doubt that the Secretary of the Treasury will receive subscriptions to the amount that he is seeking. We started with a much better organization than we had three months ago. We have a right to expect a much larger number of subscribers, and that is just as important as the total amount subscribed."

According to the current issue of the Iron Age one million base boxes of tin plate will be used by the tobacco manufacturers during the coming year in the production of receptacles. This will be about the same amount used by these concerns during the current year, it is estimated, and will fall short of what the tobacconists would take if they could get the plate. In view of the shortage of tin plate vitally affecting the packing of food products, it is felt that 1,000,000 base boxes of tin plate or virtually 4 per cent. of the production this year, will be all that is available for tobacco.

The necessity of work is getting legislative recognition. West Virginia has declared it the duty of every able-bodied male resident within its borders, and between 16 and 60 years of age, to be habitually and profitably employed during the war, and undertakes to have the sheriff see that this duty is fulfilled. In June Maryland followed suite, and requires every man to show good cause if he is not at work; he has to show a card which bears a more intimate and detailed analysis of his personal affairs than a certificate of exemption from military service. Kansas puts in jail people who do not quickly find "visible means of support." New Hampshire will not tolerate during war, persons who influence workers to leave their employment. Minnesota and Idaho have given attention to sabotage and the like.

SHOTS AND JOTS

James E. Cryan, a cigar merchant, has asked for bids for the construction of four apartments, to be erected on his lot on Bissell avenue, Richmond, Va.

John Ackerman, aged 84, for many years engaged in the tobacco business in Newport, Ky., died Sunday, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Carolyn Cheney, 726 Overton street, Newport. He leaves two daughters, Mrs. William Purser and Mrs. Cheney.

The United States War-Risk Insurance Bureau, since war was declared, has issued over 7,500 policies of insurance on American vessels and their cargoes, valued at well over half a billion dollars, the premiums collected amounting to nearly $25,000,000.

When you purchase Liberty Loan Bonds you do your country good, you do the cause of liberty and justice over the whole world good, you do yourself good, you do harm to the enemies of liberty and justice and civilization, and harm to the enemies of your country.

The dates for the opening of the loose-leaf warehouses in the Bowling Green district of Kentucky have been fixed as follows: Scottsville will open Tuesday, November 13; Franklin, Wednesday, November 14, and Bowling Green, Thursday, November 15.

If Uncle Sam doesn't send on a few carloads of pennies Pittsburgh, the home of the stogie, may have to stop smoking. When dealers added pennies to the price of cigars, tobacco and cigarettes, Pittsburghers were willing to pay the additional pennies, but the dealers did not have the coppers to make change.

Stockholders of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company will vote at a special meeting in Jersey City, November 1, on a proposition to increase the capital of the company to $40,000,000. The new financing is intended to meet the demands of the company's increasing business.

Romano E. Weaver, formerly the owner of a cigar factory in Traverse City, has started a cigar manufacturing establishment in Grand Rapids, Mich., at 659 Shawmut street, S. W. He expects to employ about ten men. Weaver for several years was employed by George H. Seymour & Co.

The five-story cigar factory at 114 South Second street, Philadelphia, has been sold and is to be converted into a paper storage warehouse. The conveyance was made by Morris Rosenbaum to Harris Kardon, who will take possession very soon. The building is on a lot 20 by 97 feet and is assessed at $14,000. The purchase price was not discolsed.

Internal revenue stamp sales at Winston-Salem, N. C., during September amounted to $1,948,316.31; and customs duties collected on foreign goods shipped through this "port of entry" during the same period were $124,648.58. The figures in both cases show a slight decrease compared with receipts for August, which, however, was an abnormally big month.

The leading firms engaged in the manufacture of paper cans and containers were in conference with the United States Food Administration during the week, discussing the possibilities of substituting fiber or paper as a material for containers, usually made of tin. The shortage of tinplate is becoming a serious matter, especially as there is a great demand for tin at the front, where it is used to contain oil, gasoline and other materials necessary for war purposes, and in this country it must be used for canning perishable food products. It was shown that paper containers made by any of a number of companies can be used as well as tin for such commodities as coffee, tea, tobacco, toilet powders and many others. These men will take steps toward creating a permanent organization of the paper can manufacturers.—Modern Merchant.

Record Tobacco Sales in North Carolina

North Carolina tobacco sales for September broke all previous records. The forty-five markets reported the grand total of 84,806,700 pounds. It is 26,000,000 more than September of last year, which was itself a record-breaker. In money there is no way to reach an estimate, albeit the Eastern farmers have been making an average of more than 25 cents a pound on many of their big breaks. The tobacco market was rushed the past month as it never was, and in some of the best tobacco towns the warehouses were busy every day in the week.

The sales were so enormous that a report went out that the crop is nearly all in, but the comparative unimportance of the Winston-Salem market during that month shows the miscalculation. The September sales represent nearly 40 per cent of a normal North Carolina production. The estimate—or, rather, guess—for next year is 210,000,000 pounds, with about 304,800 acres in cultivation. Greenville, Rocky Mount and Wilson far outdistanced the great Winston-Salem market, often the leader of them all in leaf and never worse off than second. It means that the Piedmont markets will spread themselves later. Winston-Salem sold a big lot of the weed and claimed a fine month, but Farmville, next door to Greenville, came near Winston-Salem's figures, while Greenville was going nearly a million better.

The prices justify the estimate that $25,000,000 went to tobacco farmers during the last month. They warrant the prediction that North Carolina will again lead the union in prices and in gross receipts. The conditions at the close of the harvest were as nearly perfect as it is possible to make them. There was some wilt in the Granville belt, but that is the solitary shortcoming.

The figures for 1916, the same month, were 59,498,064. The individual markets are reported thus:

RAILWAY OPERATING COSTS.

"The railways of the United States in the calendar year 1916 paid a higher average wage per employee, a greater amount per mile in taxes, and handled freight at a lower rate per ton per mile, than at any period in their history," says the Railway Age Gazette in its current issue. "These facts are disclosed by a compilation made by the Bureau of Railway Economics of the returns made to the Interstate Commerce Commission by the so-called Class I roads—those having annual operating revenues exceeding $1,000,000. These returns for the first time are for the year ending on December 31, according to an order of the Commission making the fiscal year coincide with the calendar year, and they cover railways having 89 per cent. of the mileage of the country and receiving 97 per cent. of the total operating revenues.

"Compared with a similar compilation on returns for the year ended on June 30, 1916, the average wage per employee of these roads shows an increase from $840.62 to $868.69, or $28.07. This is exclusive of salaries to general and division officers.

"In the same period taxes increased from $631.29 per mile to $680.63 per mile, or $49.34; and the average freight rate per ton mile decreased from 7.07 mills in the year ended on June 30, 1916, to 7.06 mills in the year ended on December 31, 1916. Passenger rates increased slightly as between the two periods—from 1.995 cents in the year ended on June 30, to 2.042 in the year ended on December 31.

"The mileage included in the two compilations is substantially the same, being 231,246 miles in the statement for the former fiscal year and 231,179 in the statement covering the new fiscal year.

"The increase in the volume of service performed in the two periods under comparison was from 339,883,000,000 to 362,134,000,000, or 22,251,000,000 ton miles of revenue freight; and from 33,783,000,000 to 34,573,000,000, or 790,000,000 passenger miles.

"The average number of employees, exclusive of general and division officers, increased from 1,563,928 to 1,626,103, or by 62,175; and their aggregate compensation increased from $1,314,665,664 to $1,412,579,190, or $97,913,526. The increase in number of employees was 4 per cent. and in their compensation 7.4 per cent.

"Total operating revenues increased from $3,381,945,764 to $3,592,591,023, or $210,645,259, equal to 6.2 per cent. Operating expenses increased from $2,211,071,443 to $2.354,548,724, or $143,477,281, equal to 6.4 per cent. Taxes increased from $145,536,535 to $156,875,396, or 7.7 per cent.

"Investment in road and equipment showed an increase for the year ended on December 31, as compared with the year ended on June 30, of $198,658,088."

It seems like an age since a Missouri country banker passed t' th' Great Beyond gold-brickless.

ARE AFRAID OF FREEZES

Wisconsin Tobacco Farmers Are Hustling as They Handle the Uncured Leaf—Inquiries Numerous.

EDGERTON, Wis., October 19.—The present week has brought several ideal Indian Summer days that have been of great assistance in the curing of the late harvested portion of the tobacco crop. A few growers, we understand, are preparing to introduce artificial heat in their curing sheds should weather conditions not continue as favorable. We are getting close to the date when heavy freezes are liable to come to injure the uncured leaf, and much of the late shedded crop is yet as green as when harvested. What the final fate of such tobacco will be is uncertain. The most of the early fields are so well cured down as to be beyond any danger from this cause.

The sampling of last season's packings is now practically completed and the amount of damage found is exceptionally small.

There seems to be plenty of inquiry for old leaf which leaf packers are mainly unable to consider because of empty warehouses. Never before were so little leaf carried by local dealers. Stemming is the only business carried on in the packing points at present.

The shipments out of storage reach 300 cases and two cars of bundles from this market since last report.

W. J. Holman, with Hart & Murphy, St. Paul manufacturers, was in this market last week sampling the 1916 packing purchased of A. Jenson & Sons.

E. G. Beinhart, with the U. S. Department of Agriculture in charge of tobacco experiments, has been in the State during the week checking up some data relating to the investigation of black rot. Mr. Beinhart has been stationed at Suffield, Conn., the greater part of the year.—Edgerton Reporter.

The war will have no effect on the Government's prosecution of the anti-trust suits now pending in the Supreme Court. The Government has reached an agreement with attorneys of the International Harvester Co. whereby the dissolution suit brought against the company will not be considered by the court until after the arguments in the Steel Corporation suit, which will be called in January. The coal companies' cases will come up late in November.

UP STATE ECHOES

hotel radioed in the specific latitude and longitude of George's just-out-of-the-ocean drip, drip, drip?

Even the bell-bandit, elevator-extorter, and all the rest of the busy boys backed away from George's wet, very wet, raiment. But George should kabibble! What difference did it make now about his appearance? Wasn't he at last in his very own bath-and-bed, after consuming 25 grains of quinine, six lemons, a bucket of hot water and a pint of uno?

Next A. M. George felt better! Then he told the story—the awful, astounding story! Which is this: Returning to Albany from Troy in the pouring, roaring rain, George squinted through his periscope spot on the windshield and immediately noted the fleeting shores and sidewalks of Watervliet.

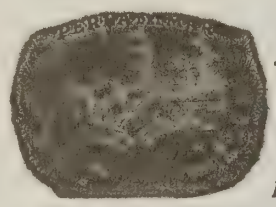
"I'd better be careful here," thought George, "for it was somewhere along this coast that I observed a bad break in the ocean of mud and water on my way up."

So George was extremely cautious for several knots. And, just then, George supposed he heard the storm-siren on the Watervliet Arsenal blow five bells of the dog-watch, or approx 6:30 P. M.

Also, at the same instant, George actually heard a crash! At starboard and stern! And the hilarious helm instantly shot to port, with George almost completely covered with an extremely choice assortment of W. D. C. pipes and other samples of the Demuth cargo!

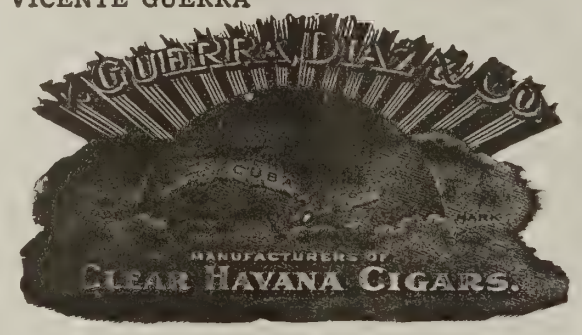
Well, George stopped the ship in a sea of suds and waded forth. Back and forth, back and forth, from six-thirty till nearly ten of the clock, George Fox labored in the dunder and blitzen to mount a demountable rim on a mounting of the worst muck the storm could produce!

All things come to an end. So did George's job. But the War Department wants to understand that faulty track crossings in the street, right in front of its big gun shops, should not cause a gay and genial gentleman like George to say, under his dripping hat, such things as "Dwom panom nie mozia sluzyc."



"No kick," acknowledged Harry Stearns. "Business on the Estabrook & Eaton line, particularly Rockefellers, is very good indeed. I'll see you again in two or three weeks with holiday sizes."

"Cob pipes are now somewhat expensive for their comparative class," admitted our old friend Herschel when here t' other day from Mizzori, "but that is practically nothing to what they eventually will be, providing conditions continue as they are. Why, everything we use in our Washington, Mo., factory has advanced 'way out of sight! This is my semi-annual trip to New York, and I'll be back in the Spring, tra-la, but if there's anything you need in cobs you'd better anticipate and buy now against a rising market."



Those little things called "shop expense, overhead and Sumatra Sorrows" appear not to bother manufacturer and retailer W. G. Spatz, of 255 Lark street, Albany. To positively prove that they don't affect his daily life Brother Spatz has just published a price-card for his Capitol Hill nickel cigar. "Six-for-a-quarter, not six cents," says the window card.

"These are advance packings for the holidays," confided Phil Wilkinson last week, showing up a ten-box of El Ginero cigars for Bennett, Sloan & Co., New York. "They cost $5 per 1,000 more to put up, but the popularity of the style will sell them at a retail advance. Try 'em out."

Along about the first of November every business house will, under the revenue measure, be compelled to put three-cent stamps on ordinary mail. But the Government, says Joe McElveney, will continue to sell thirteen two-cent stamps for a cent and a quarter. So it isn't as bad as it seems! THE SMOKER.

Can't Manufacture Them Fast Enough

American Tobacco Co. Receives Orders for 55,000,000 Cigarettes a Day Besides Making 175,000,000 a Month for the British-American Tobacco Co. —Plans for Increasing the Capacity of Plants—Making New Sales Records —September Gained $1,600,000 Over Last Year.

Sales of the American Tobacco Co. in September gained $1,600,000 over September, 1916.

This September gain compares with an increase in August over last year of $700,000 and in July of better than $1,000,000.

The American Tobacco Co. is receiving orders for 55,000,000 cigarettes a day. Inasmuch as the company's capacity is less than 35,000,000 a day it has been found necessary to take steps toward an increase in plant capacity.

This company is also manufacturing 175,000,000 cigarettes monthly for the British American Tobacco Co. This is over and above the orders for 55,000,000 cigarettes now reported as the daily average. The British American company, of which James B. Duke is the head, has been totally unable to take care of its cigarette business and is turning to the American Tobacco Co. for assistance.

Probably the most remarkable sales record ever established for a new cigarette goes to the credit of the American Tobacco Co. Only last February this company brought out the Lucky Strike cigarette. The company is manufacturing 13,000,000 of these cigarettes daily, although its orders are considerably above this amount. Figuring 300 working days to the year, this is at an annual rate of 4,000,000,000 cigarettes and places this brand second among the cigarette brands of the country, although it has been in existence less than a year.

The Wall Street Journal estimated some weeks ago that sales of the American Tobacco Co. and its subsidiaries in the current year would run in the neighborhood of $130,000,000. Recent results indicate that the total for the year should be considerably above this figure. Sales in 1916 were $110,000,000 and in 1915 totaled $99,000,000.

Sales of the American Tobacco Co. proper should run well above $82,000,000 in 1917, a new record for the company since the dissolution of the tobacco combination. This will compare with the previous high record of $70,009,437 last year and $64,710,287 for 1915.

The American Cigar Co., of which the American Tobacco Co. owns a majority of both common and preferred stocks, is likewise having a big year. In fact, the cigar subsidiary is many millions of cigars behind in its orders. The Cigar Co. earned $12.67 a share for its $10,000,000 common stock last year. Of the $10 000,000 common the American Tobacco Co. owns $7,000,000.

The American Tobacco Co. is making large shipments of cigarettes to the war zone in Europe. Some of these orders are placed through the Red Cross, some with our Government direct and others through the newspapers.

The new war tax will probably cost the American Tobacco Co. more than at first believed. The extreme possibility is $1,000,000 a year, and net earnings are being estimated on this basis. It is good opinion, however, that the final result will be considerably below this figure.

For the full year the company should show a large surplus over dividends. An estimate of $25 a share for the $40,242,400 common stock is a fair one to make at this time, although a slight revision either way may later be necessary. These earnings would compare with $22 a share earned in 1916 and $20.05 a share in 1915.

U. S. TOBACCO HOLDINGS

WASHINGTON, October 29.—A preliminary statement was issued to-day by the Director of the Census covering the leaf tobacco held by manufacturers and dealers on October 1 for the years 1915, 1916 and 1917, and on July 1 of the present year. The aggregate of leaf tobacco on hand October 1, 1917, was 1,154,056,034 pounds, an increase over the returns for the same date in 1916, which amounted to 1,033,018,715 pounds, although not up to the aggregate for 1915, which totaled 1,205,762,948 pounds. The aggregate on July 1, 1917, was 1,266,778,903 pounds.

Returns for October 1 of the present year included 748,864,154 pounds, for which the "marked weight," which is the weight at the time it was packed or bailed, and 405,191,880 pounds reported at the "actual weight."

A sub-division of the aggregate figures shows a total of 840,678,229 pounds of chewing, smoking, snuff and export types on hand October 1.

The returns for burley amounted to 207,592,654 pounds, as against 199,321,165 on the same date of 1916. For dark districts of Kentucky and Tennessee there was a total of 212,479,081, sub-divided as follows: Dark fired of Clarksville, Hopkinsville and Paducah districts, 128,010,509 pounds; Henderson, 16,422,702 pounds; Green River, 49,484,116 pounds; One Sucker, 18,561,754 pounds.

The quantity of Virginia sun dried on hand October 1 was 4,863,174 pounds, as compared with 7,285,760 pounds on October 1, 1916, and 9,464,287 pounds on October 1, 1915. Under the head of Virginia dark there has been a steady increase from 28,655,831 pounds in 1915 to 38,756,459 in 1916, and to 45,236,108 in 1917. An increase is also shown for the bright yellow districts of Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina. The returns for Oc-

SEPTEMBER PRODUCTION

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Deputy Commissioner of Internal Revenue Gates late this afternoon gave out the monthly statement in connection with the cigars, cigarettes, snuff and smoking and chewing tobacco manufactured in September with comparisons for the same month of last year.

In September of this year there were 637,299,017 large cigars manufactured as against 664,082,110 for the same month of last year and 72,356,000 small cigars were manufactured this year as against 67,096,507 for September of last year.

The figures show that the manufacture of large cigarettes increased from 1,604,550 in September of last year to 2,067,075 this year and the manufacture of small cigarettes increased from 2,276,201,680 in September of last year to 2,896,386,240 in September this year.

The manufacture of snuff increased from 2,630,928 pounds in September, 1916 to 3,034,834 this year but the production of smoking and chewing tobacco decreased from 37,740,262 pounds in September last year to 35,683,351 this year.

There were only 2,930,428 packs of playing cards manufactured this year in comparison with 3,179,884 in September of last year.

Porto Rican imports for September this year included 12,966,200 large cigars; 80,000 large cigarettes, and 800,000 small cigarettes. Philippine imports for August this year included 21,586,413 large cigars and 110,160 small cigarettes.

BANKERS MAY RETIRE

From the Directorate of the Tobacco Products Corporation—Steps Considered to Promote Operating Efficiency.

An ever increasing output, associated strictly with the maintenance of high standards, calls for expert knowledge and practical experience as well as general business efficiency. As a very important factor in the present tremendous expansion of the cigarette industry, the Tobacco Products Corporation aims in future to have a directorate composed entirely of tobacco men.

"Furthermore," says the Wall Street Journal, "all will be operating tobacco men with the possible exception of W. H. Butler, formerly connected with the American Tobacco Co., and whose advice in the building up of the Tobacco Products Corporation is earnestly desired.

"The plan to have a real operating directorate will probably be consummated at the annual meeting next month when the directors representing large banking interests will retire.

"Daniel G. Reid, who was made president of the Tobacco Products Corporation at the time of its formation, and who recently gave way to George L. Storm as president, will probably also retire as a director. Mr. Reid has been of great assistance in placing the company on its present sound financial basis, but he has practically no knowledge of tobacco manufacture, and there are going to be no exceptions to the new order of things.

"In fact it is said that there has been an understanding ever since the formation of the company that when the common stock was placed on a dividend basis the bankers would retire from the board."

UNION MAKING PLANS

To Organize So Many Cigar Makers in Greater New York as Possible—Propaganda Work.

The Cigar Makers' Union in Greater New York had another joint meeting last Sunday at Bohemian Hall, 523 East 73d street, New York, to further discuss the problem of unionizing the shops in the metropolis. More than 100 delegates were present. At this meeting a committee of 25 was appointed to go over the entire field in New York to secure information concerning non-union shops and to push plans for the organization of all open shops.

Literature is being printed for distribution to all cigar makers not members of the union to bring before them the knowledge of what the union is planning to do. Secretary Brown, of Local 144, expressed the opinion that the plan to bring all workers together had been started at the proper time. "There is no need," he said, "for cigar hands to work at the old scale of wages any longer. It is a fact that increases in wages have been made in most all shops, but the increases have not been enough to meet the costs of living to-day. To those who have no knowledge concerning our plans, we will supply information."

Another meeting will be held at the same hall next Sunday, when the committee will report as to the progress of its work.

AS EXPLAINED TO A TOBACCO FARMER.

WASHINGTON, October 29.—The following interpretation of the Child Labor Act has been made by Miss Julia Lathorp, chief of the Children's Bureau, in a letter to a tobacco farmer. She says:

"In your letter you ask whether the United States Child Labor Act covers the industry of grading tobacco. You state that this work involves selecting, sizing and grading, which is done in single building set aside for that purpose by the farmers who raise the tobacco, using their own farm labor and such other labor as may be required.

"In the opinion of this Bureau the work of grading, selecting and sizing tobacco by the farmer who grows it is not within the scope of the provisions of the United States Child Labor Act."

MORE SUMATRA SALES

Buyers in Amsterdam, Representing American Houses Secure Specially Fine Tobacco, But Pay Steep Prices.

Frank W. Mahin, American consul at Amsterdam, reports that the third public tobacco sale this year in Amsterdam, where foreigners were purchasers, was held September 21. Altogether 18,650 packages (one package = 179 pounds) of Sumatra were sold. Buyers for American firms took 2,575 packages and paid very high prices, ranging from 3.75 to 5.81 florins ($1.51 to $2.34) per half kilo (1.1 pounds), the average being 5.20 florins ($2.09).

The average price of Sumatra sold at the two preceding public sales this year was only 2.40 florins ($0.96½). But the price paid by American buyers at the second sale, held July 13, 1917, averaged 4 florins ($1.61) per half kilo.

The high prices at the third sale were due to the excellent quality of the kind specially desired by the United States, and also to the relatively small quantity offered and the doubtful prospect of the receipt of further supplies in the near future.

Other kinds were sold to buyers of other nationalities at prices ranging from 2.10 to 4.40 florins ($0.84 to $1.77) per half kilo, the average being approximately $1.20.

KEY WEST'S BIG OUTPUT

Cigar Industry in the Island City Shows Great Growth Since 1911—Clear Havana Production of Various Years Compared.

The output of cigars and the increased demand for workmen in the factories since 1910 show conclusively the continual growth of the cigar industry in Key West. The year 1917 more than promises the greatest output of cigars since 1911. Two new factories have moved to Key West, and it is reported from an authoritative source that a new factory working several hundred will open shortly. The number of smokes manufactured in the first nine months of the successive years from 1910 to 1917 show the increased production in that length of time. This period includes the year of the money panic. The figures do not include the entire output of cigars for each year; they give only the number manufactured in nine months of every year. The figures include the great part of the different years' output and give an accurate and satisfactory statement of the substantial growth of the industry in the past eight years. For the first nine months of each year since 1911, the number of clear Havana cigars manufactured in the Island City are:

1911	69,787,000
1912	44,986,000
1913	44,078,000
1914	35,997,000
1915	23,320,000
1916	37,038,000
1917	50,180,000

The figures for 1917 show an increase in production over the year 1912 by 5,194,000 cigars. This year's increase over last year's registers a still greater increase in the number of 13,042,000.

Sergeant Eugene F. Page, an Ogdensburg, N. Y., boy, who enlisted in a Canadian regiment and went to the front in France, has "done his bit" in the war. Coming home badly wounded, he has sufficiently recovered to open a cigar store. He purchased the shop of Patrick Lang in Ogdensburg and after renovating and refurnishing the place, he is now prepared to do a good business.

WELL SITUATED NOW

E. A. Condax & Co. Obtain a Large Supply of U usually Good Turkish Tobacco—Reorganization a Step to Prosperity.

Rehabilitated, reorganized, amply financed and po sessing a big supply of excellent Turkish tobacco, A. Condax & Co. now are in a position to increa their business greatly. Arrangements made recent enable them to compete strongly for high honors manufacturing fine cigarettes.

Since "how it happened" is a long story, it suffic to say that E. A. Condax & Co. are well prepar now to go ahead. Difficulties that previously exist have been swept away. For the Condax brand, whi always had a quality reputation, there is a future th seems bright indeed.

Because, primarily, it has been the good fortune E. A. Condax & Co. to acquire a large stock of Tur ish tobacco, enough to last them for years, allowi for a greatly increased output. Part of this tobac is of the crop of 1908. Having been carefully stor it is in prime condition. If put on the market, would be scrambled for; perhaps $4 per pound wou be a low estimate of its value. Some of it, because is exceedingly good, and because extra choice Turk tobacco is correspondingly scarce just now, might sold for $10 a pound.

Amply supplied with unusually good Turkish bacco and having a well equipped factory, men expe enced and expert in cigarette manufacturing can results. E. A. Condax & Co. will engage in the m ufacture of high grade cigarettes on a much lar scale than aforetime. And the Condax standard excellence will be maintained rigidly.

The distribution of Condax cigarettes will be larged and accelerated by a sales force that thoroug covers the entire country.

The factory at 57 West 19th Street, New York being renovated this week, preparatory to starting business in a big way. Basil, Nicholas and Elias C dax will continue to be actively associated with management of E. A. Condax & Co. Other part previously connected with the enterprise, have reti

STRIKE IN MILWAUKEE

Employees in the Cigar Factory of Louis Kindlin & Co. Quit Work When Their Demands Were Refused.

Employees in the cigar factory of Louis Kindlin Co., in Milwaukee, went on strike late Thurs Over 70 men are out, with nine women workers

The employees ask an increase of from 5 to 7 cent. in pay, amounting to about $1 per 1,000 cig and claim they cannot exist and maintain an Am can scale of living on the money they have been e ing. It is said that many cigarmakers have gone other lines because they can make more money work under better conditions.

The strikers met Friday morning and voted to out until they get their demands. They say with Christmas season coming on and a scarcity of ci makers the firm will be forced to make concessio

The trouble started Thursday when a petition an increase was signed by all employees and ha in by a committee. The superintendent turned d the demand and when the committee reported to the employees they laid down their work walked out.

REFUNDS TO TOBACCO MANUFACTURERS

WASHINGTON, October 29.—The Interstate C merce Commission has allowed the following bacco reparations during the past week:

R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. vs. the Sout Railway Co. et al. A refund of $334.59 was allo because of the unreasonable charges collecte four carloads of packing boxes forwarded New Haven, Conn., to Winston-Salem, N. C November and December, 1916.

The Imperial Tobacco Co., Ltd., vs. the Ch peake & Ohio Railway Co. et al. A refun $124.24 was allowed on account of exce charges collected on 24 cars of leaf tobacco warded from Newport News, Va., to Philadel on September 27, 1916.

NEW REVENUE RULINGS

Pertaining to the War Tax—Interpretations of Law That Are of Interest to Tobacco Dealers.

WASHINGTON, October 29.—The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has just published the synopsis of some decisions on questions relating to the War Revenue Act. The gist of decisions pertaining to the tobacco trade is here given:

Floor Tax—Sections 600, 601, 602:

2. Where a corporation operates one or more retail stores and under the same name, but separately as far as bookkeeping and stock keeping are concerned, the corporation's inventory return of stock on hand should include only that in the wholesale department. Where the bookkeeping and stock keeping of the wholesale and retail departments of establishments are kept separate, they will be regarded as if they were separate and distinct departments, and the retail stock will not be subject to the floor tax.

3. Goods shipped and invoiced prior to October 4 are the property of the consignee, and if shipped to a wholesaler are subject to the floor tax. If, however, title is reserved in the manufacturer, he is subject to the manufacturer's tax and the wholesaler is relieved from the floor tax. The time when title passes depends upon the intention of the parties. In the absence of an intention to the contrary, title is assumed to pass from the seller to the buyer upon the delivery of the goods to the carrier.

4. Where a manufacturer consigns his entire product to a retailer, retaining ownership in the same until disposed of by the retailer, the manufacturer is required to make return, under oath, of all goods sold to the retailer from and after October 4, and to enable him to do so he must secure monthly returns from the retailer of the goods sold.

Sales, Excise Taxes On—Sections 600, 601 and 602:

1. Are goods manufactured in the United States and sold to persons in foreign countries subject to the tax?

There is no exemption in favor of goods which are to be exported. The United States Supreme Court in numerous cases has held that such a tax does not constitute a tax on exports or on articles exported within the meaning of the Constitution. "A general tax, laid on all property alike and not levied on goods in course of exportation, nor because of their intended exportation, is not within the constitutional prohibition." (Turpin vs. Burgess, 117 U. S. 504.)

2. In computing the price at which goods are sold may the usual trade discounts be deducted from the price thereof for the purpose of ascertaining the tax?

The amount of tax is determined by the price at which the goods are actually sold by the manufacturer, producer or importer. Hence discounts would be deducted from the list price.

3. Are net or gross sales to be reported? That is, may there be deducted from the sales of each month merchandise which has been sold in a previous month and which is returned during the month in which the report is made?

The merchandise becomes taxable when the manufacturer parts with his title in it, and all taxable goods actually sold should be reported. However, goods which are delivered to the buyer subject to his approval or to other conditions, and the property right to them is reserved to the seller, are not to be reported until the completion of the sale.

5. A manufacturing company disposes of a portion of its output through a selling corporation of which it owns all the capital stock. Is the transfer by the parent company to the subsidiary a sale within the meaning of the act subjecting the parent company to the tax?

The transfer from the manufacturing corporation to the selling corporation is a sale provided the price at which the article is sold or charged to the distributing corporation is no less than is charged to the independent outside distributors under similar conditions. The selling corporation is liable to the floor tax on all articles subject to tax which have been charged and delivered to it prior to October 4, 1917, and thereafter the manufacturing company should pay tax upon delivery of all articles to the selling corporation as upon sales, the price fixed in no case to be less than the price at which the taxable article is sold to independent distributors under similar conditions.

Thirty Days After Passage of Act—Sections 400, 401 and 404:

These sections take effect on the thirtieth day after October 3, viz., November 2, 1917.

Withholding of Tax on Income of Foreign Corporations on and After October 4, 1917:

Paying agents of interest on bonds of domestic corporations owned by foreign corporations not engaged in business in the United States and having no office or place of business therein are required to deduct and withhold the tax of 6 per cent on and after October 4, 1917.

AN EMISSARY OF EL ARABE

Ability may be demonstrated in a thousand ways. Talent is attested through development. Expertness comes, partly, from practice. By sticking stubbornly to a difficult task until he succeeds, a man can prove how competent he is.

W. W. Weeks, Who Works

By what he does, a man best shows where he stands, in a field of special endeavor. By results rather than by time is measured the importance of toil. Whether the labor be for a day, a month, a year or longer, the test of efficiency, the question of value, is answered according to the things accomplished. Though aptitude sometimes may be revealed in making estimates, exactitude is desired in computing returns. A task of magnitude, selling cigars in big quantities, in fact is the work of Weeks.

W. W. Weeks, capable representative of the Benito Rovira Co. isn't exactly like other weeks. On the calendar, his patronymic may bespeak more than one lucky seven day combination. But for him, Monday isn't a headache with blue embroidery. It's a day inaugurating effort that continues until late, Saturday night. Weeks works.

And the work of Weeks helps appreciably to accelerate sales of El Arabe. He prefers to be on the road. He travels much and happily. Because shrewd dealers won't let Weeks go by, without ordering.

Fate made him a native of Jersey City, which naturally developed a desire to travel. Weeks came to New York. Obtaining employment in the grocery house of William A. Leggett, he made good, was promoted and soon had charge of the cigar department. There for five years he continued. Then in 1907, he transferred his allegiance to R. C. Williams & Co., another big New York wholesale grocery firm. Again, in charge of cigar sales he worked up excellent business and otherwise added to the cheerfulness of the situation for six years. Next, in 1913, he appears on the sales force of the Benito Rovira Co.

It is satisfying to be a salesman for the House of Rovira. The goods are all right. The brands have long established and high reputations. The company is well and favorably known from Coast to Coast. But that is not all. The Roviras themselves, though famous cigar manufacturers, are great salesmen. And they know precisely the difficulties a traveler encounters. Years ago, Benito Rovira was described as one of the ablest cigar salesmen in the United States. His sons, J. B. and H. A., make long trips and come back with fine orders. Most capably they cover big stretches of territory. It is a distinction to travel in such company. It is an honor to be a representative of the Benito Rovira Co.

Weeks calls on the trade in New York State, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Ohio. He is making his tour joyfully just now. For he is introducing the reliable El Arabe in a new dress.

FEARFUL OF FAT STEMS

Wisconsin Tobacco Men Are Hoping for Plenty of Indian Summer Days—The Harvest Is Prolonged.

EDGERTON, Wis., October 26.—The week has brought so little weather that would be classed as suitable for the curing of tobacco that growers as well as dealers have commenced to wonder what is likely to be the final outcome of the 1917 crop. The harvest being prolonged until near October, some weeks later than usual, with warm days since so scattering that November will find much of the later tobacco still uncured. If the coming month should give plenty of Indian Summer days, then all right and well. But the average November generally brings heavy freezes that penetrate the interior of the curing barns, and should these overtake us serious damage to the green tobacco will result. The situation, therefore, is not assuring and dealers are fearful there will be plenty of fat stems to contend with later at the delivery of the crop.

Out-of-town buyers continue to frequent the State looking for old stock, unwilling to believe there is little to be found in local warehouses. Another sale of contracts on the 1917 crop is reported by a small dealer.

The shipments out of storage reach 200 cases and three carloads of bundles to all points since last report.—Edgerton Reporter.

"CARRY ON"

Not yet, in its entirety can be told the story of the success achieved in securing a great oversubscription of the second Liberty Loan. Not until the figures, showing what was done by millions of Liberty Bond buyers, are completely totalled, will it be shown how splendidly the American people have responded.

Among those who "did nobly" must be numbered thousands of men in the tobacco industry. The showing made by the energetic committee that represented the tobacco trade in Greater New York, is indeed a cause for satisfaction and congratulation.

But, successful as it was, oversubscription of the second Liberty Loan is not all that is required to win the war. Nor, by buying bonds alone, may the every-day American do his whole duty. Manfully, in other ways besides, we should attest our loyalty.

As the war progresses and war conditions add to difficulties, increase expenses and make inconvenience more acute, devotion to our country should cause us to make other sacrifices if need be, to endure privation cheerfully that the United States more quickly and surely may obtain victory.

Patriotism demands more than lip service. The citizen at home should not be less loyal than the soldier on the battlefield.

THE VALUE OF SILVER.

If you should visit Virginia City or the ancient mining camp of Pioche, Nevada, forgotten these thirty years; if you should stroll into Leadville, Colorado, Park City, Utah, or Wallace, Idaho, you will notice that the ineffaceable smile of the mining man has of late approached half an inch nearer to either ear. This extension of the facial contortion denoting satisfaction is due to the fact that silver after forty years is coming into its own again. In September the insatiable demand of five continents caused silver to come so near to 16 to 1 that Colonel Bryan blew the dust off the manuscript of his once famous Cross of Gold speech.

What does the magic formula of twenty years ago mean, anyway?

When you carried a handful of "iron men" in your southeast pocket three years ago, you really did not have as much money as you thought you had. Three years ago bar silver in the open market was worth 50 cents an ounce. The silver dollar in your pocket contained .70 of an ounce of metallic silver. If you had melted down the dollar and sold the metal at the market price, you would have received just 35 cents. To put it in another way, the value of the silver in the dollar had nothing to do with the value of the coin as money; if Uncle Sam had preferred to cut the disc out of iron or printed the magic words on a piece of paper, the exchange value would have been there just the same. When the government put a bar of silver through the mint machinery, it did the same thing as Villa with the little printing press upon which he printed his currency: it decreed that this piece of silver should be worth not thirty-five but one hundred cents, just as the imprint of the United States Treasury makes a piece of paper worth from one to a few hundred dollars.

It was not always thus. In 1792 Congress decreed that 371¼ grains of silver, properly stamped, should be equal in value to a gold dollar containing 24¾ grains of metallic gold. A given quantity of gold was then worth fifteen times as much as the same quantity of silver.

In 1834 silver became more plentiful. Gold on the other hand, did not increase as rapidly as the world's industrial expansion required, hence Congress cheapened silver by making the gold dollar slightly lighter. But silver remained legal tender. Under the law an ounce of coined silver was worth as much as one-sixteenth of an ounce of gold.

Later in the sixties and early in the seventies Nevada, Colorado and Mexico enormously increased their silver output, while the world's gold production fell off. Recognizing the danger in the changed relationship of gold and silver, Congress in 1873 placed the country on a gold basis and demonetized silver. If this step had not been taken, the country by-and-by would have had all silver and no gold money, and the momentous step was justified by the continuous drop in the price of silver from 1873 until 1916. In 1873 an ounce of silver was worth $1.29; in 1915 it brought only 49 cents; in September, 1917 it passed the dollar mark again and it is liable to stay around a dollar an ounce for several years unless the high price and peace stimulate the Mexican production. "And," says the Sunset, "If silver remains high, half a dozen dead silver camps in the West will come to life again."

A "TASTE OF TOBACCO" IN POETRY.

What is patriotic verse that so little of it is poetry? Poetry must intrigue the imagination through the senses. Perhaps the trouble comes, then, from the fact that we never hear, see, taste, or smell "patriotism," "democracy," "liberty," or any of the staples of the too-ambitious poet-patriot. How refreshing to come upon this definition of "love of one's native land":

It is a certain roof under a certain sky,
And the perfume of the dust in the road.
It is the taste of tobacco and the taste of bread,
The shining of leaves, the odor of the wind,
The familiar noises of the village.
It is that which reminds us of our dead
And makes us desire our children.
It is the color of our life,
It is the savor of our songs,
'Tis the sweet folly
Of reaping what we sow,
The absurd passion
Of having what we love. . . .
It is all that we cannot say
And all that we feel
But can translate
Only in singing.

What does this sound like—the patriotism of complaisant conceit or a love of country sharpened by exile, tested by disaster? The above is our own rough version of lines from a recent poem called "L'Amour de la Patrie," by Emile Cammaerts. Emile Cammaerts is a Belgian.—Collier's.

Patriotism is not a thing that means proclaiming from the housetop "I am a patriot." The war can never be won by millions of citizens shouting their patriotism. Patriotism means active service involving sacrifice.

SINCERE CONGRATULATIONS

To Our Committeemen and Co-Workers:

It is with unmeasured pride that I state that the tobacco industry has acquitted itself in the Liberty Loan campaign just brought to an end in splendid fashion.

Eleventh in the line of American industries in point of trade and commerce, the tobacco industry has fully demonstrated that it is second to none in point of patriotism and fealty to our country.

Having started our compaign with a determination to raise $3,000,000, the quota fairly fixed for our industry according to its commercial size, we exceeded that amount in the first three days of our active work and we have since added nearly $8,000,000, making our total subscriptions $10,800,000, which amount, as compared with the amounts subscribed by industries much larger than ours according to commercial measurement, entitles our industry to a seat of honor among the industries of the Nation.

And it must be remembered that this campaign came to us at a time when the industry was subjected to the severe strain occasioned by the readjustment made necessary by the additional $70,000,000 tax burden imposed upon it by the new Revenue Law. Indeed we may well congratulate ourselves upon the magnificent showing thus made. We may now point with pride to the record made by our industry.

We were all engaged in performing a patriotic duty. Each of us has cheerfully done his bit in response to the Call of the Nation, and no one of us has looked or is looking for any reward, or for any honor or distinction as a result of his labors. The self-satisfaction that we have done our duty to our country will sufficiently compensate us all. But let me at the same time express my genuine gratitude to our Committeemen and to our Captains and Co-Workers, and to each and all of them, for their generous support and co-operation, and for their enthusiastic and untiring labors in making this campaign such a glorious success.

I thank you one and all!

Respectfully yours,

EDWARD WISE, Chairman.

LIBERAL BOND BUYERS

Residents of Cuba Subscribe Fifty Per Cent. More Than the Expected Maximum, and Exceed Porto Rico and Hawaii.

The Republic of Cuba News Bureau announces the Liberty Loan campaign in Cuba resulted in subscriptions from patriotic residents of the island republic in excess of $1,500,000. Both Cuban and American citizens joined enthusiastically in the campaign for the loan, which was conducted from Havana headquarters by Capt. Osgood Smith, Havana and New York attorney, designated by Governor Benjamin Strong of the Second Federal Reserve District to supervise the work. With a Havana committee of Americans and Cubans, organized less than a month ago, Capt. Smith made a canvass of the island republic, and when "Liberty Day" was celebrated on Friday in Havana he was able to assure President Menocal that the million-dollar mark had been passed.

Every bank in Cuba volunteered its services as a depository for loan applications, and the bonds sold ranged in denomination from the small allotment to the Cuban working classes to big subscriptions by "sugar millionaires."

Gratification was expressed at Liberty Loan headquarters here over Cuba's practical sympathy with the cause of her ally. It was pointed out that on returns so far received Cuba's subscription was in excess of that from Porto Rico or Hawaii, though no obligation, save that of patriotic sympathy, attached to any of the Cuban subscribers. Dr. Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, Cuban Minister to the United States, subscribed for $5,000 of the bonds when in New York Wednesday.

MARCELINO PEREZ, JR.

Though recruiting officers rejected him twice, Marcelino Perez, Jr., was determined to serve his country. After going to a hospital to have an operation performed on his nose, he applied again and was enlisted in the Naval Reserve. Numbered among the bluejackets assigned to patrol duty, he made good and was transferred to the U. S. S. Druid as Yeoman. Before his ship sailed he was promoted to be chief Yeoman.

Which shows how the youngest son of Marcelino Perez is "doing his bit." Marcelino, Jr., was in Cuba for eight months, in 1916, being sent there to become better acquainted with the cigar and tobacco business. But his personal preference was for newspaper work. Returning to New York, he was on the staff of the Brooklyn Times for a while. Later he was in the editorial department of the Queens County News at Jamaica, L. I.

But, as soon as war was declared, he was eager to fight for his country.

INSURING U. S. SOLDIERS AND SAILORS.

A division of military and naval insurance of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance has been organized as a part of the Treasury Department and is in active operation. A number of policies on the lives of soldiers have already been issued, aggregating nearly $25,000,000 in insurance. The benefits of the law are available to all of the members of the United States Army, Navy and Nurses' Corps.

A short summary of some of the main features of the law follows:

Premiums for a $10,000 policy begin with $6.30 per month at ages 15, 16, and 17; increase to $6.40 per month for the ages 18, 19 and 20; to $6.50 per month for the ages 21, 22 and 23; to $6.40 per month for the ages of 24 and 25; to $6.70 per month for the ages of 26 and 27; to $6.80 per month for the age of 28; to $6.90 per month for the ages of 29 and 30; to $7 per month for the age of 31, with progressive increases for ages above those given. The minimum amount of insurance that may be taken out is $1,000.

The compulsory allotment to a wife or children, which is separate from the insurance, shall not be less than $15 a month, and shall not exceed one-half of a man's pay. A voluntary allotment, subject to regulations, may be as large as the insured desires, within the limits of his pay.

In addition the government will pay monthly allowances as follows:

Class A.—In the case of a man to his wife (including a former wife divorced) and to his child or children:

(a) If there be a wife but no child, $15.

(b) If there be a wife and one child, $25.

(c) If there be a wife and two children, $32.50, with $5 per month additional for each additional child.

(d) If there be no wife but one child, $5.

(e) If there be no wife but two children, $12.50.

(f) If there be no wife but three children, $20.

(g) If there be no wife but four children, $30, with $5 per month additional for each additional child.

Class B.—In the case of a man or woman, to a grandchild, a parent, brother or sister:

(a) If there be one parent, $10.

(b) If there be two parents, $20.

(c) For each grandchild, brother, sister and additional parent, $5.

In the case of a woman, to a child or children:

(d) If there be one child, $5.

(e) If there be two children, $12.50.

(f) If there be three children, $20.

(g) If there be four children, $30, with $5 per month additional for each additional child.

If the man makes an allotment to certain other dependent relatives the government will also pay them an allowance which may equal the allotment, but this shall not be more than the difference between $50 and the allowance paid to the wife and children.

The increased compensation in case of death runs from a minimum of $20 monthly to a motherless child, or $25 monthly to a childless widow, to a maximum of $75 monthly to a widow and several children. The widowed mother may participate in the compensation.

In case of total disability the monthly compensation runs from a minimum of $30, if the injured man has neither wife nor child living, to a maximum of $75 if he has a wife and three or more children living, with $10 a month extra if he has a widowed mother dependent upon him.

The maximum is enlarged still further, for when the disabled man constantly requires a nurse or attendant $20 monthly may be added. If the disability is due to the loss of both feet, both hands, or total blindness of both eyes, or if he is helpless or permanently bedridden, $100 monthly is granted.

The law contemplates future legislation for re-education and vocational training for the disabled. It gives them full pay and their families the same allowance as for the last month of actual service during the term of re-education.

A DUTCH AND GERMAN AGREEMENT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 25.—The Department of Commerce has just received a report to the effect that as a result of a difference between the Dutch Industrial Commission and the German Zentral Einkaufsgesellschaft, concerning the price which Germany should pay for manufactured tobacco, the Dutch Government has prohibited the exportation of this kind of tobacco to Germany.

How the Tobacco Trade Has Been Affected

Figures Showing the Variations in Imports and Exports

WASHINGTON, October 29.—The many ways in which war may affect commerce is, perhaps, nowhere better exemplified than in the tobacco trade. As an illustration: A year ago during the seven months of the calendar year the United States imported $6,782,997 worth of cigar leaf tobacco, of which almost the entire value, or $6,679,707, represented the value of the importations from the Netherlands. This year not only were the total imports for the corresponding period reduced to $4,725,968, but out of that total only $898,567 came from the Netherlands.

During the month of July we imported 1,893,928 pounds of cigar leaf tobacco at $2,254,542, as against 725,433 pounds at $1,090,704 in July, 1916. Of the July importations in 1916 we received 714,790 pounds, valued at $1,071,449, from the Netherlands; during July last the receipts from that source only amounted to 352,211 pounds at $573,834; from Canada, 2,873 pounds at $2,520; from Cuba, 4,122 pounds at $8,217, and from other countries, 1,534,722 pounds at $1,679,971.

The importations of all other leaf tobacco during the month of July amounted to 1,825,073 pounds at $1,154,629, as compared with 3,531,951 pounds at $1,592,698 for July of 1916. For the seven months there was a decrease in quantity from 26,761,568 pounds to 23,657,782 pounds, accompanied with an increase in price from $11,135,094 to $12,543,776. Cuba, the main source of supply, furnished 1,490,838 pounds at $1,047,277 during the month, as compared with 1,872,227 pounds at $1,000,444 in July, 1916.

Our importations of manufactured tobaccos are on the increase. In July, 1916, we imported cigars and cheroots from the Philippines to the amount of 58,129 pounds at $68,335; this year the quantity from that source was 269,091 pounds at $313,118. The importations from other sources, however, decreased from 43,524 pounds at $259,970 to 30,671 pounds at $197,816. The importations of cigarettes from the Philippines amounted to 441 pounds at $392, and from other sources to 1,737 pounds at $4,302, as against 1,820 pounds at $6,519 last year. In all other manufactures there was a decrease for the month from $13,881 to $8,954, and for the seven months from $94,269 to $86,381. The total value of the manufactures of tobacco imported during July was $524,582, as against $348,705 in 1916, and for the seven months there was an increase from $2,846,887 to $4,096,243.

The total exportations of unmanufactured tobacco during the month of July were reported as 19,340,128 pounds at a value of $3,283,310, as against a total of 58,484,708 pounds at $8,270,119 for July of last year. For the seven months there was a decrease from 239,571,360 pounds at $31,130,570 to 129,444,693 pounds at $23,302,574. It is in these exportations that the greatest changes are seen as the result of the present conflict in Europe. For example: Our largest market in July of last year was found in the United Kingdom, which received a total of 32,192,583 pounds at $5,098,107; in July last the exports to that market only totaled 388,580 pounds at $61,810. Denmark, which, in July, 1916, received 1,652,749 pounds, has dropped entirely out of the market, in so far as July of the present year is concerned. France has increased its importations from 4,629,777 pounds at $333,835 to 5,198,604 pounds at $873,810; the exports to Italy have increased from 2,076,539 pounds at $219,816 to 5,323,123 pounds at $917,404; the exports to the Netherlands decreased from 8,601,317 pounds at $959,799 to 1,359,367 pounds at $178,239. The only other country showing importations of over a million pounds was Argentina, with receipts of 1,212,270 pounds at $172,795, as against 1,161,469 pounds at $203,578 in July, 1916.

Other countries showing up with increased importations of unmanufactured leaf during the month of July, as compared with July of last year, include: Norway, from 289,796 pounds at $35,873 to 792,001 pounds at $137,974; Spain, from 833,071 pounds at $71,507 to 962,895 pounds at $128,529; Switzerland, 386,455 pounds at $58,619, against nothing in July of last year; Mexico, from 12,590 pounds at $1,577 to 218,518 pounds at $29,661; other countries, from 370,477 pounds at $49,172 to 524,384 pounds at $78,086.

Decreased exportations, other than those already referred to during the month, include: Portugal, from 794,205 pounds at $84,855 to 589,746 pounds at $151,971; Sweden, from 35,660 pounds at $7,132 to nothing; Canada, from 759,932 pounds at $179,127 to 734,964 pounds at $160,362; China, from 633,643 pounds at $90,276 to 461,272 pounds at $115,939; Hongkong, from 853,257 pounds at $157,768 to 309,139 pounds at $75,302; British West Africa, from 1,288,432 pounds at $172,616 to 605,562 pounds at $99,533, and French Africa, from 370,477 pounds at $48,922 to 273,248 pounds at $43,276. Japan, with receipts of 339,575 pounds at $76,698, and Australia, 1,570,270 pounds at $290,348 in July of last year, are entirely out of the market for July last past.

Our exportations of cigarettes for the month totaled 192,992,000 at $370,521, as against only 69,553,000 at $139,114 in July of last year. For the seven months there was an increase from 1,617,641,000 at $2,731,781 to 3,934,870,000 at $7,557,466. As usual, our largest market was found in China, the receipts by that country amounting for the month to 141,925,000 at $276,360, and for the seven months to 2,962,753,000 at $5,915,739.

During the month of July there were no exportations of stems and trimmings, of which in July, 1916, we exported 514,246 pounds at $16,156.

Exports of cigars and cheroots during the month amounted to 139,000 at $2,376, as against 193,000 at $2,762 in July of last year. The exports of plug tobacco also decreased from 468,374 pounds at $123,185 to 179,784 pounds at $49,519; and of smoking tobacco from 233,693 pounds at $123,828 to 77,177 pounds at $46,783. Of all other grades of manufactured tobaccos there was an increase from $14,931 to $26,187. While the returns for the month, as above shown, display decreases almost all along the line, still the returns for the seven months show very gratifying increases in our export trade. For example, where the exports of cigars and cheroots for the first seven months of 1916 amounted to 882,000 at $16,245, for the seven months of 1917 they reached a total of 1,427,000 at $32,102. Exports of plug tobacco increased from 2,801,494 pounds at $786,332 to 2,899,405 pounds at $819,379, and smoking tobacco from 1,141,682 pounds at $581,742 to 1,208,882 pounds at $679,961. Of all other grades there was a slight decrease, from $297,448 to $296,814.

The total value of the exports of all classes of manufactured tobacco from the United States in July of last year was $403,820; in July last it was $495,386. For the first seven months in 1915 the value reported was $3,858,563; in the seven months of 1916 it had increased to $4,513,848, and in 1917 there was an increase of almost 100 per cent, the reported value being $9,385,722.

WISCONSIN'S SHOWING

A State Experiment in Obtaining Fire Insurance—A Significant Comparison of Costs—Experience Since 1903.

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 29.—Fire insurance companies that have been making a desperate but apparently losing fight to abolish the Wisconsin fund in which the State insures its own buildings have been confronted with a significant comparison of costs.

The fund has been in existence since 1903. In the fourteen years ending January 1 last the fund collected premiums totaling $609,486, and paid out in losses on State property $532,930.

The premiums were collected on a rate which was 60 per cent of that charged by private companies, making a saving to the State in premiums of over $400,000 in addition to the surplus of $26,100 now on hand. The expense of administering the fund for the fourteen years was but $11,467, or less than 2 per cent of the premiums collected.

The expenses and profits of private insurance companies on the fire insurance business of the whole State of Wisconsin for the last ten years are shown to have been approximately 56 per cent of the premiums collected.

DAVIDSON IS CHOSEN

As Metropolitan District Sales Manager for the Benito Rovira Co.—Will Accelerate Sales of El Arabe.

A. M. Davidson, formerly of the sales force of M. Melachrino & Co., is the new metropolitan district sales manager for the Benito Rovira Co. His big work will be to make New Yorkers better acquainted with El Arabe, which reliable brand, long a favorite in many localities, now is offered to the trade in a Connecticut shade-grown wrapper. It comes in three popular sizes. And "the prices are right." On its merits, deserving a bigger distribution in Greater New York, El Arabe is hailed as a winner.

And Davidson has a record as a trade getter. Confident that he can induce many dealers to see how desirable the brand is, Davidson plans to make a campaign worth while in behalf of El Arabe.

That there will be a notable acceleration of El Arabe sales is not doubted by any one who knows Davidson.

NOT AN EXCUSE FOR EXEMPTION.

Ownership of a hotel does not constitute sufficient cause to exempt a man from service in the new National Army, according to a recent ruling of a district draft board at Harrisburg, Pa. The case was that of Abraham Moyer, proprietor of the Mansion House, Watsontown, Pa., who claimed exemption, asserting that his hotel, one of three in the town, is necessary for the welfare of the community. Local citizens, however, objected to the district board, saying that two hotels were enough for the town, and the board refused to exempt Moyer.

The Union News Co., having cigar stand privileges in the stations of the New York Central Railroad and the N. Y., N. H. & Hartford Railroad, increased prices on Royal Nestor cigarettes, Egyptian Straights, St. Leger little cigars, and Between the Acts, from 10 cents to 12 cents, Monday a week ago. The two-cent increase caused some surprise as the average consumer expected the general increase would be one cent. A peculiar feature of the Union News Co. is that they do not sell Lucky Strike cigarettes although they have repeated requests for them.

Detectives are still looking for auto bandits who have committed the boldest hold-up yet in Cleveland, and in which a cigar merchant and his customer were the victims. The merchant was J. T. Martin, 1102 Superior avenue. The robbery occurred early in the evening as the crowds were going into the theatres. The loot amounted to $150, taken from the store, and $140, taken from the customer. T. J. Martin, a brother of the proprietor, entered the store while the robbers were relieving their victims at the point of revolvers, and he, too, lost several articles of value.—Tobacco News.

PIPES IN THE MAKING

The manufacturing process which every ipe must go through are many, but they are omparatively simple as seen in the factory f L. & H. Stern Co. In general, the methods ere are representative of pipe manufactur-ig everywhere. Every pipe, from the one nat sells at ten cents to the most expensive, oes through thirty-five different processes efore it leaves the factory. This is not quite s complicated as it seems, for many of the rocesses are very similar, varying only in ome minor detail. All but two or three are one by electrically operated machinery, only he final inspection, some parts of staining nd packing being done by hand. Consider-ig these operations in groups, there are the utting and shaping machines; those that ore the bowls and stem holes; the sand-apering lathes, and the machines for stain-ng and polishing.

The wood comes to the shop cut in rough locks. Twenty-five automatic turning athes, run by electricity, take these blocks nd shape them into bowls of varying sizes nd designs. Then comes the boring of holes or stems. Between thirty-five and forty nachines do this in the Stern factory, all un-ler electric power.

The war has so raised the cost of briar that pipes of this wood are now in the luxury class. There is a big demand, however, for well-colored dark pipe at a moderate price, and to satisfy this market the Stern Com-pany has originated a special staining process. The bowl is subjected to a heating, staining treatment under electrical force, which produces the uneven coloring and tones of briarwood. This process has re-sulted in a pipe, moderate in cost, that has proved its popularity by wide sales.

South Africa, Russia, China, Europe, the entire world enjoys its smoke, and the odds are great that it is through an American-made pipe. From the Stern factory ship-ments go to all quarters of the globe. Freak styles are made up largely for foreign trade: Queer bowls carved in the shape of a man's head, others to represent a pistol or any other fantastic idea. Americans seem more con-servative in their tastes, liking the plain un-adorned bowl best. More than five hundred different style pipes have been made by this one concern at one period or another.

An interesting feature of the Stern fac-tory is its system of keeping the air clear. In this it has shown itself to be heartily in sympathy with a growing number of dust-producing industries which have adopted blower systems of special types recommend-ed by safety experts and organizations whose researches have qualified them to ad-vise to advantage on industrial health meas-ures. Each of the several floors of this progressive establishment is equipped with blowers which absorb the wood dust, draw-ing it up to the roof, where it is stored and sold to a chemical company. By these means the factory is kept clean and healthful, and an otherwise useless product made to yield revenue.

Formerly blowers and all other machines were run by steam power, but recently, after an investigation of costs, a change was made to electricity, the New York Edison Co. sup-plying the current for motors totaling 30 horsepower and 90 incandescents.—The Edison Monthly.

As reported by The Americas, "during the calendar year of 1916 Cuba's total foreign trade amounted to $604,849,629—imports being $248,278,279 and exports $356,571,350."

The total increase of the value of merchandise exported in 1916 over that exported in 1915 is $102,279,000 (28.7 per cent) as will be seen by the following table:

	Value.		Difference in 1916.
	1915.	1916.	Absolute.	Per Cent.
Raw sugar	$193,477,000	$266,615,000	$73,138,000	27.4

tober 1 were 349,936,059 pounds, as against 268,129,978 pounds on the corresponding date of last year. Maryland shows an increase from 10,644,472 to 18,226,868 pounds. Eastern Ohio (export) from 1,890,371 to 1,939,089. Perique, Louisiana, shows an increase from 360,473 to 404,196. This is, however, below the returns for the corresponding date of 1915, which were 503,022 pounds. Of all other cigar types the returns show 262,705,269 pounds on hand, as compared with 270,275,297 pounds on October 1 of last year. New England tobacco, including Connecticut, shows a slight decrease, from 54,528,973 to 54,040,903; this includes broad leaf, Havana seed and shade grown. New York shows a slight decrease, from 3,989,282 to 3,088,689 pounds. Pennsylvania, which in October 1, 1915, was 105,460,066 pounds, decreased in 1916 to 79,294,496 pounds, and in 1917, on the same date, to 76,502,712 pounds. Ohio was 64,378,753 pounds, as compared with 59,913,485 pounds on October 1, 1916. This, however, is a material decrease from the amount on hand October 1, 1915, which was reported as 74,329,126 pounds. Wisconsin, which on October 1, 1915, showed stock on hand of 78,891,003 pounds, fell to 59,783,228 pounds on October 1 of last year and still further to 53,050,557 pounds on October 1 last. Similar decreases are shown for Georgia and Florida stocks, which on October 1, 1915, were reported as 8,515,339, October 1, 1916, showed 7,697,077, while October 1 last showed 6,298,105 pounds. Porto Rico was reported at 4,842,631, and all other domestic at 502,219 pounds.

In addition to the forgoing the returns show that the quantity of imported types on hand October 1 was 50,672,536 pounds. On October 1 of last year the report showed 58,290,911 pounds, and on the same date in 1915, 63,658,729 pounds.

The Decimal System Is Advantageous

Jos. P. Whitwell, president of the North Star State Tobacco Co., of St. Paul, thus voices a demand for "an efficient American system for marketing American merchandise":

"In these days when the added war tax is forcing manufacturers to make many changes in the size and style of packing their merchandise, and when the government of our country requires the services of so many of our experienced men from our factories and our offices the question of conservation and of efficiency is of necessity brought to the mind of the business man more strongly than at any time in the past. We may safely assume that much of the trouble in the offices of wholesale and retail merchants arises from the fact of a lack of uniformity in prices and method of billing merchandise.

"The tobacco business especially is a striking example of the accuracy of this statement, as is easily made manifest when the statement is made that tobaccos are billed to the wholesale merchant by the manufacturer by the gross at prices ranging from $5.00, $5.25, $5.76, $6.10, $10.90, $11.52, $11.96 and at many intermediate prices per gross and all the way up as high as $20.00, $25,00 and $30.00 per gross, which, while apparently simple in itself, makes an almost insurmountable obstacle in the training of new office help and an absolutely impossible accomplishment even for old and trained help to memorize all prices when it is remembered that while the wholesale merchant buys all such merchandise as smoking tobacco and other package goods by the gross as above stated, he must in turn bill them all out at prices figured by the dozen and the half dozen to the small and the large retail dealer.

"The system of billing merchandise by the gross and the dozen is old, and like many other things, that is its only merit, for it is unscientific and entirely out of accord with our money system.

"How gladly will merchants, both wholesale and retail, welcome the day when units of ten and one hundred will be adopted in the packing of all merchandise, in the quoting of prices and in the preparing of printed price lists.

"At this time when tobacco manufacturers are perforce changing the size and style of their packings and also the prices of all their merchandise may it not be the psychological moment and the wise thing for them to consider the packing of their tobaccos in cartons of ten and twenty packages and in cases of ten cartons? The result is obvious that if I can buy merchandise at a list price of $4.00 per hundred or per case I know immediately, and the merest tyro in billing would know also, that the billing price would be $4.00 per case, 40c. per carton, 4c. per package. Should the price be $6.50 per case, immediately the result is known and that the billing price would be $6.50 per case, 65c. per carton, 6½c. per package and no mental gymnastics would be required or loss of time involved in figuring a gross and dozen system of merchandise into a decimal system of money.

"We have already excellent examples of the desirability of this system in the instance of the P. Lorillard Co. of New York City, who now are billing the well known brand of plug chewing tobacco, "Climax," at 24c. per plug, $2.40 per box of ten plugs, $24.00 for ten boxes or $240.00 for one hundred boxes. Also in the instance of Weyman-Bruton Co., also of New York City, who pack their well known brand of Copenhagen Snuff in rolls or cartons of ten packages to the roll and ten rolls to the case, thereby giving a simple billing price of $400 for one hundred cases, $40.00 for ten cases, $4.00 for one case, 40c. for one roll, 4c. for one package.

"This may seem a small matter to the initiate at the first glance but to the office man the advantage will immediately become apparent. May we not look to some of the larger corporations or up to date tobacco manufacturers who have made their own offices so efficient and effective, to add to the efficiency of the office of every wholesale and retail merchant throughout our entire country, and to pioneer the way of all tobacco manufacturers, into the day when we may see all package tobaccos packed and sold in units of ten and hundred packages, thereby making our merchandising system conform with our money system; also adding our efforts to those of the government for efficiency, economy, standardized merchandise, machinery and system, for by such a system we could reduce office work by at least twenty per cent and enter upon a truly scientific method of marketing our products.

"I do not doubt but that when the benefits of the system adopted by tobacco manufacturers become known it would quickly be the means of inducing manufacturers of all other forms of merchandise to adopt the same system, so that we should quickly see the manufacturers of canned foods quoting a price of $12.50 per hundred, $2.50 per case of twenty cans, $1.25 per half case of ten cans or 12½c. per can, and there would be no loss of time or waste of mental effort or the necessity of looking through innumerable price lists. Following out the same system a little further the merchant would require the farmer or dealer to furnish him eggs packed in containers holding ten eggs and in cases holding ten containers so that a quotation of $6.00 per hundred would immediately convey to the mind of the enquirer that the price of one egg was 6c. and of one container 60c. in the same manner that a quotation from a merchant to a customer today of $6.50 per hundred pounds of sugar conveys instantly to her mind the fact that one pound would cost 6½c. or ten pounds, 65c. What good purpose could possibly be served today if a merchant were to tell his customer that sugar was selling at $9.36 per gross pounds or that she could purchase one dozen pounds for 78c. and how long would he last.

"As one who feels that much good, much economy, much simplicity, much efficiency, and much accuracy and speed can be derived from a system of merchandising based on units ten and one hundred I personally appeal to every tobacco manufacturer to carefully consider and to adopt such a system at this time when so many necessary changes are being made. And in case they approve of this plan I would suggest that every retail and wholesale dealer should take some steps to insure its adoption in this and all other lines of business."

REGARDING THE OUTLOOK

Business along the line is still picking up. The pessimist's prediction that the retailers would not hold out on increased prices is not made so confidently as before. While it is a fact that several dealers in the city are cutting prices, such a condition was expected. But the price cutters are in the minority.

While American manufacturers, with few exceptions, will not get out holiday packings, imported packings will be abundant. An excellent sale on Christmas goods of the imported variety is anticipated.

Manufacturers and salesmen returning from the West and South this week state that conditions are anything but hopeless. That the future holds only good things, is the verdict of the average cigar man. Discussion on increasing the price on cigars is heard. Several large manufacturers have jumped prices on their brands without hesitation. And the retailers and jobbers have accepted the raise without quibbling. There is some talk that dealers in certain districts stated they would prefer smaller sizes rather than an increase in prices. Usually, however, the opinion is that reducing sizes is not the proper way to meet conditions; "raising prices is the only thing to do," many say.

Strikes are still simmering throughout the city. The Cigar Makers' Union is continuing the campaign to organize all New York shop

Prices of tobacco continue to rise. So do the cost of cigar boxes. This is used as strong argument that manufacturers must sen the prices up without delay. "The sooner th better," is the slogan. The average New Yor manufacturer this week could foresee prosper ity. Of course there were a few who looke at the dark side of the situation. But cheerful ness predominated.

INCREASED POSTAGE

Don't forget that increased postage rates on letter and postal cards will go into effect on November 2 The rate on letters, except drop letters, will be thre cents for each ounce, instead of two cents as now Drop letter postage will be two cents. Souvenir posta cards will require a two-cent stamp. The presen Government postal card bearing a one-cent stamp must have a one-cent stamp added.

All letters which do not bear the three-cent stamp will be returned to the writer for an additional cent in case the sender's name is known. If the sender's name is unknown the letter will be dispatched to its destination and the addressee must pay the deficient postage.

Letters addressed for delivery in the following named foreign countries will on and after November 2 be subject to the rate of three cents an ounce instead of two cents: Bahamas, including Fortune Island and Inagua; Canada, Cuba, Barbados, British Guiana, British Honduras, Dominican Republic, Dutch West Indies, including Aruba-Bonaire, Curacoa, Saba, St. Eustatius, and the Dutch part of St. Martin; England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Leeward Islands, Mexico, Newfoundland, New Zealand, Panama and Shanghai City, China.

The postage rate on letters for foreign countries other than those named above remains as at present, five cents for the first ounce or fraction thereof, and three cents for each additional ounce or fraction thereof.

Postal cards and post cards, private mailing cards, for all foreign countries will be subject to two-cent postage unless they fulfill the conditions for prints, in which case they will be mailable for one cent each. Cards which bear no more writing or typewriting than is authorized upon printed matter will be subject to the one-cent rate as prints.

WHEN STAMP TAXES BECOME EFFECTIVE.

WASHINGTON, October 29.—Collectors of Internal Revenue have just been notified as follows, relative to the dates on which certain stamp taxes become effective:

"You are advised that Title VIII, Schedule A, Act of October 3, 1917, imposing stamp taxes upon bonds of indebtedness, debentures or certificates of indebtedness, bonds of indemnity and surety, capital stock issues, capital stock sales or transfers, produce sales or exchanges or boards of trade, drafts, checks and promissory notes otherwise than payable at sight or on demand, conveyances, deeds, instruments conveying lands, tenements or other realty, entry of goods at custom house, entry for withdrawal of goods from customs bonded warehouses, passage tickets, proxies, powers of attorney, and parcel post packages, becomes effective on and after December 1, 1917.

"The additional tax of 5 cents per pack upon playing cards, imposed under sub-division 13 of Schedule A, became effective on and after October 4, 1917, but this additional tax attaches only to playing cards manufactured or imported and sold, or removed for sale, on and after that date, and is to be paid by the manufacturers or importers.

"This additional tax does not apply to tax-paid stocks in the hands of wholesale or retail dealers, and such dealers may sell all cards tax-paid at 2 cents under the original Act of August 28, 1894, which they had on hand on October 4, without incurring liability to the additional tax of 5 cents per pack."

World Sugar Production and Consumption

The United States is the world's greatest consumer of sugar, despite the fact that the per capita consumption has decreased about 10 per cent. as the result of the high prices. A compilation by The National City Bank of New York shows that the consumption of sugar in the United States for the fiscal year 1917 was but 82 lbs. per capita, against 89 lbs. in 1914 (the year preceding the war). The total quantity consumed in 1917 was, however, 8½ billion lbs. and we also exported 1¼ billion lbs.., or twenty-five times as much as in the year before the war.

The bank's compilation shows that the world's sugar production is now about 12 per cent. below that of the year preceding the war. Beet sugar production in Europe has fallen 43 per cent., but cane production in the tropics has increased about 25 per cent. The beet sugar of Europe, which was 18½ billion lbs. in the sugar year 1912-13, was but 10½ billion lbs. in 1916-17, and the world cane production, which was a little more than 20 billion lbs. in 1912-13, was over 25 billion lbs. in 1916-17; world production of cane and beet sugar in 1913-14 was 42 billion lbs.; in 1916-17, 37 billion lbs. Beets produced one-half of the world's sugar prior to the war, but in 1916-17 supplied only one-third of the world's total.

In the United States and its Island possessions there has been a rapid increase in production. In every one of the sugar areas under the American flag—Porto Rico, Hawaii, the Philippines, and the cane and beet fields of continental United States—there has been a marked increase, the aggregate product of these areas having grown from about 4 billion lbs. in 1912-13 to practically 5 billions lbs. in 1916-17. The share of our consumption drawn from foreign countries has fallen from 75 per cent. in 1897 (twenty years ago) to 48 per cent. in 1917.

In consumption of sugar the United States stands at the head of the list of the world countries, our total consumption being 8½ billion lbs. in the fiscal year 1917, against approximately 5 billions in Germany, 5 billions in the United Kingdom, and 2 billions in France, the figures for the European countries being those for normal years. Our per capita consumption, however, is less than that of certain other countries, Denmark's consumption being 93 lbs. per capita, England 90, United States 82, Germany 75, Norway and Sweden 60, Netherland 73, France 40, Russia 30, Spain 15 and Italy 10. About 25 per cent. of our consumption is drawn from our own fields, 27 per cent. from our Islands, and 48 per cent. from foreign countries, chiefly Cuba. The value of the sugar entering continental United States was, in the fiscal year 1914, $155,000,000 and in 1917 $348,000,000, the average import price per pound (including that from the Islands) having been, in 1914, 2.3c., and in 1917, 4.6c.

Our exports of sugar have grown very rapidly during the war, having been, in 1914, 50 million lbs., in 1915, 550 millions and in 1917 1,250 million lbs., the value of the exports increasing from less than $2,000 in 1914 to over $77,000,000 in 1917. Of the 1,250 million lbs. exported in 1917, 450 millions went to France, about 150 millions to Great Britain, 50 millions to Italy, 250 millions to neutral Europe and about 150 million lbs. to South America.

The world's chief producers of cane sugar are Cuba, India, Java, the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands, and Porto Rico; and the chief producers of beet sugar are Germany, Russia, Austria-Hungary, France and the United States, Cuba, from which we draw our chief imports, is now the world's largest producer, her crop in the sugar year 1916-17 having been 6,730,000,000 lbs., India 5,882,000,000, Java 3,575,000,000, Hawaii 1,288,000,000 and Porto Rico 1,006,000,000 lbs., while German's beet sugar production in 1913-14 (the latest peace year) was 6,093,000,000, Russia, 3,898,000,000, Austria-Hungary 3,774,000,000, France 1,749,000,000, the United States in 1916-17 1,646,000,000 lbs. of beet sugar and 613,000,000 lbs. of cane.

The world's sugar production, as far as can be statistically stated was in 1870 5,000,000,000 lbs., in 1880 7,000,000,000, in 1890 13,000,000,000, in 1900 20,000,000,000, in 1910 33,000,000,000, in 1914 42,000,000,000 and in 1917 37,000,000,000 lbs., this fall off in 1917 being due to a reduction of product in the beet fields of the European countries at war. Our own consumption has about kept pace with this rapid growth in world production, since we consumed in 1870 23 per cent. of the world's output and in 1917 21 per cent. of the world total.

THE ADVANTAGE OF THE CONSIGNMENT PLAN

Shown by a United States Supreme Court Decision

(Copyright by Elton J. Buckley.)

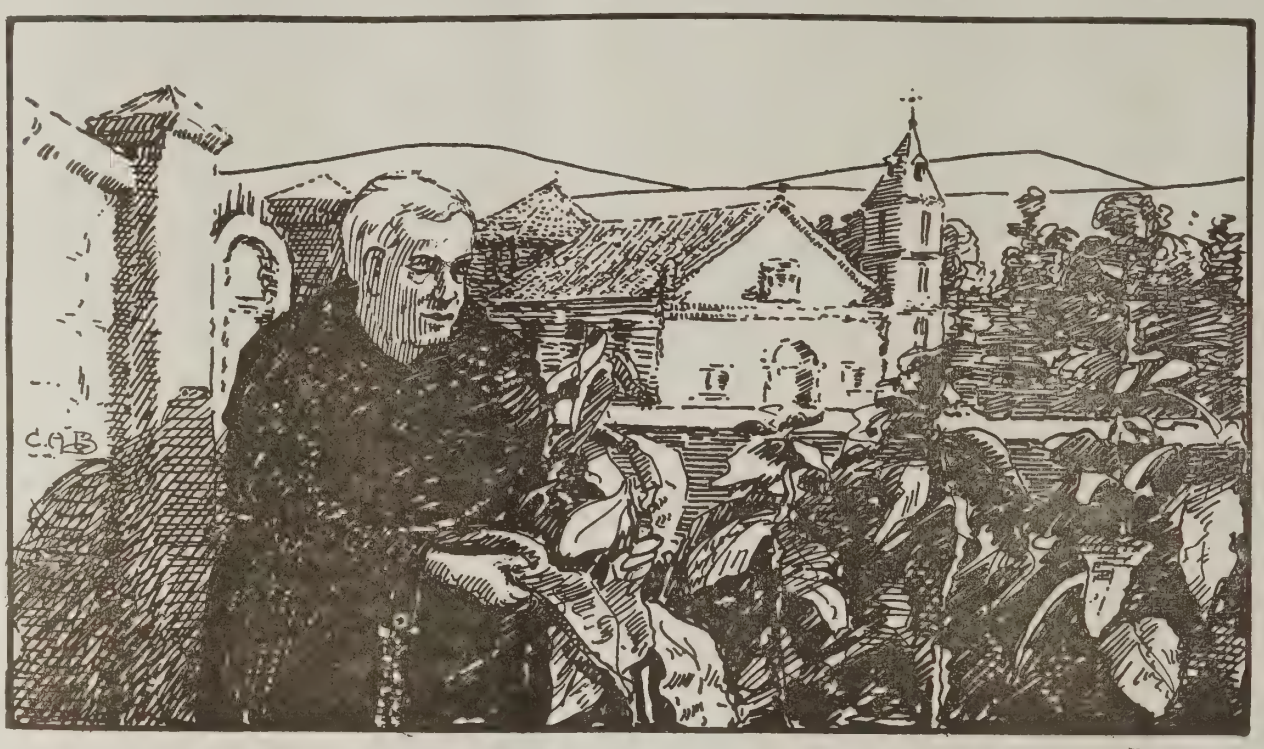
Few business men know, apparently, that the United States Supreme Court has legalized a plan of consigning goods to a buyer instead of selling them outright, which plan leaves the title to the goods in the seller, and permits him to take them back in case the buyer goes into bankruptcy or gets into trouble.

The decision in which this was handed down was Ludvigh vs. Woolen Co., 231 U. S. 522, recently decided. The plan can be best explained by a little history of that case. A manufacturer had a chance to sell a certain dealer, in whom, apparently, he had no confidence. Instead of selling him outright, therefore, he devised a plan which he thought would enable him to play safe. He consigned goods to the dealer upon the following arrangement, which I quote from the history of the case:

> Goods were to be consigned to H. & Son, the title of the merchandise, or its proceeds, to remain in the Woolen Co. until fully accounted for, all bills of such consigned goods to be payable to the Woolen Co. and accounts of sales to be rendered to that company at least once a month. The goods shipped were not kept separate from other goods in H. & Co.'s store, but the Woolen Co.'s tags were left on them. The H.'s were also to give security to protect the Woolen Co. from any failure to perform the contract; the profit of the H. firm was to be the difference between the invoice prices and selling prices of the goods; they were to have a trade discount for payment within a certain period, and any increase in profits made by varying the terms of trade was to go to them. The H. Co. was to hold and care for the merchandise as the property of the Woolen Co., the title thereto or proceeds therefrom being vested in the latter company and the merchandise being at all times under its control. The title to the merchandise was to pass directly from the Woolen Co. to the purchaser. The property was to be insured for the benefit and in the name of the Woolen Co. The H. Co. agreed to sell the merchandise to such persons as they thought were of good credit and business standing, collect for same in behalf of the Woolen Co. and immediately pay over to the Woolen Co. any amount so collected, less the H. concern's profits. The H. firm guaranteed the payment of all bills by people it had sold to and agreed to pay such bills itself if its customers did not pay them.

In other words, the Woolen Co. shipped the H. firm goods precisely as it would have done had the transaction been one of bargain and sale. The H. concern, doing business under its own name, put them in stock, exactly as if they were its own, and sold them over the counter or through salesmen, exactly as if they were its own. Whether it gave receipts in its own name or the name of the Woolen Co. is not stated. When a bill was paid the H. concern held out the difference between the invoice price to them and its own selling price, and remitted the balance to the Woolen Co.

I would have believed that this scheme was uncertain—very likely turned down by the courts. Yet here is the United States Supreme Court upholding it. Before I tell what that court said about it, let me tell what happened under it.



The H. Co. got into difficulties and went into bankruptcy. The Woolen Co. swooped down under its agreement and took back several hundred dollars' worth of goods on the ground that title was still in itself. Suit was begun by the trustee in bankruptcy to get this back, but when the matter got into the Supreme Court, that court said the scheme was legal and the company did not have to give the goods back. This is the core of the Supreme Court's decision:

> We find that the agreement was really one of bailment for the purpose of sale, with the right to return the unsold goods. There is nothing illegal in such contracts when made in good faith. If there are no other circumstances controlling the situation and establishing the fact that this contract was a mere cover for a fraudulent or illegal purpose, there is nothing in its terms operating to transfer the title to the goods of the H. Co. or to prevent the return of those unsold to the Woolen Co., or their being retaken by the latter company if the H. Co. went into bankruptcy.
> We are unable to find that the contract was either actually or constructively fraudulent, and hold that it was what it purported to be, a consignment arrangement with the net proceeds to be accounted for to the consignor and with the right to return the unsold goods.

It has been recognized that this almost makes some new law, and I find other cases decided subsequent to it emphasizing very strongly that such agreements must show all the earmarks of the utmost good faith or they will not be upheld. For instance, the United States District Court of New York recently had a case in which a shoe jobber sold a retailer under this scheme. But the retailer did not account for the proceeds, in fact, did not do any of the things which would have established the jobber as the real owner, and when asked for a financial statement he included the "consigned" goods among his assets. Of course, the court held that the whole thing was a subterfuge.

This is really nothing more than appointing a dealer your agent. It is an absolutely safe way of controlling your goods until they reach the consumer, and of safeguarding them not only against the possible bankruptcy of the buyer, but also against the chance that the buyer may cut the price and so upset the trade. A dealer to whom goods are consigned in this way must sell as the consignor dictates. This is respectfully referred to manufacturers who think there is no way in which they can prevent price cutting on their goods.

One particular thing about the man who never "makes good" otherwise is his ability to "trump" up excuses showing why he could not. The man who tells you he will meet you at a certain hour and is not there will see you next day with a blanket of finely woven excuses which would do justice to an attorney attempting to get a new trial.

Jobbers Doing Fairly Well—Retailers Having Rather More Than the Usual Trade—Price Advances Have Not Retarded Business—Wm. Cluff Co. Has Excellent Reports to Make Concerning the Valkyrie Brand—Tom Keene and Tom Moore Are Favorites in Nevada.

San Francisco, October 24.—Some of the local jobbers are inclined to think that retailers, to a certain extent, are holding up orders, more or less, with the idea of letting the jobbers carry most of the goods until the operations of the tax law become a little clearer. Some jobbers are also curtailing operations somewhat for the same reason. Most of the wholesale houses on the Coast are, however, reported to be busy, and the retailers are having rather more than the usual Fall trade.

Not a great deal has yet been given out as to publicity campaigns for Fall, and some men in the trade are inclined to think that the present season will not be a very active one in the matter of big promotion movements.

Something like anarchy prevails in the matter of prices. The San Francisco Retail Cigar Dealers' Association cigarette prices are being fairly well adhered to by most of the local dealers, though the big chain store people still work along their own lines. The former five-cent cigars are still all up in the air as to price, though it now seems that all lines costing upwards of $37.50 per thousand will move more or less gradually up into a higher class, while going to the trade below that figure will continue to retail at five cents.

J. S. Miller, of Miller & Hogan, prominent cigar dealers of Reno, Nev., has been visiting in San Francisco this week. He reports that the boom in the mining sections has given Nevada a good start for the Fall.

Rosman & Ichelson have bought out the Giles W. Quarles cigar store at 199 Eddy street.

The cigar business of Ralph Calderwood at 492 Seventh street, Oakland, has been sold to E. D. White, who took possession a few days ago.

A. Mussatti, of the Southern California Cigar Manufacturing Company of Los Angeles, has been in San Francisco this week calling on the local trade.

Ehrman Bros. & Co. have advanced the retail price of Philadelphia Hand Made, Havana Ribbon and Pippin cigars to 6 cents, the additional cent being intended to permit of the maintenance of quality and quantity and at the same time meet the increased cost due to the new tax. Generally speaking, the trade is meeting the new price without complaint, and sales are not expected to be restricted at all on account of the advance.

H. H. Solomon, traveling representative of Ehrman Bros. & Co., San Francisco wholesalers, has just returned from a very successful trip along the California coast counties. He reports that both retailers and consumers in the sections visited are beginning to realize that the advances in prices are a necessity.

I. I. Hess, general western representative of A. Santaella & Co., with headquarters with Ehrman Bros. & Co., in this city, is now in San Francisco visiting the local trade in company with the salesman of Ehrman Bros. & Co.

Fred Peterson, of the city sales force of H. L. Judell & Co., is ill this week, but is expected to be about again in a few days.

"Mannie" Cohen, traveling representative of H. L. Judell & Co., of this city, and W. W. Richardson, factory representative of the General Cigar Co., are out in the Nevada territory visiting the trade and featuring the Tom Keene and Tom Moore cigars. The manufacturers have modified the size of the Tom Moore cigar in order to preserve the quality and at the same time permit the line to go to the consumer at the old established price. Mr. Cohen reports that the Nevada dealers are doing a good business and are accepting the changes following on the new tax law as a necessary part of the "war for democracy."

Milton Glass, of the H. L. Judell & Co. force, is spending the week calling on his trade friends in the various towns of the San Joaquin Valley.

Charles W. McCormick, whose middle name is alleged to be "Webster," the western representative of Y. Pendas & Alvarez, left San Francisco a few days ago for a trip over a good portion of his territory. He is now visiting Sacramento, Stockton and other central California towns, from which section he will go north in a few days for short visits at various points in Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, Utah and Colorado.

Jot C. Wood, of the cigar department of the Wm. Cluff Co., reports that the Valkyrie brand is now repeating in very fine style, while the demand for the El Wadora is improving every day. The department is still short on San Felice cigars, which seem to sell faster than the factory can get them out to this territory.

Cohen & Cox have bought out the wholesale and manufacturing cigar and tobacco business of Mano & Demichelli at Santa Cruz, Cal.

V. L. Harron has opened a live retail cigar and tobacco store at Eureka, Cal., the center of California's redwood lumber district.

J. G. Bartosch, a Redding, Cal., retailer, has been drafted into the United States Army.

Manning & Kahn, at Hartford, tobacco growers and packers, have opened their warehouse at North Main and School streets. The firm expects to pack at least 3,000 cases of tobacco this winter, besides the Shadegrown raised on their own forty-acre plantation this summer.

Up State Dealers Discover the Reason

But a Microscope Assists One to Ascertain a Cigar Man's Profits—What Shows on the Horizon—The Cost of Two Detain and Hinders—When Strawberries Bloom in Texas—A Pound Package Revival—Some Scotch-Irish Sarcasm—Lorillard Christmas Cigarettes—"Going Over the Top" at Albany

New York State Capitol District,
October 29, 1917.

Chu Chin Chow was a romantic robber, with a Diamond Jim Brady taste for things valuable, and with a Jesse James reputation in the acquirement thereof. Three hundred people are required to tell the tale of how Chu Chin perpetually evaded the coolie cop who leaned against the scenery of Chop and Lee streets, Hsucthowfu, on the Pukow Central & Hudson River R. R. And, somewhere back-stage, all doubled up in a keg plainly marked "Nails—Drive Slowly," there you'll find Von Igel and Bolo Pasha, the popular Weber and Fields of the German secret police.

Chin Chow may eventually land in Occoquan, the Washington workhouse where political prisoners like Suffragist Alice Paul is confined on chicken gumbo and chop suey.

But the arrest will not occur until the close of the third act, ladies and gentlemen, so retain your $2.20 seats until the stage manager can arrange a perfectly satisfactory climax!

Capitol District retailers could very easily understudy this Chu Chin Chow stuff without closing their doors to look down the street to the corner of Chop and Lee, where standeth the China-Cop.

Simply recast Chu Chin as the drug trade. Have the mob scene of 300 folk for the customers. Make the chink policeman into the revenue revision. Convert the funny Imperial spies to cigar dealers.

Then stage the whole show right here, where it really and actually is. Keep the jail open, like a cabaret, until it's filled to the roof with Chu Chin Chows.

Because, if you don't do this, Mister Sheriff, the everyday, night and Sunday, all-the-time legit retailers of cigars, cigarettes and tobacco in this saith Capitol District will perish from the earth.

Cut-prices, down to even two per cent. net, are once more rampant, and the trade cannot survive. Don't wait for the curtain.

Ring it again. We-uns an' you-uns have simply got to raise the dough in order to mix the breadstuffs for still another Liberty Loan. And it is now one of the afternoon clock in peaceful Philadelphia. Last Saturday is the day. Market street is the place. While the cast of characters include Charlie Eisenlohr, president; Louie Eisenlohr, vice-president; Harry Dietsch, keeper of the key; R. G. Cunningham, quillman; C. Harry Eimerbrink, boss-of-the-factoree; and James T. Stuart, Esquire, genial guardian of the grips, both gladstonian and chesterfieldian.

Then the plot. What is it? Simply this: "Terms, same as before. Our prices to the retail trade on Cinco cigars will be as follows: londres, $43 per M; conchas and panetelas, $42 per M; retail 6 cents. It is important that you tear off the 5-cent straight flap that is attached to the boxes of the stock you have on hand."

Add this triologue: "These prices were actuated by absolute necessity, and are due entirely to the advanced prices of materials, higher manufacturing costs, and the application of the new war tax."

There's a reason, you see, and this is it: "We fully believe the trade is aware of the fact that for two years past Pennsylvania and Wisconsin and Havana tobaccos have been selling at record high prices, and that the high prices that prevailed on Sumatra were further increased by the unusually high freight rates and war risk insurance. Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Havana and Sumatra tobaccos (there's the secret Cinco blend, chemists) are now worth double their former prices; therefore, it is apparent that the war tax is only a small factor in our increased costs, and that it is the increased costs of materials, packages, lithographs, etc., that contribute the most toward making this advance a necessity."

So, men, when joyous Jimmy gets in from Syracuse, or somewhere else in York State, give 'im an order for Cincos which will be big enough to prove you approve of the Eisenlohr decision.

In the orchestra was Mischa Elman (just like that!) and Jascha Heifetz (sold out!) who play the hymn of hate to one another on their Russ violins, to the accompaniment of the Nachez version of Vivaldi's G minor concerto, with both organ and piano (only the Chickering used).

Therefore, 'twas, the Dearstyne Brothers Tobacco Co., Albany distributors for the Bayuk Brothers, also of Phillie, announced a similar-to-cinco advance upon the Havana Ribbon, making that brand a straight six-cent cigar, too.

Next, came a communique from jobber L. W. Killeen of Schenectady, telling about a $5 or $6 boost on Bolds. This, then, puts the Bobrow Brothers leader in the same six-cent division.

Just so soon as the others get the breeze of this big wind in Ireland the U. S. mints are to discontinue the coinage of five-cent nickels entirely, making the new cigar-coin somewhat like the Turkish piaster.

Now, gentlemen, stop crowding! There'll be a pile of room inside to hear Reinald Werrenrath (seats now) in his famed song recital of Belasco's "Polly with a Past."

By trans-Pacific steamer Tenyo-Maru, or some such other just-as-good Jap-Maru boat, Ambassador Fleischmann, of the Metropolitan Tobacco Co., New York, now promises more of those excellent Manila cigars from A-4-26. No, you're wrong. That number and letter combination is not the correct figure for Fleischmann's Ford. Neither is it a Louisiana lottery, Plain street policy slip, nor yet the clutch against the time-clock of the First National Bank. Instead, it is merely the factory designation of the Filipino cigar manufacturer who makes three-for-a-dollar Perfectos, same size and shape, and then sells them to retail at six cents.

"They took my inventory sheets at the Revenue Office," chuckled Scott Barton, of the State Capitol cigar stands, "and they looked them over very carefully. Then an extremely busy official informed me I was just exactly 100 cigars short in my addition. For this he demanded a nickel, which I solemnly paid in addition to my listed tax. First time, though, they sent me whiskey blanks to fill out. Now, I don't carry in stock anything more fluid than ink, so the revenue men really should have allowed that nickel toward a six-cent smoke on them for the error."

"This penny business," continued Scott, "is a blame nuisance. Why, half the time, I don't really know, during a rush, just what I am trying to ring up. In a sale including a packet of cigarettes at six cents, a cigar at seven, and a few other items at sixes and sevens, it requires a moment to gather one's thoughts, in order to make the correct addition and change. Yes, business is a trifle off, right now, thought I look for the customary improvement with the convening of the State Legislature in January, my rush season."

Down on Broadway, Albany, in the heart of the United - Arcade - Warner - Bradt and various other cigar and drug house cut-price retailers, J. F. O'Donnell, the cafe man, right opposite the Union Station, has this sign on his window: "All cigars, tobaccos and cigarettes at the old prices." But, really now, could a feller enter a place like O'Donnell's without at least spending another nickel or dime, quarter or half, dollar or more, for a little liquid to quench that awful thirst, suddenly acquired through the sight of full bottles and things?

All this talk about labor and hired help shortage is more or less true, no doubt. Still, there's a way to solve it. Like this: Ask Shaxby. Yes, ask Manager C. J. Shaxby of the J. W. Stevens sto Broadway and State, Albany. He'll tell you h Frederick and Charles, junior, help out once i while to relieve the pressure of the overhead ru For both his boys are now old enough to be considerable use around the establishment, so A sistant John Friendt can now hooverize his effo to correspond with the service so cheerfully r dered by the younger Shaxbys.

"How are things in New York?" asked a dea the other day of a returning friend. "Oh," repl the chap, "everything is bad, very, very bad. Wh the subway's in a hole, the Brooklyn Bridge suspended, and even the elevated is up in the a It's awful."

On the fence-boards roundabout were numero faded cloth and card signs announcing "The Gre Cambridge Fair—Don't Fail to See It." But W ter Branche didn't want to see last season's fa He had stopped his Packer's Tar (really co positor, that should be Packard Car—you kno better than that!), and was looking up and dow the road, over and across the fluttering fields, f Cambridge.

Nothing in view, darn it, except yonder Holstei scratching her nigh horn with her not-so-nigh hoo And the green grass grew all around, all aroun

Here, then, was Walter with a full cargo of Ha sel & Gretel, R-B and Bulletin cigars, cast awa on a desert macadam in Northern New York. N a soul upon the horizon—nor a sale in sight.

So Walt manned the capstan bar, gaver 'er thr bells, perhaps four, and backed 'er down the strea a bit where the boat could be turned with its pro toward the port of Albany.

But this was not to be. For the shades of nigh were falling fast, falling fast, and down the ba a point to winnard Walt sighted a red glim t port.

"Ahoy! Ahoy, thar, ye lubber!" roared Captin Branche. "Whar's th' clostust dry-dock?"

"Be yer lookin' fer er garbage?" innocently i quired a voice from the Stafford-Carter night c fluid black. "Fer, ef ye be," concluded the invisibl graphophone, "this be it."

"Allah be praised," sighed Walter, "and kee this steamer in your woodshed until I get back i the morning. I've got to get to Albany tonight— where's the railroad station?"

And that's how Walter Branche got back t Albany and the offices of the Branche Cigar Co Orange and Chapel streets—via R. R.

Then, next morning, Walter started for the los Cambridge once more—via R. R. But when h arrived at the station on Broadway the only trai has just gone. Two Detain & Hinders a day ar all that nine per centum outfit can afford to operat right now, so Walter waits.

For all we know the six holes in Walt's rubbe left heel are still impressed in the ground at th Albany station, awaiting the announcer's shout tha the detour signs have been removed, and that th road is again open at the throttle for full spee ahead to the Cambridge garage—and some sales o sensible segars.

"Look! I say, Pat, look!" exclaimed an enrap tured visitor to a workman at Niagara Falls. "Se what a mighty rush of water is pouring over tha rock!"

"Shure," answered Pat, as he spat on his hand for another heave with the pick, "an' whut's t sthop ut?"

Some such attitude as this is visible in the trad over the cigarette situation. Nearly every retaile has advanced prices to meet not only the increase tax, but also to cover the recent rapid strides i the expense of business operation.

So the Visitor-to-the-Falls may be compared t the big manufacturer, who sees the immense ciga rette output and the beauties thereof. While, Pa the retailer, is more matter of fact in his job o the firing line, and he cannot see why, just at pres ent, some of the big factory chaps are endeavorin to hold cigarette prices down to the old unprofit able basis.

Especially so when the well-known items of cou pon and match graft fall more heavily upon ciga

OSTERLOH'S $ MIXTURE

¼ lb. for a Quarter

A few years ago Osterloh made a certain blend of pipe tobacco all for himself.

Next, as a favor, he made it for a friend.

First thing he knew, he was making it for his friend's friends.

And then the friends of his friend's friends demanded it.

Finally, he found he had a big business in his Osterloh's $ Mixture.

Now you, Mr. Dealer, want to sell tobacco on which repeat sales are big.

Any tobacco that will grow in public favor as Osterloh's $ Mixture has grown right from the beginning is the kind of tobacco you ought to carry—and push.

There are big sales and big profits in Osterloh's $ Mixture—and that is what you want.

Display Osterloh's $ Mixture in your window, and push it across the counter.

Pessimists Get the Ha! Ha! in Omaha

The Cigar Business There Reflects Prosperity—Distributors That Cover Much Territory—Retail Trade Is Good and Many Brands Are Competing for Favor—Mozarts Especially Well Displayed—Many Dealers Feature Muriels—Cigarette Sales Are Banned in Nebraska.

OMAHA, October 25.—The cigar and tobacco trade of this hustling Western city is going along in great shape. Heavily advertised brands have the call. As a cigar distributing center Omaha is one of the largest in the Middle West. Here are located many big jobbing houses who cover a large field, and who employ hundreds of salesmen. Once you "hit" it lucky and land your line with one of these houses you are sure of an immense business. The retail trade is in good condition and, while prices now run into the odd cents, nobody has a kick to register.

Bexten's Pharmacy at 12th and Dodge streets is doing well with Muriels. A big display of this brand occupies their window at present.

H. Beselin & Sons, who run two retail stores and do a jobbing business, are boosting Beselin's Trade Mark, a 5-cent cigar. They also feature the E. P., of E. Popper & Co., in the 10-cent and 2-for-25-cent sizes.

La Truda, made by the Havencia Cigar Co. and distributed by the Tracy Bros. Co., has a large sale in Omaha.

The American Products Co., having N. Mantell, a widely known Omaha cigar man as manager of the cigar department, is now located in the new building at 12th and Dodge streets. They feature Santa Rey and Travelers in 5-cent cigars and a full line of El Svirah and Cyro in the better goods. A force of cigar salesmen covers Omaha and the surrounding territory.

The Sherman & McConnell Drug Co.'s three-story warehouse at 506 South 12th street suffered a serious fire loss a few days ago. The estimated loss was about $100,000. Sherman & McConnell Drug Co. operate a chain of retail drug stores.

The Topeka branch of Women's Foreign Missionary Society, which held its annual convention in Omaha last week, passed a resolution urging President Wilson to do all in his power against permitting the use of tobacco in any form by soldiers.

F. C. Swanson, a former cigarette salesman, who has been working the Chicago territory for several years past, is now located in Omaha. Swanson is now in the advertising line.

The City National Cigar Co. is playing strong on Muriels.

Omaha can boast of an exclusive wholesale pipe house. The Omaha Pipe Co. is its name and it does a large jobbing business besides conducting a large pipe repair hospital.

Surely every dealer carries Herbert Tareyton tobacco made by Falk. It is some seller on this market.

At the Unti-Docekal Drug Co.'s store one notices two very large electric signs that bear the ads. of Palo and La Instructora cigars.

"Send us some American tobacco, old boy, if you love me; the makings are 30 cents a package and very hard to get at that price," writes a lad from France. We sent Sammy over there, and it's up to us "tobac'em," says the Omaha World-Herald, which is collecting smokes for the boys on the other side. They have decorated barrels in all the leading hotels and stores that receive tobacco and cigarettes donated. These barrels have been emptied many times since the fund was started and Omaha has more than done her share to make the boys happy.

The World-Herald Building cigar store carries a full line of Juan de Fuca cigars made by the Morgan Cigar Co.

Frank Bandle, the 15th street cigarist, has his store front all painted up on Palo and El Paxos. Muriels are on display in his window.

Little Vega del Rey in packages of 10 for 15 cents and 10 for 25 cents are seen in all the cases in the downtown stores. Al Koru makes this territory for S. Furgatch & Co.

The Merritt Drug Co.'s store No. 1 has an attractive Muriel showing.

Barkalow Bros. News Co.'s store, at 16th and Farnum, makes as leaders the Pinzon, of M. Perez & Co., and their own private brand Fontenella made in bond by Francisco Arango, of Tampa. They also carry in stock many other popular brands.

Lucius, of the Ryan & Raphael Cigar Co., Chicago, and made by Corral-Wodiska, of Tampa, has a steady sale.

La Saramita, made by the Shields-Wertheim Co., is very popular locally.

Harry L. Harris, of the Harris-Schwarz Co., makers of Romeo-Garcia mild Havanas, called on their distributors, Mantell & Co.

Velvet tobacco is going bigger than ever. Large ads. on this well-known brand of smoking are appearing in all the daily papers.

S. Palo is recommended by a lot of Omaha dealers. Palos are mild Havanas and take well.

Harry Alces, representing Charles S. Morris & Co., gave the trade the "once over." La Integridads are sold by some of the best dealers.

The Jacobs-Lee Drug Co. is showing some very neat El Roi Tan glass signs on the fronts of their store. Roi Tans are one of the big sellers with this firm.

At the several stores of the Sherman & McConnell Drug Co. large displays are seen of Black and White cigars, tobacco and Cigarros in packages of ten.

Prince Hamlets are handled here by the Richardson Drug Co. Jos. Carlisle, the general factory representative, was in town and went over matters of importance with the distributors.

The Crystal Candy Co. is concentrating efforts on Muriels.

Look at the line carried at the Fontenelle cigar department—Pinzon, Aplomo, Juan de Fuca, Garcia & Vega, Kingdale, Valkyrie, Cuesta Rey, Pan-Arau, Jose Vila, Vega Del Rey, Admirations, LaIntegridad, Muriels, Mozarts and Fontenelle. These brands are carried in many sizes. A fine business is done at this stand.

Fred Bailey, representing M. Perez & Co., "came to town" to call on Barkalow Bros. News Co., who handle Pinzon brand. Fred left with a fat order.

On all the billboards one sees Bull Durham, the makings of the nation. B. D. is the leading 15-cent seller here.

If ever a cigar dealer was featured in all of the cigar stores of any size the Mozart has to be given the prize. Every cigar and drug store window in downtown Omaha has large displays of this brand in the windows. You can't turn your head but what you see one of these Mozart displays. Great work has been done on this brand by the distributors, and today it is one of the leading sellers.

Al Korn has placed his Lord Romeo 5-cent cigar in several places. They are made by the Kraus Cigar Co., of New York.

San Alto, of the San Alto Cigar Co., Chicago, are seen in some of the cigar cases.

The Sachs Cigar Co., on Farnum street, distribute El Rushco, Lozanos and Muriels. They do a good business and operate an up-to-date store. Sachs used to represent Best & Russell Co. in the State of Iowa.

Moritz Meyer, one of the best-known cigar men in Omaha, is building up a fine box business. He features the El Sirrah brand made by Harris-Schwarz Co., of New York.

La Preferencia is sold by everybody. Its sale holds up remarkably well.

Tom Keenes and Lawrence Barretts are steppin along in great shape with the dealers. The Perego & Moore Co., of Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Omah control the sale in this territory.

Denbys are "it" with Paxton & Gallager. The simply can't get enough Denbys to supply th demand. This is one of the largest cigar an grocery houses in the Middle West and have fo many years been a big factor in the cigar trade.

Chancellors keep up with all the leading seller Niles & Moser are the distributors.

It seems funny to hit a town the size of Omah and not see in the windows any of those wonder ful cigarette displays you see around the U. S. A You don't even see the cigarettes in the cigar cases No sir, it's against the law to handle cigarette in Nebraska, and most of the trade "are" living up to the law.

The new Conant Hotel, being erected on 16th street, will be modern in every respect and will contain 250 rooms all with bath or shower. It is reported that the cigar stand has already been let out to one of Omaha's leading cigar firms.

The Beaton Drug Co., 15th and Farnum, have two large electric signs over the front of their store. One features Muriel, the other Jose Loveras.

Dropping in to the Paxton Hotel, in its time the finest hotel in the Middle West, we find their cigar stand as big as ever and business rushing. Their line includes such well-known brands as Van Dyck, Ruy Lopez, Dulce, Garcia Grande, La Integridad, Muriel, Solace, La Venga, San Martin and Leon, Jose Lovera, Cuesta Rey, Jose Vila, Cortez, Pancho Arango and Sanchez & Hayas. These are only a few. They have other well-known cigars.

The United is featuring the Ricoro 7 and 8-cent size quite strongly at present.

John's Cigar Store features that old stand-by Tadema, one of the best clear Havanas made. In one of their windows is a Girard display, while the other shows a fine assortment of W. D. C. pipes.

Tracy Bros. Co., numbered among Omaha's leading jobbers, is doing a big business on the Te-Be-Ce, their leading 5-cent brand. Every dealer in town carries them.

At the three McVittie stores the Masterpiece and Castellano cigars and Frank's pipes and holders are on display in all the show windows.

Phelps Cigar Co., on Farnum street, carries a big line. Lozanos, El Sirrah and Mozarts are shown in many sizes in their show cases.

Imperialette little cigars in packages are placed with all the trade. They are made by S. Monday & Sons.

Wm. Waldman, the genial representative of Pancho Arango Cia., Tampa, got a big order from Barkalow Bros. News Co. on his recent visit here. He makes the Fontenelle clear Havana made in bond. He also placed his Virginia Lee mild Havanas in many sizes with the Barkalow company.

The Mosher Cigar Co., which distribute the San Martin, Leon and Sarzedas lines for Omaha, are introducing Jose Pinero 5-cent cigar made by Halpern & Walters, of Philadelphia. For a limited time to quickly introduce Jose Pinero, they are selling them five for 20 cents in their retail stores.

Y. B. of Yocum Bros. and La Azora of Lilienfield Bros. have many friends among the Omaha smokers.

Getten & Wickham have a finely appointed store on Farnum street near 14th. They do a large business on the Idolita 5-cent cigar from Jose Escalante Co., Tampa. El Marvelo, from Minden & Davis, are displayed in their window, as well as the little cigars made by S. Monday & Sons.

M. F. Montgomery, city salesman for the Kuhles & Stock Co., of St. Paul, knows what it means to have a surgeon bore into his leg and chip out some of the bone. He underwent such an operation several weeks ago, and as a result is still at home, "wearing" crutches. He may be able to hobble down town by November 1, but is not expected to resume work before the middle of the month.

HOW do you know it's apple season ?

Would a Cigarette Kill a Chicago Alderman?

An Intimation That It Might—Despite Warnings Given by the "Antis" Windy City Solons Continue to Smoke—Saloonkeepers Not Prospering—Cigar Dealers Are Accepting "Odd Cents"—And Any Other Good Money That Is Offered—Salesmen Find Trade a Bit Better.

CHICAGO, October 27.—Beware!

"They'll kill you, sure as shooting," said Lucy Page Gaston, superintendent of the Anti-Cigarette League of America, to Alderman Smith and his cigarette-smoking colleagues on the council license committee at its recent session. "About 90 per cent. of the council, including the Mayor, smoke cigarettes," declared Alderman Smith. Miss Gaston hesitated only a moment before declaring: "Five cigarettes have as harmful an effect as a pipeful of opium. They're doped and you're doomed!" Lucy cried. So the city fathers are going to make their respective wills and consult an undertaker. Meantime the postponed action on two ordinances, one providing for the prorating of cigarette license fees and the other regulating the sale of cigarettes within 600 feet of a schoolhouse. License time will soon be around again (January 1), and it is hinted around that the dealers will be expected to pay more than they have done in the past.

Chicago is face to face with war rations. Federal Food Administrator Hoover has ordered every Wednesday shall be a wheat-less day in hotels and restaurants and every Tuesday shall be a meatless day in all public eating places. Chicago stores have limited the sale of sugar to two pounds a week for each family.

The aristocratic cigar store of Julius Marks at 3044 Sheridan Road was raided by the police the other day. "Just a quiet little game of poker was going on." Gossip says the "raiders were fixed" for $40. It leaked out some way and several police officers have been suspended.

Some big saloons are beginning "to hit the rocks." The swell "Colonel" bar at 127 North Clark street has gone into bankruptcy. The war, the falling off of trade due to young men being drafted, the fall of whiskey and the rise thereof, these are the contributing causes; and listen—$51 is owed for "sausages and free lunch." The liabilities of the proprietors, Michael Michaelson and Charles Lund, are about $50,000, and the assets about $8,000. The "Colonel" was one of the largest saloons in Chicago. The cigar houses got hit hard.

Charlie Isett, formerly with the Best & Russell Co., here, is doing well as manager of the firm's retail stores in St. Paul and Minneapolis. Charlie is going to pay Chicago a visit after the holidays.

"Spillman Mixture," which has been the leading high grade offering of E. Hoffman & Co. for many years, still keeps up in sale. This well-known brand has a distribution all over the United States. E. Hoffman & Co. manufacture this and various other brands.

Richard, better known as "Dick," Condon, the genial representative in Chicago for Lilienfield Bros., holds the honor of being the oldest cigar salesman in Chicago. Dick goes on selling millions of La Azora and Corina cigars each year and has done much to promote the sale of these brands. Condon is good for several years yet as he is now in the prime of life.

At the Mallers building cigar stands the brands of Ruhstrat, Cowley Co. are featured. George Long, the owner, is a well-known cigar man, having managed this store for many years for the Dolan Cigar Co.

They're going to change the name of the German Hospital (one of our largest) to the General. General who?

Billy Waldman is back from a short trip to Kansas City, where he went to land Fred Lederman. He "copped" an opening order for 35,000 Pancho Arango in the finer sizes.

The Personal Christmas box of Pall Mall cigarettes is on display in many windows. It retails for $15.

Steele-Wedeles Co., the distributors of Charles the Great, are placing this brand in a lot of new spots. Wm. Rosenfeld, of the factory, got one order in September from this house for 160,000 Charles the Great.

Leopold & Mergentheim, the "exclusive box trade house," has already booked several very fine orders on special Christmas sizes. October has been the biggest month in the firm's history.

Al Korn covered the trade last week. He sold some new packages of little cigars made by Kraus & Co., of New York.

Fine displays seen in the loop during the past week were: Harmon Cigar Co., San Alto; Best & Russell stores, Robert Burns; Dolan Segar Shop, Henry Irvings; Lilienfeld Bros., Corina; Borland Cigar Store, Club Quality and Albrituna; A. Weiss & Co., Lozano and Admiration; Couthoui Graham Courtney; Spéctor Bros., Val Roma; J. P. Stewart, Antonellas; Clayton's Seidenbergs No. 26; Marco Cigar Co., San Alto; Breitung's chain, Henry Weaver; Ed Kirsch, Corina; Lee Perkins, Perla Del Mar; Schoemaker & Co., Gato and Romeo Garcia Club Life; Schermerhorn, Inc., chain Harvesters.

Walter Fleckles, the San Felice king, has returned to his Chicago headquarters.

The Schermerhorn, Inc., chain of stores are now offering to their trade Garcia Superiors mild Havana cigars. They are carried in a number of sizes.

Fred Charles, a well-known cigar salesman, called recently with his new shade-grown line.

Roman Dobler, the Park & Tilford man, has returned to Chicago headquarters, after a very successful trip through Iowa and Wisconsin. He booked a great many orders and opened several new accounts.

Harry Oppenheimer, the head of the Oppenheimer Cigar Co., of Saginaw, Mich., spent three days here on a buying trip. Harry is a big stockholder in a company that is building a big hotel in Saginaw and was here letting contracts.

A big showing of Americus mild Havanas was made at the Hotel Sherman last week. They are selling very well.

Joe Ostheimer, manager for Bernstein & Schey, has returned from a visit to his old home in Greenville, Ohio. Romeo-Garcia is going big with this firm.

Fred Oakes, representing the E. H. Gato cigar, is back, after a trip to St. Louis and other southern points.

The Clayton Cigar Co. has added the Lucella brand of R. Gaugemi & Co. L. Altman closed this deal. Lucellas now are on sale in all five of the Clayton loop stores.

The Consumers' Cigar Stores Co. has leased for a term of years the corner store in the Machinery Hall building at the corner of Washington and Clinton streets, at an annual rental of $2,100.

Grommes & Elson, makers of Ben Bey and Robert Bacon cigars, are out, with a new price. Their 10-cent sizes are now listed at $73 per thousand, less the cash discount. Included in this price is the new revenue tax. When bought in lots of 1,000 or more a quantity discount of $3 per thousand is given.

Charles B. Eisle, who was arrested some time ago on complaint of Florence Couthoui, charged with embezzling $5,128.27 while manager of the F. Couthoui & Co. store, at 15 South La Salle street, was acquitted of the charge last week after a trial before Judge Sullivan.

The Best & Russell Co. branch of the General Cigar Co. has renewed the lease on the corner store in the Goddard building, Wabash and Monroe streets, at an annual rental of $6,000.

Chicagoans will not eat "pony steak," at least not if they know it. The proposition by Alder Hazen to put through an ordinance permitting the sale of horse meat in Chicago was "placed on file" by the health committee of the City Council, "on file" meaning permanent legislative cold storage. George Bennett wants to know, "How about mule meat?" He says there's a lot of kick in it.

The Rookery building store of Albert Breitung's chain is doing a big business these days. Here is found the finest assortment of high-priced tobaccos and cigarettes in town. La Venda clear Havana gars lead all others. La Espancia, a fine seed Havana cigar made in Philadelphia, is selling w so is the queen shape of Bouquet de Romeo Garcia Harris-Schwarz Co.

Camp's Royal Blend, a 10 for 20 cents cigar made by the Camp Cigarette Co., is a new offering the cigarette line.

Walter Lewis, who loops the loop for the P. Lo lard Co., says the increase in sales of Murads in 1 over 1915 amounted to 65 per cent.

Eugene Kun, cigar manager for A. Weiss & C 176 West Adams street, has added the La Vello ci in 10 sizes. La Vello is made by the Lord Bur Cigar Co., Chicago.

The I. A. C. cigar, made by Garcia & Vega, is s the big seller at the Illinois Athletic Club.

La Fendrich 10-cent and Little Fendrich 5-cent gars are taking well with Ruhstrat-Cowley Co.'s tra These brands are made by H. Fendrich, of Evansvi Ind., makers of the Chas. Denby cigar, which is big seller here and which is also distributed by Ruhstrat-Cowley Co.

Wm. A. Vorhauer Co., 319 Wells street, is goi big on S. & W., a Detroit-made cigar that has a lar following with the local trade. Dawn, made by S Mayer, of Philadelphia, is another 5-cent leader the house of Vorhauer. In high grade cigars, F de Bolano, made by Grommes & Elson, is Vorhaue best bet and is a ready seller wherever placed.

A SUFFRAGE ARGUMENT

Presented to the Independent Retailers—Gompers Reports the Formation of Two New Associations —A Ball Planned.

The Independent Retailers' Tobacconists' Association "went" suffrage at the meeting Thursd evening at Terrace Garden. Miss Rita Kissen, suffrage speaker, had the undivided attention of t members while she argued eloquently for vot for women. The applause that greeted her spee was indicative of the sentiment of the Retail T bacconists' Association. She convinced the deale and most of them went home supporters of t "cause."

The meeting was opened at 8.30 o'clock by Pre dent Gompers. About thirty members were pre ent. The routine business was transacted, includi the reading of the report of the law committee, H. H. Hunter. The report stated the coupon w being licked. The dues were increased from $1 year to $3. The opinion generally expressed w the move was a wise one. As some one said "When a retailer joins the organization and fin the dues are one dollar, he is apt to forget attend meetings but when he pays three dollars, makes him feel he should get something out of and he should."

President Gompers announced that he had acte as chairman for two new retail associations forme two weeks ago in the Cypress Hills and Bay Ridg sections of Brooklyn. President Gompers state that both organizations had secured many men bers, and he predicted a great future for ther Mr. Gompers also made another appeal for t members to do their part by purchasing Liber Bonds.

F. D. Ware, of Richmond, Va., was a visitor the meeting. He is now connected with the Pate son Bros. Tobacco Co., manufacturer of Bare K cigarettes and other brands. A representative the local confectioners' association also was prese to discuss the coupon situation. He explained th the confectioners and candy manufacturers are i terested in the fight being waged against th coupon by the retailers' association, because of th possibility of the Loft interests being purchased b the United.

It was voted at this meeting to hold the annu ball of the association on February 24, at Terrac Garden. The meeting adjourned at 11 p. m.

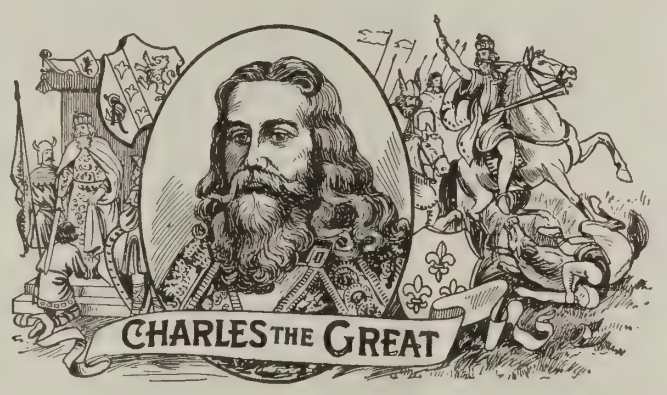
Internal revenue taxes were paid last year o 164,665,246 gallons of distilled spirits, the ta amounting to $186,563,055.

Trade of the United States With the Dutch East Indies

The suggestion that a number of the Dutch ships now lying idle in the harbor of New York may be assigned to the carrying on of trade between the Dutch East Indies and the United States, is of special interest at this time when the trade of this country with these islands is by far the largest in the history of our commerce. A compilation by The National City Bank of New York shows that the trade of the United States with the Dutch East Indies in the fiscal year 1917 was more than that of the five years preceding the war. Imports from the islands in the fiscal year 1914, all of which preceded the war, were but $5,234,000, but jumped to $9,246,000 in 1915; $27,717,000 in 1916; and $52,011,000 in 1917. Exports from the United States to the Dutch East Indies which were in 1914 $3,767,000, advanced to $7,401,000 in 1916 and $2,191,000 in 1917. Thus our trade with the islands in 1917 was nine times as great as that of 1914, the fiscal year immediately preceding the war.

This large increase, while due in some degree to the disarrangement of transportation facilities between these islands and the Netherlands, to which most of their exports were usually sent for distribution to other parts of the world, and from which their imports were chiefly drawn, is also due in part to increased demands by the United States for their principal products.

Of India rubber, of which our total imports last year were nearly three times as great as in the year before the war, we took from the Dutch East Indies in 1917, 45,000,000 pounds against 463,000 pounds in 1914, or nearly ten times as much in 1917 as in 1914. Of hides and skins, for which we are ransacking the world, the imports from the Netherlands' Indies were 8,000,000 pounds in 1917, against less than 500,000 pounds in 1914. Of tin, of which our 1916 imports were the largest in the history of the trade, the total coming direct from the Dutch East Indies was 14,000,000 pounds, against but 56,000 pounds from those islands in 1914, and 826,000 pounds from Netherlands. Of cacao, we took from the islands in 1916, 831,000 pounds, against 124,000 pounds in 1914; of cocoanut oil in 1916, 3,519,000 pounds, against 407,000 pounds in 1915, and none in 1914; of pepper in 1916, 15,778,000 pounds, and in 1914 but 1,295,000; of kapoc, the new vegetable fiber, about one million dollars' worth in 1916, against about one-third of that sum in 1914. The largest item in the increase of imports from the islands was rubber, of which the value in 1917 was $27,240,000, against $286,000 in 1914, or practically ten times as much in both quantity and value in 1917 as in 1914. In a few articles, notably coffee and leaf tobacco, the quantity from the islands in 1917 was slightly less than in 1914. Until the present year Sumatra and Java tobacco, largely used in the United States, reached this country by way of Holland. Figures showing direct tobacco importations from the Dutch East Indies as yet are unpublished.



This increase in imports from the islands was accompanied by a large increase in our exports to them. The value of merchandise exported to the Dutch East Indies in 1917 was $21,191,000, against $7,401,000 in 1916, and $2,772,000 in 1915. This increase in exports to the islands occurred in a large number of articles; automobiles, of which the exports to the islands in 1916, the latest year for which details are available, numbered 1,064, against but 105 in 1915, and the value in 1916 $880,000, against but $117,000 in 1915. In a very large number of manufactures of iron and steel there is a marked increase, the total value in iron and steel manufactures to the islands having been in 1916 $2,281,000, against $850,000 in 1914, and a much larger total in 1917, though the details for that year are not yet available. Machinery, galvanized iron, nails, wire, and iron pipes show marked increases in both 1916 and 1917.

The Dutch East Indies produce many articles which the United States must have and the United States produces many articles which they must have. The chief articles produced in the islands for exportation are india rubber, tin, sugar, coffee, cacao, tea, copra, cocoanut oil, hides and spices, and of all these the United States is a large im-

Cigars That Used to Be Sold for Five Cents Each—New England Tobacco Men Invested Approximately $2,000,000 in the Second Liberty Loan—Chairman Thanks Members of Committee for Good Work Done—Conditions in Boston Are Not Much Changed.

BOSTON, October 29.—With Cincos, "44's," "Bolds," Havana Ribbons and Philadelphia Hand Made advancing to $42 or $43 per thousand, likewise when circulars announcing advances in prices of other big sellers soon will be out, a lot of cigars are no longer included in the nickel class. Six cents from now on. Smaller sizes of popular brand cigars will continue to be put out at 5 cents each.

Two local-made big selling brands, Pippins and Totems, still go to the trade at $38 and $39, and no notice of further advance has, up to this writing, been sent out. H. Traiser & Sons and Waitt & Bond are not magicians, and labor here is higher than in other parts of the world, so it is reasonable to expect that Pippins and Totems eventually will go up to $42 or $43.

Some dealers wish that the United States Government would put in circulation a new coin of 6-cent denomination. Coppers are getting scarce, and all of the cash registers do not have an odd-cent key. Six, 12 and 18 cent sales get the clerks all nerved up making change. Numerous mistakes are made, and will be made until clerks become accustomed to new prices. Customers have kicked much, only they ask, "What is the price on this and that?"

Maurice Hanauer, of the Bieringer-Hanauer Co., was in New York City last week.

Myer Yerestsky, of Charles S. Nurus & Co., was in New York, too, trying to get more of his orders filled on La Integridads and Kingdale. Myer is entitled to wear a service button with three stars, as three of his nephews are serving their adopted country. All these boys came from Russia, were educated in the public schools; all entered the cigar and tobacco business and made good. Myer keeps them well supplied with smokes. Every card he gets is a request to send them some smokes.

Baker Brothers have purchased another auto truck. They now have quite a fleet of cars, which insures service to thousands of customers.

Pillsbury & Co., the Huntington avenue retailers, are featuring El Roi Tans in their windows.

Muriels, jobbed by Rosenthal Bros. & Bendetson, have a 90 per cent distribution in greater Boston. The club and hotel trade on the Muriel brand is most complete.

Orders for "O. P. M.," Our Private Mixture, manufactured by Cobb, Bates & Yerxa Co., are received from all parts of the United States, and the mixture is sent over to the boys in France in large quantities.

John Kroog, of Wm. Demuth & Sons, New York City, gave the trade the high sign this week and cleaned up all the business he could promise deliveries on.

De Wolf Hopper, the comedian of the Follies, now playing at the Colonial Theatre, is stopping at the Adams House, and I was told to-day by Victor Whittier, manager of the cigar department, that he says the Rancho Corona, made by the American Exchange Cigar Co., is the greatest smoke he ever came across. Hopper has become a big booster for Rancho cigars.

The Cambridge Tobacco Co., 605 Massachusetts avenue, had its opening Saturday, October 27. This is one of the most up-to-date suburban establishments in New England. All the fixtures are mahogany and triple plate French glass. They carry a full line of all the popular brand cigars and cigarettes, and are featuring the Muriel. At their opening souvenirs of various sorts were given to visitors, and with each 10-cent purchase a Muriel cigar was given free. S. W. Bless, the representative of P. Lorillard Co., was on the job from eight in the morning until the store closed.

Miss Victoria Robbins, cashier and confidential secretary to S. Robbins, the Cambridge street jobber, has been a very busy lady this last week; she has been chairman of the Young Women's Hebrew Association, and got together a generous supply of smokes for the West End boys, who are in camp at Ayer, Mass. On Sunday, October 28, the members of the Young Women's Hebrew Association went to Ayer, taking these supplies.

It is a rumor that at a meeting of the cigar makers' union, held recently, they voted to ask permission to strike for an advance of $1 a thousand on londres and $2 a thousand on perfectos.

Charles T. Ellis, chairman of the Liberty Loan committee for the tobacco trade of the First Federal Reserve District, says:

"I wish to thank publicly the following members who served on the committee: Frank L. Hener, H. E. Rowley, of S. S. Pierce Co., Boston; F. Reed Estabrook, Estabrook & Eaton, Boston; Charles B. Perkins, C. B. Perkins Co., Boston; Henry Pinney, H. E. Shaw Co., Worcester, Mass.; George Melhado, George Melhado & Co., Boston; Samuel Baker, Baker Bros., Boston; S. S. Rosenthal, Rosenthal Bros. & Bendetson, Boston; Maurice Hanauer, Bieringer-Hanauer Co., Boston; James N. Finkelstein, Bieringer-Hanauer Co., Boston; Louis Jeselsohn, Louis Jeselsohn Co., Boston; W. P. Radford, Salem, Mass.; James F. Logan, Joseph P. Manning Co., Boston; Frank J. Goodwin, Baker Bros., Boston; Louis Hyneman, Hyneman Bros., Boston; R. B. Pearson, United Cigar Stores Co., Boston, and Charles B. Waterman, Waitt & Bond, Boston, for their co-operation in making the second issue successful. The total amount of bond purchases made by the trade as yet is undetermined, but the figures are approximately $2,000,000.

Price Raising Echoes

Although no advance of price on the smokes has been recorded in Fargo, N. Dak., tariffs on most of the better-known brands of cigars of all prices are about due for a raise. The dealers do not agree in their prediction of the time when the raise will go into effect. "It's likely to come any day," one wholesale salesman forecasts. "Half of the tax is already in effect; the other half becomes effective on November 4."

The first step toward the organization of what is to be known as the Tobacco Merchants' Association of Georgia was taken at a meeting of retail and wholesale tobacco dealers in Atlanta. At this meeting it was decided that the association should be formed and letters were addressed to all such merchants in the State to join. The tobacco dealers also agreed to increase the price of chewing and smoking tobacco. The price of cigarettes had been advanced some time ago. According to the scale of prices a package of tobacco that once sold for 5 cents now sells for 6 cents, that which sold for 10 cents is now 12 cents and so on. The price advance also affects the small boxes of candy sold at cigar stands and drug stores.

In Wichita, Kan., there will be a complete disappearance of the stogies, "3-for-5." Some 5-cent cigars will be reduced in size and still be retailed at 5 cents, while other 5-cent cigars will go into the odd-cent class. Ten-cent cigars will be reduced in size and still be retailed for 10 cents straight. Other sizes that are now selling at 10 cents will be raised to 12½ cents, providing the quality is maintained. Cigars now selling for two for 25 cents will follow the cheaper grades and sizes will be reduced and the brand still retained at two for 25 cents, while others will go into the 15-cent class.

The dealers, or some of them, in Newark, O., are selling smoking tobacco at the former price of 10 cents per can, others are selling at 11 cents, 12 cents and in some cases as high as 13 cents per can.

Most of the stores and other places in Pueblo, Col., where tobacco is sold the scale now runs something like this: Five cent cigars—6 cents. Ten cent cigars—15 cents, two for 25 cents. Fifteen cent cigars—20 cents, two for 35 cents. Twenty-five cent cigars—30 cents straight. All smoking tobacco and "loose" chewing tobacco which formerly sold for 60 cents a pound now sells for 70 cents. The old cigarette standbys, such as Bull Durham, Duke's Mixture, etc., in the halcyon days procurable for five and ten cents a package are now six and twelve cents respectively. Package cigarettes have advanced according to the following scale: Five cent packages are now ten cents, or two for 15. The fifteen-cent kind are two for 25; while the fifteen cent variety now cost 20, or two packs for 35. Dealers report that there has been no appreciable falling off in the demand.

NOTES AND QUOTES

H. P. Hull, a cigar broker, of 1282 Hamilton avenue, St. Louis, was Monday stricken with heart disease while a passenger on a Page avenue car. He died in an automobile patrol wagon while being taken to the City Dispensary.

A company at Moss Landing, Cal., has established a packing house for whale meat and will soon supply consumers on the Pacific Coast. The whales are caught with trollers and harpoon guns. The whale is not a fish but a mammal, and the flesh sold in steaks and roasts, free from bone and gristle, at 8 to 10 cents per pound, resembles good beef in flavor, texture, and appearance. It has become very popular wherever introduced, and the Pacific Coast is taking advantage of an almost unlimited supply of whales in that region.—Hotel World.

Now that the Government is ready to insure the lives of enlisted men under the new soldiers' and sailors' insurance law, efforts are being made to acquaint every man in the service with the advantages of making early application to Uncle Sam. Since this insurance is voluntary, it is pointed out, steps must be taken to inform all "the boys in khaki" who might otherwise overlook this opportunity to secure, at very moderate cost, generous protection for themselves and their dependents. Friends and relatives it is hoped will urge the soldiers and sailors to apply at once for this Government insurance.

Henry Sachs, a tobacco dealer, and Herbert Kisse, his bookkeeper, both of Pine Meadow, Conn., and Joseph Rath, of South Manchester, Conn., a bookkeeper in the Cheney Mills, German aliens, who had been held in jail, were released a week ago Wednesday. A permit had been issued to Rath and he was put in jail because he violated its terms. He was released under the promise he made that he would live up to the terms of the permit. Sachs and Kisse never had permits, but they have made application for permits.

Fighting the Tobacco Beetle in Tampa

A "Bug Expert" of the Department of Agriculture Is Making Experiments at the Ehrlich Factory—Cigar Output for 1917 Will Break All Records—Every Manufacturer Very Busy—Predictions That Plenty of Orders Will Continue All Through Next Year—Liberty Loan Subscriptions Total $2,300,000.

TAMPA, October 28.—For the benefit of the cigar industry the National Department of Agriculture is making determined efforts to eliminate the ravages of what is known as the "tobacco bug," which destroys immense quantities of high-grade tobacco each year. A chemist having varied experience in fighting plant pests of all kinds has been in the city several days, making experiments at the Ehrlich and other factories, and he hopes to discover some method whereby both bugs and eggs can be destroyed after Havana tobacco is received in this country.

Receipts at the internal revenue office for the week just closed amount to $15,000 more than the takings recorded during the same week last year. It is evident, now, that Tampa will close the year with former output records broken by a wide margin.

"Where can we get cigarmakers?" This cry is still heard in all factories, some of which are working Sundays in order to meet the demand for holiday goods. "I have just been on a round of the factories," said Deputy Internal Revenue Collector Tucker Savage, "and find that they have need of at least 25 per cent more men than they are working. Furthermore, in view of the large amount of orders on hand and the prosperous conditions existing all over the country, I believe they will be needed throughout the coming year."

Practically all factories have made price increases since the war revenue bill went into effect, a majority adding the tax to the invoices. "They are going to the increase like ducks go to water," said Gus Martinez, resident manager of the J. M. Martinez factory.

F. C. Dana, a veteran Pacific Coast salesman, is again representing this factory in that territory.

Matthew W. Berriman of Berriman Bros., after spending some time at the Jose Vila factory, has returned to the New York office for a short stay.

With warehouses in Havana and the Atlantic Coast Line building, Tampa, Jose Lovera, veteran manufacturer, has added the leaf business to his endeavors.

The Santaella factory is doing the usual big business in Optimos. "Going to take a vacation this year?" the writer recently asked Gus Sechback, one of the human dynamos of the big factory. "No; haven't got time; don't want time," was the answer.

In the local Liberty Loan campaign, which closed yesterday, the committee appointed to call on cigar manufacturers, headed by Collector of Customs J. F. C. Griggs, outstripped all other committees, selling bonds to the amount of $210,600. Those who did the canvassing were: Martin Carabello, Salvador Ybor, Max Oberdorfer, Henry Abrams, Ramon Sierra, W. J. Leiman, W. J. Houlihan, Jr., T. B. Fisher, J. E. Russell, George Grahn, W. C. Black, H. M. Lott and Tucker Savage. Subscriptions in this section are expected to total $2,300,000.

Determined efforts are being made to have the proposed Gulf naval base located on Gadsden Point, near Tampa, and the belief that the site will be selected is growing. The naval base commission is expected to visit the city early in November and inspect the city's offerings.

W. Albert Swasey, a supervising engineer of the United States Shipping Board, who was in the city last week, stated that within a year he expected to see 20 wooden vessels under construction in Tampa.

The holding of a "wet and dry" election in Hillsborough county is being considered by the "drys," but no definite action has yet been taken.

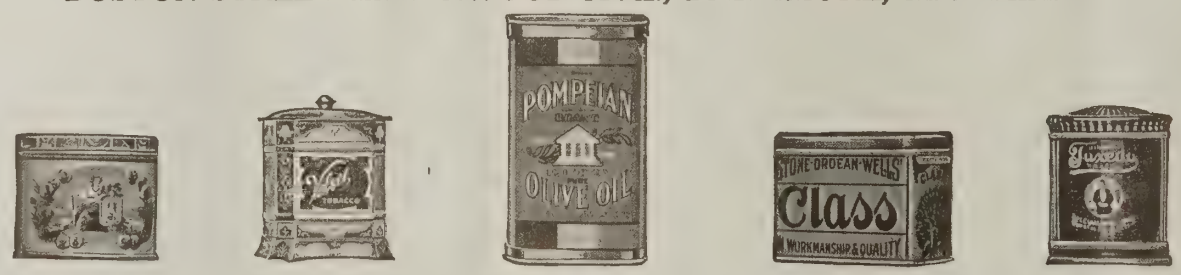
PRICES SOAR IN SOUTH BOSTON.

Sales for the past two weeks on the South Boston, Va., market have amounted to over two and a half million pounds. For the present week the total sold has amounted to only a million pounds, being lighter than heretofore on acocunt of the Halifax County Fair, which has been in progress this week. From the beginning of the season until the present time this market has sold about seven and three-quarter million pounds, which is probably 40 per cent. of the crop.

Prices continue to soar. The average for the town the first four days of this week was 32.50 per hundred. On Friday the average was 33c.

A fine season is now on and largely increased receipts are expected for the coming week.—Southern Tobacco Journal.

"PUT UP THE PRICES"



"Don't Reduce the Sizes"—"That's the Best Way Out of the Difficulty," says the President of Simon Batt & Co.

President Sidney Goldberg, of Simon Batt & Co., returned from a short tour through the West last week. Mr. Goldberg had this to say regarding conditions as he found them:

"Things in general looked good to me. The retailers and jobbers are becoming settled again, as the tax has been fixed and they know where they are at. In general, I found the dealers asking for an increased price on all cigars. Some, it is true, would rather have smaller sizes than increased prices, but they are in the minority. The wise dealer knows cigar smokers will pay an extra cent or two in preference to smoking cigars of smaller sizes than they have been used to. For the future, conditions look brighter. More and more am I convinced that we did the wisest thing when we raised prices last August. Of course, it hurt for the moment, but now we are getting the benefits of our increase. Uniformity in price raising is what the average western dealer desires, and now is the time for the manufacturers to push up the prices. Decreasing sizes, in my opinion, is not the way to meet the tax or increased costs of production."

GARCIA GRANDE'S undeniable mildness is associated with the distinctive quality of Vuelta Abajo tobacco.

When we originated the Garcia Grande, we gave the world a real mild Havana, a large cigar, a good cigar that could be sold for a moderate price. The Garcia Grande represents the triumph of a new idea.

The Garcia Grande has attained a national distribution, not through extensive advertising, but strictly on its merits. It has developed continually increasing sales in all parts of the country. The fact that it appeals to everyone who likes a mild Havana, makes the Garcia Grande a brand that both the jobber and retailer may depend on for steady business.

The Union and Advertiser says that confusion reigns in the tobacco trade in Rochester, N. Y. "At some stores smokers are paying a cent or more extra for their favorite brands, while at others they are paying no increase, as yet, at all. The question of whether or not the tax provided for in the war tax bill has gone into effect is argued hotly over the counter, and the question of whether the increases that have gone into effect in some places represent the full increase in price that will result from the effort of the Government to raise money.

A package of cigarettes which formerly sold for 5 cents in Richmond, Va., now is sold for 6 cents; 10-cent packages sell for 12 cents; 15-cent packages, 18 cents, or two for 25 cents; 20-cent packages, 24 cents; 25-cent packages, 30 cents; 30-cent packages, 35 cents. Packages of smoking tobacco which sold for 5 cents now are sold for 6 cents and the 10-cent packages for 12 cents. Retailers ask 6 cents for one 5-cent package of chewing tobacco and 12 cents for packages once selling for 10 cents.

Changes in the Russian Tobacco Business

That in Russia now there is effective a new schedule of excise duties on tobacco which, it is estimated, will increase the annual government revenue by 162,700,000 rubles; from 286,400,000 rubles expected to be paid into the Government under the excise duties formerly in effect, to 440,100,000 rubles under the new schedule. According to the new scale, the excise on different qualities of tobacco is increased from 28.9 per cent to 85 per cent.

For some time past the Russian government has fixed prices at which the several grades of tobacco were to be sold in different parts of the country. Coincidently with the new schedule of duties came the announcements that this fixed price had been raised and that the penalty for violations of the law on this point had been made more severe. The profits of tobacco factory owners are to be limited and the manufacture of cigarettes and tobacco of the cheapest quality is to be regulated.

Since the beginning of the war, the tobacco excise has been increased three times. On August 17, 1914, a special tax based upon the weight of all tobaccos, except the very cheapest grade, became effective. This was replaced on December 24 of the same year by an increased tax upon the wrappers. An order of the Council of the Ministry increased this tax on June 5, 1916.

Each increase of the excise brought an increase in the prices of prepared tobacco, for labor, paper, boxes and transportation had rapidly become more expensive. The ten-hour factory day was superseded by the eight-hour day after the revolution, and production costs again mounted. At the same time, the manufacturer could not ask for his product more than the price fixed by the government. As a result, production decreased. The Ministry of Finance decided that it would be absolutely necessary to raise the fixed prices in order to stimulate production and normalize the sales. As it also became necessary to increase the resources of the treasury, it was decided to increase the excise at the same time. Tobacco prices in Russia are approximately 300 per cent higher than they were a year ago, and in Moscow and Petrograd there is a scarcity of the cheaper grades.

Complaints are frequent over the inferior quality of this year's tobacco. The crop was poor, owing to too much rain, followed by intense heat. The leaves blackened and "grew empty." In addition, there is no high-grade Turkish tobacco for blending. There is said to be a fair stock of raw tobacco on hand because the factories, expecting full production, contracted for their normal supply of the leaf. Following the introduction of the eight-hour day after the revolution, production decreased 20 and 25 per cent, leaving untouched in the warehouses stocks that under the old conditions would have been on the market months ago.

The new excise taxes on the higher grades of smoking tobacco are 10 rubles, 8 rubles, 6.3 rubles and 4.5 rubles per pound. On the second quality the tax is 3.2 rubles per pound; on the two grades of third-quality tobacco, 1.86 rubles and 1.24 rubles per pound, respectively. The fixed prices on smoking tobacco, except in Transcaucasia and Siberia, scale from 15 rubles to 3.44 rubles per pound. The prices of snuff and of the lower-quality cigars and cigarettes are not fixed. The excise on a pound of snuff is 3.20 rubles; on cigars, 40.15 rubles per 1,000, and on cigarettes, 16 rubles per 1,000.

One may hunt for bargains in cigars these days without being rewarded by finding anything much out of the ordinary. If he does find an appealing price attached to a brand, he usually ascertains that there is something the matter with the stock. Under present conditions dealers are evidently learning the lesson that if they expect to remain in business they must get what goods are worth, and not give away in reduced prices any portion of their legitimate profit.—Cigar and Tobacco Journal.

A new cigarette, "Bagdad Blends," is being introduced to the Canadian trade by the Philip Morris Co. They are packed in an attractive red, white and gold box containing twenty cigarettes, and will retail for 25 cents. They sell to the trade at $10.50 per M, and in each carton of 500 will be placed a watch certificate, a premium scheme originated by this company for the dealer. The cigarette is a blend of Turkish and Virginia tobacco.

Garcia & Vega cigars are big sellers at the store of Charles Miller, 712 Superior avenue, Cleveland.

*Leaf tobacco on hand October 1, 1917, includes pounds, for which the "Marked weight" was reported (i. e., weight at time it was packed or baled), and pounds for the which the "Actual weight" was reported. The corresponding amounts included for 1916 were 621,038,539 and 411,980,176 pounds, respectively; for 1915, 760,807,427 and 444,955,521 pounds, respectively, and for July 1, 1917, 794,178,732 and 472,600,171 pounds, respectively. Allowance should be made for shrinkage on the amounts for which "Marked weight" was reported, in order to ascertain the actual weight. The total for October 1917, includes pounds of unstemmed and pounds of stemmed leaf tobacco.

VALUE OF U. S. TOBACCO EXPORTS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Seventy-eight per cent of the more than six billion dollars' worth of American goods exported in the fiscal year 1917 consisted of wholly or partly manufactured goods. In 1914, the last normal year before the war, the percentage of such goods exported was only 59, according to officials of the Department of Commerce.

The figures show that for the twelve months ending June the value of tobacco exported this year was $15,552,544, as against $7,489,811 in 1914.

Starting with scrupulous selection of raw materials, every step in the manufacturing process is under the eye of paper specialists who see to it that the finished product is as near POSITIVE PERFECTION as modern machinery and human hands can make it.

Diamond-F Glassine should be used in the wrapping and packing of cigars and tobaccos, to keep impurities OUT and the tobacco-goodness IN.

Diamond-F Glassine is transparent. It resists grease, oil and air and is free from all corrosive compounds. It is furnished bleached, semi-bleached, unbleached, embossed and colored, in sheets, rolls and circles. Diamond-F Glassine is made entirely from wood pulp. Diamond-F Filter Paper is U. S. Government-tested.

Diamond-F Service (quality-price-delivery) is a known quantity. Put it to the test. What are your paper problems? Write for samples.

H. UPMANN HABANA

Because a cigar is a Havana cigar, it does not necessarily follow that it is remarkably good; all Cuban tobacco is not as fine as some Cuban tobacco.

But Cuban tobacco grown in the famous province of Vuelta Abajo is acknowledged to be supreme—the finest cigar leaf in the world.

Upmann Cigars Are All-Vuelta Cigars

No other kind of leaf is used in the UPMANN factory. Hence, the steadily increasing demand for UPMANN'S everywhere.

More Orders Than They Can Execute

Holiday Requisitions from the United States and Cabled Requests from England Call for More Cigars Than Havana Factories Can Make Between Now and Christmas—Hopes That British Permits May Be Associated with a Time Extension—Activity in the Leaf Market.

HAVANA, October 26.—Cigar manufacturers here, Friday, received cables from their British friends, calling for one-sixth additional orders over the allotment on the basis of one-third of the imports in the year 1915, making the total equal to 50 per cent. There was a drawback connected with these additional orders, however, as it was stipulated that the cigars must be shipped from Havana not later than the 22nd, or the utmost by the 29th of December, 1917. It is urged that the British Government should modify the permits by extending the time limit to the end of March, 1918, at least. As all the factories are working now to the limit, and there exists a great scarcity of cigarmakers, for regalia sizes, it would be impracticable to execute the additional orders for Great Britain, as some of the factories will be rushed to even get off pending orders in time this year. The new orders, mostly for high priced sizes, would come in handy after the turn of the year, when the demand from the United States slacks off, as a rule, in January and part of February. There is some inquiry from the minor countries, but such orders are relegated for execution after the holiday demand from the States have been filled.

The leaf market continues active, as commission merchants received big cable orders from their northern customers. Prices remain as high as ever, and leaf dealers evidently thick that they can afford to be independent under the prevailing circumstances.

The Cuban Agricultural Bureau reports the setting out of some seedlings in the districts of the Vuelta Abajo, which escaped the ravages of the September hurricane. During the month of November planting should become general in all the tobacco regions, as by that time there surely should be sufficient seedlings.

Receipts of leaf tobacco from the country:

	For 3 weeks ending October 25, 1917	Since January 1, 1917
Vuelta Abajo	17,107 bales	153,340 bales
Semi Vuelta	832 "	9,173 "
Partido	2,438 "	31,034 "
Remedios	19,707 "	118,191 "
Totals	40,084 "	311,738 "

Exports of cigars from the port of Havana per steamship Mexico totaled 620 cases, containing 2,679,520 cigars, which were consigned to the following countries, viz.: To United States, 1,233,090; to Great Britain, 1,015,675; to Egypt, 104,755; to the Argentine Republic, 91,500; to Canada, 67,500; to Australia, 60,000; to British Africa, 56,000; to Portugal, 15,000; to Gibraltar, 15,000; to the Netherlands, 11,000, and to Morocco, 10.000 cigars.

Exports of leaf tobacco from the port of Havana, during the past week ending October 20, totaled 6,252 bales, which were distributed to the following countries, viz.: To all ports of the United States, 4,351; to Canada, 320; to Spain, 1,350, and to the Argentine Republic, 231 bales.

Among leaf buyers arriving recently were: Pancho Arango, of Francisco Arango & Co., and Valentine M. Antuono, of Valentine M. Antuono, both of Tampa; M. Morton, of A. Louis & Co., of Key West; Joe Porter, of Waitt & Bond, Inc., of Boston; and Isaac Bernheim, of J. Bernheim & Son, and Harry Rothschild, of Cullman Bros., of New York.

At the general meeting of the Association of Leaf Dealers, Packers and Growers of Leaf Tobacco, the island of Cuba, last week, Senator Manuel Suarez was re-elected president. The other office elected were: Secretary, Angel Gonzalez del Vall first vice-president, Manuel Rodriguez; and the fo lowing directors for the section of leaf dealers: Jo Aixala as chairman, Miguel A. Perez, José C. Puen Ladislao Menendez, and Mark A. Pollack; for t leaf packers: José R. Gonzalez as chairman, Fernandez Grau, Miguel Gutierrez, Leslie Pantin a Narciso Camejo; and for the leaf growers: Pab Perez as chairman, Antonio Suarez, Manuel Junc Hilario Muñiz and Juan de la Puente.

Romeo y Julieta has no news to report, except th the factory is working to its utmost capacity at Belascoain street, as well as the branch factory in t country.

Partagas is having an excellent export demand f its cigars, as well as doing a big business in the loc market, over all the island.

Upmann cigars have established such a firm rep tation for excellent quality, always uniform, that goo orders are arriving freely and constantly.

Hoyo de Monterrey is a favorite with a large clien age in the States, England, Spain and South Ameri likewise.

Punch received splendid orders from London, a is doing a good business with the United States.

Calixto Lopez & Co. have received more orde than they can fill at the moment, as the scarcity good cigarmakers is the same drawback with the as in all factories.

Belinda is also crowded with orders, and so a likewise: Por Larrañaga, Ramon Allones, El Rey d Mundo, the principal factories of the Henry Clay Bock & Co., C. E. Beck & Co., Sol and Devesa Murias.

The manufacturers of the Nightingale Little Cigars have set a saleswoman to work in New York territory. She is Miss Martha Welsh, formerly of Boston, and recently was a saleswoman of stocks and bonds.

E. S. Rouse, manager of the cigar department of Hopper McGaw & Co., of Baltimore, is back at his office after undergoing a most successful operation. His many friends will be pleased to know of his rapid recovery.

H. A. Rovira, of the Benito Rovira Co., returned from a trip to the Pacific Coast last week. He reports that cigar dealers in the West are asking for smaller sizes on all brands, rather than have the price increased.

Julius Klorfein announces that Garcia Grande orders having grown to such a large extent of late, it will be impossible for him to guarantee shipments this year on orders received from now on; the Klorfein factory is working hard to keep up with orders.

G. S. Nicholas & Son, Ltd., will bring out their usual line of imported holiday packings this year and they believe there will be a great demand for the special boxes. Most of the holiday goods are now on the water and expected within a short time.

Surbrug, 158 Broadway, New York, has a display of El Consuelo in four sizes. They are offering a humidor, valued at $3.50, with every purchase of El Consuelo of $5 or over. The display has brought in many sales, and therefore can be termed a success.

Francis Taylor, United States representative of Rey del Mundo, is of the opinion that despite critical conditions, imported holiday goods will be popular this year. The demand will be great and will not suffer in the least from war conditions, according to Mr. Taylor.

Klein & Levy, who operate the Arno cigar store at Fourth and Sycamore streets, Cincinnati, put through a deal recently whereby they became the owners of the cigar stand in the Duttenhofer building, at Sixth and Sycamore streets, formerly conducted by Leon D. Gross.

Louis G. Smith & Co., New York distributors of the Havana Ribbon, made by Bayuk Bros., of Philadelphia, report a steady demand for the brand. The orders have been exceedingly large of late, in fact, exceeding the ability to supply. Havana Ribbons now retail at 6 cents, $42.50 per M.

In proportion to the acreage devoted to its production, tobacco has gone 'way beyond any other crop in North Carolina this year in profitable returns, and for once in a generation the tobacco farmer has got all the good fortune that is his due—and then some, for good measure.

John Gorges, who conducts a retail cigar store in connection with his leaf tobacco business at 5 East Thirteenth street, Cincinnati, operates his store on a different basis from most cigar dealers. He handles no advertised brands, but only cigars made by small local manufacturers.

Frank Telscher, who has two retail stores in Cincinnati, one at 1428 Vine street and another at 1237 Main street, says his trade is not taking so well to the odd-cent prices in effect on all cigarettes, plug and chewing tobacco. He is an advocate of small packages for even money.

At the factory of S. H. Furgatch & Co., the strike continues. Last Friday, Furgatch considered the demands of the workers and had a conference with the committee. After things were pretty well arranged, the committee demanded an additional dollar which brings the demand for an increase up to $4.

One of the first Mount Vernon, N. Y., dealers to place the R I M six-cent cigar made by S. Monday & Sons was Lifschutz Bros. of West First street. They ordered a large quantity of the R I M cigars and now feature the brand in a display. Jean Bart is another cigar that Lifschutz Bros. have recently put on display.

In the suit of Edna Rawlings, of Bellevue, K., against the Liggett-Myers Tobacco Co., for $25,000 damages for alleged unauthorized use of her picture upon a cigarette advertisement, the defendant company has filed an answer, making a complete denial of the allegations in the petition and asking the Court to dismiss the case.

Thomas F. Healy, United States representative of Allones, Ltd., states the holiday packings of his house will be the same this year as usual. And he predicts a good sale for them. "I see no reason why there should be a falling off in sales of imported holiday packings. On the contrary, I believe that the demand will be bigger than ever."

Cigarettes are again on sale in Sioux City, Iowa, tobacco stores. The rumor that State agents were in Sioux City Saturday with the intention of seizing all cigarette stocks caused excitement among the dealers after they had been "tipped off" by a person who had "inside dope." All cigarette stocks in the stores were concealed in haste.

As announced October 31, the value of coupons redeemed by the United Cigar Stores Co. for the Sun tobacco fund amounts to $16,832.60, the Schulte stores, $6,855.59. The grand total of the fund has now reached $117,032.51, of which $82,694.70 has been expended in purchasing smokes for the American troops. The sum of $17,000 was secured in the last five days.

J. B. Rovira, of the Benito Rovira Co., expects to leave for a trip to Memphis next week. H. F. Donovan, who covers this territory for the company, has been confined to his home with illness for the past few weeks. He is up and around now. J. B. Rovira will endeavor to place the new shade grown wrapped El Arabe in this district and also in Kansas City and St. Louis.

Harry Beltz, the veteran cigar dealer at 5 Nassau street, New York, is displaying two special holiday packings put out by the Cortez Cigar Co., of Key West. The cigars are Hernan Cortez Rothschild Nobles and Standards. Packed ten in the box, they retail at $1.50 for the Nobles and $1.25 for the Standards. The small boxes are neat and attractive and a new departure for the Cortez Co. Beltz has the exclusive distribution of these sizes in New York.

The Hygrade Wine Store, Broadway and 98th street, New York, has a well placed window display of La Muna, including the new electric sign recently brought out by Gans Bros. At night when the electric display is working, the attention of the passing crowd is attracted. Gans Bros. announce that retailers desiring to feature the La Muna brands can make arrangements to secure the sign, which states the merits of La Muna on a printed strip running through the display.

Mayor Edwin W. Fiske, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., who has been sending smokes to Mt. Vernon boys in the service, has just purchased 10,000 Chesterfields. He will distribute 10 packages to each Mt. Vernon boy making a request. "I know how much the boys desire smokes, for two of my own sons are in the service. It is only a little part I am doing for these soldiers, but I know a smoke is like a rainbow from heaven to those chaps, taken as they are, away from homes and loved ones," said the mayor.

The Stearn Company, 35 Wall street, New York, predicts a larger sale on imported holiday packings this year than has been previously known. Based on present business and the purchases of packages that will be sent to soldiers and sailors, the Stern Company sees only a large demand for the holiday goods. The war will not affect this business in the least, for as a matter of fact, the war will help it, as parents with sons in the service want to send the boys the best. That is the opinion advanced by H. A. Stearn.

B. Wasserman, of B. Wasserman Co., has bet five hats with friends that imported holiday goods will sell better this year than ever before. "I know they will," said Mr. Wasserman, "because I have already sold half of what I ordered! Conditions as I see them, convince me that we will have a great sale of holiday goods in the finer sizes. Our sales for the past year have been far ahead of previous years, war conditions or no war conditions. You just wait and see if Christmas packings don't go big this year. I'm in five new hats already."

F. E. Knott, of Dinwiddie Country Va., got the snug little sum of $1,338.03 for a two-horse wagon load of tobacco which was sold on the floor of the Virginia warehouse in Petersburg Wednesday, a week ago. There were other high prices paid for tobacco at the same sale, but this particular sale brought one of the best prices that has been recorded in any Virginia warehouse in many a day. J. J. Jones, of the Virginia warehouse, was delighted with the big check he gave to Mr. Knott. This is another evidence of present-day prosperity which the farmer is enjoying as never before in history.

James Evers, of 248 West 48th street, New York, a cousin of the famous ball player, Johnny Evers, brought joy to the hearts of the men at Camp Upton, Yaphank, L. I., last Sunday. Evers distributed cigarettes; that's why the boys were cheerful. Sunday is the "day off" at camp, but there are always a few men who are kept at camp to do guard duty and attend to other things. So Evers figured they were the boys to be given the smokes. He drove around the camp in his machine and gave several packages of cigarettes to every soldier he could find, and eager hands received them. James Evers was a one-time lightweight boxer and many of the soldiers recognized him.

A Copenhagen dispatch says that the Berlin police have prohibited smoking by persons under 16 years of age and the sale of tobacco to such persons. The prohibition is inspired not alone in the interests of the youths, but also of the older smokers, who on account of the shortage of tobacco in Germany are forced now to form lines in front of the tobacconists to obtain the strictly limited allowance of cigars and cigarettes permitted them daily.

The tobacco business will be a more important industry in Rockport, Ind., this year, as there are already two firms in the market, the firm of J. M. Buckner & Co., of Louisville, having rented the Main street warehouse and the C. P. McClary Co., another Louisville company, having leased the Kitchen warehouse, near the Southern depot. Anthony Stevenson will manage the former and Sam Schumacher the latter. In addition, the big American Tobacco Co. warehouse will be operated, as usual. George Welsch, a tobacco man, of Owensboro, Ky., will have charge of the warehouse of the American Tobacco Co. at Rockport.

DUTCH EAST INDIES TRADE

porter. The principal imports are manufactures, of which the United States is the world's largest producer.

Java holds second rank among the world's producers of cane sugar being only exceeded by Cuba. The Java coffee holds the highest rank in all parts of the world; the wrapper tobacco of Sumatra surpasses that of any other country, the tin mines of Banca and Billiton are of extreme importance, and the production of rubber on the plantations of Java and Sumatra are increasing rapidly, and only exceeded in output by that of the Malayan Peninsula.

The total imports of the Dutch East Indies range from $150,000,000 to $200,000,000 per annum, and the exports from $250,000,000 to $300,000,000 per annum, the largest part of the trade being normally with the mother country, Netherlands.

IMPORTED TRADE SAMPLES

ow They May Be Sent and What Duty Must Be Paid —Treasury Instructions to Collectors of Customs.

"In view of the department's decision dated December 21, 1916, that duty must be assessed upon all samples on the value returned by the appraiser, or on the entered value if higher than the appraised value, unless the same are articles of a character entitled to admission free of duty under some paragraph of the free list, the provisions of article 325 of the Customs Regulations of 1915 relative to parcels containing merchandise of no commercial value are hereby revoked.

"From and after June 1, 1917, unsealed parcels, registered and unregistered, containing trade samples intended solely for use in soliciting orders for merchandise, may be imported in the ordinary mails from foreign countries, subject to all customs duties and customs regulations, in the same manner as though imported by parcel post, express, or freight.

"Such packages containing trade samples must be plainly marked abroad with the words 'trade samples of——' (merchandise) and 'subject to examination by United States customs officers.'

"The importation in the ordinary mail of packages containing articles claimed to be samples, but which are in fact small shipments sent on approval, larger shipments to follow if such articles meet the requirements of the addressees of articles purchased abroad or sent in pursuance of an order therefor and of articles sent as presents, will not be permitted.

"Packages in the ordinary mail, containing such trade samples, which do not conform to the above requirements will be treated in the manner prescribed in Chapter VI of the Customs Regulations of 1915."

One of the added perplexities of the manufacturer now is the shortage of boxes, both cigar and packing. To meet the shortage of the latter class all manner of extemporized shipping cases are being forced into service. There is a rush for grocery cases of all kinds and clean boxes of size suitable for cigar shipments are much in demand in place of the former special boxes which were so generally used. It is a hard proposition to secure the regular cigar boxes as well and the delay in delivery is holding up many orders.—Canadian Cigar and Tobacco Journal.

Exhibition space reserved for the Biltmore, Manhattan and Commodore hotels at the National Hotel Exposition, to be held at New York during the week of Nov. 12, has been donated to the United States Food Administration by John McE. Bowman, chief of its hotel division.

E. Newberry, district manager for the American Tobacco Co., with headquarters at Los Angeles, has been calling on Arizona dealers with excellent success.

The employees of Lincoln Bros., New York, subscribed $6,000 to the second Liberty Loan, mostly on the installment plan.

A NEW SONG TO AN OLD TUNE

There is a tune whose melody
  Falls not upon the ear,
And wakens no responsive sigh,
  Nor swells soft pity's tear;
No magic in its euphony,
  The soul enwrapt to charm,
No dying cadence breathing bliss,
  The troubled mind to calm.
No bard "to lords and ladies bright"
  Has pour'd its "tide of song,"
Nor is it ever heard amid
  The courtly, festive throng.
Alone, unnoticed, but by few,
  But to that few a boon,
Dearer than "music of the spheres"
  Art thou—my old spittoon.

As Shown by the Payrolls

WASHINGTON, October 29.—Statistical information covering labor conditions in certain selected industries for the month of August, and including cigar manufacturing, show that during the month named replies were received from 61 manufacturers, identical with those received in 1916 for the corresponding month, out of a total list of inquiries sent out of 103, covering one week of the August payroll. The number of persons employed in the 61 factories in August, 1916, was 19,332, as compared with 18,720 for the corresponding period this year, or a decrease of 3.2 per cent.; wages, however, for the same period, showed an increase from $208,176 to $230,520, or 10.7 per cent; if, however, the number on the payroll for the last full day of the month is taken, and based on the returns of 17 establishments, there was an increase from 3,516 to 3,715, or 5.7 per cent.

As between July and August of the present year and for the same 66 factories there is shown to be a marked decline in the number of persons employed. In July the number employed in the 66 factories was 21,098; in August it was 19,472, a decrease of 7.7 per cent, and the payroll decreased from $262,402 to $200,386, or 8.4 per cent; number of persons employed by an aggregate of 20 factories on the last day of July was 4,530; on the last day of August for the same establishments the number of persons on the payroll was only 2,456, or a decrease of 1.6 per cent.

Only one cigar factory reported any increase in wages during August.

Retailers in Wilmington and Greensboro, N. C., have made advances in prices.

Practically every cigar store in Savannah has raised prices on all kinds of tobacco. Many of the smaller establishments put up the prices of their smoking supplies the first part of last week.

A tobacco war is in progress in Clinton, Mass., between rival stores selling cigarettes at the new prices and at the old. Many stores went up in their prices without telling their neighbors, and those who did not know of the advance were selling at the old price, while their competitors were getting a cent or more on every box. Those who did not advance at first say that they will not go up now, and will undersell their rivals by retailing at the old prices. They also threaten that if the higher price places come down again to the old prices that they will drop to a price under the old, and keep selling all the time to get the business from those who did not inform them of the advance.

Retail tobacco dealers in Springfield, Mass., met and decided on new prices for cigars and cigarettes. The new rates carry an increase in all lines of cigarettes, while the retail price of cigars will be reduced in some instances. The Federal tax and increased expense of doing business prompted the dealers to make the changes. Some time ago the manufacturers increased the wholesale price of cigars and the retailers increased their prices. The manufacturers have recently increased the prices again, but the retailers will not again increase their rates. Under the new rates for cigarettes and tobacco the 5-cent brands are increased to 6 cents, 10-cent brands to 12 cents, 11 cent brands to 18 cents, 20-cent brands to 25 cents and 25-cent brands to 30 cents. On the retail brands of cigars the majority will sell for 10 cents straight and 5 cents straight. However, there is a limited number of 5 cent brands which will sell for 6 for 25 cents, and 10-cent brands that will be sold 3 for 25 cents.

Retailers in Raleigh, N. C., assert that 5-cent cigars, which two years ago were purchased by them for $35 per thousand and which recently were $38 now cost $39 per thousand. Admitting that two years ago they were making a fair profit, the mathematics of the case would indicate that with the increase of 1 cent in the price of one cigar, retailers stand now in spite of decreased profits in most other kinds of business in much better way of making money. With the $10 additional realized from an increase on 1,000 cigars, they can pay off the $4 per thousand increased cost and still be $6 better off on the credit side than they were two years ago.

Surprised yesterday when the gentleman behind the tobacco counter told you to "come again" when you handed him the usual 5 cents for a package of your favorite "coffin tacks," weren't you? "Gosh! we are beginning to feel the war sure nuff," you thought as you forked over the additional penny demanded by the tobacco vendor.—Augusta, Ga., Chronicle.

DON'T LET 'EM DIE!

You've got 'em! Most every store has 'em! Don't let 'em die! Instead, do this:

From day to day, week to week, as items of cigar, cigarette, tobacco, and pipe stock slowly settle in the cozy corners of your spacious shelves, dig 'em out! Don't let 'em die! Not there!

Get out that lot of 650 Flor de Gra cigars over there in the humidor! Dust 'em off gently! Now what do they cost? What? Sixty dollars the thou'—and you've let 'em stay there one year, seven months and two days! Fie on you!

Well, what to do, what to do? First off, go over there to the pipe section, and see if you can dig up a few dozen flashy cigar cases. Those telescope leatherettes will do. What do they cost? Eighteen dollars the gross? All right.

Now let's see: The Flor de Gras cost 6 cents apiece, eh? Cases cost 12½ cents. Good! Put four cigars in each case, opened, like that. That's fine!

Cost of this outfit is now approx 37 cents, is it? Right! Go get a sign—no, get two signs, one for the window, one for the counter. Have 'em read like this:

Tonight's the Night!

Five o'clock tonight we'll offer four of these 10-cent Flor de Gra sublimes with a rattling good cigar case free, for 39c.

Get yours quick! They'll be gone at 6!

Can't sell that stuff at night, you say? Then sell it in the morn. Or, if you like, offer the deal in the noon time, when the rush is on. But the point is, offer it! Get rid of those Gras before the worms steal 'em!

'Nother objection? No money in the sale, you say? Well, honey, you sure might better have more room and more money for cigars that sell! Am I right or wrong?

Besides, man, you're getting an ad worth a dollar or two without actually paying for it!

So don't forget to put a stack of the stuff in the window tonight! Put some more on the inside case, right up front, where the mob'll see and buy 'em!

And say, m'fren', do the same thing with those dusty cigarettes and a cheap gun-metal cigarette case in the morning. Don't let 'em die! THE SMOKER.

Denver dealers have ratified a new and higher schedule of retail prices for "smokes," effective at once all over town. All 10-cent packages of cigarettes are advanced to 13 cents, or two for a quarter; all 5-cent packages of cigarettes, 7 cents; all 15-cent packages of cigarettes, 18 cents or two for 35 cents; all 10-cent packages of tobacco, 11 cents, and all 5-cent packages of tobacco, 6 cents.

Tobacco dealers in Durham, N. C., believe that all of the bigger companies will come to the smaller sized packages, for the convenient nickel and multiplies of the jitney have been one of the important factors in the steadily increasing sales of many of the Durham brands. Changing the size of the package, however, will necessitate the changing of a great deal of machinery, especially in the manufacture of cigarettes.

rettes than upon the better positioned cigar.

Few cigar smokers demand or care for coupons and matches in proportion to the immense multitude of cigarette smokers who demand everything in sight at the lowest possible outlay.

"Day and night our factories are working on Fatimas, Chesterfields and Piedmonts," asserts Salesman Charlie Fox, of the George Thompson division, Liggett & Myers Co., "so it doesn't seem, at the present time, that our cigarette machines can be stopped for the period necessary to change the form of packing to eight and sixteen cigarettes. Stock up, therefore, with all you can at the 50 per cent. tax reduction before November third."

Strawberries will soon be in bloom again 'way down south in Texas, and that's one reason which is propelling the William Demuth car in the general direction of the sand storms and cactus. Still another reason for the sou-by-sou-west of the W. D. C. pipe van is that the raw northers of our chilly clime affect the very blood of the unacclimated quartermaster. Those strawberries, then, at 25 cents the quart, and all sorts of fresh fruits at cheaper-than-sugar prices will soon be the daily fodder of this other foxey Wellington salesman, George Fox. For George leaves the Capitol District this week, after several Sundays and Mondays of missionary effort along the trails of the Albany, Troy and Schenectady retailers.

"We'll stand one-half the war tax 'till November third," announced Representative Lopez of the Garcia & Vega factory, New York. "So now's the time to order up on cigars of the finer grades. Our factory is very busy indeed, but we are prepared to handle business from our old customers upon the basis started."

Since the pound package revival started up on all smoking tobaccos, owing to the somewhat smaller expense of this form of packing as compared to the pocket bags and tins, Division Boss Jordan of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. has issued orders to his field force in the Capitol District to play up Prince Albert in the 16-ounce glass jars. This has resulted in some very excellent sales to retailers, and also adds several more stars to Jordan's service flag.

"Just got back from my old home at Lenox, Mass.," saluted Governor Bill Hughes of the Fleahman Brothers store, Beaver and Grand streets, Albany. "Those patriotic millionaires of Lenox have subscribed a complete transport ambulance equipment for the town's contribution to the Government. This outfit is all motor, even to the operating room in the splendid Red Cross service car. One of my brothers goes along with the section, providing he can secure his release from the draft unit of 60 men from that little Berkshire resort. That's the reason I went over. I wanted to see if everything is all right with him before he leaves."

"Canada used to be my stamping ground," remarked M. A. Shufeldt, of the Louie Killeen sales force, "and I sold goods there for several years before returning to the States. There was considerable prejudice in the Dominion then against Americans and their goods. And it required a solid day of deliberate conversation, discussion, food, drink and smoke to sell just one dealer. Ten in the morning was the starting hour for the friendly converse, but when you landed a man you would have a real order. During intermissions, the Canadian would invariably inject lots of Scotch-Irish sarcasm in his talk about the good old U. S. A. To the rescue I'd ride, though sometimes to a severe fall, for those ancient old countrymen are a studious bunch, with some real facts under their Sam Browne belts."

Hear the sleigh bells? Surely, it cannot be old Kriss Kringle comin' through the radiator! But there he is, reindeers an' whiskers! What's that he said? Listen: "Christmas, 1917! Before placing your Christmas order, notice our prices on pounds, in glass or tin, with Christmas decorations." Follows the list. Then: "I will call on you Monday, November 19, for the Cameron Tobacco Co., R mond, Va. Eutopingly yours, W. J. Noonan, eral representative for Santa Claus in the U States of America."

Two more Spug samurais! These, though, f the P. Lorillard Co. And what have they to the Spugsters, or the Society for the Preven of Useless Giving? Ah, the satchels will tell. C 'em up, boys! Well, that's great, simply gr Camouflaged holly, mistletoe, evergreen Xmas t all litho-blended in holiday tints and settings u a paper cover for 100 cigarettes! Good job, Sp good job! Oh, is that so? Then the cigare are not packed in bulk? In packets of ten, say, with ten boxes to the beautiful bundle? Th fine! Now, all that trite tragedy, related annu by jobber and retailer, about having an invent to-Christmas stack of Helmars, London Lifes, rads, Deities, and so on, there on the dust worm pile, is therefore obsolete, is it? Vive Pierre Anagyros Lorillard! You've solved January-to-December problem at last.

When Bob Murphy closed the New Kenm Summer soda fountain, where cigars and thi were sociably sold on the corner beneath the modeled Albany Hotel, some of the trade switched and side tracked to the permanent ci stand in the Pearl street lobby. But folks awaiting the Kenmore opening of the new din room, cabaret and wine bar. More cigars then be served than the present limited facilit permit.

Quite a few of Mike Connors' customers w sitting and standing around the Hampton Ho lobby the other day when Jim McGrane or son body else in the cigar smoking crowd yelled that a Caproni sixteen-seat battleplane was waiti right out front of the Acker, Merrall & Condit st to take the party on a See-the-City tour of Man's Land. All rushed out just in time to a tail-end view of a Liberty Loan airplane whi was bombing the multitude with Over-the-Top a peals for Saturday's closing of the U-Buy-a-Bo sale.

BUREAU REORGANIZED

New Commissioner of Internal Revenue Makes Important Changes—Administrative Units—A Corps of Co-ordinate Officials.

WASHINGTON, November, 5.—Because of the vast amount of additional work that has been thrust upon the Internal Revenue Bureau of the Treasury Department, the entire bureau has been reorganized according to an announcement made here the latter part of last week by Commissioner Daniel C. Roper.

The object of the new organization is to establish administrative units in charge of a corps of co-ordinate officials who will be held strictly accountable, respectively, for the subject matter and duties that are assigned to them.

The position of Assistant to the Commissioner has been created, and J. H. Callan has been designated to act in this capacity. The Division of Chemistry, Stamps and Accounts will be under the immediate direction of the Assistant to the Commissioner.

The Assistant to the Commissioner will, in addition to directing the conduct of the work in the several divisions, assist the Commissioner in the work of co-ordinating the efforts of the administrative units established for the bureau and execute such specific duties and work as may be assigned to him by the Commissioner.

One of the administrative units will comprise the work of the division of tobacco and estate and capital stock. Mr. Gates will be the Deputy Commissioner in charge of this unit, and Mr. West will be Assistant Deputy. The duty of the Assistant Deputy in this administrative unit will be to relieve the Deputy Commissioner as far as practicable of routine executive work and responsibility and to examine personally into the conditions, methods and practices of the several divisions in this unit with a view to the most intelligent and efficient conduct of the work and utilization of the employes and equipment.

DETROIT'S BIG OUTPUT

Million Cigars a Day—Former Prestige Regained—First Class Goods Made in Sanitary Factories.

Detroit again ranks as one of the biggest cigar manufacturing centers in the world. The prestige that was enjoyed a couple of years ago is being regained and production now is above 1,000,000 cigars a day, the output of the factories being smoked in all parts of the United States, some of the brands ranking among the best sellers to be found.

It was no fault of the product that Detroit dropped off in the quantity of cigars. Labor troubles did it. Years of comparative comfort and wages about which there had been no dispute were followed by a general walkout and attendant paralysis of the business, of some of the big plants. This condition led to the establishment of branches in other cities, where the Detroit brands were made during the months that labor and capital were estranged.

The settlement of differences led to a resumption of manufacturing, at first on a smaller scale than at the outbreak of the strike, then growing until it is almost normal. Trade indications are good, and the demand for Detroit cigars now is general.

Detroit makes all grades of cigars, but the nickel goods have been in the majority. Such is the additional cost of manufacturing that the wholesale price of many brands now is around the $40 mark.

The Free Press declares: "Detroit is one of the first cities in which the old upstairs or loft cigar factory began to become unpopular. There are half a dozen big plants in Detroit, employing hundreds of girls and men, and the arrangement of these factories is in strict accordance with the modern habit of doing things in a clear way.

"In the first place, instead of cooped up quarters, the rooms are spacious and well lighted, modern factory constructing marking the newest of the plants. Naturally this affords the workers plenty of fresh air, and in addition to that which comes through windows and skylights ventilating apparatus is installed, changing the air at frequent intervals.

"Rest and locker rooms are provided and some of them maintain lunch rooms for their help, selling foods for less than they cost, all of which comes back in the better grade of work.

"No cigars are made under cleaner conditions and none of better stock for the price, as Detroit is one of the big buyers of fine tobacco.

"Now that the season for holiday boxes is coming it is well to think of the army of cigar makers here, all of whom benefit indirectly through the home consumption of the Detroit brands."

THE REORGANIZED TOBACCO DIVISION.

WASHINGTON, November 5.—The Tobacco Division, under the reorganized Bureau of Internal Revenue, has been assigned to the Administrative Division, including all taxes, including additional and floor taxes imposed by the Act of October 3, 1917, on tobacco, snuff, cigars and cigarettes. Also the tax on cigarette paper and the special taxes on manufacturers of tobacco, cigars and cigarettes imposed by the Act of September 8, 1916.

Threatened Labor Trouble Averted in Tampa

Intervention of Mayor McKay Put a Quietus on What Promised to Be a General Strike—A Modification of the Rule Regarding Employment—May Locate a Naval Base at Gadsden Point—Increased Cigar Production.

TAMPA, November 4.—Threatened labor trouble was averted Saturday through the intervention of Mayor D. B. McKay, and peace and activity again reign in cigardom. Strikers at the New York factory of Pendas & Alvarez asked for the moral support of workers at the Tampa factory of Y. Pendas & Alvarez, and as a result many quit work and applied for positions in other factories. This caused the manufacturers to enforce the rule with reference to refusal to employ men when a strike was on or pending, and those who left the Pendas & Alvarez factory were without work. This action brought a protest from the cigarmakers and a three-day general strike was threatened. The men admitted that the manufacturers had the right to refuse to employ striking men, but insisted that cigarmakers who were not interested in a particular strike should not be made to suffer. As a result the cigar manufacturers modified their rule by making it affect strikers and prospective strikers alone, and settlement was reached on that basis. The Pendas & Alvarez factory, however, has a good force at work and is turning out cigars rapidly.

Headed by Rear Admiral J. M. Helm, the naval base commission appointed recently arrived in the city today from Key West for the purpose of investigating Tampa's advantages for the establishment of the proposed Gulf coast naval base. Because of the area and depth of the neighboring bays and Tampa's fine transportation service, Tampans generally believe the naval base will be established on Gadsden Point, near the city.

"Because of high prices on materials, heavy war taxes and other advantages, the demand for increased co-operation between the manufacturers in all phases of the industry is increasing. Conditions have changed to so great a degree in recent years," said Ernest Berger of Balbin Bros., and the Tampa Cuba factory, "that it is necessary for manufacturers to economize at every possible point in order to realize profits even when fair price increases are in force. I wish they would get together, employ efficiency experts to suggest more systematic plans of operation and otherwise co-operate to a greater degree in efforts to make ends meet. I never like to thrust my personal views upon veterans of the trade, but I know benefits would result from greater co-operation."

Val Antuono, manufacturer of Duke of Belcourt and C. H. S. cigars, has returned from a tobacco-purchasing trip to Havana.

Internal revenue receipts for the month of October amounted to $149,936.35 against $109,965.12 for the same month last year. Increased cigar production is principally responsible for the growth in revenue. Customs receipts for the month, though, were somewhat lower than those of October, 1916, being $169,508.56.

The board of county Commissioners last week awarded a contract for the paving of 55½ miles of county connecting highways, the material to be used being brick and asphalt. The contract was awarded conditional upon the issuance of bonds to the amount of $750,000, for which an election will be called soon. Whether the vote will be favorable is not known.

A TEXAS PHILANTHROPIST

P. P. Martinez, a Popular Cigar Man of Dallas, Is a Leader in the Campaign Against "The White Plague."

P. P. Martinez, a popular cigar dealer of Dallas has contributed $2,000 more to a fund started to aid victims of tuberculosis. His first contribution to the fund was $1,000; his second, $1,000, and his third—made last week—$2,000. He said a realization of the wonderful results obtained by the careful expenditure of the money prompted him to double the amount of his donation. He expressed the hope that other persons, upon learning of the good work done, would follow his example and give something toward the fund so that a larger number of persons could be helped. Every advantage of medical science, climate and modern dietetics is placed at the disposal of tubercular patients helped by the fund. Every effort is concentrated on the curing of one person or two persons, according to the money available.

Entire enumeration of the philanthropic work of Martinez would fill a large book. Practically every enterprise for the promotion and welfare of Dallas has been helped by this benevolent citizen. He has contributed toward charity work of many kinds; has helped in financial campaigns, has given financial aid to many individuals, and has donated toward the patriotic causes of the last year.

He was born in Spain and came to the United States when he was 16 years old. He started in the cigar manufacturing business with his brother at New Orleans. The products of the firm, Martinez Bros., were sold in large quantities in Chicago, Milwaukee and Cincinnati. While traveling for the firm in Kentucky, P. P. Martinez received a telegram from his brother stating that there was an epidemic of yellow fever in New Orleans and telling him to "work Texas" instead of returning home. So he located in Texas and has been a resident of Dallas forty years.

Soon after arriving in Dallas, he rented a blacksmith shop on the southwest corner of Main and Poydras streets, improved it and opened a cigar store. The citizens of Dallas, then little more than a frontier town, laughed at the newcomer when he ordered a supply of 25c and 50c imported cigars, but after the expensive "smokes" arrived, every man sampled them and many smoked them regularly. Mr. Martinez was the first man to ship a carload of cigars to Dallas.

Paul Erb of Dallas while visiting in Chicago saw in a newspaper a story about the "first big shipment of cigars to the Southwest," and immediately exclaimed, "That's Martinez; nobody else would have the nerve." The placing of Brussels carpets in Martinez's store provided another surprise. Starting with a limited capital, Martinez has succeeded in building up a business that covers five States.

"UNITED" SALES DEVELOP

Totals for 1917 Probably Will Exceed $43,000,000—Some Profitable Side Lines—Helped by Prohibition.

Recently compiled statistics show that in districts in which prohibition has been established sales of the United Cigar Stores Co. jumped 25 per cent. on an average. Which gain partially was made on straight tobacco sales and the remainder in candy and other things that the United sells in its stores.

In this connection it may be said that the United is now selling $3,000,000 worth of candy, chewing gum, razor blades and other side lines annually. Four years ago business in these side lines did not amount to more than $500,000 a year.

Sales of the United Cigar Stores Co. this year will approximate $43,000,000 as compared with approximately $36,000,000 in 1916 and $31,000,000 in 1915. This means an increase of 40 per cent. in the business of the company during the two-year period.

In 1918 the company is expected to do a business in excess of $50,000,000. In fact, business is now probably running close to this rate.

The United Cigar Stores Co. will probably increase the common dividend some time next year. No action to this end has yet been taken, but, according to the Wall Street Journal, "the general understanding exists in official quarters that cash disbursements to common shareholders will be larger in 1918 than they have been in the current year."

Earnings of the company in 1917 will probably run close to $15 a share for the $27,162,000 common stock after preferred dividends, as compared with $10.09 a share on the same amount of stock in 1916. This means an increase in net of more than $1,000,000, as compared with a year ago.

"This increase in net has been accomplished despite an extensive expansion program that has been in progress throughout the year. A large number of stores as well as more than 200 new agencies have been opened during the present year. But over and above this the United should show at least $4 a share more for its junior issue than last year.

"If the plan to increase common dividends next year works out as projected it will only be in line with the dividend policy for the last four year. In 1914 the United Cigar Stores of America was formed and dividends were started on the common stock at the rate of 5 per cent. annually. In 1915 this was increased to 6 per cent. and the following year to 7 per cent. In May of the current year the present rate of 8 per cent. was established."

TOBACCO FOR EXPORT

In Greater Demand Than Ever Before—Kentucky Growers Are Making Big Money—Great Preparations in Owensboro.

On August 31, 1916, there were 262,450,000 pounds of tobacco in storage in Great Britain. On August 31 of this year there were 167,235,000 pounds in storage. This is the smallest amount of tobacco that has been in storage in England in many years.

The price of tobacco in British warehouses has just doubled that asked in 1916. Five to five and a half pence was the prevailing price in 1916. The quotations for 1917 are shown to be 10 and 11 pence. Burley, of which there was no quotation for 1916, shows this year a quotation of 20 pence a pound. All stocks are short, and the means of transportation to Europe are very poor.

Tobacco companies of the United States have manufactured more tobacco in the last two years than ever before in their history, and there never was a time when demand was greater for all kinds of smoking and chewing tobacco than now. This is due, in a measure, to the thousands of soldiers called to the colors.

Workmen and soldiers alike think tobacco is a necessity. Despite the increased prices imposed by dealers, there seems to be no falling off in sales. The manufacturing plants are kept busy to supply army camps of the country, in addition to sending heavy supplies to England, France, Italy and neutral countries. And American tobacco growers are more prosperous than ever before. An Owensboro, Ky., dispatch to the Louisville Journal says:

"The indications are that the man with a few acres of tobacco this year is going to be well paid for his crop. In the Green River district, composed of the counties of Daviess, McLean, Hancock and Ohio, there is a 40,000,000 crop this year, compared to 45,000,000 last year.

"Last year an average of about $11.50 per 100 pounds was realized by the farmers of the district, who sold more than 25,000,000 pounds over the loose leaf floors of Owensboro. The remainder of the crop in the district, which was sold at the barn or through the pools, brought almost as high average.

"It is the belief of buyers and growers alike that higher prices will be paid for all grades of tobacco this year. There is a strong demand for the lower grades. European countries will take any kind of the weed.

"Never before in the history of the tobacco business in Owensboro have greater preparations been made for a season than the coming one. There will be six and possibly seven loose leaf floors in operation this year. All of the local buyers have been busy this summer repairing their buildings and in some instances increasing ther capacity.

"The crop in the district is one of the finest in quality ever grown. This is especially true of the McLean county tobacco, which is of exceptionally high grade."

ENCOURAGING REPORT

By Dr. Henry Field Smyth and Dr. T. Grier Miller Who Made a Hygienic Survey of Philadelphia Cigar Factories.

Dr. Henry Field Smyth and Dr. T. Grier Miller, of the University of Pennsylvania, have made in the occupational diseases clinic "a hygienic survey of cigar manufacturing in Philadelphia."

They visited forty-eight factories, the smallest employing one worker, the largest 800 workers, and in all they observed the condition of 6,200 employees.

The 1916 directory of the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry shows 160 cigar factories in Philadelphia with 6,574 workers.

Doctor Smyth and Doctor Miller have therefore seen more than 90 per cent. of the persons engaged in this industry in Philadelphia.

Of the 6,200, there were 1,600 male and 4,600 female operatives.

From the point of view of cleanliness, thirty-six factories were rated good or fair and ten were classified as dirty. "This would be a very fair showing for such a number of factories in any industry."

A careful study was made of the cubic feet of air space per person, the temperature and humidity of the workrooms, the inhalation of dust particles, nicotine and bacteria.

The conclusion reached is that "cigar manufacturing is not necessarily a dangerous occupation."

Intelligent legislation safeguarding the welfare of men and women at work must always rest on just such a scientific and careful assembling of data as is to be found in this report; and the politician who interferes with such research commits a crime.—Public Ledger.

A SELF-LIGHTING CIGAR

Invented by Mrs. Oscar C. Morten of Waterloo, Iowa—Patent Office Says the Idea Is Original.

Ever since William Rolfe, in the early settlement of Jamestown, Va., introduced tobacco among white men, users of cigars have been stepping up to the lighter or saying to a friend, "Lend me a match."

It was left, finally, to a woman to invent the self-lighting cigar. The inventor is a woman living in Waterloo, Iowa—Mrs. Oscar C. Morten, formerly Miss Emma Vorce, who has been employed by the Western Union Telegraph Co.

Mrs. Morten told a reporter for the Waterloo Courier that she had applied for a United States patent. In reply to her inquiry, the patent office reported the records showed nothing of the sort in its files. "The idea is absolutely new," the director of the patent office wrote.

The self-lighting cigar will be equipped with a match attachment inserted in the end of the weed. When the device is put on the market all the smoker will have to do is to "strike" his cigar instead of striking his match or striking his friend for a light.

While on her way to northern Minnesota in the summer Mrs. Morten observed two young men who, after several vain attempts, failed to get a light for their cigars because of the wind. One said, "The thing ought to light itself." This set Mrs. Morten to work solving the difficulty. She began her experiments by inserting a paper match into the end of the cigar. There were difficulties which patient tests finally overcame.

SHIPPED TO HOLLAND

About 1,750,000 Pounds of Dominican Tobacco Loaded on a Dutch Steamer at Puerto Plata.

Arthur McLean, American Consul at Puerto Plata, reports that a vessel of the Royal Dutch West Indian Steamship Co. recently called at Puerto Plata and loaded 800 sacks of coffee (132,000 pounds) and 15,000 seroons of tobacco (1,750,000 pounds) for Amsterdam, Holland.

This vessel was the first Dutch steamer to come to Puerto Plata this year, although several vessels of that nationality called there since the beginning of the war. Prior to the war almost all of the Dominican tobacco crop, which averages about 175,000 seroons annually, was shipped to Bremen or Hamburg.

IN LA SULTANA'S DOMAIN

A Remarkable Development

Entering the cigar business in 1883, being associated with cigar manufacturing for more than the third of a century, Max A. Kreielsheimer can speak from experience. He can talk most entertainingly when he cares to do so. But he prefers deeds to words. He works. He makes his work productive. He has ideas. "Original ideas, shrewd ideas, good ideas," many people say. He utilizes opportunities. He sees things that other men don't notice.

For instance, there was the cigar trade obtainable by having drug stores for customers. Not entirely ignored, yet ofttimes dubiously regarded, such cigar trade as drug stores afforded, as a rule, was small and uncertain. It seemed to be a sort of haphazard proposition.

While Kreielsheimer was with the Cosio Cigar Co., his attention was called to a debt owed by the owner of a drug store in a state capital. Though honest and willing, the druggist wasn't in a position where he could "square up" in the near future. The difficulty involved in the collection of the account, Kreilsheimer got around by acquiring a cigar stand in the drug store.

Kreielsheimer supplied the stock. And in lieu of rent and clerk hire he gave the druggist a fixed percentage on all cigar sales. Unworried by bills and able to replenish the show case with saleable cigars, the druggist found that cigar sales on a percentage basis were profitable for him. The experiment was successful. Tried in other places, similar experiments were equally satisfactory. Seeing how such business could be developed, Kreilsheimer organized the Standard Cigar Stands Co. In a few years the number of stands operated by the company in drug stores throughout the country has increased to 1,300.

A short time after the Standard Cigar Stands Co. was organized, Kreielsheimer happened to meet William Zeigler, Jr., the Royal Baking Powder magnate. As a "little side issue" then, Ziegler was interested in a company engaged in manufacturing Ess-en-see and other brands of cigarettes. Impressed favorably by the way Kreielsheimer was managing things. Ziegler made inquiries and later acquired considerable stock in the Standard Cigar Stands Co.

As the stand business extended and prospered, Kreielsheimer proposed to establsh a small cigar factory to make a special brand that could be featured on the stands. Since selling cost and all the middleman's profit would be eliminated, he figured that a cigar of notable character and high quality could be retailed by the Standard Cigar Stand Co. for five cents. And he explained the advantages of the plan.

"How much would it cost to start that little cigar factory?" Ziegler asked.

"A thousand dollars would serve the purpose I have in view," answered Kreielsheimer.

"Better make it $2,500," Ziegler suggested.

The suggestion being accepted, half of a loft at 150 West 52nd street, New York, was secured for a cigar factory. There La Sultana brand was originated.

Kreielsheimer planned to make a decidedly good five-cent cigar. Shade-grown wrapper, Wisconsin binder and Havana filler were the materials he selected. The filler was choice stuff obtained from leading factories in Havana.

Max A. Kreielsheimer, Vice President of the Tobacco Corporation of America

In the small factory, under strict supervision, La Sultana cigars were made. As nickel cigars, La Sultanas undeniably contained excellent value. The quality of the goods evoked declarations that such cigars couldn't be made profitably to be sold for five cents.

Predictions were made that Kreielsheimer would bankrupt himself.

In the meantime smokers began to discover how meritorious La Sultana cigars were. Sales repeated rapidly everywhere the cigars were placed. The demand for La Sultana soon exceeded the possible output of the little factory.

Additional manufacturing facilities were secured, production was greatly increased, but not fast enough to supply the market created for La Sultanas.

One factory after another was acquired, still the output was insufficient. Persistent demands for La Sultanas hastened the organization of the big Tobacco Corporation of America.

Here and there, wherever it could advantageously, the corporation acquired factories. It multiplied its output, it became a cigar distributor of nation-wide importance.

For La Sultana's growing popularity made it inadvisable to restrict sales of the brand to chosen stands in drug stores. The distribution of La Sultana became phenomenal. Particularly high quality emphasized in material and workmanship, "individuality," always associated with a notably moderate price, caused millions of La Sultana to be sold.

In less than a year La Sultana achieved a distribution that would justify hard work in behalf of the brand for five years. The Tobacco Corporation of America appreciates the importance of building up a brand. Despite the high price of tobacco the corporation, some time ago, made big purchases of desirable leaf. It secured shade-grown wrappers and Wisconsin binders, not just enough to last the factories

BUILDING UP DURING THE WAR

It is inconceivable that the horrible sufferings of this war should have been thrust on the world without some compensating advantages. One great benefit which has accrued to most of the belligerent nations is the awakened sense of patriotism, the realization that duties are owed by every man to his fellow citizens. It may even arise out of the war that poverty, the curse of modern society, may be almost banished from the civilized nations owing to the livelier understanding that every man is truly his brother's keeper, and every man is obligated to see that he is not growing rich at the expense of his brother. In England before the war nearly a third of the population, twelve million people, were on the verge of starvation. Today we are told that there is practically no poverty in England. Everyone who can work is working and earning a decent livelihood; and everyone feels that he is working not for himself alone or for his family, but for the country. In spite of a terrible casualty list, in spite of air-raids and submarines, there is probably more health and happiness in England today than at any other time in her history. Is it possible that England will go back to the old slipshod wasteful methods of 1914 when the war is over? Shall we ever in England see the old shameful contrast between extravagant wealth and sordid poverty? It is almost inconceivable. It will be our great misfortune if we let the other nations of the world get more in solid character-building out of the war than we do. True reform and pacifism do not go together.—Theodore Roosevelt in the Metropolitan Magazine.

EXPLANATIONS PAY

Actually, the man behind the counter holds the key to the situation. The retailer has the last word to say concerning prices and distribution. He meets the consumer face to face.

People poke inquiries at him. Often questioned, he has to answer, somehow. As best he can, he explains.

If his explanation is faulty, or if his reply displeases the customer, he may do harm, not only to himself, but also to the goods he is attempting to sell.

It is easy to create prejudice. In the public mind, to-day, suspicion may be quickly lodged. Resentment arises when any "war profiteering" is suggested.

Saving and economy are urged everywhere. Possibly never before, certainly not in the United States in recent years, has there been such a disposition "to do without things that are not really needed."

Higher cost of living, increased prices on nearly everything, while adding to the difficulties of dealers, also may make customers more sensitive. Throughout the cigar business just now, from manufacturer to retailer, it is advisable to be considerate and tactful. Cheerfully given, a clear and fair explanation of existing conditions in the cigar business will cause customers inclined to be suspicious to grumble less.

The average retailer may not be a logician; he may be deficient on statistical information pertaining to the tobacco trade, but at least he should be able to talk sensibly.

The more intelligently the retailer can talk to his customer, the better it will be for the entire cigar trade.

It is directly advantageous for the manufacturer to obtain the co-operation of the retailer.

Whether he raises prices or reduces sizes, whichever course he elects to pursue, the manufacturer will find it profitable by advertising, or otherwise, to advise the retailer rather fully.

Able then to discuss more intelligently the why and wherefore, the retailer can present matters to the consumer in a better light. The manufacturer who supplies a good argument to be used by retailers will lose nothing by it.

The Fate of a Fighting Dog.

A man he owned a terrier dog—
A bob-tailed onery cuss—
And that there pup got that there man
In many an ugly muss;
For the man he was on his muscle,
And the dog he was on his bite,
So to kick the dog-goned ki-yi
Was sure to raise a fight.

A woman owned a Thomas cat,
That fit at fifteen pounds;
The other cats got up and slid
When that there cat was round.
The man and his dog came along one day,
Where the woman she did dwell,
And the pup he growled ferociously,
Then went for the cat pell mell.

He tried to chaw the neck of the cat,
But the cat he wouldn't be chawed,
So he lit on the back of that there dog,
And bit! and clawed! and clawed!
Oh! the hair it flew! and the dog he yowled!
As the claws went into his hide,
And chunks of flesh were peeled from his back;
Then he flummuxed, and kicked, and died!

The man he ripped, and cursed, and swore,
As he gathered a big brickbat,
That he would be darned essentially
If he didn't kill the cat!
But the woman allowed she'd be blessed if he did,
And snatched up an old shot-gun,
Which was fired, and peppered his diaphragm
With bird-shot number one.

They toted him home on a window-blind,
And the doctor cured him up.
But he never was known to fight again,
Or to own another pup.
Folks may turn up their snouts at this here rhyme,
I don't care a cuss for that;
All I want to show is, that fighting dogs
May tackle the wrong Tom cat.

TO REVIVE AN OUTLAWED DEBT

Sometimes a Chance is Offered to Have a Bad Account Made Good

(Copyright 1917 by Elton J. Buckley.)

Except perhaps those fortunate enough to have sold or cash always, quite a few business men have on heir books debts which are more than six years old, nd which are outlawed under the laws of practically ll states. A debt once outlawed cannot be collected, s long as the debtor is shrewd enough not to revive . If it is revived, it can be collected just as if it ere not more than six years old.

Generally speaking, there are two ways of revivng an outlawed debt. One is by paying part of it, ven though a very small part. A man who has owed 500 more than six years and who pays even a dollar n it after the six years have run, revives the whole lebt, and if he is financially responsible, it can be ollected from him.

The other way of reviving a debt more than six ears old is by having the debtor clearly acknowledge t and promise to pay it.

If you can get an outlawed debtor to do either of hese two things, you can get your money, provided ne has it to pay.

Sometimes a debtor will revive an outlawed debt gnorantly, without meaning to, therefore I have seen many creditors shrewdly manipulate things so the debtor would say or do something that would revive the debt, so it could be collected.

An interesting case has just been decided by a State Appeal Court. In Pittsburgh, two men were in partnership as retail grocers. They did a large business, and bought largely, particularly from a New York jobbing house, to which in time they owed $5,000. The jobbing house tried to collect, but could get only promises. Finally, without paying anything, the retail firm were sold out by their landlord for unpaid rent. They did not go into bankruptcy.

This was in 1909. Several years later, in 1912, one of the partners of the defunct firm went into another business, and became prosperous. The New York jobbing house one day sent a representative to him to see if he could not collect something on the old $5,000 debt, which remember was not yet outlawed. The debtor remembered the debt, acknowledged that he owed it, and promised to pay "as soon as I get the money." And he went further. He offered the jobber's representative $50 on account, which, however, was refused on the ground that it was too picayune as a payment on a $5,000 debt. All this was in the presence of two witnesses.

Nothing happened until 1916, when the former partner who had offered the $50, died without having paid anything. The jobber presented the whole claim of $5,000, with interest, against his estate, and collected it, on the ground that the debt had been revived by the debtor's offer to pay $50 on account within the six years. This the lower court upheld, the case was appealed and the Appeal Court has now upheld the verdict in a decision which I will discuss in a moment.

There are two phases of the revival of a debt. Let me illustrate them both:

First.—A man contracts a debt on January 1, 1910. If nothing is done about it until January 1, 1916, the debt is outlawed, because the six-years statute of limitation has expired. After that, however, it can be revived in either of the two ways I have described. And it makes no difference how old it is, either, if the debtor revives it as I have explained.

Second.—A man contracts a debt on January 1, 1910. I have already explained how the debt would automatically outlaw itself on January 1, 1916, if nothing was done about it before. But suppose the debtor in June, 1913, acknowledges that he owes the debt, and promises to pay it within a reasonable time, or better still, makes a partial payment on it. The debt will not now be outlawed until June 1, 1919, for what the debtor did in June, 1913, gave the six-year period of outlawry a new beginning. If he had acknowledged the debt, or made the payment in September, 1915, it would not then have been outlawed until September, 1921.

The case I have described belonged to the second class. The debt was incurred in 1908, but was acknewledged and partial payment offered in 1912, which then became the new beginning for the outlawry period. Therefore the debt would not have been outlawed until 1918, and the claim against the dead partner's estate was in time in 1916.

With all this the court agreed, and it would be so ruled, I think, everywhere. I quote this from the court's decision:

"A clean, distinct and unequivocal acknowledgment of a debt or an existing obligation, such as is consistent with a promise to pay, is sufficent to toll the statute (revive the debt and start a new period of outlawry). There must, however, be no uncertainty either in the acknowledgment or in the identification of the debt. The acknowledgment must be plainly referable to the very debt upon which the action is based, and must also be consistent with a promise to pay on demand and not accompanied by other expressions indicating a mere willingness to pay at a future time. A mere declaration of an intimation to pay is not equvalent to a promise to pay. The acknowledgment must be such as indicates an intention to pay the debt existing at the time of the acknowledgment. The time of payment need not be immediate, but the intention to pay must be present."

In another case a debtor said, speaking of an outlawed debt: "I will pay you all I owe you, and if I can do anything for you before that time I will do so, you need not trouble yourself about me that I will not pay you, for I expect to pay all I owe." The court said this wasn't such an acknowledgment and promise as would revive the debt; it was not sufficiently specific or definite.

In another case the debtor said, in a letter inclosing $50 on account, "I do not know of my own knowledge what I owe you, but I have no doubt you have it correct. I'll send you some from time to time as I can until it is paid." The court said this was a good promise, and revived the debt.

AN ECHO FROM THE SMOKER

What follows is an actual conversation overheard in the smoking car of a New Haven train one day last week.

"Happen to have a smoke, Jim? Broke away from my office to make this train and clear forgot my cigars."

"Certainly," replied the gentleman addressed, "smoke one of my favorite brands, Charles the Great."

"By the way," remarked the first man, "the price has been increased on these cigars, hasn't it?"

"Yes, it has, a little."

"Well, I presume you will be cutting down on your smoking now that cigars cost more."

"No, on the contrary, I will not. Nor do I see why I should. I'm used to good cigars and I certainly am not going to give up smoking because the price has been increased."

"I have heard it said that manufacturers will reduce sizes on cigars rather than increase the price."

"That is another thing I don't believe in, because cigar smokers, as a rule, are particular, and changing sizes will not please them. I know I have been smoking this brand for some time and the size suits me. If they change I'm likely to change myself! Most cigar smokers can afford to pay the slight increase on cigars. They are not real cigar smokers if they quibble over an increase on their favorite brand. Better raise the price than make the cigar inferior or smaller, that is my opinion."

"Don't know but that you are right."

THE TOBACCO SALESMEN

Hold an Unusually Interesting Meeting—Elect and Install New Officers—Make a Splendid Showing.

Interest of the sort that accelerates progress, zeal that develops enduring success, was shown at the meeting of the Tobacco Salesmen's Association in the Hawthorne building, Thursday night. Fifty-one members were present and business of unusual importance was transacted.

MAX LEVY,
First Vice President

The spirited contests associated with the election of officers made manifest the desire of all that the association should be well served during the ensuing year. The successful candidates were: Joseph Ollendorf, president; Max Levy, first vice-president; Leo Lehman, second vice-president; Joseph Freeman, treasurer; Leo Rieders, secretary; Jos. Dublon, Charles A. Bond, Oscar Veit, Robert E. Lane and "Sig" Weil, trustees; Robert E. Lane and Charles A. Bond, delegates to the T. M. A.

In his speech, preliminary to installing the new officers, Past President Sydney Powell made a decided hit. He reviewed the history of the association and paid neatly a well deserved tribute to the retiring president, Joseph Dublon. Also he spoke of the association's future, of the work necessary to promote success and insure harmony.

JOS. FREEMAN,
Treasurer

The new president, Joseph Ollendorf, while holding the record as the association's champion speech maker, also ever has been a most popular and hard working member, one who had the welfare of the association at heart and who, on occasion, never has hesitated to say what he thought.

The favorable position that the Salesman's Association now occupies, due to the growth of membership and the development of greater interest during the past year, is but a stepping stone to higher achievement and increased numerical strength in the months to come.

Steps were taken to proceed with the incorporation of the association. An amendment to the constitution, restricting membership to American citizens, was adopted. Plans were made to give additional zest to the initiatory ceremonies. Candidates were initiated. During the evening, pertaining to the business under consideration, a number of good speeches were made. Refreshments were served. And the meeting, in all respects, was declared to be "a good one."

The Cigars Distributed by the "Would-bes"

Dealers in Philadelphia Avail Themselves of Opportunities to Dispose of Old Stock Just Before Election—More United Cigar Stores for the Quaker City—Bigger Sales in High Grade Clear Havanas—Big Business in Christmas Packages for Soldiers—A Rum Soaked Smoke from Manayunk.

PHILADELPHIA, November 6.—By the time this gets into print all the stale cigars in Quaker city and its environs will have gone up in smoke, or will be crushed under the agonized heel of some young and innocent voter who was casting his first ballot. S'fact, that election day always uses up the supply of hay smokes, not to mention a lot of straw bale, in this city.

In preparation for the great give-away all the cigar men in the city have been trotting out the brands that stopped selling in Civil War days and unloading them. Of course the old-time politicians are not as easy to fool, and sometimes, in campaigns like the one just closed, when money is plentiful, they refuse to take chances on alienating the support of voters by purchasing the old stuff. With the reformers, however, a lot of political innocents are always somewhere near the dough bag and the result is that they get the cabbage primarily because it's cheap, and secondarily because they don't know any better.

It is interesting to note that a cigar dealer—Harry M. Cohen, of 340 South Fifth street—was the first victim in the campaign just closed here, without doubt the hottest in the city. The whole country knows that the fight got red hot in the Fifth ward after a policeman was killed on primary election day, and that a reform movement was started. Also that the campaign has been fought out in the courts and the mayor and a lot of his henchmen are held under heavy bail on charges of conspiracy to murder.

Regardless of all that, however, cigar manufacturers here are still being hard pressed to supply the demand for smokes. Every day labor is getting a little scarcer, and likewise prices are still skyshooting, so far as manufacturing costs are concerned. In the retail field prices have finally settled down to a war-normal basis, which means that all dealers are not charging alike, but no howl is being raised. At the outset of the war tax, some dealers who carry smoking materials as a side line, tried to draw trade by selling at the old prices, but it didn't amount to much.

Thus Ryerson W. Jennings, a fiery old-time Democrat, put up a sign in his restaurant on South Penn square something like this: "All smokes at old prices, for good will." Some time ago we had occasion to chronicle the departure from Ryerson's headquarters of the Schulte store because he wouldn't permit the doors or the transoms to be opened, and steady customers of the Schulte string got tired of mixing the odors of ham and cabbage with their hava-necticuts. Since that time Ryerson has been running a little cigar stand of his own in the corner of his store and it is doing fairly well. The main reason for this is because somebody around the place has a geinus for writing signs. Most of them are take-offs on the national advertising slogans of the more widely known brands and some are quite clever y'know.

Between now and the first of the year the United stores in this city will number about ten more than at present. Several fine locations have been obtained, mostly in sectional centres, the downtown district being now pretty well supplied. We also hear that a corner of some importance centrally located is to be taken over by the United along about the first of the year but pending confirmation we can't give the exact location. Business at all the United stores is on the increase.

Large importers here, such as the M. M. Dalton Co., Henry B. Grauley, Yahn & McDonnell and Godfrey S. Mahn report the demand for high grade "honest to Gawd," made in Havana or Key West cigars is still climbing, regardless of war taxes and extra duties and the rising cost of living. Some of the dealers have it figured out that the dear public thinks it is being skinned if it pays the same old prices for smokes when everything else is costing twice as much. Just to make the kick of increased costs consistent, humanity, which is a contrary element, is buying better cigars and is thereby made happy.

November 15 has been announced as the last date on which packages may be mailed to reach soldiers in France in time for Christmas, and as that date draws near the volume of business handled by local dealers is increasing daily. Most of the local manufacturers, as indicated a few weeks ago in this correspondence, gave up early in the fall the idea of putting out special Christmas packages, because of the shortage of labor and the high cost of wood, tin, pasteboard or any other material used for packing.

Some of these days we expect to get the name and address of a cigar maker in Manayunk, of whom we have heard a great deal. He turns out smokes known to his customers as "dopes." They are made by laying the leaves on a wire frame, beneath which is a pan of Jamaica rum. A big glass bowl is set over the frame and the leaves are allowed to stand until they soak up all the rum. The tale came to us from a man who sat behind a fellow smoking one of the cigars made from these leaves, in a train. He said the odor rendered him unconscious at Harrisburg. Nearly three hours later—it was a slow train—he recovered his senses just as the train was pulling into Broad street station and asked the smoker what sort of gas bomb he had been puffing. He was told it was only a rum doped cigar and got one as a souvenir. Ever since then he has been carrying it around, presumably waiting until he gets somebody he don't like in a corner.

REGARDING THE OUTLOOK

Trade conditions during the past week have been what some manufacturers were pleased to term "lazy." That is, there was little activity in the retail market. And to all appearances things were quiet enough. The whole tax for the tobacco industry went into effect November 3. Tobacco is still on the rise. It is said that Pensylvania tobacco is being hoarded for higher prices.

Dealers in Pennsylvania are holding out for all they can get. Connecticut shade-grown continues on the up grade. Adding to the troubles of all, it is becoming more difficult to secure cigar boxes. The union recently ordered a fifty-five-hour week in place of a sixty-hour one, which helps to restrict production. Box makers have not achieved a normal output for some time and shorter hours will not help them any.

Cigarettes in the new packings of eight and sixteen made their appearance this week and, according to retail dealers, smokers were glad to hear the extra penny had been taken off. That the six-cent price on cigars has come to stay is evidenced by the campaign conducted throughout the country. Lithograph concerns are getting out lots of six-cent stickers and one concern is preparing a series of stickers grading the cigars according to class under the new revenue tax.

That all is not gloomy in the cigar business is shown by several manufacturers who are employing more help and leasing additional space. To quote one: "Don't worry about the future. It will take care of itself in the tobacco trade. What in the world is the use of being grouchy, pessimistic or downhearted?"

LEADERS AND FOLLOWERS

Labor leaders are preaching patriotism, demanding industrial peace, and assuring the Government of co-operation. The country in the meantime is witnessing the spectacle of strike after strike, which have a serious effect on our participation in the war. Are the labor leaders who preach patriotism and co-operation sincere? Let us assume that they are, and that they are striving manfully to stem the tide of unrest and agitation, that they are trying to prevent strikes, and that when they appeal to the patriotism of their followers they are acting from purely patriotic motives themselves. * * *

The worker today sees an opportunity to compel higher wages or shorter hours, or to secure something himself from his employer which under ordinary circumstances he could not get. He finds in his hand a weapon which did not exist before. He finds that the country wants his services badly. He finds that the war cannot be carried on without his aid. He finds that he is an essential part in the great war program. The leader comes to him and tells him, in the name of patriotism, that he must not strike, that he must not riot, that he must cooperate with the Government. The worker remembers that this same leader has preached to him for the past 30 years, perhaps in a different person, but always in the guise of leadership, that what he could get was his by right, and that the methods of getting it were inconsequential.

The man is temporarily dazed by the sudden conversion of the leader from an active agitator and apostle of violence to the pacifist and patriot. Naturally his own training persists, and he wants what he wants in any way he can get it. He comes to the speedy conclusion that the new pose of his leader is simply for the purpose of fooling the people, and with a wink he assures the leader of his friendship and then proceeds to do as he pleases in order that he may get what he wants. The teachings of 30 years cannot be overthrown in a day.—American Industry in War Time.

RETAILERS ORGANIZATIONS.

"During the past month," says Smoke, "several new retail cigar dealers associations have been organized and large additions made to the membership of the old associations. Not only in the west, but also in the east, the retailers are beginning at last to realize that it is only through organization and co-operation can they ever hope to accomplish anything to their benefit. If they had been thoroughly organized years ago, there is no doubt but that they would have been able to successfully combat many of the things that at the present time are proving a serious drawback to their business.

"Among those on the Pacific Coast that have recently organized are Oakland, Cal., with 300 members; Portland, Ore.; Everett, Wash., and Aberdeen, Wash. Large additions have been made to the memberships of the Seattle, Tacoma, Spokane, San Francisco and Los Angeles associations. As all the associations on the Pacific Coast are affiliated with the Western Association of Retail Cigar Dealers, that organization is attaining a position whereby it will be better able to secure those things for which it has fought ever since its formation, and to fight those things to which it has ever been opposed. Already there are signs that its influence is being felt.

"If retailers would only stop and think that individually they are powerless to better the condition under which they are working they would not hesitate for one moment to join their local association. Retailers should be glad that they have in their midst an organization that is working for their good.

ATTESTING APPRECIATION

At the regular meeting of the Staten Island Newsdealers' and Stationers' Association at Eilman's Hall, 521 Bay street, Stapleton, the following resolution, introduced by H. Luloff, was passed unanimously:

1. Whereas The American Tobacco Co.—in spite of the raised prices in material and labor—did not raise the price to the retailer, while other tobacco companies did.

2. And whereas after the war tax came into effect, The American Tobacco Co. did not shift the tax to the retailer, while others did.

3. And whereas The American Tobacco Co. always shows its appreciation and is looking for the co-operation and the welfare of the retailer.

Be It Resolved—

1. That a letter of thanks be sent to The American Tobacco Co. for its just and beneficiary policy.

2. That the retailers should try their utmost to push the goods of The American Tobacco Co. in recognition, and as more profitable than other goods.

3. To give preference to the posters and display advertisements above all the other goods.

Leaders on the Other Side of the World

Big Distributors of Cigars, Cigarettes and Smoking Tobacco in Australasia—H. E. Partridge & Co., Ltd., of Auckland, N. Z., and Sydney, N. S. W.—Specialists in Partagas—Handlers of Brands Made by the Tobacco Products Corporation—Large Dealers in Manilas—Why a Circus Man Prayed.

The average American is not very conversant with the geography of the antipodes. He hardly realizes what the extent of Australasia is. The number of islands that dot the Great South Sea he couldn't guess, even approximately. The continental Commonwealth of Australia, the insular Dominion of New Zealand, the biggest part of New Guinea and isles of the sea, from Easter to Christmas, from Solomon to Macquarie, are Australasian lands. And the South Pacific, from the equator to the antarctic, is chiefest of Australasian seas. Not entirely to the less visited parts of Australasia has civilization spread. But even the more remote islands are developing trade.

Whether it has become commerce, impressively attested by statistics, or remains almost primeval barter in different parts of Australasia, trade there is so constituted that the distribution of tobacco is notably important. Neither easy nor few are the problems that must be solved by the successful distributor of cigars, cigarettes and smoking tobacco in Australasia.

When, besides supplying dealers in New Zealand and Australia, one procures supplies for customers scattered on islands far from the ordinary routes, the task becomes more formidable and the business necessitates forethought and calculation beyond what much larger transactions would require elsewhere.

A man who looks at the map and ponders on distances and diversities would deem it hard indeed to establish a tobacco business extending, in one way or another, throughout Australasia. Yet the achievements of H. E. Partridge & Co., Ltd., tell undeniably what can be, what has been done.

Founded by H. E. Partridge in Auckland, New Zealand, in 1873, this big tobacco house overseas has a most interesting history. H. E. Partridge introduced nearly all the brands that attained popularity in Australasia.

He studied his market; he had new goods sent to him from America and Europe; he wasn't afraid to experiment a little; he took advantage of opportunities presented; he went ahead, he increased his stock, he extended his trade.

In the Far East, especially on the China coast, they say that "Australians are next of kin to Americans." But in the old days a chance American in Australia didn't find any brands of tobacco to which he was accustomed. Years ago the Barnum & Bailey circus, on an Australasian tour, reached Auckland, New Zealand. Soon after he landed, one of the performers happened to enter the Partridge store. When he saw what the show case contained he knelt down on the floor and held up his hands, assuming an attitude of prayer to express his thankfulness.

"Havana cigars and American smoking tobacco! By Gosh!" he exclaimed as he jumped to his feet and proclaimed an intention to buy liberally.

A little army of circus employees besieged the store half an hour afterward. Everybody bought. All were happy. Each man eagerly seized the chance to get the cigars and tobacco he wanted. They kept on purchasing until the stock was depleted. On their travels, later, they spread the fame of the Partridge establishment wherever they went.

Bull Durham smoking tobacco, when first brought to Australasia, did not evoke favorable comment. In fact, conservative storekeepers couldn't see any merit in it.

"I wouldn't try it," a skeptical dealer said, "you can't make cigarettes of that stuff. Pah! It looks like sawdust."

Though the wholesale house of H. E. Partridge & Co. at the outset made no great record in selling Bull Durham smoking tobacco to dealers, a supply of Bull Durham was kept at the Partridge retail store and the possibilities of the brand were not ignored. H. H. Partridge, the son of the founder of the house (now assisting his father in the management of the business) one day gave directions that an unusually large supply of Bull Durham should be ordered by cable. The bookkeeper protested. To him an order of that size seemed most unwise. He called attention to the prejudice entertained by dealers.

"It's a mistake to order so much. I wouldn't order any. It might all spoil on our hands," he urged, "we never can sell that quantity."

"You cable the order. I'll assume the responsibility," young Partridge insisted.

The bookkeeper departed, mumbling something that sounded like "folly." And he delayed cabling the order.

"I waited purposely," he said to Partridge the Younger, the next day, "to give you time to change your mind. Be advised. Consider the risk. It isn't prudent to send that order."

"No arguments," retorted the manager, asserting his authority, "cable that order at once. Just obey directions. I told you I would assume the responsibility. And I haven't changed my mind."

The order was cabled. And, in due tir the Bull Durham tobacco arrived. Placed the storehouse, there it stayed. It wasn't want by the trade. Dealers induced to examine sa ples abruptly declined to buy.

The bookkeeper couldn't help saying to you Partridge, "I told you so."

Came the fleet of American warships sent President Roosevelt on a voyage around t world. Allowed shore leave, blue jackets a marines visited the stores. About the fir thing they asked for was Bull Durham tobacc Vainly the shop keeper would try to s something else.

"Nothing doing!" The American sailo having money to spend, was determined to g the tobacco he wanted. Unable to buy Bu Durham there, he would try elsewhere.

Hundreds of Americans in uniform, strollin through the streets, going from store to stor searching for Bull Durham, caused some of th dealers to remember that H. E. Partridge Co. had offered that particular tobacco week ago.

In honor of the visiting fleet a holiday ha been declared in the city. The morning tha most of the Americans came ashore th Partridge wholesale establishment was closed But a crowd of clamoring shop keepers gath ered before the door. They wanted Bull Dur ham. They wanted it urgently, they wanted i quickly.

The place was opened and kept open nearly all day. Buyers rushed in; purchases were made so rapidly and in such quantities that the entire supply was requisitioned that day.

Of Partagas cigars for Australasia H. E. Partridge & Co., Ltd., have been distributors for many years. The big tobacco merchants of the antipodes are appreciated customers of the famous Havana factory.

In Australia, in New Zealand and in the far scattered islands are many men who have a pronounced preference for Partagas. The excellence of a Partagas cigar is known, even to the pearl fishers on Thursday Island.

To supply certain places (so remote as to be practically inaccessible except for a few times during the year) a carefully worked out system is required. But H. E. Partridge & Co., Ltd., have systematized their arrangements that from their main places of business in Auckland and Sydney they can procure the distribution of Partagas cigars and other goods throughout Australasia.

H. E. Partridge & Co. specialize in Partagas. They import great quantities. They handle many sizes, including some of the finest.

Of Manila cigars also H. E. Partridge & Co. are important distributors. Among cigars more moderately priced, Manilas long have been favored in Australasia. In handling the brands of the Philippine Co., Ltd., distributing chiefly from Auckland and Sydney, H. E. Partridge & Co. have a trade that is large, steady and dependable.

While American cigarettes heretofore have been less conspicuous in Australasian sales, H. E. Partridge & Co., Ltd., have handled the brands of M. Melachrino & Co. somewhat extensively.

And arrangements have been made recently whereby American cigarette exports to Australasia will be considerably increased.

Coming to the United States last August, H. I. Partridge, of H. E. Partridge & Co., Ltd., was desirous of securing cigarettes, acceptable to the Australasian trade, that would not be too high priced when brought into New Zealand or Australia, under the higher duties now prevailing.

After various conferences with officials of the Tobacco Products Corporation, and especially after a visit to Richmond, where he discussed matters at length with President Osterloh, of the Standard Tobacco Co., brands and packings were decided upon that promise to be very satisfactory.

During the months that he has been in the United States, this trip, Mr. Partridge did quite a bit of traveling. In fact, he did more than traverse the country from West to East and North to South. Incidentally he went to Cuba and renewed old friendships with Cifuentes, Pego & Co. His visit to the Partagas factory was important, as while there he placed some large orders and arranged to have shipped, as soon as possible, several hundred thousand cigars.

Having satisfactorily attended to a thousand and one matters that pertain to big business, Mr. Partridge leaves New York, starting on his return journey to New Zealand this week.

Almost as soon as he gets home, he may leave New Zealand again. It is probable that he will go with the next contingent sent from New Zealand to the scene of war. Though a married man, and beyond the age of draft in this country, he is desirous of "doing his bit," remembering the proud record that the "Anzacs" made at Gallipoli and are making in France.

Should he survive the war, he looks forward to the time when he can make other visits to the United States. For he has made many friends here.

INSPIRING SENTIMENT IN THE TRENCH

The Pipe—A War Story From the French

It was a beautiful meerschaum pipe, with a mouthpiece of amber. It represented a zouave's face, cheery and genial, terminating in a double-pointed beard. The tassel of the cap hung down on the neck.

The day when Louis Journée received this pipe—that was an eventful day. One hasn't many distractions in the trenches, and the hours draw along with a desolating tediousness. So the arrival of packages is a powerful dispeller of ennui.

For a long time nothing had come for Journée. He had no relatives, to his knowledge, and was practically alone in the world. He had lived in the streets of Paris—no one knew just how, tenacious of existence, as cats are; by no means good looking, shabby and thin, with a face which seemed to have been carved out of a radish. He had no trade and was forced to make a living out of whatever came along. He was a philosopher in his way. He had learned at least two things. First, that one is never really happy; and, second, that one can always manage not to starve to death.

Louis Journée had been at the front five months when a package was sent to him through the agency of a relief society. It contained some knitted things. The person who made them also sent a gracious little letter. Her name was Mlle. Descossoles. She was certainly one of those maiden ladies who, in a corner of some remote province, seek without much success to satisfy those desires for service which flower in a heart which doesn't know how to grow old.

Journée had much natural politeness. He judged that the gift, even though sent thus indirectly, deserved a personal acknowledgment. He wrote, with some difficulty, a few words of thanks. That bit of a letter quite upset Mlle. Descossoles, who trembled with emotion, in her morose solitude, at the idea of having an interest in some one at the front. Wild with joy, she at once constituted herself the godmother of Journée, and began to send him linen, chocolate and boxes of conserves. A regular correspondence established itself between the soldier and his godmother.

She finally asked him what special thing he wanted most. He refused at first to say. She insisted. At last he told her that it was a pipe.

Then it came, all white and gold, extravagant, comic, luxurious, like an object in a showcase. His comrades gathered about him. They regarded the gift with something like veneration.

Some of them said, their eyes sparkling with covetousness:

"For a pipe, that is really a pipe."

Journée decided finally to fill it and light it. He smoked it with a feeling of blessedness, his brain full of vague and happy ideas, penetrated with the confused feeling that this day was the most memorable in his life, and that a man who could smoke such a pipe is at least the equal of kings..

The next day Migot, a blacksmith of rude appearance but with a sardonic fancy, called out to him:

"Say, Journee, if you are killed by the Boches we shall inherit your pipe."

This pleasantry appealed to all the men. They found it so droll that not a day passed without one of them repeating it. The most stupid repeated it, as well as the most intelligent. Pallons, who was a poor devil of a shepherd and half an idiot, used it no less than Goullainne, who was professor in a faculty.

"Try to get killed quickly, so that we may inherit your pipe!"

At first Journée felt cold chills running down his back; for he had no desire whatever to be killed. But after a while he got used to this specimen of poilu facetiousness.

In writing to his godmother he passed the saying along to her, with a certain pride in showing how general was the opinion of his comrades on that point. But for fear that his benefactress might think ill of his fellows he added candidly:

"But all this, mademoiselle, is only a jest."

Mlle. Descossoles found the pleasantries of the trenches rather peculiar. For her part, she could not understand the humor of that kind of badinage.

One morning very early they asked for volunteers to reconnoitre the enemy's positions. Journée offered himself, as did three others. They crawled to the top of an eminence which dominated the most advanced German lines. While the sergeant who accompanied them noted the lay of the land the men slid down behind the ridge, which protected them. Seated there, they lighted their pipes. Suddenly a shell burst in their midst.

Journée had the upper part of his body torn off and thrown some feet away. The others fell, mangled by the explosion. Only the sergeant escaped. He left his dangerous position and returned slowly to find his company.

"What's the matter?" they asked him. "You are alone."

"A shell," he answered. "All killed."

"And Journée?"

"Journée is there with the others."

Journée was very popular with his comrades. Their faces became grave. Day broke tardily, pale and listless, as if saddened at what it was about to see.

When night came again the sergeant decided that they should go to look for the dead men in order to bury them within the lines. Many offered themselves for that mission. Goullainne and Pallons wished to bring in Journé. The sergeant guided them. From watching so many nights the soldiers had gotten so that they could see pretty well in the darkness. They discovered in the underbrush the dead of the night before. They brought them back for burial.

Safe in the rear, they searched the corpses for their identification papers and for souvenirs.

"And the pipe?" said Migot, when they went through Journée's pockets.

"He was smoking when he was killed," answered sergeant.

They could not find the pipe. Goullainne recalled that he thought he had seen it in the underbrush.

"For Heaven's sake!" cried Migot. "Why didn't you pick it up?"

"You'll have to go and get it yourself."

"I'll go. Journée has always said that he would bequeath it to us, if he were killed. A beautiful pipe like that—would you leave it to the Germans?"

"You are a fool," said the sergeant. "Are you going to go back there now?"

In fact, the bombardment had begun again. All the ground in front of the trenches was slashed with shells. Migot shrugged his shoulders and left the shelter. He crawled slowly and nonchalantly. Dawn came. One could hear nothing but the incessant roar of the cannon. The sun's rays were reflected on the blue tips of the grass.

On a certain large space the soil was dug up here and there and the undergrowth was destroyed. On the earth there was brown spots.

"Here is the place," Migot said to himself.

He looked about him. In a moment or two he spied some feet away Journée's beautiful pipe. He put it in his pocket and returned without mishap. He was received with shouts of laughter.

"Have you got it?"

"I surely have it."

"But while you were away we buried the owner."

Migot walked to the place where Goullainne and Pallons were still digging Journée's grave. The remains rested on a sheet. Migot looked at them. He felt a strange tugging at his heart. Here was another who would never return! What a brave fellow Journée was!

Suddenly he felt in his pocket the pipe, the beautiful pipe. It was heavy as stone. He remembered his ghastly pleasantry and was ashamed. How could he keep that which had been the last consolation of his comrade?

He drew out the white meerschaum pipe with the laughing face of the zouave, and placed it on the sheet which held what remained of Journée.

"Here," he said to the volunteer grave diggers, "bury this, too. Journée ought to have it with him wherever he goes. It came from the only woman in the world who ever gave him even a little of her love."

BIG DEMAND FOR R. I. M. BRAND.

Since announcing three weeks ago that they would place the R. I. M. six-cent cigar in districts out of town, S. Monday & Sons have received orders from jobbers, throughout the entire country. In many cases jobbers ordered goods without making inquiries concerning prices. "The response to our announcement has been remarkable," said Joe Monday, "it has been highly gratifying. Our policy of doing our best for jobber and retailer, to enable each to secure a living profit without doubt has prompted requests for the R. I. M. brand. We try to convince all that a six-cent cigar affords dealers a profit greater than a five-cent one, and frankly, in many cases, the convincing is somewhat difficult."

Distribution of the R. I. M. cigars is increasing daily, but S. Monday & Sons having a large supply on hand, will be able to meet the demand. Having manufactured many cigars before beginning the sales campaign, there will not be shortage for some time.

Regulations for Smoking in Factories—Killeen Distributes 200,000 Peter Schuylers—Out of Arctic Waters and Doc Cook Icicles—Under a Campaign Hat—Entering the Trench Bins of the Retail Trade—The Triple Importance of W—When Sherry Tufts Goes to Sea—A Dissertation on Matches.

New York State Capitol District, November 5, 1917.

Instead of chawin triplemint an' p'raps a bit of ral Battle Ax when the floor foreman happens to t at the 'tother end of the shop, employees of any lew York State factory may once again puff a moke, providing they live up to the revised regulions of the just issued rules of the Industrial Ommission.

First thing, the factory folk must apply in writin' rough the employer to the Commission. This plant ill then be inspected by the 'spectors of the State aff.

In case of a cigar factory, the sampling, testing and perimental room has got to be in a fire-proof ilding. Same with cigarette factories. Automatic rinklers, though, will do in lieu of complete fire otection.

But, if the shop has no such system, the smoking r tests must be done in offices, sample rooms, of me separate room at least, enclosed by partitions f fire-proof material. And the Commission insists ere shall be absolutely no manufacturing whatever in these special testing laboratories.

Any cigar or cigarette factory employing less than x people need not follow the above clause unless is located in a tenement house, and then the same nditions will be enforced as they apply to the larger ops.

Taking the subject as a general proposition, smoking ay be permitted in buildings where the contents e ordinary merchandise, either non-inflammable or combustible.

"When I sold cigarettes," remarked Lord Hiscoe, rmerly of the Tobacco Products field, "my Nestor ales would have to be large indeed to number only 4 orders a week. Now, in this Quaker Oats game, I ell two dozen cases of pan cake flour in an entire eek, and I make a record. My nearest competitor old but 11 cases."

Then me lud filled and lighted his nearschaum, fter which he proceeded to pack his kit for a run to Buffalo, and south to New Orleans, where a crew of ix men will soon learn to sell oats and flour like A. W. Hiscoe, the Nestor of cigarette salesmen.

Over in Schenectady, Distributor L. W. Killeen has een selling around 200,000 Peter Schuyler cigars nnually without half trying. This only goes to show he firm grip G. W. Van Slyke and Horton's ten-cent rand has got on the Capitol District, notwithstanding he serious effort frequently made by rival brands to ut the Albany-Kingston leader in second place.

On Tuesday last, the Troy dealers were proud of he fact that theirs was the only city in the Greater Million circle having the first snow of the season. Business, they said, was much better with the snow, ight though it was, than in the rain which preceded nd then followed the baby blizzard.

Down there at Bethlehem Center, though where he Belshazzar Ballet dances the boanerges, or hunder clog, there you'll find something even more emarkable than the Troy snow.

And that is Phil Hart's polar bear! There he is, coming out of Arctic waters and Doc Cook icicles, ntirely surrounded by the certified and warranted biggest pile of snow in the country!

This great white bear doesn't advertise cigars, even hough a nearby sign tells us to "Get behind a Peter Schuyler ten-cent cigar." But his ponderous majesty does announce the "Greatest Show on Earth," coming, June 25! So, you see, you don't have to go to Baliol College, Oxford, to learn how to keep snow all summer around your sunny front door when a twenty-four sheet poster will perform the trick, coolly and comfortably, while Troy yells to Nirvana about a mere handful of wet snow in October!

Playing his pipes and striding along with the swirl nd swing of Mac Cailean Mhor, Chief of the Clan Campbell, that Dunwoodie Scotsman, Stephen A. Diekhaus, writes from Jersey City that he will soon appear in the Capitol District with some holiday pipes in his sporran. Of course, that old familiar triangle, embracing the famous W. D. C., will about be the shackamaxon of Diekhaus, king-of-kilts.

Chapeau Americain is simply petit suisse, or best French cheese for the pyramidical lid of the American soldier. It is also ordinarily called a campaign hat, as you probably know. So the Payn Tobacco Co., Albany, desirous of starting a selling and advertising campaign for their B. & M. cigar, struck upon a chapeau of real cloth, and a necktie of real red, to go along with the smiling faced fellow who requests you to smoke a B. & M. with him from the cardboard of a very attractive window and interior display sign.

Another novelty of the Payn plant is a combination cigar cutter and change tray recently issued for the counters of dealers selling their Anndora ten-cent brand. This is an expensive piece of publicity at the prevailing rate of costs on this class A material.

Gradually, and with as little confusion as possible under the circumstances, the new packages of eights in all-tobacco and paper cigarettes are entering the trench-bins of the retail trade in this salient. Among the latest arrivals are Meccas, Sovereigns, Sub Rosas, Jack Roses and the 16-packet of Meccas. Others are on the way from manufacturers' and jobbers' stocks.

President Braz of Brazil hasn't anything at all on W. W. Weeks for al-lit-er-ation, not a milreis, nor even a nickel! And that jazz band of I. W. W. chevaliers had better look out! Or they'll be pinched for infringement of the W. W. Weeks' passchendaele patents and camembert copyrights! Because no two organizations like the I. W. W. and the Benito Rovira Co. can both have title to the longest line of double double yous and triple double yous at one and the same time. This has been decided by the Appellate Division, as Bruce Macdonald has frequently affirmed.

Besides, the I. W. W. has a slogan something like "I Won't Work," while W. W. Weeks is widely welcomed as the "Winning Welfare Worker."

Tobacco, last week, had the actual W. W. Weeks in half-tone. While the Capitol District, this week, had the real W. W. Weeks in full-tone.

Whether or not he sent any orders to 311-313-315-317-319-321 East 62d street, Borough of Manhattan, you'll have to ask Benito Rovira Co.—or the mail man, who curses roundly and squarely every time W. W. Weeks goes forth upon one of these sellers-in-the-city tours, which invariably result in lumbago for the m-m-man, and therefore considerably more than Three Weeks of factory frenzy for strippers, cigarmakers, packers, shippers, bookkeepers and bosses at the Palais Royale of El Arabe.

"Good gracious!" ejaculated salesman Sibley of the M. J. Canaday staff, Hotel Ten Eyck, Albany. "Some of our patrons approach the cigar stand in the morning with an awful grouch! They want what they want when they want it, and they want it in a most abrupt and offensive manner. But I got to thinking it over, the other day, and I have arrived at the decision that most of these big men why stay here are in a peck of trouble lately. What with war taxes, shrinking of stock market values, and ascending expenses, these customers are wild, and they take it out partly upon the cigar man!"

Der Tag, the day that Bill Hohenzollern, Von Tripwits, those Svengalis of the German Empire, became brothers Beta and Zeta, the star-horns of Jeremiah O'Leary's Bull, something happened to their pet-prize at Hoboken!

For it was then that many marines and sammies put the curse of Meroz on the 'leven million dollar Vaterland, leviathan pride of the Hamburg-American line, and naval reserve for the imperial fleet.

Now, this boat, with its folderols of mahogany, byzantines, priceless paintings, was practically the personal property of the kaiser himself!

So its seizure by the customs bureau, aided by the United States army and navy, was a citrus-to-caesar! Might just as well taken a chisel and chopped the legs of Bill's plauen daschund! Gosh! he vos mad! Flooey! Flooey!

Well, who do you suppose helped the Hoboken Teaser-party to do this to the Prussian pinyon-nut? Teddy Rosenfelt? John L. Sullivanosky? Israel Putnam?

Do you give up? Pooh, pooh, man, it was Sherry Tufts! Sure, you recollect Sherry! Remember when Sherry used to sell cigarettes? Melachrinos, and such? Well, he did. Right here in Albany, too.

Yes, it was Sheridan Tufts, alright! And he wasn't twenty miles away at Winchester, either, but right there in Hoboken-by-the-sea!

Since that memorable day—der tag, Sherry calls it—the 600 German firemen and the rest of the 1,100 men of the crew have been interned in a brewery.

So the Government called for volunteers to man the sock-dollager of a canoe, and they especially requested Admiral Tufts to go along as a deck officer.

Will he go? He will, if Mrs. Tufts and baby Tufts let him, so it really looks a lot as though the cigarette industry will be obliged to obtain another navigating Thode Fagerlund to run things around here until Sherry returns to his proper part in the show—the greatest show on earth—this tobacco business!

"Matches, especially safeties, are pretty punk just now," moaned a Capitol District dealer. "Oh, perhaps, I should say punk is even better than matches at the present time. Every smoker who drops a cent in the slot for a box of this flint and tinder expects a bundle of fairly good flamers for the penny. Then they are disappointed! Particularly with those Nipponese or Jap matches. For they flash, flutter, flunk! Else the stick snaps, always when the man is in a rush, too. What the smoker then says ought to make any old match burn, either in shame or rivalry. Still, there is one very good match, rather difficult to obtain. It is a red stick, quite slender, with a yellow head. There is a label trade-mark of a full-rigged ship, which, if I'm not mistaken, is branded 'Viking Ship.' Who the distributors are I don't know. But, on the box is the odd name of Jonkopings & Vulcans, T. F. A. B., Sweden. That lucifer is certainly worth the smoker's penny, and it's too bad the goods are so scarce on the market to-day."

TO ISSUE LICENSES

To Manufacture Articles Patented in This Country by Enemy Aliens—Federal Trade Commission Regulations.

Washington, D. C., November 5.—The Federal Trade Commission last week issues regulations under which articles patented in this country by enemy aliens may be manufactured by American producers. The Commission gets the authority for this under the recently passed Trading-With-the-Enemy Act. Licenses will be issued for the life of the patent, and not merely for the duration of the war, but exclusive licenses will not be granted to individual firms.

It is understood that the new regulations affect some 20,000 patents, including many of great value to American industries. The use of trade marks, copyrighted labels and similar trade devices will be granted in exceptional cases, in connection with the use of the patent.

It must be shown that the licensing will be for the public welfare, that there is a demand for the article not now being supplied and that the applicant is equipped to manufacture it. The licensee will also be required to file with the Trade Commission a semi-annual report of the business done.

C. H. McDonald of Wisconsin, chairman of the Board of Review of the Trade Commission, will have charge of administering the regulations, assisted by Edward S. Rogers, of Chicago, and Francis J. Phelps, of Washington, as advisers. Commissioner Fort is supervising the patent work.

Frank Bailey, representing the M. Perez Co., is visiting the Michigan trade.

Restrictions Cause a Decline in Exports of Manufactures

It is now practicable to estimate the effect of the recent restrictions upon the export trade of the United States, or at least the changes in that trade which have followed the President's proclamation prescribing limitations upon exportation. This original proclamation was issued July 8, to become effective on July 15, and was followed by sundry orders and regulations further affecting the outward movements of merchandise of various classes.

The list of articles for which export licenses are required, which at first was limited, was enlarged from time to time a list of commodities issued in the latter part of October for which export licenses will be required, including several hundred individual items or articles, while another list was issued in October enumerating several hundred articles which might still be exported without license.

The restriction has been in effect since the middle of July, and it is now possible to present figures of the export trade for the months of July, August and September. Each of these three months shows a marked fall-off in exports when compared with the corresponding months of the preceding year. July showed a fall of approximately $70,000,000, August $20,000,000, and September $59,000,000. Every month of the year prior to that in which the embargo became effective had shown an increase in export, every month since the embargo has shown a decrease. In the six months prior to July 1 the exports increased 30 per cent.; in the three months following the embargo they decreased 10 per cent.

The table which follows shows the exports in the first nine months of 1917 compared with the corresponding months of 1916 and increase or decrease in each month:

	1916. Total Exports of United States.	1917. Total Exports of United States.	Increase or Decrease in 1917 Compared with 1916. Increase.	Decrease.
January	$330,036,410	$613,324,582	$283,288,172	.....
February	401,783,974	467,648,406	65,864,432	.....
March	410,742,034	553,985,699	143,243,665	.....
April	398,568,532	529,927,815	131,359,283	.....
May	474,803,637	550,063,934	75,260,297	.....
June	464,685,956	573,653,117	108,967,161	.....
July	444,713,964	374,467,368	.....	$70,246,596
August	510,167,438	490,009,828	.....	20,157,610
September	514,924,134	456,201,567	.....	58,722,567

To how great an extent the "embargo" so-called, or the requirements of export license for a large number of articles of domestic production, has affected the export trade cannot be statistically determined, though the fact that the exports of the six months preceding these restrictive regulations exceeded those of the corresponding months of the preceding year by an average of over one hundred million dollars per month, and that the exports since such regulation have shown a fall of about fifty million dollars per month suggests that this restriction has been effective.

It is quite possible, however, that the apparent fall-off in export since July is more "apparent than real," in view of the fact that the merchandise now being exported by the Government, when sent on Government transpo[rt] is not included in the official reports of m[er]chandise exported, and as there are no offi[cial] records of the merchandise so sent by Gove[rn]ment, it is impossible to determine how m[uch] of the apparent fall-off in exports since July [is] due to the omission from the official exp[ort] records of merchandise now passing out of [the] country by this class of vessels.

The fall-off in exports occurs entirely [in] manufactures. In the month of July both m[a]ufacturing material and foodstuffs showed [an] increase, and manufactures a marked decrea[se], and this was true in an even greater extent [in] the month of August. In July manufactur[ing] material exported showed an increase of ab[out] two million dollars and foodstuffs an increa[se] of about four million dollars, while finished m[a]ufactures showed a fall of seventy million d[o]lars. In August manufacturing material [ex]ported showed an increase of fifty million d[o]lars, and foodstuffs an increase of eight[y] million dollars, while finished manufactu[res] showed a fall of eighty-five million dollars, th[us] making it perfectly apparent that the fall-off [in] exports occurs exclusively in manufactu[res]. For the month of September, in which the to[tal] fall-off amounts to fifty-nine million dollars, [no] details are yet available.

The Anglo-Virginian Tobacco Co., manuf[ac]turer of cut and plug tobaccos, which was [to] have opened its factory in Truro, Nova Sco[tia] this month, has decided to defer this move [un]til May of next year. It is said that difficulties [in] getting leaf have caused the postponement.

Western Retailers Meet Manufacturers' Agents in San Francisco to See What Can Be Done Concerning Cigarette Prices—Arkelian Will Plant 50 Acres of Tobacco Near Sunnyvale, Cal.—Philippine Cigarettes for American Soldiers in France—United Cigar Stores for Petaluma.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 31.—The retail dealers all have been up in the air over the cigar, cigarette and tobacco situation, and there has been no uniformity in the prices charged the public. To remedy this situation the Western Retail Cigar Dealers' Association is in conference in this city with representatives of manufacturers' agents. Representatives from ten Western States are in the conference, which is being conducted behind closed doors. It is expected that out of this meeting an agreement will come which will place the sale of cigarettes on a stable basis again. The matter of the price of cigars will not be considered at this meeting, as the manufacturers have not yet been able to reach a decision upon the effect of the new Government taxes. The cigar situation will be taken up by the association as soon as this uncertainty is dispelled.

The local retail association is in a prosperous condition and at its last regular meeting it took in 142 new members.

Many of the distributors are complaining of the freight situation and say that their freight is frequently from three to four weeks on the way. Business is very good, but deliveries are being delayed on account of the freight situation. Some complaint is also made of the slowness of manufacturers in filling orders, but it is generally recognized that the entire situation is abnormal, and that it will take time to regulate it.

H. H. Manley, coast manager for the American Cigar Co., has just returned from a trip to Los Angeles in the interest of the Chancellor cigar. He reports business excellent, and says that his trade on the coast is fully double what it was last year.

R. H. Manley, representative for the Havana-American Co., selling the El Belmont cigar in northern California, says that his business is increasing by leaps and bounds. He claims that his company is the only one which has not increased the price, excepting the war tax, on goods of the class which he handles.

S. Goslinsky, of E. Goslinsky & Co., manufacturer of El Primo Havana cigar, leaves this week for the East and Cuba to buy leaf tobacco for his factory.

Ed. Allenburg, one of the best known cigar salesmen on the coast, has just recovered from a long illness, and is now city salesman for E. Goslinsky. He was formerly associated with H. L. Judell & Co.

Marx Bros. have just received a large shipment of cigars and tobacco from Manila.

Hyman Hyman, a well known cigar merchant of this city, passed away yesterday after a long illness. Arrangements for the funeral are being made by his old time friend Ike Falkenstein, of M. A. Guntz & Co.

One hundred and three thousand cigarettes and many hundred cigars, consigned to the American soldiers in France, were a part of the cargo of the last army transport reaching "a Pacific port" from Manila. Manila tobacco firms propose to donate that many smokes for the American soldiers each month. The Germinal Cigar Co. donated 100,000 of the cigarettes, and the La Insular Tobacco Co. donated 3,000 cigarettes and cigars.

The Tanforan Cigar is preparing to make extensive window displays in both Los Angeles and San Francisco. The first in this city is a very handsome window in the store of Sam Newmark, on Montgomery street.

H. L. Judell & Co. report that the dealers are getting accustomed to the new prices made necessary by the war tax, and that the public is not complaining. This firm is insisting that all its goods which are listed at $37.50 per thousand be sold to the public at five cents straight. This includes about fourteen brands.

Holiday goods will begin to arrive next month, Mr. Judell reports, and he is showing some advanced samples which are beautiful. One of these is the In-B-Tween cigar, which is packed in an attractive box and which will sell for one dollar. Another feature that is being shown by this firm is a carton for shipping cigars abroad to the soldiers, with a return postal card attached. They are also putting out the Tom Moore for the holiday trade wrapped in silver foil and labeled "Sterling."

Milton Glass, of H. L. Judell & Co., has returned from his trip in the San Joaquin valley, and is now in the Salinas valley covering the trade. Mannie Cohn is in Nevada, where he is meeting with great success.

William Yochem, of the Girard factory, was in San Francisco this week visiting the trade.

Agents for the United Cigar Stores Co. have recently visited Petaluma, Cal., and have secured options on several stores there with the object of purchasing them and entering that field. The company has been figuring on locating in Petaluma for several years, but never was able to secure the location it desired.

J. H. Arkelian, one of the largest cantaloupe growers in the world, has started work preparatory to planting 50 acres with tobacco near Sunnyvale, seven miles from San Jose, Cal. His company has been experimenting for a year and feels confident that the venture will prove a great success.

The Hotels and Restaurants Division of the United States Food Administration has received a report from New York City that out of 225 members of the Society of Restaurateurs 224 have adopted a "meatless" Tuesday and a "wheatless" Wednesday.

Romeo y Julietta Factory in Havana Proposes to Be Well Provided with Desirable Leaf—Havana Commission Merchants Receive Important Orders by Cable—Little Remedios Left—Larger Demand for Vuelta Fillers—Prices Ascending—Transplanting Begins—A Bigger Acreage.

HAVANA, November 2.—Mainly to orders cabled to Havana commission merchants, was due the activity in the leaf market here during the past week. The tendency of prices still is upward. There are hardly any holdings of Remedios leaf left unsold in the Santa Clara province, although it is said that one lot of about 600 bales could be had at $85 per qq., for the first capaduras, and $75 for second capaduras. As these prices are above the figures quoted on the Havana market, no buyer as yet has been found to take this escogida.

In the Vuelta Abajo there are vegas that can be bought, as the escogidas are not all finished. Also there are a number of factory vegas unsold in the local market. The previous quiet tone for Partido resagos continues, as the demand has decreased perceptibly. Inquiry for Partido fillers, separately, however, is quite good, but leaf dealers and packers will not sell them alone, they insist upon selling a running lot instead. Colas of Vuelta Abajo and Semi Vuelta, as well as the low grades of Remedios, are selling well at somewhat stiffer prices.

An American leaf grower in the Santa Clara province reports that he will commence transplanting Monday, and that there are enough seedlings at moderate price. Therefore, planting should become general soon. Furthermore, he said that many vegueros, who had devoted some of their fields to the cultivation of sugar cane, were returning to their first love, and would plant tobacco, thanks to the prospect of getting good prices for their product. It will now depend upon the temperature, whether we will have larger, and perhaps lower priced leaf, in the year to come. Planting in the Vuelta Abajo and Partidos may not become general until the second half of this month, as the majority of the seedlings are too small yet to be transplanted.

Sales during the last two weeks totaled 20,442 bales, divided into: Vuelta Abajo and Semi Vuelta, 6,244; Partido, 1,647, and Remedios, 12,551 bales.

Buyers were: Americans, 13,943; exporters to Europe (Spain), 2,500; shippers to South America, 360, and local manufacturers of cigars and cigarettes, 3,639 bales.

Exports of cigars, from Havana, per S. S. Panuco, totaled 585 cases, containing 2,382,910 cigars, and which were consigned to the following countries, viz: To United States, 1,366,520; Great Britain, 791,040; Canada, 76,350; Switzerland, 62,000; France, 23,500; Argentine Republic, 20,000; Australia, 17,550; Uruguay, 10,050; British Africa, 8,500; British East Indies, 4,500, and St. Thomas, W. I., 2,900 cigars.

The S. S. Reina Maria Cristina took in all 130 cases with 594,920 cigars, for Spain.

The only leaf buyer who arrived this week was Benito Rovira, of the Benito Rovira Co., New York. He is actively at work making selection of leaf tobacco for the coming year.

Cigar manufacturers here are extremely busy filling orders for the approaching holiday season in the United States, as well as in trying to rush out as many orders as possible for Great Britain, before the end of next month. One manufacturer said that he thought the reason for the hurry might be owing perhaps to a fear of another raise in the duty on cigars during the coming month of January. Such an explanation seems plausible. The French steamer Venezuela may take a large cargo of cigars on her return here from Vera Cruz.

Romeo y Julieta continues to be rushed. The factory has purchased 12,000 bales of leaf tobacco for both the cigar and cigarette production in the last ten months, and manufactured 2,000,000 cigars during the past month for export and home consumption. Romeo y Julieta also subscribed $20,000 for the Liberty bonds of the United States.

Partagas is no less busily occupied in the filling of the orders on hand, for export to all countries, as well as for the interior demand. The owners, Cifuentes, Pego & Co., have purchased 1,500 bales of leaf tobacco in October, and shipped abroad and all over our island 2,000,000 cigars, during the month of September.

Hermann Upmann, the senior partner of H. Upmann & Co., sent a check of $10,000 as his personal contribution to the Cuban Red Cross Society, as was published by our daily press; while we hear the banking firm subscribed $60,000 for the purchase of Liberty Bonds. The cigar factory, H. Upmann, is very busy forwarding large quantities of cigars to the United States for the holiday trade.

Hoyo de Monterrey cigars are having a big call all over the American Union, and La Escepicion factory of Hija de José Gener is working very actively at present.

Punch has its principal stronghold in the United Kingdom, where its cigars are always called for, although its business with the American importers is increasing from day to day. The owner, Manuel Lopez, cannot be urged to rush any orders, as he is too jealously guarding the reputation of his brand, that all the cigars shipped are up to the high standard of quality and workmanship constantly maintained, and unless he has all the time required in filling an order, he will refuse it.

Calixto Lopez & Co. are very busy on holiday orders for the United States, England, Australia, South Africa and South America. Saturnino Alvarez has entered the factory as foreman of the escogida.

Belinda is working to full capacity for American importers principally. Henry Clay and Bock & Co., Por Larrañaga and Ramon Allones are all very busy.

A Strenuous Week in Chicago

A Lot of Things That the Trade Went Through

CHICAGO, November 2.—The trade has passed through a strenuous week. Everything is all upset. Dealers do not co-operate. Consequently, all over the city different prices are found. On the south side Camels are sold in many places for 15 cents. In the western section one can buy them for 11 cents; on the north side they retail for 12 and 13 cents; in the loop, the prices run 10, 11 and 12 cents. These same conditions are found regarding prices on many brands of cigars and cigarettes, and throughout the city there is great confusion. Lots of kicks—constant queries, "How are we going to exist by paying the prices asked for goods?" When these fellows are told to raise prices they say they can't do it as the next dealer won't stand for a raise and he will get the business. Things must change here and when the full revenue tax goes into effect on November 4 and all prices are advanced again, the dealers who lack "nerve" will take a tumble and force up their prices. While Chicago still has its original cigar dealers associaion in existence and "money in the bank" none of its officers will start the ball rolling and try and get everybody in line.

San Felice and Tom Keenes, two of the biggest sellers on this market, went up yesterday to $43. Other brands will advance shortly.

The United Cigar Stores Co. has renewed for five years the lease on the store at the northwest corner of Harrison and State streets at a rental of $22,500 for the term.

The trade has been notified by E. Regensburg & Sons that Admirations advanced in price November 1. The old Bon Ton size is now front marked Perfectos and cost $90. The Belvidere is to be called Bon Tons and cost $72. The old Perfecto will be known as After Dinners and cost $98. Deliciosos size has increased to $98; Gems to $19.50 and Minatures to $12.50. A new size has been brought out to be known as Belvideres; it will be a blunt shape and go to the retailer at $65.

J. H. Weiss & Co., at 329 South La Salle street, make a big showing of Mi Lola, a Milwaukee made cigar. For a new comer Mi Lola is making a lot of friends at this well known store.

The Chicago Retail Cigar Dealers' Association has been incorporated by Harry Kauter, Joseph B. Drell and S. D. Guthmann.

A new United store will be opened shortly at 305 E. 55th street.

In front of several stores on the south side one sees large glass signs advertising S. Palo, mild Havana cigars.

Meyer Bernstein, who owned the Apollo Cigar Store at 522 E. 47th street, "got patriotic" and closed the store at this address and moved to Rockford. He will open a cigar and billiard parlor near the main entrance of Camp Grant.

Cressida, the superb clear Havana of E. H. Gato Cigar Co., is moving well with Shoemaker & Co. in the Ashland Block.

El Continuo Smokers, selling 4 for 25 cents, is a new offering from the factory of the San Alto Cigar Co.

The Harmon Cigar Co., which entered the retail trade in the loop during the past summer with two up-to-date cigar stores, has just opened store number three at 115 South Dearborn street. Store number one is located at 27 East Jackson and store number two at 306 West Jackson.

Idolita, a Havana wrapped 5-cent cigar made in Tampa by Jose Escalanta & Co., has been advanced in price. A notice has reached the trade that in the future the Idolitas cost $37.50, less the usual discounts. This means a discount of 10 per cent. and 2 per cent. when bought direct from the factory and 5 per cent. and 2 per cent. when bought through the distributors, Lilienfield Bros.

You ought to see the bunch of orders for El Roi Tans that A. A. Derrig is turning in to the distributors, Reid Murdoch & Co. these days. "Der." is making his boss, Ernest MacKenzie, step some to keep up. There's a reason for Derrig's great showing. He is a very pleasing fellow and takes well with the trade.

E. G. Bennett has "grabbed" off a couple of fine Christmas orders. One was for 18,000 El Roi Tans and the other was for a bunch of La Douzeflas in the panatela shape, his private brand made by Harris-Schwarz Co.

Harold Hild, foreman in a local cigar factory, was married a few days ago.

Things swirling into the holiday rush. Dealers are busy getting customers in line. Many large orders have been booked. Holiday goods are reaching town in great shape and many fine packings are shown. Boxes of ten retailing for one dollar are very scarce and boxes of 25 cigars are not overly plentiful.

Harry Pethick, in the Heyworth Building, just got his first shipment of Romeo-Garcia cigars from Harris-Schwarz Co. Seven sizes are being shown to his trade.

All the cigarette houses have their men working the dealers on the Christmas packages of 50 and 100 cigarettes.

Harry Totten is resting easy at his summer home on the North Shore. Harry's stogie factories are so far behind in filling orders that he has decided to "rest up" for the rest of the year.

Fred Oakes is away on a three weeks' trip, the last of the year for E. H. Gato Cigar Co.

Howard Knowles, the buyer for the Harvey System of Kansas City, paid Chicago a flying visit a few days ago.

Spring Maid, the new 3 for 10 cents stogie, jobbed by Nathan Fox Co., is being placed with the trade.

IN STRENUOUS CHICAGO

This is the very latest and finest of R. J. Lytle's line of stogies.

The Independent Drug Co. has opened store No. 10 at Grand Boulevard and 51st street. Store No. 11 will be opened December 1 at 55th and Halsted streets. They sell a pile of cigars.

The Havana-American Co., which a short time ago notified the trade here that there would be no rise in the price of their cigars other than the increased war tax for the balance of the year, has again notified the trade from their New York offices that on January 1, 1918, all prices will be advanced and all orders on hand on that date will be filled at the new prices.

Jose Garcia, of Perfecto Garcia & Bro., Tampa, says there will be no raise in his prices.

The police are raising the very "old Nick" with "cabaret" restaurants. Several have been raided and closed up during the past two weeks. Among the largest was the Blue-Bird room of the Hotel Bismark. It looks like the end of cabarets in this reformed town.

Just to say "How'dy," Admiration Cohn, of the sales force of U. Fox & Co., called in and said business was good. While his two leading sellers—Lozano and Admiration—have gone up in price, he does not think he will have much trouble with his loop trade. Cohn has both of these brands well established in the down-town section.

La Azoras, which formerly sold at $72 with a 10 per cent. gratis deal, have changed in price. With the full war tax they will cost in the future $70, less the trade discount with the gratis deal discontinued.

J. H. Weiss & Co., with stores at 329 South La Salle street and the Webster Building, have added two new sizes of Romeo Garcia cigars, Kismets, selling at 10 cents, and Romeos at 2 for 25 cents.

High Life cigars selling at 15c. straight and packed in glass jars containing 50 cigars are now on sale in all of the Breitung stores.

E. G. Bennett is finding a steady sale on his private brand La Douzella in the blunt and panatela shapes.

When Al Belmont, cigar buyer for McNeill & Higgins Co., took on the agency of Eden imported lines he copped a live wire. His opening order was for 25,000, all in the finest sizes. Edens are getting stronger every day in sale. With his force of cigar salesmen Edens are bound to become leaders in the imported line. This was one of Clark Cutlers best deals of the year.

Ernest McKenzie, "Old Nick Carter," of the El Roi Tan force, must be out of town on a wind up trip of the year; we don't see him at his usual haunts. In his absence El Roi Tan force is cleaning up the city trade. The boys are combing the city very close and have a 90 per cent. distribution.

Bargains offered by the department stores during the past week: The Fair, "John Ruskin," 50 for $1.78; Roi Tan, boulevard size, 50 for $4; 11c. Tuxedo, 8 tins for 66 cents; Bull Durham, 12 packages for 49 cents, and Velvet, 10-cent tins, 8 for 65 cents.

Boston Store, Tuxedo, Velvet and Prince Albert, 5 for 44 cents; Chas. Denbys, Little Tom, Tom Keene and La Azora Operas, 6 for 25 cents or 50 for $2. Tip Top, Durham and Barker, 12 5-cent packages 50c.

Rothchilds, 200 Arcadia cigarettes for $1.25; Hansel & Gretel H. C., 10-cent size, 5 for 33 cents, 50 for $3.20; El Roi Tan Belvideres 5 for 35 cents, 50 for $3.45; Chas. Denbys, 6 for 25 cents, 50 for $1.98; John Ruskins, 7 for 28 cents, 50 for $1.85. Tuxedo, Serene, Prince Albert and Velvet, 4 tins for 35 cents; 7 Pride Mark 5-cent cigars for 25 cents, 50 for $1.69.

TOBACCO SHORTAGE IN ENGLAND.

It is somewhat irritating to have short supplies. Nothing is so vexatious as for a trader to be faced on the one hand with an eager demand and on the other with a meagre supply. The actual dealer in tobacco, who serves the public, however, is not the only person who has to maintain a sweet temper when things are not going as smoothly as in peace times. There is the manufacturer. He is as vexed not to be able to fully fulfil his orders as is the retailer. For if the latter has a crowd of smokers to please, the manufacturer has all his old customers to do the best by that lies in his power.

But the manufacturer has a new customer, one much more powerful and deserving and important than any of the old ones on his books. His new customer is a big fellow who is worth serving, first because he is the biggest and best and is fighting both for the manufacturer and the retailer. This big fellow is the Government. And when the Government wants smokes for the boys, and wants them in large quantities and prompt delivery, that demand must be met—not as a profitable thing, but as a patriotic duty. There are no short supplies. Tobacco is in full supply, but the Tommies come first easily and entirely. Tobacconists and their civilian customers come second—and considering the war has lasted three years it is a jolly good second.—London Tobacco.

Conscription or Selective Draft for Cuba

The Island Republic Prepares to Take a More Active Part in the War—The Most Important Measure Before the Cuban Congress, which Convenes This Week—President Menocal's Recommendations—An Example for Other Latin-American Countries.

HAVANA, November 4.—Either conscription or the selective draft will be authorized by the Cuban Congress, which will convene tomorrow. The raising and equipment in the near future of a strong military force, in line with President Menocal's recommendations in his last message, and with the plan of Cuba's Council of National Defense, await only the determination of the method to be followed, rather than the wisdom of the policy of General Menocal and his advisers, who are determined that Cuba's alliance in the war against Germany shall take on a most active character. Leaders of both political parties are in accord with the raising of a large military force—possibly doubling the present strength of the regular army and militia of more than 25,000 men, and a similar strengthening of naval units and personnel. Whatever differences exist on the eve of the session are solely as to conscription or its alternative.

In the Senate Vice-President Emilio Nuñez will convene the lawmakers, and Dr. Ricardo Dolz, new speaker of the House of Representatives, will address his colleagues on the military programme which Cuba is to follow, now that her war plans are on the eve of consummation. Legislators have reached the Capital from every part of the island, and a public demonstration of loyalty to Cuba's allies is expected when the Congressmen and Senators take their seats.

Whatever the character of the military measures to be enacted, all indications are for speedy action. The attitude of the Conservatives—the party in power, which at first was lukewarm toward universal military service, has become more and more pronounced in its favor, and statements of the leaders show that there will be no opposition to the increase of Cuba's war strength. The Liberals, on the other hand, have no programme of opposition, and the administration press hails conscription or the selective draft as a fortunate omen of Cuba's loyalty, and her national integrity at a time when the attitude of President Menocal has determined Cuba's leadership in war policies throughout Latin-America. Recent action of Cubans in raising nearly $2,000,000 for the second Liberty Loan; the action of the United States Treasury in taking half the Cuban war bond issue of $30,000,000, and progress made by the Council of National Defense under General Menocal's direction, have so unified sentiment throughout the insular republic that Cuba's strong position both politically and commercially, is expected to find expression in an ambitious programme of legislation which will serve as a guide to other Latin-American allies in the months to come.

At the last session in July, the portfolio of Minister of War and Navy was created, and Major General José Marti was named for the place. President Menocal later by an executive decree increased the army appropriation to the record figure of $13,500,000, and when, by his appointment of the Defense Council, he promulgated the plans for active war co-operation, only universal military service remained to be authorized by the Congress.

After reviewing the various organic laws of Cuba relating to military measures, President Menocal's recommendations assert: "The task of enlisting and mobilizing the militia of 17,000 men last February permits the hope that the raising of a larger army necessary for the carrying on of the war against the Imperial German Government will give results no less favorable, and in which the name of the Republic will remain unblemished." Referring to the increased responsibilities of Cuba as an ally in the war, President Menocal's message adds: "For all these things voluntary enlistment was insufficient. As had happened in all parts of the world when it was necessary to enlarge the service, so in England and the United States, a complete change in the tradition and the custom was obligated. In our republic voluntary enlistment always encountered more obstacles than in these great nations, . . . and I consider it my duty to recommend to the Honorable Congress the immediate adoption of the only means by which we will be able to overcome the difficulties quickly—the imposition of obligatory military service, based on a system of selection, as was recently instituted in the United States."

President Menocal adds that obligatory military service in Cuba will prove to be "a grand school of social discipline. It makes a citizen understand and feel from the first years of youth, his obligations to his country, and makes him respect the law, not by the imposition of force, but by the consciousness of duty. Our people will surely sympathize with this new system," General Menocal says, "for which they will prepare, as being of the most ardent patriotism and traditional spirit of sacrifice."

In addition to increasing the Cuban army and navy, the Congress is expected to discuss the wisdom of an amnesty measure and a parliamentary form of government.

One of the oldest and widest known names in the New England summer hotel fraternity has been that of Lougee. In 1869 a man named Lougee with his son George, built the Sea View House at Rye Beach, N. H. This widely known Summer hotel has all these years remained in the hands of the Lougee family, but has now been sold. The purchaser of the Sea View property is Francis E. Drake, one of the Chicago Blackstone Drake family, who will tear down the historic old house, and on part of the site erect a public building, and sell the remainder as house lots.

PRINT AND SELL!

Signs sell goods. Even cigars. And cigarettes. Also tobacco!

But, you say, signs cost money. Sure they do, unless you can letter 'em yourself. Objection: not one cigar man in a town is born an artist. Though some acquire it. Others try it.

Unless, however, you can do a good job with brush and pencil, crayon and bristol-board, don't do it! For, if you do, and it's rotten, you'll hurt, instead of help, the sale of the stuff you offer on the sign.

So stick to your last! Sell the stuff! Just for the few dimes and quarters that signs cost you'll reap halves and long green dollars!

Still, there's a way to save something on signs. Not especially window work, but inside bulletins and such.

Like this: Get a rubber-type letter set. Yes, I know you've got one. Or had one. Or seen the mussy work of one.

Bury all that rubbish! Then go right up the street and plank down from $3 to $5 for a 72-point set of nice, clean rubber type, in both upper and lower case.

Seventy-two point? That's simply a trade title for one inch type. One inch high, yes.

Now ask the stamp man to include a sixteen inch rule, with brass spacer. Some sets have this feature, others haven't. But it's a mighty important article for spacing letters and keeping the line on a line.

Tell the dealer you'll donate all the type ornaments, fancy work, stars, ramble lines, curlycues, and all the extra trimmin's except the actual type of alphabetical A to Z, large and small size, figures, and pronunciation marks, like periods, commas, question and exclamation points if he'll exchange them for an extra can of his best black ink.

Never use red, blue, green or purple inks. They fade. And, besides, they're hard to read, as a rule.

For color work, as emphasis on a brand name, buy three Blaisdell paper pencils. Get one red, blue and black. Then use them sparingly, merely to underline one or two particular words of interest on each sign.

And never use more than two colors to a sign. Either black ink and red pencil, or the blue, seldom both unless you wish to border the card or paper with a thin pencil line of red, blue or black, to throw out the announcement in stronger relief as a center, surrounded with liberal white space.

Use white cardboard. Get a semi-porous finish, not glazed. This softer or porous card absorbs the printing ink better, providing it is not too much like a blotter. Ask your paper man, he knows.

Experiment a little before you print your first card-sign. Look in the newspapers and pick out an ad which has attracted your attention. Notice its display style. See how the compositor has allowed plenty of room for a strong headline, followed by a body type of copy which stands out from the page and the other ads on the same sheet.

Always get a good black impression from your letters and ink. Hold your ruler and spacer firmly with your left hand and thumb, using the forefingers to control the printing spot.

Then, if it's necessary to repeat a type impress, in order to obtain a neater and blacker finish, you can do it. Be careful, though, that you've got the same place, otherwise you'll spoil the sign with a blemished surcharge, or double impression which seems to have slipped.

However, you'll soon master the swing and stride of this job, and you'll be proud of your work, while, as a reward, you will save a really considerable amount of expense money formerly going to the sign-man.

Note: Perhaps, as you read the magazines, you see many excellent illustrations, or cuts, which are live enough to brighten the corner where they are.

These, then, would likewise make similar suitable pictures for your own signs. If so, trim them carefully, and paste them upon your cards. They add to their attractiveness, thereby making sales where plainly printed words often fail.

'Nother thing: Go down to the ten-cent store and buy a half-dozen assorted size plain black frames. They assist, with the finish they give to a sign, to sell stuff in a more respectable manner, a la Champs Elysees. THE SMOKER.

Patents Recently Granted

The following patents recently were issued from the United States Patent Office. Copies thereof may be obtained from R. E. Burnham, patent and trade-mark attorney, Real Estate Trust Building, Washington, D. C., at the rate of 20 cents each. State number of patent and name inventor when ordering.

MORE TOBACCO FOR THE BOYS.

Thomas M. Johnson, war correspondent in France for the New York Sun, in a cablegram, received Monday, said: "There is no danger of the supply of tobacco in the trenches giving out, although the officers admit that the men are smoking more than ever they did in the billets. The quartermasters of the first contingent received official notice yesterday that forty-two cases of Sun tobacco were on their way from the main supply depot and would reach the front within a few days.

"It was decided in this case to make an exception to the rule of 'share and share alike,' and to give the men in the trenches rather more than their share while reserving a sufficient quantity for the men back in the billets. This assures the men in the trenches that they will have enough to smoke and will permit the men in the billets to piece out their supply by buying tobacco which has just arrived."

The Wellington is made of genuine French Briar, seasoned by our own special process. It breaks-in sweet and mellow. The bowl is guaranteed against cracking or burning through. The "well" catches the moisture as well as all stray crumbs of tobacco. Any tobacco tastes better in a Wellington.

W. D. C. Advertising Campaign 1917-1918

W. D. C. advertisements are now appearing in "The Saturday Evening Post," "Literary Digest," "Collier's Weekly," Railroad Men's Magazine," "Country Gentleman," "Hoard's Dairyman," "Breeder's Gazette," "Army and Navy Journal," and in many college publications.

The campaign will run for nine whole months. Generous space is being used in all mediums—all half pages and quarter pages. More than four million people will read these W. D. C. advertisements in the magazines alone.

Another big Wellington advertising campaign is now running in the Canadian newspapers.

The pipes of all nations are introduced and illustrated in the magazine advertisements—the Peace Pipe of the Indian—the Hooka of the Turk—the old Church Warden of the pioneers—the Whalebone of the Esquimaux, etc.

Watch for these W.D.C. Wellington advertisements in the magazines—cut them out and paste them in your windows.

Go over your stock and see that you have a full line of W. D. C. pipes—feature the Wellington in your counter displays—cash in on this big country-covering W. D. C. advertising campaign.

Don't let another season go by without carrying a full line of W. D. C. pipes—the Wellington in particular. Tie up with the largest pipe manufacturer in America and your pipe business will grow in a way you never thought possible.

Gladly will we send you further information on request.

Slow Collections in New England

Boston Jobbers Have to Be a Little Patient, as Retailers Have Been Paying Out a Lot of Money of Late—Most of the Stores Are Doing Well—C. B. Perkins Chairman of the War Camp Recreation Fund—Prince Hamlet Popular in Providence.

BOSTON, November 5.—After dealers have paid the War Revenue Tax, bought Liberty Bonds, paid their taxes, and a few other things, jobbers can have what is left in the till, which is nil. The retailer dug into the old stocking last week, and now nothing is left but the hole. Jobbers will have to be patient for a while, they may have to wait a few weeks on collections. Though money is tight there are assurances that collections will be easier, soon.

Retail trade has been good, exceeding the same period of 1916. Increased sales were due to extra buying by those who have relatives or friends in the Army or Navy.

Each store has a soldier's kit, varying in price, and all good ones will be certainly accepted.

Restless women of contestible reason, are holding afternoon gabfest, imploring the public not to send smokes to the boys in the service. On their part, real knowledge of what the boys want, and must have is limited, they mean well, yet some mothers raise funny children.

If Totems and Pippins are not raised to forty-two and forty-three dollars per thousand, where will all the other brands that have come into this market during the past ten years, fit in? Local jobbers, who have toiled to introduce these so called outside brands can sop and think a little now. These brands all have a big following, but trade is fickle, and that odd penny looks big. Economical smokers may try the cigar that sells for a nickel, and forget old brands.

Darwin's theory regarding "Evolution" is adaptable to conditions existing in the cigar trade today.

It's human nature to kick. At the cigar stand of one of the down-town hotels yesterday a man came up to the counter, and, laying down 30 cents asked for three cigars that previously were sold "three-for-a-quarter," when the salesman passed him back a nickel and told him that they were selling at the old price, the customer, with a sneer on his face, remarked: "Oh, I supposed they are being made of tobacco." The salesman afterward said that another man having the same experience, had remarked: "Oh, I see; they are being made smaller." In reality, the cigars were of exactly the old time size and quality. Only the hotel, having a good stock on hand, decided to let the price remain the same. All the thanks they got for it, at least from the two men, was an expression of suspicion.

Bill board advertising enhances sales of Admiration cigars, of which Joseph P. Manning are the distributors. Selected boards in and around Boston are used. The Admiration brand now is one of the big sellers on this market.

Anyone that will have any 1/40's to sell can clean them out during the Holidays. Local factories will be able to put out only a limited number, as they are behind on their regular packings.

The Philadelphia Hand Made Perfecto of Bayuk Bro. now is an open brand in Providence. Dealers are paying forty-three dollars per thousand, and selling them for six cents each.

The Prince Hamlet brand is getting a good distribution in Rhode Island.

Henry Freeman, the Worcester, Mass., retailer and jobber, drove to Boston in his new Maxwell, this week.

Myer Yeretsky of La Integridad fame, has joined the Gasoline Club, being the possessor of a large Locomobile limousine. Myer is more popular than ever now at the Georgian and the Hayward.

Charles B. Perkins Co. got out one of the most attractive army kits yet offered; it sells for two dollars, ready for mailing.

Leavitt & Pierce, Inc., Harvard Square retailers and manufacturers of the famous Cake Box Mixture smoking tobacco, are not selling any special kit, but they are doing some business which is shown by the number of packages sent across. Several tons of Cake Box tobacco and Cake Box Cigarettes are ready to go over. Thousands of Harvard men in the service, are users of the two brands.

Lucky Strike is rated now as a leader in the Ten Cent cigarettes.

Frank J. Goodwin of Baker Bros., has just completed a term as juror in the Superior Criminal Court.

Roy L. Wescott, who has been assistant manager of the Boston City Club, was made Temporary Manager, succeeding Westerman, who recently resigned.

Wescott has all the requirements necessary to make good in his new position, and his legion of friends, wish him success.

Houghton & Dutton, one of Boston's biggest and most successful department stores, will shortly open a cigar department, featuring all the popular brands of cigarettes, cigars and tobacco. H. D. Vittum, the advertising manager, has added many successful departments since he took charge. He was formerly advertising manager for the Liggett Co.

Kelley's Bouquet, jobbed by the Commonwealth Cigar Co., Boston, is showing the call in mild Havana cigars, around the best cafes and hotels in and around Boston. Jim Armstead has got the clerks and waiters plugging for Kelley's Bouquet, El Roi Tans, and La Preferencia.

H. UPMANN HABANA

Because a cigar is a Havana cigar, it does not necessarily follow that it is remarkably good; all Cuban tobacco is not as fine as some Cuban tobacco.

But Cuban tobacco grown in the famous province of Vuelta Abajo is acknowledged to be supreme—the finest cigar leaf in the world.

No other kind of leaf is used in the UPMANN factory. Hence, the steadily increasing demand for UPMANN'S everywhere.

Approaching the Consumer

Just to show the arguments some folks use regarding advances of cigar prices, here reproduced is a screed, from the San Francisco Daily News:

Uncle Sam, needing war money, says: "Upon cigars, cigarettes and drinks there shall be imposed an additional tax—say, 1 per cent—to be paid by the manufacturer or importer."

The manufacturer, or importer says: "Very good, upon the retailer there shall be imposed an additional price, say 2 per cent."

The retailer says: "Upon the consumer there shall be imposed an additional price, say 3 per cent."

Dear reader, we are going to ask three questions. We are going to give answers to these questions but would like your answers, if you have better ones.

1.—In respect of war taxation on tobaccos and drinks, who is the final, obvious, odoriferous goat? The consumer.

2.—Will not the manufacturer, importer and retailer make excess war profits? They will.

3.—Is there a chance for the consumer, upon whom the additional taxes, plus the additional profits, are imposed, to impose something on somebody? Certainly. He can impose upon himself the use of less tobacco and drinks.

The only recourse of the consumer is to use less. Yet, pause a moment! Let us have "business as usual!"

However, there are other things subject to new war taxation—telephone and telegraph messages, express packages, theatre tickets, soft drinks, gum—things the folks are using regularly.

In respect of these things, the consumer—nobody else—will pay more. And the consumer's only recourse is to use less.

Business as usual. Taxation as usual.

The consumer must expect to stand and will stand war taxation. The point is as to whether he will stand war taxation, plus the war taxation profit of the wholesaler, plus the war taxation profit of the retailer. For instance, the 5-cent cigar is demanding 6 cents, when government added less than a quarter of a cent to its taxes, and the 10-cent drink is 15 cents, when government added only about a cent. In short, the increased tax is taken as an excuse to gouge, all along the line to the consumer.

'Rah for the cob-pipe and faucet water!

BOSTON BREVITIES

Chester Lincoln of the firm of Lincoln Bros. New York City is expected in Boston this week.

Charles B. Perkins of the firm of C. B. Perkins Co. has been appointed Chairman of the Y. M. C. A. Campaign for the Sailors and Soldiers' War Camp and Community Recreation Fund, and has appointed on his Committee Marus Conlon of Waitt & Bond, James Logan, of J. P. Manning Co., Maurice Hanauer, of Bieringer-Hanauer Co., H. S. Rowley, of S. S. Pierce Co., Arthur Blacey, of the Bromfield St. Store of C. B. Perkins, R. B. Pearson, of the United Cigar Stores Co., Reed Estabrook of Estabrook & Eaton, Louis Hyneman of Hyneman Bros. and Charles T. Ellis. The campaign to raise three million dollars begins this week.

Viola Saville, daughter of J Freeman Saville, the Board of Trade Retailer and Jobber, was married this week.

Dubonnet Coronas, packed twenty-five in a box, Boite Nature packing, is being featured by the Klein Drug Co., Essex and Washington streets.

Frank Taylor of C. B. Perkins Co. is calling on the trade again. Frank was in an auto accident in Philadelphia some few weeks ago, and got badly damaged.

Edward McGrady, manager of the retail department of George F. Young & Bro., had his chest out a mile. The reason for this extension is an eleven and a half pound baby boy.

Arthur Burrill, manager of the cigar department of J. Fred Gibson Co., Providence, won the Ford recently offered by Liggett & Meyers, Tobacco Co., for the most popular person, male or otherwise in the city of Providence.

Arthur, like all other millionaires, refused to patronize street cars thereafter, driving to work each morning. One morning he drove it down, but someone else drove it home, and is still driving it. However, Arthur does not worry, as he had the car insured against theft.

This is to notify the trade that William Allen, manager of the cigar department of R. L. Rose Co., Providence, has changed his lunch hour from 12 to 1, to 1 on. Next time you do this Bill, send out postal cards, then the boys can arrange their milk routes in advance.

Ralph Gans of Gans Bros., was here this week boosting the La Muna brand.

John Rankin, the State street retailer has taken over the soda fountain, which he formerly leased.

GREEK EXPORT DUTY ON TOBACCO.

The American Consul General at Saloniki sent to Washington last week a cabled message as follows: "Greek Government has imposed immediate export tax upon new and old tobacco of 1 drachma per kilo on all Argos district and similar quality tobacco. Two drachmas per kilo on all other tobacco. On new tobacco which can be officially proved to have been sold before October 29 and which will be shipped before December 13, half tax only will be collected. The measure especially affects American concerns. Detailed report by mail." (Drachma, par value, $0.193; kilo, 2.2046 pounds.)

TO BRING VICTORY

"We must reverse for the time being all the processes of a free people.

"We must put vast powers, such as no Nation in history has ever conferred upon men, into the hands of those entrusted with our executive government.

"We must submit to sumptuary laws which we thought had been relegated into the lumber of forgotten things, in order that the power and the resources, and the spirit and the soul of the people may be dedicated without stint to the accomplishment of a victory without which their freedom will be but illusory, and their liberty will vanish.

"But we do it of our own free will. No man constrains the American citizen to part with his liberty. He gives it up if need be for the time, in order that he may preserve for his children and his children's children some part of that liberty without which he considers life as worthless."—From the speech of ex-Attorney-General George W. Wickersham.

GROCERS AND ADVANCING CIGAR PRICES.

Many grocers have failed to note the change in cigar and cigarette prices and continue to supply their customers at the old figures. In some instances dealers advanced prices, then finding a competitor close by still selling at the old price they promptly marked their goods back to the old level to meet competition. Others are watching the market and advancing with it and refuse to be influenced by what the fellow in the next block is doing. They declare they must make a profit to pay their bills and if the cheap chap is caught by the sheriff, it is none of their affair.—San Francisco Grocer.

HEED "THE OLD MAN'S" TALK

Having Sold More Than 200,000,000 Pounds of Tobacco, North Carolina's Silver-Tongued Auctioneer Indulges in Interesting Reminiscences

Calling himself an old man, although he personifies cheerfulness that youth might envy, G. E. Webb, celebrated as a silver tongued tobacco auctioneer and editor of the Southern Tobacco Journal, thus discourses concerning his varied experience:

"He has sold during his professional life more than two hundred million pounds of tobacco, or about as many pounds as the State of North Carolina now produces on an average. During all the years the Old Man has been selling this tobacco he has sold the stuff at all kinds of prices. He has seen frowns and despair depicted upon the faces of many thousands of farmers on account of low prices—and then he has seen them smile and sometimes shout for joy, when receiving high prices. He has sold tobacco—one time at least—for $25.00 per pound, and then millions at 25 cents a hundred. He has sold a break (one time) that averaged 55 cents per pound. This was years ago in Durham, and the sale consisted almost entirely of fine wrappers, some of which sold for $1.50 per pound. He has sold millions of pounds for 2 cents per pound which would now sell for 20 cents, and so on.

"After, say, forty years of selling tobacco, the Old Man is going through a new experience this season. He is selling thousands of pounds of tobacco daily that is brought to market on auto trucks, and he is selling tobacco for prices that are higher than he ever dreamed they would or could be. On last Tuesday he sold a break of tobacco at Piedmont Warehouse that amounted to 262,000 pounds for an average of $34.43, for which the farmers received the sum of $92,855.36. We mention this sale because we are connected with this house and have been for 23 years.

"If the Old Man should ever live long enough to become old, he may retire—and then in his memory live over the years of his experience as a tobacco auctioneer, and in doing so he may write something of his experience, and of the big men in the trade with whom he has come in contact."

MAY RATION SMOKERS

Present Shortage in England May Cause Users of Tobacco to Go on Limited Allowances.

In a letter from London, dated October 22, a correspondent writes to the New York Sun, saying that the tobacco trade in England is seriously considering the adoption of a system of rations for smokers.

"The manufacturers are only receiving one-third of the supplies they received in 1916, but the demand has not increased in anything like the same degree, and as the supplies to the troops have to be maintained out of the national stock the trade has a great difficulty in meeting the demand.

"Stocks are getting shorter and shorter, and unless smokers exercise economy it will be necessary to introduce tobacco cards to insure every man getting a fair share.

"Steps are to be taken to point out to customers the shortage and to warn them that unless some check on consumption takes places the tobacco supply for the general public will give out in a very few months."

UTILIZING THE PROFITS

To Strengthen and Increase the Assets—The Careful Transactions of the American Sumatra Tobacco Co.

When the American Sumatra Tobacco Co. was formed, about eight years ago, the plantations owned by eight different interests were consolidated into one company, and the owners agreed to take common stock, dollar for dollar, on the basis of the valuation of the tobacco lands as appraised by a committee of independent tobacco experts.

These experts appraised the lands taken in at $6,000,000, and the new company, therefore, issued $6,000,000 common stock in payment. The bankers who organized the company purchased $1,000,000 preferred stock at par, and this cash was put into the new company's treasury for working capital. Hence the company issued stock only for cash at par, or for appraised values at par.

More recently the American Sumatra Co. purchased the jobbing business of A. Kohn & Co., paying therefor $800,000, par value, in common stock. Later, was purchased the Connecticut Tobacco Co., for which was paid $1,000,000, par value, in preferred stock. These acquisitions round out the company's selling and producing organizations.

The 1,850 acres of Connecticut tobacco lands previously owned by the company, of which 1,100 are under shade, were purchased and developed out of earnings. Purchase of the Connecticut Company adds 650 acres under shade to this total, and in this connection it is interesting to note that the latter acreage was valued by the company's officials at $1,000,000, which would indicate that the value of the Connecticut lands previously purchased and equipped entirely from earnings have a value of in excess of $2,000,000.

In addition to this application of surplus earnings in the original holdings of Connecticut tobacco lands, the company has built and maintained in good repair over 2,200 tobacco warehouses, drying sheds, barns, cottages, etc., and all the other complementary equipment to extensive tobacco production in connection with the development and cultivation of the 37,900 acres owned in Georgia, Florida and Connecticut. The Connecticut Tobacco Co.'s buildings totaled about 500.

The company's cash current assets in excess of current liabilities, outstanding notes and preferred stock, are equivalent to $58 a share on the common in addition to which fixed assets have a conservative valuation of over $60 a share.

Which causes the Wall Street Journal to say: "Strength in American Sumatra Tobacco stock has been due to prospects for profits of in excess of $2,500,000 this year, together with the company's sound financial standing."

On the four corners of Nicollet avenue and Lake street, Minneapolis, are four stores selling cigars and other tobacco products. As neither of the four firms is in business solely for health purposes, the four owners recently had a little confab about prices, and it was noticed that at once all of them were charging advanced prices for their goods.

In all, 60 employees of S. Monday & Sons, Brooklyn, came forward when Joe Monday made an appeal for subscribers to the Liberty Loan, and announced they were "proud to buy a bond." "Everyone of our workers is a patriot and I am proud of them all," said Joe Monday.

Under directions of the Cigar Box Makers' Union, the workers are now permitted to work but 55 hours a week in place of 60. This new ruling is seriously affecting the output of factories and at the same time hits cigar manufacturers who are unable to obtain all the boxes that they need.

The H. F. Fidler & Co. cigar plant at Womelsdorf, Pa., employing the most hands of any of the factories up the pike, has given its employees a substantial increase in salary. The increase came as a surprise, as none was asked for by the men and women employed in the factory. In some of the departments the increase amounts to about 25 per cent.

The annual theatre party of the Chicago Stewards' Club will be held at the Olympic Theatre on Tuesday evening, November 20, with Oliver Morosco's production of "Canary Cottage" as the attraction. All proceeds from the affair will, as in past years, be devoted by the club to preparing baskets of food for the needy poor at Christmas time.

W. E. Lea, a prominent tobacco dealer of Timmonsville, S. C., was in Fitzgerald, Ga., in the interest of the proposed tobacco warehouse and market. Mr. Lea has handled a large part of the 1917 tobacco crop for Georgia growers through his Carolina warehouse to the full satisfaction of his local clients. He will probably lease the Fitzgerald warehouse for the coming season.

J. B. Back, the Brooklyn manufacturer, has sold his retail store at 65 Court street, Brooklyn, to John Winkler. Since taking possession of his new factory at 449 Fulton street, the manufacturer of Royal Moor has been increasing his output and desires now to open new territory. He expects to leave next week for a trip to the Pacific Coast. Starting in Connecticut, he will work West.

Thirty-five employees of the Fernandez Cigar Co., Third street and North avenue, Milwaukee, walked out Saturday morning after the firm had refused to grant a 5 per cent. increase per 1,000 cigars. A strike is practically a certainty in another large cigar factory. The strike at the Louis Kindling & Co. plant spread Friday and Saturday morning. Only eight employees remained at work.

Factory employees of the El-Rees-Co Cigar Co., at Greensboro, N. C., subscribed for 67 Liberty Bonds of the second issue, some of the cigar makers taking two. With the exception of four men, the subscriptions were received from women employees. The Greensboro News reports that the El-Rees officials were highly gratified at the patriotic spirit shown by the workers.

Max Zutty, formerly of Mayer & Co., leaf dealers of New York, died at his home, 136 Hart street, Brooklyn, of a complication of diseases, on Wednesday, a week ago. He was born in Grodno, Russia, and had been a Brooklynite for many years. He leaves his wife, Jeanette; a daughter, Cina, the wife of Dr. Abraham Progebin, of Brooklyn, and two sisters, Mrs. Adeline Palmer and Mrs. Annie Loewenthal.

To aid the Sun tobacco fund, the Schulte Cigar Stores will donate 5 per cent. of the day's receipts of November 9 and 10. On November 10, all purchasers will be given a small flag to be placed in the buttonhole, as a souvenir.

The Old King Cole Cigar and Tobacco Co. has changed prices on smoking tobacco as folloys: 3½ ounce tin, 50 cents, will be changed to a 3 ounce tin, same price, half pound tins will be increased in price from $1 to $1.15 and the pound tin will be increased from $2 to $2.25.

In order to avoid confusion and misunderstandings in the application of the war revenue tax, the retail tobacco dealers of Ogden, Utah, have formed an association and adopted a fixed scale of prices to govern cigars, cigarettes and all other kinds of tobacco. Nearly all cigarettes which formerly sold for 10 cents are now two for 25 cents and the same applies to former 10-cent cans of smoking tobacco. H. E. Goddard is president of the new association and and D. L. Boyle is secretary.

Roberts' cigar store, at No. 106 Asylum street, Hartford, was entered, Saturday night or early Sunday morning, and a box of cigars and about $15 in change taken. The front door of the place was found unlocked. Detective Sergeant L. J. Lowe is investigating. He was unable to determine from information furnished him whether the door was inadvertently left open when the store was closed, Saturday night, or whether it was opened with a key by burglars.

Benjamin Hart, of 471 Seventeenth street, South Brooklyn, a retired cigar manufacturer, who had been in business for forty years at 21 Hamilton avenue, died on November 1, of old age. He was born in England and came to this country sixty years ago. He leaves four sons, Mark, Henry, Morris and George; two daughters, Anna and Julia, and a sister, Mrs. Hannah Hamburger. Mr. Hart was a member of King Solomon Lodge, I. O. F. S. of I., and the United Brethren.

The C. M. Hintze Cigar Co. has incorporated at Stoughton, Wis., with a capital stock of $50,000. The incorporators are Charles M. Hintze, W. C. Hintze and H. H. Morris. The company will materially increase production of its output and employ more help shortly. C. M. Hintze and W. C. Hintze are lifelong residents of Stoughton and are well and favorably known to the community. Mr. Morris is on the road for the cigar company. He came to Stoughton from Phoenix, Ariz.

Additional service between San Francisco and Manila now is maintained by the Java-Pacific line of steamers of Dutch registry. This line operates four vessels which reach Manila from Soerabaia via Makassar on the outward voyage, and call at Hongkong and Nagasaki en route to San Francisco. On the return trip from San Francisco the vessels reach Manila via Nagasaki and Hongkong, and ply from Manila to Batavia. The vessels of this line are the Tjisondari, Karimoen, Tjikembang, and Arakan, all of which carry passengers and freight.

The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, for the purpose of conserving the car supply and giving better service in the movement of less than carload merchandise from their New York stations to New England territory, proposes to adopt the "shipping day" plan. Under this plan through cars will be operated on certain specified days in the week. It is believed that a sufficient tonnage will be secured to warrant the running of cars through to specified points or territory without transfer. Vexatious delays at transfer points will be avoided and embargoes caused by congestion will be unnecessary.

Fire did $3,350 damage to the three-story brick business block at Perdido and St. Charles streets, New Orleans, about midnight Tuesday a week ago. The blaze originated on the second floor from an undetermined origin. The lower part of the building is occupied jointly by James Mentrozes as a restaurant and by John Vega as a cigar store. The upper floors where the fire spread were unoccupied.

The Tobacco Co. of California, like all the other big corporations, has provided a goodly proportion of young men for the army and navy. From their sales force during the past few weeks they have given George Hardy from the Sacramento territory; H. H. Loewenthal from the Eureka territory and M. Stanley from the San Joaquin Valley. These boys have already left for the training camp at American Lake.

The American Tobacco Co. has purchased four acres of ground near the Louisville and Nashville Railway at Bowling Green, Ky., on which they will at once spend several hundred thousand dollars in building warehouses and factory buildings for the employment of between five hundred and one thousand persons. The company will operate warehouse stemmeries and manufacture tobacco in Bowling Green. The city council met in special session and granted the company free water and tax exemption for five years, and agreed to build four blocks of macadam streets.

The salesladies employed by the Union News Co. at the stands in the stations of the Boston & Westchester Railroad, while capable enough in selling candy, magazines and soda, are not so expert in cigar selling. When a smoker requests a certain cigar, a young lady generally hands him one cigar instead of offering the box. And in other ways they show lack of training as regards selling smokes. "Oh, I don't like to sell cigars. Cigarettes are not so bad. But when a man asks me for a cigar and inquires for a clear Havana, this, that or the other thing, I really don't know one from the other," said one of the salesladies.

Beginning an active campaign against the sale of cigarettes in Nashville, Detectives Carr and Dixon last week arrested nine cigar dealers and ordered them to report to the police station to be registered on a charge of selling cigarettes. The officers first went to the United Cigar store on the corner of Fourth avenue and Union street and arrested the clerk in charge. The following are the stores where arrests were made: Freed & Fisher, United Cigar Store, Young & Thompson Drug Co., Waldrum Drug Co., Schott's Drug Store, Zibart Bros., Broadway Drug Co., Wright Drug Co., and Sparkman Bros.

Government Expenditures

Now that the second war loan has been subscribed, we have another breathing spell and it is in order to cast a look ahead upon the future demands of the Treasury. Congress has authorized, pursuant to Treasury estimates, the sale of $10,538,945,460 of obligations of various kinds, in addition to $7,000,000,000 first authorized in April last, $2,000,000,000 of which were issued in June. Of the $538,945,460, $63,945,460 will be used to refund an outstanding issue and the remainder is to reimburse the Treasury for disbursements against which bonds were originally authorized.

With $2,000,000,000 raised in the First Liberty loan, if $4,000,000,000 is accepted in the Second Liberty loan, the further amount of obligations authorized is $11,475,000,000. These, however, are not all authorized in the form of bonds. Four millions may be issued only in Treasury certificates, and $2,000,000,000 in war savings certificates. The former are issued for short terms, and are particularly designed to be taken by banks, to bridge over the periods between loan offerings. The war savings certificates are intended to be a popular and convenient form of obligation for sale on small payments. Deducting these issues, there remain $5,475,000,000 which are to be offered in bonds similar in detail to those of the Second Liberty loan.

All of these offerings, together with the taxes levied, were estimated by the Treasury to somewhat more than cover the prospective requirements of the Government, including its loans to allies, up to July 1, 1918. It has not been supposed, however, that all of the Treasury certificates or war savings certificates would be outstanding at the same time. They serve temporary purposes and are convertible into the several issues of bonds. Congress will be in session from early in December, throughout the remainder of the fiscal year, and will provide for other bond issues as needed.

"The real problem," says the publicist for the National City Bank of New York City, "is how fast will the program adopted by the government require disbursements to be made? Figures have been given in the newspapers ranging from $14,000,000,000 to $19,000,000,000 as the amounts required during this fiscal year. It is evidently difficult to make a close estimate upon enormous operations, involving so much work that is out of the ordinary run. On the face of the proposition it looks impossible to expend that amount of money for the purposes in view, within the time stated. The major portion of the expenditures are for fabricated goods, and the total value of all the manufactures of the United States in the year 1914 was $24,246,000,000, and in 1909, $20,672,000,000. It is true that prices are now much higher than in those years, but some idea of the volume of business involved in the expenditure of even $14,000,000,000 can be gained by the comparison. The total expenditures for the first four months of the year have been approximately $3,000,000,000, and for the month of October $1,000,000,000. Presumably they will increase, particularly for shipbuilding and aeroplanes, but how much can they be advantageously increased?"

THESE ARE NOT NORMAL TIMES.

At present we are living in feverish times. Everyone is working at full speed and high tension. There is a feeling abroad of get all you can while the getting's good, and many are working the Get-Rich Wallingford methods to the limit. There is bound to be a reaction and those who have violated the rules of honest business will be the first to feel the full force of that reaction.

These are not normal times, and the disposition to take undue advantage of them is not confined to any particular industry, but permeates the whole business structure. In making prices the cigar dealer should be careful that he does not overstep the bounds of a legitimate profit over expense. We know it is human to follow the crowd and get everything that is possible to be obtained. But we must look a little to the future. For his own sake and for the benefit of the trade in general there should be no attempt on the dealer's part to make abnormal profits. The man who makes a legitimate profit at this time, will be better able to withstand the shock when the reaction comes, than the man who has grasped all he could, and he will stand higher in the estimation of the community than Wallingford.—Smoke.

Fred Davis, of Sam'l I. Davis y Ca., will visit San Francisco next month in order to discuss matters with El Sidelo distributors on the Pacific Coast.

According to a press report, tobacco cards will be issued by the Austrian Government after January. Without these cards, it will be impossible to purchase tobacco in any form.

A writer in Colliers thus gives his idea of the cause of crooked business men:—"I believe that most of the dishonesty in business to-day results from business incompetence. The tradesman who attempts to deceive the public usually does so because he is not a good enough merchandiser to hold his own by honest methods with competent merchants. Fake bargains, lying advertisements and other threadbare business tricks are more often the pitiful attempts of an incompetent tradesman to measure strides with capable merchandisers than the result of inherent dishonesty."

THE DEALER'S PROFITS.

Looking over the price lists that have come to hand since the new war tax was announced, it would appear that manufacturers are still under the impression that the retailer can successfully conduct his business on a 20 per cent, gross margin. There may be a few that may be able to do so, but they are the exception. For some considerable time the retailer has been selling cigarettes and tobaccos at the cost of doing business and sometimes for less. For his profits he has been obliged to charge business and sometimes for less. For result has been that his trade on profitable merchandise has practically remained stationary, while his trade on unprofitable goods has considerably increased.

It is claimed that where goods are sold on a 20 per cent gross margin, that the extra discounts, gratuities, free deals, etc., will offset the deficiency on the profit side of the ledger. But in figuring profits, the dealer cannot take these things into consideration, because they are an uncertain quantity, liable to change and discontinuance at any time. Then, again, there are numbers of good, reliable dealers who are not always in a position to take advantage of these extras. It is upon this class, and they probably compose the majority of the retailers, that the allowance of only 20 per cent gross works a hardship.

Some manufacturers seem to think, at least their price lists would indicate that they do, that the retailer has no expenses in conducting his business. They remind one of the Duluth dealer who was recently asked to join the association in that city. During the conversation he was asked what his overhead charges were: "Overhead charges," said he, "why I have none, I live upstairs."

It is claimed that retailers have unduly raised the prices on some brands. In the readjustment of prices there is sure to be some mistake made. But if the list of prices that are at present prevailing in some cities, and published in another part of this issue, is carefully examined, it will be found that in the majority of cases, the retailer is asking no more than a legitimate profit over the expense of conducting his business.

The 20 per cent margin idea, like the nickel, has prevailed too long.—Smoke,

WINDOW DISPLAYS

Edw. Greger, 125th street, near Eighth avenue, is featuring the Alexander Humboldt in two sizes. In the display is comprised a large poster, in four colors, blue, gray, yellow and black. The poster is smart and attractive.

L. Simon & Son, Broadway and 112th street, are devoting their large window to a very interesting display of Centrilla. One large poster "Centrilla" sets in the centre of the display, with a pink background and black and white lettering. Four smaller posters attached to the panel depict men in the act of smoking, with cups in front of them, "After dinner." Across the top of the panels the name "Centrilla" is placed.

Park & Tilford are displaying Lobella, H. Upmann and Mi-Favorita in the side window of their store at Fifth avenue and 26th street. Each brand occupies a separate show window.

The Exchange Buffet, Madison avenue and 30th street, displays Nueva Epoca, Optimo, Bouquet de Eduardo H. Gato and Rodena.

DON'T TOLERATE DISLOYALTY.

In imposing a fine of $200 upon Edward O. Singleton, proprietor of the Tampa Variety store, because of Singleton's disloyal utterances in the court as well as on the streets and in his place of business, Municipal Judge J. T. Watson took a decidedly commendable step. He gave Singleton ample opportunity to prove his loyalty by allowing him to write to Washington in the hope of establishing the fact that he had offered a war invention, free of charge, to the government. Singleton failed to produce this proof.

In this connection it is said that at least one man of German birth or parentage, in spite of the warnings that have been published, endeavored in one instance to interfere with the second sale of Liberty bonds. His remarks were uttered in a way that might protect him from prosecution, but nevertheless they were uttered with malicious intent.

Toleration of disloyalty and treachery is wrong and un-American, and, furthermore, such toleration encourages alien enemies in their work—and such work is certain to end in grave trouble for the offenders.—Tampa Times.

Having organized the Sioux City Tobacco Men's Association, retail dealers in Sioux City declare that owing to the advances in the price of the raw material and labor, prices have gone up so that the retailer fails to make any money in handling it. One retailer declared that it was impossible to pay his overhead expense on the profit he makes on both cigars and tobacco. His overhead expense for the handling of these articles amounts to 22 per cent. His net profit amounted to only 1 per cent. In the last few months he has lost more than $300 on his tobacco business. "While the cigar dealers of the city have endeavored to keep away from the one-cent raise plan, we are finally having to come to it," Martin Neswick, one of the leaders in the movement, said. "Things have come to a point where we have to do something. The jobbers are adding the increase to us, and we cannot stand it. The consumer will have to pay."

A DISASTROUS FREEZE

Unusually Cold Weather in Wisconsin Did Much Damage to the Uncured Tobacco—Farmers Disappointed.

EDGERTON, Wis., November 2.—A disaster which the tobacco growers of this state have for some time been fearing occurred the fore part of the week in a hard freeze that penetrated the curing sheds. A big storm, followed by a drop in temperature to 20 or below for a couple of nights, has wrought untold damage to the uncured tobacco crop. Never before has this state been visited by so early a hard freeze or one more destructive in its character. It is believed that at least half the crop has been more or less affected, while the late harvested portion is likly to be ruined. At most it can but mean a tremendous money loss to the Wisconsin tobacco growers, besides it will require an additional amount of trouble to separate the frozen from the good leaf, for there is bound to be an unusual amount of fat stems to contend with. Farmers who had counted on large returns from their tobacco crop must be prepared to meet disappointment, but to what extent cannot yet be determined. Possibly some use can be made of this frozen leaf, time will tell. At a time when the markets are short of cigar leaf to meet the manufacturing needs of the country the coming year, it is a misfortune to see the expected supply of any state dwindle.

The only recent transaction of old leaf coming to notice is the purchase of 350cs by Julius Marqusee from local packers.

The shipments out of storage reach 500cs and 1 car of bundles to all points since last report.

for a few months, but reserve stocks that for a long period will insure the maintenance of the high La Sultana standard. It has ample supplies of Havana filler. Besides, it has contracts with some of the most famous factories in Havana for their "shorts." Tobacco used in the manufacture of various choice imported Havanas, much prized in this country, reflects its quality in the filler of La Sultana.

Though the Tobacco Corporation of America could make a handsome profit now by selling all its tobacco, it will continue to manufacture La Sultana cigars. For it prefers the more satisfactory profit that accrues through the honest maintenance of an established brand.

The actual value of a good brand is much greater than most people suppose. As distribution mounts up into the millions, a brand, as an asset, is appraised proportionately. A brand that couldn't be purchased for "big money" is a prized possession. To make a brand more valuable always is sound business policy. Better than immediate cash profit for the Tobacco Corporation of America is the judicious enhancement of La Sultana brand.

Pursuing a policy notably progressive, the corporation for the present is concentrating on efficiency in manufacturing and distribution. Planning eventually to centralize its operations at Allentown, Pa., it will establish there its chief factory and the entrepot from which millions of cigars will be distributed.

THE UNION WILL WAIT

Because of the approaching holidays and because of the fact that practically all the factories are rushed with urgent orders, the Cigar Makers' International Union has decided to leave labor conditions in New York City undisturbed for the present. Recently, it was announced that an effort would be made to organize all open shops, the intention was to bring into the union every cigar maker who could be persuaded. Joint meetings were held in a New York hall and a committee of 25 was appointed "to examine conditions in the trade."

Now, however, it has been voted to wait a while before continuing the attempt to organize all shops. Secretary Brown of Union 144 said regarding the situation: "We realize that the present is not the proper time to begin our work of securing a better wage for the cigar makers. We know that the manufacturers now are receiving their holiday orders and we do not want to detract from the value of the same. Furthermore, we do not wish to take men away from their work, as now is the time they most need money, in order to enjoy the holidays. We want to be fair to everyone and if in return, others were as fair with us, things would be brighter."

TO EXTEND THE DROUTH

"Dry" Advocates May Try to Secure a Vote on Prohibition in New York—Possible Happenings.

Rollin O. Everhart, of the Anti-Saloon League, is authority for the statement that at the recent election 122 towns (not cities) in New York State went dry. At the spring elections, held in some parts of the State, 25 towns went dry, making a total of 147 towns going dry this year. He also said that out of a total of 932 towns in the State 670 are now dry.

The cities, however, have not had a chance to vote on the question yet; in fact they have not voted on Prohibition since the passage of the Raines law, about twenty years ago.

But there is reason to believe that Governor Whitman, in his message to the New York Legislature, will urge a referendum on State-wide Prohibition. If such a bill is put through it will upset the plans for submitting the local option question to the voters in New York city. Many politicians believe it will be put through, basing this belief on the effect that the granting of Woman Suffrage has had.

So far the Anti-Saloon League at No. 156 Fifth avenue, New York, has taken no steps to prepare petitions to bring before the voters, at a special election, the question whether or not New York city shall come under the provision of the Hill-Wheeler bill.

While other cities in the State automatically come under the provisions of the bill and, if petitions are filed, will vote directly as to whether or not they as cities shall go wet or dry, the bill provides that New York shall have a chance to say first whether the terms of the bill shall apply to New York or not.

A movement is on foot to have the bill amended so that New York shall be on a plane with the other cities of the State. This would obviate the necessity of two special elections or action on two rather complex questions at one election. If the amendment is passed petitions may be filed which will permit the New York voters to vote on local option at a special election April 16. If it is not passed a special election may be held on that date to determine if the Hill-Wheeler bill shall apply to this city. It may be, however, that the question will be allowed to rest for a year.

The dry campaign is going ahead in the other cities in the State, being handled in each case by local committees. Special elections on the question will be held April 16 in Buffalo, Syracuse, Rochester, Elmira, Binghamton and many other cities, but none in Albany, it is reported. In each of the cities mentioned the vote will be on "wet" or "dry" and the women will vote.

REMEMBER THE BOYS

It's less than six weeks to Christmas; and "over there"—in the trenches — are thousands of "our boys" in olive drab. They have been drilled, hardened, "educated" in the ways of war.

And now they "are up in front"—on the firing line—fighting "to bring in the thousand years of peace."

Knee-deep in sticky mud—suffering hradship we cannot realize—ever under the "strafe" of an implacable foe.

Wet, weary almost to exhaustion, they are relieved by their comrades, until they are ready again to "do their bit."

Those are "our boys" fighting in the trenches—for us.

The least we can do is to send them plenty of smokes.

MEXICAN COUNTERFEITS FORWARDED

WASHINGTON, November 12.—Samples of counterfeit Tuxedo and Velvet smoking tobacco, sold in Mexico, were obtained by representatives of the State Department and forwarded to Washington. By the State Department, this imitation tobacco, packed in containers purposely designed to deceive, was transferred to the Department of Commerce.

In appearance the containers are so deceiving it is no wonder that the spurious Tuxedo and Velvet could be sold throughout Mexico. Judging by the package, the average buyer anywhere would be misled by the fraud. But when tested to ascertain its smoking quality, the Mexican counterfeit has scant resemblance to the genuine stuff. In fact, it is a mockery.

The Department of Commerce has placed the samples obtained in Mexico at the disposal of the companies owning the brands.

A BIG DEAL CONCLUDED

Metropolitan Tobacco Co. Leases Desirable Location for Executive Offices and Main Branch.

The Metropolitan Tobacco Co., has leased for a long term the building at 443-449 Lafayette street and extending through to Fourth Avenue. When the plans, prepared by Buchman & Kahn, for extensive alterations and improvements are completed, the building will serve for the executive offices and main branch of the Metropolitan Tobacco. Co.

The property is owned by the Wilkes & Nottbrack Co. and has a frontage of 105 feet on Lafayette street and 149 feet on Fourth avenue. The present building has four stories and a basement.

The lease was arranged by Douglas Robinson & Charles S. Brown Co. in conjunction with Horace S. Ely & Co. Emmett & Parrish were the owners' attorneys. Goldsmith, Cohen, Cole & Wise acted for the lessee, Emil Lebman, the son of Leo M. Lehman, metropolitan representative of Charles the Great, concluded the deal.

FINE TOBACCO EXHIBIT

Showing the Varieties of Leaf Grown in Cuba, Porto Rico and the United States—To Be Sent to the Philippines.

That tobacco growers and cigar manufacturers in the Philippines may have the information that comes from the careful inspection of well chosen samples, Charles A. Bond, Philippine tobacco agent in New York, is procuring exhibits of the various types of tobacco grown in Cuba, Porto Rico and the United States. The collection of samples to be shipped this week to Col. Rafferty will include tobacco of different kinds, obtained from practically every district but in the assortment and classification, special attention was devoted to leaf suitable for cigar purposes.

Neither pains nor expense were spared in procuring numerous, well authenticated samples. The generous quantity that in the exhibit will represent the better quality of Vuelta Abajo leaf came from an extra choice vega, such tobacco now sells for upwards of $1,000 per bale. Other grades and districts are correspondingly represented.

The utilization of the exhibit of tobacco from Cuba, Porto Rico and the United States, is but a part of Col. Rafferty's campaign for the education and encouragement of Filipino tobacco growers.

A LIGGETT & MYERS ACQUISITION.

The Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. has acquired in Huntington, W. Va., a desirable factory site about nine acres in area, at a cost of nearly $70,000. The purchase includes the land and buildings occupied by the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. under lease for the past seven years. The buildings include storage facilities and a re-drying plant.

In Huntington, various rumors were circulated concerning the intentions of the company. First it was reported the company planned a cigarette factory, later it was asserted that the company intended to make burley wrapper cigarettes or "little cigars." But no official announcement has been made.

Regarding the Outlook

"Well, everybody is happy. let come what may," said one manufacturer this week, and he seemed to have struck it right. Manufacturers about town appeared in better spirits. Business has recovered apparently from its attack of laziness. Stereotyped complaints were heard, but they are always expected. Certain cigar manufacturers who haven't been receiving extra large orders of late, were suddenly swamped with requests for cigars. "At once!"

Some brands of cigarettes took another jump in price this week and dealers protested. Tobacco in small tins also went higher. The five cent cigar—where is it? Of course there always will be nickel smokes, but the old favorites have become "six centers."

Cigar men returning from Connecticut, state that part of the new crop is very good. Some of it is only medium, but under no circumstances could it be said the crop contains any bad tobacco. The demand for Connecticut shade grown continues.

Holiday orders are coming in, fast. And those who have prepared to meet the rush, will benefit; those who didn't, woe betide them! If the war will affect the holiday business of the cigar folk in anyway, it is not apparent now. War or no war, cigars are wanted for Thanksgiving Day, Christmas and on all the other happy days. Remember, many soldiers will be home for dinner on these days and arrangements are being made for other fighters not fortunate enough to be near home. For instance, in New York, private families are offering to dine soldiers on the feast day. And they must have smokes!

President of the Tobacco Salesmen's Association.

He may not be numbered among America's greatest orators, but he is a man who never hesitates to speak. Always he says what he thinks. Earnestness and perserverance are predominant in his character. To promote the welfare of the Salesmen's Association, he has labored hard and spoke often. His ability is apparent, his zeal is undeniable. Though best known, perhaps, because of his eloquence, he has many other qualifications that make him popular. He inspires confidence; no one would question his sincerity.

Elevated to the chief office of the organization in which he has long taken great interest, J. J. Ollendorf justifies predictions that he will make an excellent president.

As a presiding officer, he may exemplify usefulness and dependability. But his aptitude is not restricted to parliamentary procedure. As a salesman, he can discourse on the merits of Preferencias, Principe de Gales or Kelly's Bouquet in a way that will make the most hardened dealer inclined to buy. In calling on the trade in New Jersey and up State in New York, he has secured orders that evoke envy. And everywhere he goes, "Joe" Ollendorf makes friends.

THE REASON FOR HURREY

The New Supervision of Business Co-operation—A Man Who Has Exceptional Experience in Organization—His Duties.

WASHINGTON, November 13.—Clarence B. Hurrey has been appointed Supervisor of Business Co-operation of the Bureau of Internal Revenue by Daniel C. Roper, the new Commissioner.

This newly created position will be of special interest to manufacturers throughout the country inasmuch as the purpose is to co-operate with the various manufacturers for the benefit of both the Government and the manufacturers.

Mr. Hurrey brings to his task a broad business training combined with exceptional experience in organization work. He has been connected with a number of large business projects and by reason of his ability as an organizer he was called to the Post Office Department as a business expert to assist in establishing the Postal Savings Banks and Parcel Post System. During the past three years he has been officially connected with the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

In his new position Mr. Hurrey's function will be to keep in touch with the public, to collect and assimilate business suggestions and to diffuse correct interpretations of the War Tax Law and regulations through all possible channels to the taxpayer.

GRAND BALL TO BE GIVEN BY LA NACIONAL.

La Nacional, the Spanish benevolent society which numbers among its members many men of prominence in the tobacco and cigar industry, will celebrate, giving a grand ball at Harlem River Park, Second avenue and 127th Street, New York, on Sunday afternoon, November 18. Dancing begins at 4 p. m. The music for the occasion will be furnished by the 71st Regiment Band.

PAT McGUNIGAL GETS MEDAL

The first navy medal of honor to be awarded since the United States entered the war, Secretary Daniels announced on Monday, goes to Patrick McGunigal, of Youngstown, Ohio, a ship's fitter. At great hazards McGunigal rescued an observer from a kite balloon at sea brought down by a squall. He also received $100 in cash.

SOLDIERS DID GOOD WORK.

When the New York bankers began to organize a Liberty Bond selling campaign, application was made to Washington to utilize the services of conscripted bond salesmen. The government agreed to loan them for this important work. Twenty-six were requisitioned from "somewhere" on Long Island and turned loose in New York. Their success was notable.

NEW DRYING PLANT FOR OWENSBORO.

The Green River Leaf Tobacco Co. has been organized in Owensboro, Ky., with a capital stock of $200,000. The incorporators are J. M. Vaughan, R. E. O'Flynn, Jay O'Flynn, all of Owensboro, and G. O. Tuck and J. M. Buckner, of Louisville. The new concern owns two large warehouses in Owensboro and is now installing a drying plant. Buckner and Tuck are among the best-known tobacco men in Kentucky.

The Porto-Rican American Tobacco Co. has declared a scrip dividend of four per cent. payable December 6, to stock of record November 15.

CASH FOR LEAF BUYING

The American Tobacco Co. Will Borrow $25,000,000 on Notes for 90 Days Bearing 6 Per cent Interest.

A syndicate, headed by the Guaranty Trust Co., Chase Securities Co., and Kidder, Peabody & Co., will purchase $25,000,000 6 per cent. 90-day notes from the American Tobacco Co. The money will be used for the purchase of leaf tobacco and other raw materials. There will be no public offerings of the notes.

The American Tobacco Co., as well as other large tobacco manufacturers, frequently is a large borrower of money from banks, especially at the leaf tobacco buying period. This issue, in other words, is little different from previous borrowings, although probably larger in amount and will provide an increased amount of working capital.

Leaf tobacco is now at the highest price in the history of the country. The note issue only represented a centralization of the company's debt in one issue.

A GERMAN ADMISSION

Kaiser's Subjects Can't Get Much Tobacco Because of an Unfavorable Exchange Rate—Bad Situation.

WASHINGTON, November 12.—A German newspaper, recently obtained by Government officials here, contains an article explanatory of the existing scarcity of tobacco in Germany. After admitting that some "hopes had been raised in tobacco circles by the recent announcement that Holland no longer would forbid the export of tobacco," the writer of the article says:

"These hopes have now finished, however, for the free importation of tobacco is not yet in sight. All importations of tobacco have to take place through the Tabakhandelsgesellschaft at Bremen or by virtue of licenses issued by this concern; and the distribution of imported tobacco is effected under the supervision of this concern.

"Only the most necessary amounts of tobacco are imported in order to avoid as far as possible an unfavorable influence on the German rate exchange. Thus the imported amounts of tobacco have little relation with those amounts which were imported before the war commenced. Most of the factories are permitted to have 2-3 of their former pre-war consumption. From the output of the factories, which is considerably reduced, 75 per cent is taken for army use, thus leaving a very small amount for distribution of the civil population.

"There is little present prospect of remedy in the situation, which is admittedly rather serious.

"The high prices which must be paid for cigars and smoking tobacco may in no way be attributed to manipulations which are alleged to have been carried on by the tobacco dealers. The high prices simply result from the circumstances. The question of rationing smokers has been minutely considered, but does not seem to be feasible."

BONIFACES ASSEMBLED

Many Big Hotel Men Attend the Exposition and Convention in New York City—Brown Entertains.

The second annual National Hotel Men's Exposition and thirty-first annual convention of the New York State Hotel Association were opened in New York city, Monday, commencing with a wheatless, meatless luncheon, at which 300 guests of George C. Brown, proprietor of the Park Avenue Hotel, cheered the announcement that proprietors of hostelries from coast to coast would stand behind the Food Administration to the last crust.

Sheriff-elect David Knott warned New York city hotel men of the necessity for voting at the next election. He cautioned them to watch closely, and they were silent; he begged them to see that all their employees voted, and they looked inquiringly at the speaker; he told them local option might threaten, and they understood—and cheered.

Following addresses by George C. Brown, of the Park Avenue; Edward M. Tierney, of the Arlington, Binghamton; John McGlynn, president of the New York State Hotel Association, and Oscar Tschirky, general manager of the Waldorf-Astoria, the guests formed in front of the Park Avenue Hotel and marched behind a band and the Stars and Stripes to Grand Central Palace, where 350 concerns manufacturing and marketing articles adapted to hotel use are exhibiting methods of wartime thrift and patriotic sacrifice.

Simultaneously with the luncheon to the hotel men, their wives were lunching informally at the Hotel Biltmore as guests of John McE. Bowman.

The official opening of the exposition with addresses was scheduled for 8 o'clock Monday night, but owing to the interest displayed by the visitors in the exhibits, Chairman Tierney from the balcony surveyed the throng, and, turning to his speakers, declared the exposition had "just naturally opened of its own accord" without their assistance.

The Faker at Work

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Impostors posing as Federal employees are trying to sell rheumatism and other "cures" which they represent to the gullible as being made by the United States Government, is a warning issued to-day by the Bureau of Chemistry, United States Department of Agriculture. Letters received from residents of Minnesota and South Dakota tell of such misrepresentations by agents of the "United States Medical Dispensary" or "Dr. Henry Post," Washington, D. C. The packages and labels guaranteed for $20 "cures" for various ailments but failed to give any address of those who are to refund. Federal inspectors have been unable to locate any such concern or doctor in Washington or elsewhere.

The label contains a serial number and states that the "product" is "guaranteed by Dr. Post under the national pure food and drugs act of June 30, 1906." The number given is that assigned to a concern which has never made such a product and has no connection with Dr. Post or a Dr. George Lawrence of South Dakota, who, according to a correspondent, represented himself as both Dr. Post's agent and an employee of the United States Government.

The department's inspectors cannot find that the product is being shipped in interstate commerce, which would bring it under the Food and Drugs Act, and are of the opinion that the agents carry it personally to escape detection by the Federal authorities. The department, therefore, has brought the matter to the attention of various State and city food and drug officials with the view of securing their co-operation in detecting and preventing such fraudulent practices. "Dr." Post is supposed to be one of the fellows who recently touted an "anti-tobacco medicine."

DOOCKLER'S CLOSE CALL

While Motoring Near Maspeth, the Garcia Grande Salesman Was Badly Bumped by a Trolley Car.

Alex. Doockler, Brooklyn representative of Julius Klorfein, met with a serious accident, Friday evening. He was driving his Ford along the car tracks out near Maspeth, L. I., when a Flushing avenue trolley car, coming up behind, struck Doockler's vehicle and sent it crashing against a tree. Doockler was hauled out unconscious, from beneath the machine, and after being attended by a doctor, was sent home in a taxi-cab. He lives at 1888 Marmion avenue, The Bronx.

Doockler received lacerations of the face and a severe shaking up. Passersby said it was a miracle that he wasn't killed. His machine was badly damaged and is now in a repair shop in Brooklyn. Gamely, Doockler reported for work Tuesday morning, but he was told he had better rest up and take it easy for awhile. It is said that he has a good case against the B. R. T., as report has it that the motorman of the trolley car was at fault. Doockler wants to know whether all respect for the "flivver" has disappeared, as the motorman's attitude showed absolute disrespect.

SHIPPING CONDITIONS

Freight Rates in Most Instances Have a Tendency to Advance and Cargo Space Is Hard to Get.

WASHINGTON, November 13.—Officials here say that there has been no particular change in shipping conditions to Great Britain recently, except that space to London has become somewhat scarce, owing to the loss of ships and requisitioning of space by the British Government.

To France shipping continues difficult. Space for commercial cargo is scarce and departures are infrequent. The requisitioning of some of the steamers operating to French ports has proportionately reduced available cargo space and of course it is more difficult to procure transportation.

To Italy, up to last week, space was fairly easy to secure and commercial cargoes were cleared promptly.

No service is available to Greece. To Holland and Scandinavian countries, service is temporarily suspended. The discharging of Swedish steamers which have been unable to obtain clearance, is proceeding.

South American shipping continues easy, both as to space and rates. To the Orient and Australia, rates have an upward tendency, as available space is well engaged up to the end of the year. The movement continues mostly via Pacific ports, steamers from New York being few and far between, especially to Oriental ports.

COUNTERFEIT $5 SILVER CERTIFICATE.

A deceptive counterfeit of the $5 silver certificate is reported by the United States Treasury department. This counterfeit is printed from photo-mechanical plates on a single sheet of fair quality, with a few printed green lines representing the silk fiber of the genuine. It is of the series of 1899, check letter "A," face plate number 300, Houston B. Teehee, register of the treasury; John Burke, treasurer of the United States (Indian head). Care should be exercised in handling notes of this issue. If carefully scrutinized it will be seen that the lathe work in the counterfeit is broken and disconnected. The Indian portrait is too dark, the numbering is too large and poorly formed, as well as being out of alignment on the specimen at hand. The seal and large blue numeral, face of note, appear to have been hand cut, and the figures are poorly executed. The back of the note is more deceptive than the face.

ONE THING AND ANOTHER

The cigar market is circumscribed by the ability and willingness of consumers to pay.

In one way or another, nearly every man limits his expenditures. Sometimes a decision to buy, or not to buy, is made arbitrarily. Habit has a lot to do with it.

Indisposed to pay more than the former price, an erstwhile customer may try something else. Or, possibly he will choose to do without.

Any increase of price, however reasonable, may spoil a chance to make a sale.

The average smoker makes frequent purchases. But, usually, he restricts himself to goods of a certain price. Whether he seeks solace in nickel smokes or extracts satisfaction from imported cigars, though he has bought a brand for years, he may demur, if asked to pay more.

Every retailer has customers who protest. Inclined to be fussy, or suspicious perhaps, they are hard to satisfy, especially on prices.

Throughout the country, such customers may be more numerous than one supposes.

At least a part of the popularity obtained by a brand is associated directly with the retail price of the cigar.

Where the cost to the consumer has been fixed for years, an increase in the retail price may vitiate previous advertising.

If a brand, for a decade or more, has been advertised as the "best eight cent cigar in America," an advance of the retail price to nine cents makes a difference.

Yet, more important than the retention of prices is the maintenance of quality.

Use inferior material or employ workmen less skilled in the manufacture of cigars of established character and you assure a forfeiture of reputation.

To impair the quality that has caused a brand to be popular, is about the most costly thing a cigar manufacturer can do.

If he permits a brand to deteriorate, he loses more than money. If he makes it possible for smokers to say truthfully, "So-and-so's cigars are not so good as they used to be," he is taking a step that leads to a downfall of business.

LOTS OF LITTLE CIGARS DESIRED

The present shortage of little cigars is more than noticeable.

Quick, and in big quantities, small smokes are wanted.

To the extent that persistent demand may accelerate production, the output of little cigars should be increased immediately.

Despite the greater cost of tobacco, the manufacture of little cigars, to be sold at increased prices, is not unprofitable. Nor is the chance now offered an opportunity that every manufacturer can afford to overlook.

The fact that so large a buyer as the United Cigar Stores Co. finds it desirable to advertise for little cigars is significant.

Such an advertisement is an attestation of the drained condition of the market. Hence, the incentive to activity.

THE CHANGE ONE SAW.

It was growing late in the discreetly glittering corridors of Philadelphia's magnificent Hotel Pomposia, and the attendant magnates behind its great bronze counters were yawning wearily. Tired business men, exhausted by the vigors of a six-hour-and-five-meal working day, collapsed into huge leathern chairs for just one final fifty-cent cigar before terminating the evening's misery. In the intervals of their conversation one caught faint echoes of dance music from various ballrooms beneath that cosmic roof. Across this stuffed and gilded scene moved the hardbitten, thrifty, bandy-legged little Scotch comedian in his trade-marked costume—kilts, bonnet, wriggly stick and all, swaggering to his well-earned rest. The songs he sang that night were hummed by athletes in college shower baths, by lonely telegraphers waiting for the midnight express to thunder past them up the Rockies, by fishermen holding their course out from Gloucester. One saw it all in that inimitable gait—pride in his power of success, and with it just the slightest dash of contempt for those whom that success impressed? Some eager young person in uniform slammed an elevator door on all this greatness, and the incident was over. The Y. M. C. A. auditorium at Camp Dix isn't in the least like the Hotel Pomposia, but the songs were the same on a night six years later. Four thousand boys in uniform thought the comedian unchanged, and laughed and sang with him as of old. What could they know of that bitter hillside in Flanders where his only son had died at the head of his men, burying his father's hope and pride? There was no hint of that in the songs. The singer closed by telling dryly and briefly of this war and the soldier's share in it. He turned to swagger off in the old way, hesitated, stopped dead, and his hand snapped up to his forehead: "Soldiers of America, I salute you!" he cried. A queer hush followed, then thunders of applause. Without knowledge the boys yet knew that that salute was not from the comedian, but from the captain—dead in Flanders these two years and more.—Collier's.

A great many men don't like figures. There is a sense of effort connected with ascertaining basic facts which engenders a tendency to avoid such exercise. It is a great deal easier, very often, to run along beaten tracks, to accept conclusions and estimates supplied in printed form, and to mark and sell goods according to set schedules. While in normal times this sort of thing may have been to a degree acceptable, we are living under conditions right now which render such a course almost surely fatal. We've got to know the facts and it won't do to accept those which heretofore have been standards.—Bulletin of Pharmacy.

SO GOOD DEEDS DO SHINE

The Sun Fund, up to Tuesday night amounted to $130,571.16. The total expended for smokes to date is $69,388.54

The Sun tobacco fund was started July 1. The first shipment, 1,275,000 cigarettes, went to France July 14. Three months after the first shipment the Sun tobacco fund had delivered to army transports more than 50,000,000 smokes, and such shipments now continue and will continue at regular intervals. They all go in army transports under convoy, so that the danger of the cargo being torpedoed is minimized, and the delivery of the tobacco to the troops is assured—if it escapes the submarines.

The Sun tobacco fund's smokes are all shipped in bond. That is to say, the tobacco is bought at the factory in large quantities and shipped from there under seal and delivered directly into the hands of the depot quartermaster, so that, as the tobacco is not to be consumed in this country and is not to be sold, it escapes all internal revenue and other taxes. This saving of taxes alone has already amounted to tens of thousands of dollars, all of which has gone into tobacco instead of revenue stamps.

Every dollar of administrative expense of the Sun tobacco fund is paid by the Sun, so that every dollar contributed to the Sun goes into tobacco 100 per cent net, delivered into the hands of the soldiers in France at no other cost from start to finish than the cost of the tobacco.

Because no expenses are charged against the tobacco fund and because of the saving of the revenue stamps and the low wholesale rates paid by the fund for tobacco at the factory, purchased in lots of millions, every dollar paid into the fund by subscribers averages upward of 500 smokes laid down in the hands of soldiers in France. Every hundred dollars paid into the fund means 50,000 smokes. Every thousand dollars means a half a million smokes.

Purchased by the Sun fund, cigarettes and smoking tobacco are distributed to American soldiers in France like rations.

TOBACCO FOR CHINA

Nanyang Bros. Co. Ships 1,500,000 Pounds Monthly

E. H. Constantine, general manager of the Nanyang Brothers Tobacco Co., of Hongkong and Shanghai, as a result of his visit to the United States, has arranged for the shipment of 1,500,000 pounds of Virginia-Carolina bright leaf tobacco to the Orient every month.

Capt. J. O. W. Gravely, of Rocky Mount, N. C., has been made American agent for the Nanyang Brothers Tobacco Co. The company will erect a large warehouse at Rocky Mount. Also, a New York office will be opened to care for clearances and banking operations—all to be under direction of Captain Gravely.

The better to develop important plans, involving the purchase of upwards of $4,000,000 worth of tobacco a year, "Mr. Constantine," so the Southern Tobacco Journal reports, "has been visiting all the principal markets in the bright belt of Virginia and North Carolina, accompanied by Captain Gravely, and they have laid out ambitious plans for securing the desired quantity and quality of the golden leaf."

Estimates of United States Tobacco Production

The Average Yield Per Acre in Different States

WASHINGTON, November 12.—A preliminary estimate by the Crop Reporting Board of the Bureau of Crop Estimates, places the 1917 crop of tobacco at 1,185,478,000 pounds as against 1,150,622,000 pounds estimated for December, 1916, and as against the average for the five years, 1911-1915, inclusive of 983,723,000 pounds. The preliminary yield per acre is 835.8 pounds as against 818.2 pounds for the ten year average. As to quality the crop is reported two-tenths per cent below the normal.

Connecticult and Pennsylvania are at the head of the list with a preliminary estimated yield of 1,400 pounds to the acre. In the case of Connecticut this is a decrease from the ten year average of 1,620 pounds, in Pennsylvania it is an increase from a ten year average of 1,330 pounds. Virginia shows an average of 700 pounds as compared with the ten year average of a production of 730 pounds to the acre; North Carolina stands practically the same, the estimate showing 630 pounds to the acre this year as against 632 pounds for the ten year average. South Carolina shows 850 pounds as against a ten year average of 730 pounds. Another remarkable increase is Florida which shows 1,100 pounds to the acre as against an average of 920 pounds for the ten year period; Ohio shows 960 as against 865; Wisconsin, however, is only 950 pounds whereas the average for the ten years, 1,153 pounds. Kentucky shows an estimate of 900 pounds as against 839 for the ten years and Tennessee 810 pounds as against 765 pounds for the ten years.

The heaviest estimated production is that of Kentucky with a total of 418,140,000 as compared with 435,600,000, the December, 1916, estimate, but far ahead of the five year average of 329,836,000 pounds. The quality percentage shows a material decrease being only 88 per cent of normal as compared with 94 per cent in 1916.

North Carolina, the second State of importance, shows an estimated production of 199,584,000 as against that of 176,000,000 for December, 1916, and a still further increase over the five year average of 149,706,000 pounds, accompanied by an increase in quality from 80 to 86 per cent. Virginia, while it shows an increase in quality from 80 to 88 per cent, shows a steadily decreasing quantity. The State is 130,465,000 pounds, the December, 1916, estimate showed a decrease to 192,200,000 pounds, and the estimate for 1917 a still further decrease to 126,350,000 pounds. The only other State showing a yield of over a hundred million pounds is Ohio with a total of 101,760,000 as against 95,000,000 in 1916, December and an average of 96,916,000 for the five years, a slight decrease in quality was shown from 90 to 88 per cent.

Other States show an increased production, Pennsylvania with an estimate for the present year of 58,100,000 as against 49,096,000 pounds as of December 1, 1916, and with a five year average of 53,295,000 pounds; this, however, is accompanied by a decrease in the quality percentage from 92 to 86. South Carolina shows an increase in quality from 70 to 81 per cent. The five year average crop for that State has been 28,601,000 pounds. Last year the

The Pestiferous Tobacco Beetle—How to Prevent it

By G. A. Runner, Entomological Assistant, Southern Field Crop Insect Investigation

Injury by the tobacco beetle is almost entirely the work of the larvæ, or young. The adults, or beetles, do not seem to injure tobacco directly in any way except when burrowing out after transforming from the pupa or resting stage.

This insect damages cigars and pressed tobacco by eating out or burrowing small cylindrical tunnels and leaving them filled with a mass of dust and excrement. In cigars the holes sometimes extend straight through from one side to the other; in other instances they wind about through the filler of the cigar so that a large part of the interior is destroyed without much evidence of injury showing on the wrapper. The larvæ often work between two closely packed cigars, slitting the wrapper lengthwise for some distance. In a box or package a single larva may injure several cigars. The pupal cells frequently show between closely pressed cigars or on the edge of the band. Dust and refuse from feeding collect in the bottom of the box and between the cigars. Injured cigars do not draw well and burn unevenly, and dust is drawn into the mouth of the smoker.

In cigarettes holes are bored through the wrappers and frequently through the cork tips. The interior of the cigarette is filled with refuse, and the wrapper becomes soiled and discolored. Injury is more likely to occur in cigarettes made from the sweeter, milder types of leaf, such as are used in the more expensive grades. Fine Turkish tobaccos are especially liable to infestation.

Smoking and chewing tobaccos often become badly worm-eaten. In the pressed kinds galleries are formed, and in chewing tobacco the wrapper is cut and the edges furrowed (fig. 2.) Granulated and fine-cut tobaccos become mixed with the dust and refuse from feeding and with dead bodies of the adults. Pupal cells occur on the sides of the container or in the tobacco. Holes are found in the paper or tin-foil wrapping.

Leaf tobacco is affected in much the same manner as cigars. The larvæ bore holes in every direction through the leaves, and the tobacco becomes soiled with dust and refuse. Fine wrapper becomes worthless. In leaf tobacco used for filler, for manufactured tobacco, or for snuff, the damage is confined more to the tobacco actually consumed by the larvæ than it is in the manufactured products, the mere sign of infestation making the finished product unsalable and worthless.

The increase and spread of the insect in tobacco factories in this country within comparatively recent years has been very noticeable. Experienced tobacco dealers and manufacturers attribute this to the more general use of steam for heating factories and other buildings. The higher and more uniform temperatures maintained make breeding conditions more favorable for the insect, and the chance that development will be checked or the insects killed out by the cold weather is not as great as before steam heat was employed.

The recent rapid expansion of the tobacco industry has carried the pest, in leaf tobacco or in tobacco products, to many localities where until within the last few years it had been unknown.

In this country the beetle now is disseminated so generally that it is a common occurrence to find it in show cases and storage rooms or humidors in cigar stores where worthless or infested stock is not properly treated or destroyed. The majority of shipments returned to cigar and tobacco factories come from dealers in the South and from other localities where climatic conditions are especially favorable for the rapid increase of the insect. Even in summer comparatively few complaints come from dealers in certain of the Northern States and Canada. In view of these facts, when damaged goods are returned to the manufacturers after having been in the hands of the dealers for some time, it is always possible that the product was not infested when shipped out from the factory.

The tobacco beetle feeds upon a variety of dried vegetable substances and upon a few of animal origin. Its more common food is cured leaf and manufactured tobacco. In drug stores and grocery stores often it is found infesting dried roots and leaves of certain kinds and pressed yeast cake. In drug stores frequently it becomes a serious pest and causes considerable loss. Numerous cases of injury to plush upholstering in furniture and to dried plants in botanical collections have been recorded. The insect also feeds upon tobacco seed.

The insect lives in its food substance during all stages of its existence. In tobacco or other food substances kept constantly warm breeding is continuous, and there may be as many as five or six generations a year. Under usual conditions in tobacco warehouses in the latitude of Virginia and Tennessee there are three or four generations a year. The time required to complete the life cycle of the insect depends mainly upon temperature and may be as short as 45 days, normally varying in summer from 45 to 70 days. Eggs are laid in the food substance. They hatch in from 6 to 10 days. The larva period is from 30 to 50 days and the pupa period from 6 to 10 days. Under usual conditions adults live from three to six weeks. In temperate climates the insect passes the winter. mainly in the larva stage. It thrives best where the temperature and humidity are high and in tobacco or other food substances protected from rapid evaporation.

In food substances kept constantly warm all stages of the beetle may be found at any time, and the great variation in the time required for development gives constant overlapping of generations. Under usual conditions in tobacco warehouses and in unheated buildings there are, however, well-marked periods when the adults are most abundant. In the latitude of Virginia and Tennessee there seems to be a period of greater abundance of the adult coinciding with the first warm weather in June, and again in August and early September. At Clarksville, Tenn., starting with the egg stage, in early May, three or, under some conditions, four generations are possible. At Richmond, Va., three generations may occur under warehouse conditions before the appearance of cold weather, the adults appearing in May, July and October, and from the adults emerging earliest in the spring there may possibly be a fourth generation reaching the adult stage before winter.

In cigar stores and small establishments it is not difficult to eradicate the tobacco beetle. Infested stock may be treated and the building thoroughly cleaned. The humidors or storage closets should be perfectly tight, and infested stock should be destroyed or treated as soon as signs of infestation are noticed.

In large factories and tobacco warehouses, however, complete eradication in many instances is extremely difficult, or perhaps impossible. The factories in some cases are old wooden buildings, roughly built and containing innumerable cracks and crevices in which tobacco dust and refuse have accumulated, offering ideal hiding and breeding places for the beetles. Even in modern factories of brick or concrete construction it is difficult to eradicate the insect completely after it has once become established, but it is much easier, of course, to keep such buildings clean and free from accumulations of refuse material in which the beetles may breed. The measures to be employed in eradication work or in sterilizing buildings will depend upon local conditions.

For destroying the different stages of the beetle in crevices of floors or walls, live steam applied through a nozzle from movable pipes or hose, hot water, gasoline, carbon disulphid, or dilute ammonia may be used. Suction cleaners also may be used to advantage for such work. In cigar factories the stock of leaf tobacco should be kept in a tight or screened room, as far as possible from the rooms in which the cigars are made or handled. Trays of unsorted cigars should be covered or kept overnight in a screened compartment, as eggs deposited on the cigars at this time, even from a single beetle, may be the cause of heavy losses afterwards.

In cigar and tobacco factories the greater number of beetles are brought in with the leaf tobacco. Beetles also breed from infested stock and from accumulations of refuse material. Factories in some instances are in close proximity to tobacco warehouses where beetles are present in large numbers. A comparatively small number of beetles in rooms in which cigars are made, or in rooms where the cigars or other classes of manufactured tobacco are packed, is sufficient to infest the stock seriously by depositing eggs in it. The protection of the finished product before it is packed is generally of more importance than the condition of the raw material, as with most classes of manufactured tobacco the process of manufacture frees it from different stages of the beetle present in the raw material.

The modern cold-storage plants now found in most cities furnish a convenient, inexpensive, and effective means of sterilizing infested tobacco. The method has been used to a considerable extent, but the temperatures more commonly used have the effect of suspending insect activity instead of causing death. Cold storage at temperatures between 32 deg. and 65 deg. F. prevents further damage as long as the material is held in storage. The different stages of the beetle are not killed, however, and activity is resumed when the tobacco is removed from storage. When lower temperatures are available a more satisfactory and effective method is to subject the tobacco for a week or more to the lowest temperature that can be obtained. A long series of experiments with infested tobacco in cold storage at low temperatures has shown this method to be thoroughly effective.

The cold-storage room should be as dry as possible, and the cigars or manufactured tobacco should be removed from storage when the air outside is dry, to prevent sweating. Some system of dry cold storage or air-tight receptacles for holding the cigars or tobacco is desirable, although not absolutely necessary if care is taken to remove the material when the air is dry. If the material is removed from storage when the air is damp, the condensation of moisture may make the tobacco or cigars more liable to mold, or may cause discoloring, staining, or warping of the boxes or containers.

A large number of cigars placed in cold storage by a manufacturer were kept under observation by the writer. The cigars were not put in containers, the boxes being merely piled on the floor of the cold-storage room. The boxes were removed when the air outside was dry and put under presses in a dry room for a time to prevent warping of the covers of the boxes. The treatment proved thoroughly effective in killing all stages of the beetles. The manufacturer reported that no injury to the cigars as a result of the treatment was apparent. Different lots were kept at a temperature of about 12 deg. F. for from one to four weeks.

Although there are certain objections to the cold-storage method of control, such as loosening of the wrappers of fine cigars by sudden changes in temperature, danger of sweating when removed from cold storage, injury to quality from too rapid aging, etc., it has certain advantages and in some cases may be found more desirable than other methods of treatment. When precautions are taken to prevent sweating, it is evident that the exposure of manufactured or leaf tobacco to cold in a cold-storage room is not more apt to cause injury than the exposure of the same material to low temperatures during winter.

In localities where severe freezing occurs the doors and windows of warehouses or other buildings where tobacco is stored may be thrown open at favorable times during the winter and the tobacco subjected to freezing temperatures. This control measure has been employed by tobacco men in different sections of the country, and excellent results have been reported, the degree of success in exterminating the beetles or checking their increase depending upon the temperatures obtained. Experiments made with infested manufactured bacco have shown that it may be sterilized easily by this means.

A STERILIZER USED IN EL ORIENTE CIGAR FACTORY

Before being utilized in some of the Manila cigar factories, the leaf tobacco is sterilized by steam. The temperature to which the tobacco is brought in this steaming process is over 100 degrees, Centigrade.

The modern practice of storing certain classes of leaf tobacco in hogshead in sheds, giving practically out-of-door conditions and variations of temperature, furnishes an effective means, in cool climates, of reducing injury to leaf tobacco which may be stored in this manner.

Experiments made with infested tobacco indicate that the effectiveness of cold in killing different stages of the beetle can be increased by alternations of heat and cold. Sudden and extreme changes in temperature seem more destructive to the beetles than longer exposures to moderate cold. This method is applicable also to cold-storage treatment of infested tobacco.

It has been found that adults of the tobacco beetle become inactive after a few minutes' exposure to heat above 117 deg. F., but recover unless, for a considerable length of time, the temperature is kept higher than 120 deg. An exposure of one hour at temperatures between 140 deg. and 150 deg. proved effective in killing all stages of the beetle. The time required for treatment depends upon the quantity and character of the material. A temperature of from 125 deg. to 140 deg. F., continued for a few hours, or of 150 deg. for a short time, has been found effective under ordinary conditions.

Tests made in tobacco factories have shown that the temperatures reached during certain processes of manufacture are sufficiently high to sterilize the tobacco quickly and effectively as it passes through the driers. Reinfestation of the finished product depends on the methods of packing, handling and storing.

While steam furnishes, under some circumstances, an effective and convenient means of sterilizing empty storage rooms or warehouses, numerous difficulties prevent its use in sterilizing infested tobacco. If leaf tobacco is exposed to steam at high temperatures for any length of time it becomes more brittle, the texture of the leaf and the aroma are changed as the natural oils are drawn out, and the color becomes darker. Notwithstanding the general prejudice against steaming, however, there seems to be considerable evidence that mild steaming may be employed to advantage in treating certain classes of cigar tobacco, and the process is said to have been used to a considerable extent. A convenient method of steaming cigar tobacco in revolving drums, with the steam under pressure of about four atmospheres, is said to have been used successfully in the Philippines.

HENRY BENDHEIM'S ESTATE.

Henry Bendheim, who, at the time of his death, January 18, 1917, was vice-president of the Metropolitan Tobacco Co., left an estate of $1,641,630, according to the report of the transfer tax appraisers filed in the Surrogate's Court. Relatives and friends receive substantial bequests, and the principal of the estate goes to two brothers and a sister. The assets were: Cash, $175,930; personal, $665,385; stocks and bonds, $881,115, of which the largest holdings are 3,070 shares in the Metropolitan Tobacco Co., valued at $491,200, appraised at $644,700; 200 shares American Tobacco Co., $43,775; Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co., $30,780, and 100 shares of the P. Lorillard Co., common, valued at $22,700.

WALSH BECOMES CHIEF COUNSEL.

WASHINGTON, November 12.—John Walsh, who for some months has been acting chief counsel of the Federal Trade Commission, has just been chosen to fill that position permanently.

Mr. Walsh has been with the Trade Commission two years, having been appointed special counsel in 1915. He is the first Chief Counsel the Commission has appointed, the position having been vacant. He came from Washburn, Wis.

FORMED IN PHILADELPHIA

A New Retailers' Association

PHILADELPHIA, November 6.—Cigar store proprietors in the Quaker City have finally taken action on the long deferred movement for a representative association. Partly as a result of the work of several live dealers and partly because the trade press has been unanimously in favor of the idea, a score of leading dealers got together last Friday night at the Walton Hotel and organized the Philadelphia Retail Tobacco Dealers' Association. Although the meeting was looked upon at first as a tentative proposition to discuss the outlook for an association, it really resolved itself into a session for organization. To complete this another meeting has been called for November 21, at which time it is hoped to have several hundred leading dealers present to ratify by laws and constitution.

Horace K. Leach was elected President at the meeting last Friday, Coates Coleman, treasurer, J. E. Knight, secretary, Franklin K. Sterner, Dan Ostrow and Mr. Nassau, assistant sales manager for the Antonio Roig and Langsdorf company, vice-presidents. Others present were William C. Taylor, of the M. J. Dalton Co., Mr. McDonnell, of Yahn & McDonnell, Samuel Greenwald, F. W. Mead, of the Tobacco News.

One of the announcements made at the meeting was that virtually every cigar factory in Philadelphia has recently given employes another raise of ten per cent in wages. This is on top of numerous increases in the cost of labor made since the start of the war, and is taken to presage still further increases in the price of cigars.

All retailers who are in touch with the manufacturing situation at all, here, know that most of the present wholesale prices are based on stock bought at least a year ago. It has been pointed out in this correspondence before that numerous small manufacturers have been forced out of business by the rising prices. Unable to carry a stock sufficiently large to keep them going in competition with the big fellows, they found on going into the market that they could not make cigars for sale at present prices, and many of them quit the business. The situation has also materially cut down the production up state, where scores of stogie factories have had to close their doors.

In the retail trade here, the situation is no less serious. Recently attention was called to the utter lack of uniformity in transferring the war tax from the retailer to the consumer. Even now prices are not uniform among stores that cannot be considered in the cut price class. The United Stores and many of the big independents have been selling ten cent cigarettes at eleven cents, while others charged 12 and in some instances 13 cents.

Further increases in the retail price of many standard lines of cigars, cigarettes and smoking and chewing tobacco threatened still further to disorganize. For months Mr. Taylor has been talking organization to all the dealers in the city. Ostrow also has been a hard worker in the cause, as have Coleman and Leach. A few weeks ago, when reference was made to the movement in this correspondence, there really seemed little hope that it would get started. Its backers were met at every turn with the statement that previous attempts to organize in this city had failed. But in spite of this they persevered and once started the plan met with a great deal of favor on the part of representative dealers.

It is estimated that there are about 5,800 cigar dealers in this city. Of course this number includes proprietors of small, outlying stores, many of whom handle cigars as a side line to candy, stationery, toys, etc. The number is large enough, however, to assure the association of a good membership. Already an active membership campaign has been started with the co-operation of nearly all the big jobbing houses. Stickers advertising the next meeting are to be sent to every dealer in the city, and it is expected that several hundred will attend the next meeting.

That it was high time for an association was indicated the first of this week when dealers got notices of immediate advances in the price of Camels, Tuxedo and Prince Albert. Camels are now a two for a quarter proposition in Philadelphia. Some dealers are charging 13 cents straight. The price cutting stores in no instance are selling below 12 cents and some of them are getting two for a quarter.

A general advance all along the line is expected by dealers here. Manufacturers who went to $43 recently on five cent goods are said to be having difficulty getting a margin of profit out of their receipts after meeting the demands of labor, which is continually getting scarcer. In this situation another advance is considered inevitable.

One result of the present condition of the market this year is to be the total elimination of the old fashioned gift idea. Dealers are beginning to tumble, to put it mildly, that cigars given away put nothing into the cash register, directly or indirectly. In former years it was the custom here as elsewhere to send out boxes of high grade goods to customers but this year anything of that kind sent out will be C. O. D. Last year the liquor dealers here broke away from the old and expensive gift habit. Dealers are also eliminating the practice of giving a gift smoke to the man who buys a box of cigars once in a while. Too many good customers got wise to the saving they could make through this system when old high cost of living got up over their heads, and instead of filling up every night or morning, bought a box of three fers (when such things were) once a week and got a good smoke free, gratis for nothing, than which there is nothing cheaper except finding money.

A. Schulte will open a store in Trenton on or about the first of the year, and about the same time the local chain probably will be extended. Schulte and other leading dealers report extraordinary success with the G. H. P. company's Producto.

They're getting out another of those cute little signs. It reads: "Please don't smoke your cigar in this office unless you have to—I mean two."

The Ledger demonstration window at Broad and Chestnut streets had one of the most effactive ads seen so far in this vicinity last week, Chesterfield cigarettes being the commodity. A young fellow who looked like a soldier in his nice new uniform and, to quote a man who looked him over from the crowd one night, "probably will be if he ain't," stood in the window and demonstrted the truth of the "Mild-sure, but they satisfy" line by smoking pack after pack of the brand.

GRADING LEAF TOBACCO IN MANILA

From the Cagayan Valley, each bale of tobacco brought to Manila is opened and graded, not only to allow the tobacco to be assorted for use in manufacturing but also so that the government inspectors may see, and be assured of, its quality. Note the manner in which the "hands" are packed to prevent the tobacco from being broken by handling during the dry season.

Big Tobacco Production in Petersburg

Leaf Rehandled Amounts to 50,000,000 Pounds Annually—Cigarette Output Close to Four Billions Yearly—Millions of Cigars and Millions of Pounds of Plug and Twist Tobacco—The Figures This Year Are the Biggest Ever.

Pertaining to the manufacture of tobacco in Petersburg, Va., government figures show the average per year for the three years of 1913 to 1915 inclusive to have been 2,122,462,000 cigarettes, 13,200,000 cigars and 5,461,000 pounds of plug and twist tobacco. The value of manufactured tobacco for 1916-1917 will be almost double that of 1915-1916, the increase in cigarette production being close to 4,000,000,000. This is made possible through large additions to the cigarette branch of the British-American Tobacco Co.

In addition to the manufactured product, Petersburg dealers and manufacturers annually stem or rehandle about 30,000,000 pounds of leaf tobacco for domestic and export trade. Approximately 25,000,000 pounds annually are exported from Petersburg, while the amount imported for use in the factories ranges from 3,000,000 to 5,000,000 pounds. Taking into consideration the amount of leaf consumed by the Petersburg factories in the manufacture of cigarettes, cigars and smoking, plug and twist tobacco, the total amount of leaf stemmed and rehandled is conservatively estimated at 50,000,000 pounds. At the high average paid for tobacco the present year, the total value of such crop will reach figures in the neighborhood of $18,000,000 to $20,000,000, and the value of the manufactured product will also be much greater than in any former year, notwithstanding scarcity of labor.

For the past seven years the total amount of bright and dark leaf tobacco sold in Petersburg annually has averaged more than 6,000,000 pounds, the figures for 1916 totaling 5,320,660. With the exception of 1915, these are the lowest figures for the seven years.

Extensive establishments of the British-American Tobacco Co. Ltd., the Export Leaf Tobacco Co. and the Dunlop Tobacco Co. are located in Petersburg. Working conditions in the factories of these companies are very satisfactory, and the value of the big plants to the city is of first importance. These interests are under the supervision of Edgar S. Bowling, who is strongly identified with Petersburg interests and is a most progressive business man.

Concerning the tobacco industry of the locality, the Petersburg Index-Appeal declares: "With the total value of tobacco manufactured annually in Petersburg amounting to more than $7,000,000, this industry must be given first place among the primary industries of the city.

"It may be that because the tobacco industry is one which we have had with us longest its importance to the city is not fully appreciated. But when we consider that more than three thousand men, women, boys and girls earn their living from labor in the local tobacco factories, and that these same people work under conditions far better than the average, receiving wages considered fully commensurate with the services rendered, credit must be given to the manufacturers.

"Petersburg has been a big tobacco market since its founding, perhaps. Certainly there is no person now living who can recall the day when it was not the chief money crop in Petersburg markets. This city has wider fame as a peanut market, because it is considered the largest peanut market in the world. And yet the value of its peanuts is not so great as the value of its tobacco, and not one-tenth as many people are employed in the peanut factories as in the tobacco factories.

"It is only during the past four years the growing of bright tobacco has been undertaken in this section of Virginia. Its cultivation is the result of a campaign made by the Petersburg Chamber of Commerce, which secured bright tobacco experts and had them demonstrate the cultivation of this tobacco. The production of bright tobacco in Southside Virginia will reach well into the millions of pounds this year, and some being marketed in Petersburg is declared to be as fine as ever seen in any market.

"It is estimated that about 30,000,000 pounds of tobacco is grown annually within a radius of fifty miles of Petersburg in Virginia and south of the James River. The total amount of tobacco grown in Virginia reaches probabliy 150,000,000 and is more than one-tenth of the entire output of the United States.

"Under normal conditions in Petersburg, three thousand people are employed in the various tobacco plants here, of which there are eight. In the cigarette factories 700 women and girls are employed and 500 men and boys. There is present demand for labor in this department. About three hundred white women and girls are employed in the cigar factories.

"In the factories manufacturing plug, twist, leaf and smoking about 1,000 negro men and boys are employed and 500 negro women and girls."

The Arguments of the Retailers

Information that the anti-liquor interests in Ohio were now waging war on the tobacco field was repeated at the meeting of the Independent Retail Tobacconists' Association, Thursday evening, at Terrace Garden. H. H. Hunter presented the facts. He said the anti-liquor people already had succeeded in having a law passed forbidding the sale of cigarettes to anyone under the age of 21, and they were endeavoring now to restrict the use of tobacco. He gave warning that agitators may be expected to begin operations in New York State at any time, and that it would be well to prepare to meet their attacks now. Judge Hunter also spoke regarding the Federal Trade Commission and said that the commission would not act on the price fixing question. He had heard a rumor, however, that the Department of Justice will shortly take action against manufacturers who refuse to sell tobacco products to dealers who have not increased prices. Judge Hunter concluded the law committee report by saying he had been informed that the District Attorney of Los Angeles, on October 21, had received information that the raising of prices on all tobacco products had not been made necessary by the new revenue tax. The Grand Jury is now investigating. In addition, it is possible that New York will be the scene of a price investigation within the month. Hunter also announced that trade organizations are spreading and he expected to hear soon that the cigar clerks have formed a union.

Ike Ochs, representing the committee appointed to see manufacturers to discuss a living profit for retailers, reported progress, but said the committee was not ready to "Have the matter aired for publicity."

President Gompers stated that he attended a meeting of the Bronx Retailers' Association two weeks ago. He spoke regarding the necessity of concerted action on the part of all associations throughout the city. The Bronx dealers will appoint a committee to take part in any joint meeting that may be held.

O. Abramowitz urged organization of dealers and argued that a campaign should be conducted for that purpose, along the lines of unions. He suggested a committee be appointed for each ten stores, for canvassing purposes. Ike Ochs said it couldn't be done. Then, Ochs attacked the United Cigar Stores Co., saying that the "United" was the "bell-cow" and everyone else would follow, no matter what they did. He also took card manufacturers over the jumps and produced figures to show how great had been the increase on ordinary playing cards. They had risen first from $1.92 to $2.50 and now had been sent up to $3.19 per dozen. There is no cause for all this increase, he said, and the card people were due for an investigation, if anyone was. Having found the consumer was seriously objecting to paying 35 cents for a deck of cards, he called up a Brooklyn card dealer with whom he had previously done business. He asked for a card he could sell at 25 cents, and the reply was they didn't have any or at least couldn't sell them at the price. The company demanded $3.60 a dozen, and if the retailer sold these cards for $3.90 he wouldn't make as large a profit as he had previously made.

President Gompers discussed conditions in the trade. He mentioned how in former days a dealer would build up his business and then when the time came would retire, leaving the store to his son, but nowadays they can't make enough to retire comfortably on when they want to relinquish their business and take life easy. He said the tobacco business was an honest and legitimate one and that the men connected with it in the retail division were entitled to a larger profit. For himself, he said, he would be only too glad if the Government did take a hand in the investigation of conditions; then perhaps the retailers would be given a show.

Came then, the usual attack on the coupon. Back and forth they kicked the little green ticket; back and forth did they smash the companies giving out coupons, and excitement prevailed. Finally Manny Neuwirth couldn't stand it any longer and jumping to his feet he cried, "Let us get to the bottom of this thing.

JOSE GARCIA, A MISSIONARY PRIEST, WAS THE FATHER OF A GREAT INDUSTRY. ABOUT THE TIME OF THE WAR OF REVOLUTION IN AMERICA, A HUNDRED AND THIRTY-FIVE YEARS AGO, HE WAS DEVELOPING PHILIPPINE CIGAR LEAF FROM TOBACCO SEED GATHERED BY HIM AT SAN LUIS, CUBA. FATHER JOSE WAS THE FIRST TOBACCO PLANTER IN THE CAGAYAN VALLEY.

Today there are twenty-two thousand families cultivating tobacco in that wonderful and fertile country, AND THE MANILA FACTORIES ARE SHIPPING CIGARS TO AMERICA AT THE RATE OF TWO HUNDRED AND TWENTY MILLION A YEAR.

Weather Ideal for Tobacco Planting

Timely Showers Are Placing Semi Vuelta, Partido and Remedios Districts in a Condition to Withstand Drought for a While—Outlook Bright for a Fine Cuban Crop—And the Acreage Will Be Bigger Than Last Year—The Prices, Quien Sabe?

HAVANA, November 9.—The second fortnight of October brought a substantial increase in the exports of cigars from Havana, as compared with the same period of last year. This result is attested principally by the better showing of exports to Great Britain and the United States, the increases to the other countries being of lesser importance. The decrease in the exports to Russia is not surprising because of the unsettled conditions in that republic. As far as the exports to Spain are concerned, there may be some mistake, as the Spanish steamer Reina Maria Christina alone took 594,920 cigars on October 20, consequently here is a difference of over 400,000 cigars, and as 27,800 cigars had been shipped more in the first half of October, exports to that country fell off only about 15,000 cigars last month.

Cigar factories continue working under full pressure; there will be no let up until the holiday orders for the United States are filled, and as many orders for the United Kingdom as the limited number of good cigarmakers will allow them to execute before the close of this year. So far there has been received no extension of the time limit, set by the British importers of cigars, when they increased their orders last month. Business to the other countries shows no improvement worth noting.

The leaf market is active, but not to the same extent as last month, as high prices and decreased stocks naturally restrict business. The market, however, is unchanged, and holders of leaf feel confident and independent, refusing all offers below their expectations, as they think the American buyers must come to them.

Weather conditions have been ideal for the planting of the new crop in all the tobacco growing regions, the ground being in prime condition, thanks to plentiful showers in October and the beginnings of this month. In the Semi Vuelta, Partido and Remedios districts, where the moisture does not evaporate as quickly as in the sandy zones of the Vuelta Abajo, the young tobacco plants could successfully withstand a drought of seven weeks from now on. This is a great advantage, and as the seedlings promise to be plentiful and reasonable in price, the replanting of seedlings is bound to be pushed actively until planting is finished some time next month. The good prices obtained by the vegueros this year has stimulated them to make extra efforts, and the acreage planted will be considerably larger than last year. The rather uncertain prospects, of future remunerative prices for sugar cane has influenced many vegueros in Santa Clara province to abandon cane cultivation, and return to tobacco, as it now promises them quicker and better returns than sugar cane. Remedios tobacco particularly will produce a large crop in 1918, provided nothing unfavorable occurs to mar the present good outlook.

However, American manufacturers should not be too optimistic about future prices, for even if Cuba should produce a large and good crop, it would come upon an exhausted market, and for that reason the demand would be such as to readily absorb the entire amount that could be raised. By that time the war may be finished also, and then there would be a phenomenal demand from Europe.

Exports of cigars, per S/S Mexico, totaled 565 cases, containing 2,495,849 cigars, which were consigned to the following countries, viz.: Great Britain, 1,112,095; United States, 1,094,954; Australia, 108,750; Canada, 53,500; Portugal, 43,000; Argentine Republic, 27,250; Uruguay, 23,500; British Africa, 21,800; Gibraltar, 8,000, and Brazil, 3,000 cigars.

Exports of leaf tobacco, from Havana, for the week ending October 30, 1917, totaled 4,994 bales, and which were distributed to the following countries, viz.: To all ports of the United States, 4,474; to Canada, 108; to the Argentine Republic, 335, and to Uruguay, 77 bales.

The only leaf buyer, who came in this week, was S. Ruppin, of S. Ruppin, Inc., of New York. There are expected to arrive tonight from Boston, Albert W. Kaffenburgh, of I. Kaffenburgh & Sons, and Wm. Batchelor, of the A. C. C. Company.

Benito Rovira is still here, although he may leave tomorrow, as he has nearly completed his yearly purchases of leaf, and which we understand have been as large as in former years.

Romeo y Julieta are very busy, although having nothing of any special interest to report this time. Billy Taylor sent some splendid orders from the States.

Partagas continues to work as hard as ever in filling orders to Great Britain, and Robert E. Lane has been doing his usual hustling in capturing orders from the American importers all over the United States.

Charles Landau, the representative of the H. Upmann factory, has been forwarding excellent orders from the American importers.

Park & Tilford, who control the Hoyo de Monterrey brand, have been sending their usual large orders to La Escepcion factory, keeping the latter busy to capacity.

The Punch factory is working actively for Great Britain, and also for the holiday trade in the United States.

Calixto Lopez & Co. are working strong for the American market and other countries.

Belinda is very busy in executing orders for the United States, as well as for England.

Por Larrañaga cannot complain, having plenty of orders in all directions.

Ramon Allones is getting its full share from the States and Great Britain.

La Corona factory is very busy. El Rey del Mundo, C. E. Beck & Co., and Sol and Devesa de Murias are doing well. ROSAM.

THE BISHOP WANTED A CIGAR.

In the Western Tobacco Journal, Marvin H. Lewis tells an anecdote of the late Bishop Alpheus W. Wilson, one of the most noted divines of the Southern Methodist Church. The Bishop was the victim of a railroad wreck and had been carried out and placed on a bank beside the roadbed, apparently dead. One of his friends hovered over him, looking for some sign of life, when the Bishop slowly opened his eyes.

"Bishop," said his friend, "what can I do for you?"

"Get me a cigar," replied the Bishop.

And though too weak to raise his head he lay on the ground bank smoking the cigar, and enduring pain like a stoic.

KENTUCKY PROSPECTS

From Louisville, E. T. Robards writes to the Farmers' Home Journal as follows:

"I said that we would see the new crop open at high-record prices. This week, the forecast I made became true, when a new hogshead of common red tobacco, from Hart county, that would hardly grade above an American grade 'L,' was sold at $21 at the Louisville Tobacco Warehouse. At the opening of the season last year, local buyers and warehousemen all agree that this same hogshead would not have sold for over $12, and if this is a forecast of what is to follow, it means an advance over last season of 75 per cent, and as several of the smaller loose-leaf markets of the State had a season average of $18, should we add 75 per cent to that average, we would have a season average of $31.50, but we hardly think this a fair basis, for last year's crop was a phenomenally good crop, the finest I have seen in many years, if ever before, with few failings, which will not be true of the 1917 crop.

"Those who wagered $100 that the average would be nearer $25 than $20 will doubtless feel encouraged to think they have a good chance to win, as this has been done, and few takers of the lower figure are to be had.

"Reports from some who have stripped out some of their crop, that it is not weighing near what they expected, has given rise to the opinion by some of the leading buying interests in the trade that the 1917 crop will not weigh out over 200,000,000 pounds, and this view is also supported by the reports of "experts," who have already visited the barns, and report that they are not nearly so full as in former years, and that the length of the plants is far shorter than usual, and all these facts tend to support the theory that this will be the shortest crop of Burley since the "cut-out year," and as the annual consumptive demand has doubtless reached 250,000,000 there is a deal of anxiety among the 'smaller fish' if the 'big fish' will not swallow up the entire crop, at prices that will be frightful to them, if not prohibitive. Beyond doubt, we are approaching a new year's selling season with some intensely interesting conditions confronting us that will make each and every buyer sit up and take notice, and the hungriness of the masses will make them see fewer defects and objectionable features in the crop, as a hungry man finds when set down to a table, where it is not a question of quality but a matter of quantity, he can get without spending all his ready cash.

"Beyond doubt, since there has grown in the last few years, an enormous demand for colory tobacco for both cigarettes and pipe smoking, we will need more of this type of Burley than has been grown this year, as it is the impression of the trade there will be less color in this crop than in former years, hence I strongly advise the farmers in picking and classing to be sure and get out of their reds every colory leaf, into classes of their own, as they will be well rewarded for their attention to this matter."

A retailer at Newburyport, Mass., has unearthed the latest mean man. He purchased a six cent house trap, took it home and caught the only mouse in his house, and then wanted the merchant to take back the trap and return the money.

Seeing a Blue Streak in Chicago

Most Dealers Had a Dull Week

CHICAGO, November 9.—Trade here isn't so good as it might be. Jobbers are complaining some. Incidentally, they say that collections are poor. Most of the retailers admit that sales have fallen off, at least a little. Changes in selling prices and the fact that a lot of smokers have been called to the colors seems to be the general reason put forth by the dealers in accounting for the slack trade. Everything in the cigar line keeps climbing in price and all are looking forward to bigger increases early next year. Local factories are not rushed as yet but with Indian summer here at last business is bound to pick up and the rush for locally-made goods for the holidays is expected to take place shortly. A lot of 5-cent cigars are now sold for 6 cents and others will fall in line in a few days, and for the time being everyone is "up in the air."

There is a lot of ability in the sales-force that is making the Roi Tan brand such a big seller in Chicago.

M. G. Thompson, G. H. Gilmore, H. E. Zittermeister and A. A. Derrig located in the city and J. C. Batchler, who covers the country trade, are all hustlers, and it is plainly seen why "El Roi Tans" are leaders here. "Pardon me, Mac, I almost forgot you." Ernest MacKenzie is the chief "Roi Tanner" of them all and he has full charge of the entire salesforce in this territory; and you, too, "Louie" Obendorf. Louis is a well-known figure among the cigar trade here and has worked this market for many years.

Harris-Schwarz & Co. have advised the trade here of a further increase in the price of their 5-cent brands.

The new Elks' Club building was opened last week. The Chicago lodge erected a handsome 16-story building on Washington street near Fifth avenue. At the grand opening were a lot of local cigar men who are Elks in good standing.

Coudax cigarettes are coming back again. After a lapse of almost a year a salesforce is in the field again. John Rockenpenny is working out of the old office at 222 North State street. Many Coudax hanging signs are seen in the stores.

The E-Z pipes are receiving the attention of the clerks in the Schulte stores. E-Z's sell for $1.00. A lot of them are sold.

Chicago bandits still are at work. This week they got away with $200 from Fred Potthast, who owns a big cafe at 4 West Van Buren street. They also "hit" Fred Ward for his pile of "dough" and a lot of cigars and liquor in his saloon at 675 West Madison street.

Mrs. Louisa S. Van Shaack, the widow of Peter Van Shaack, founder of the wholesale drug business of Peter Van Shaack & Sons, died here a few days ago. The burial took place at Manlius, N. Y.

With an endowment of $1,000,000 for the education of poor boys and girls, the Julius Rosenwald Fund has been incorporated here. The trustees are Mr. and Mrs. Rosenwald, their son, Lessing Rosenwald, and Armand S. Deutsch. Julius Rosenwald is the head of the great mail order house of Sears-Roebuck & Co., Chicago.

Business is big at the Sherman Hotel store of Breitung. The men in charge of this store all are hard workers. The force consists of W. H. White, Guy D. Reed and William Getzelman. All are old timers in the cigar game and have a host of friends.

R. M. C. Glenn, of Seidenberg & Co., New York, was here this week on important business. All the jobbers in the Middle West who handle El Roi Tans were in conference with him at the Annex. The important topic was the price question of Roi Tans.

The new packing of Lord Salisbury cigarettes, 16 for 15 cents, is now on the market. Sub Rosa little cigars, packed eight in a box, and selling for 5 cents, are also coming.

Up they go. Bachelors have jumped in price. They now cost the retail trade $4,400 a thousand. E. Hoffman & Co., the jobbers, can't get enough to supply their trade.

Mort Regensburg, of E. Regensburg & Sons, was here last week holding an important meeting with all the salesforce of Nathan Fox & Co., the jobbers of Admiration. The new prices were discussed and a campaign for the future of Administration was laid out.

A nifty auto truck is now making deliveries for the house of Albert Breitung. It is seen all over the loop. It is painted a very soft green color with gold letters. The growing business of this enterprising house forced them to put on an auto delivery wagon to take care of their deliveries.

The National Cigar Stores has just rounded out the biggest October in its history. It operates two very fine cigar stores in the First National Bank Building.

Frank A. Rian, representing Simon Batt & Co., made the rounds of the city trade. Frank is well-known in this market.

Henry E. Ackerburg, the cigarist at 187 West Madison street, is featuring Romeo-Garcia boite nature box that sells at $1.00 the box of 10.

Flor de Del Mora, something new, 2 for 15 cents, is now on sale. They are made by Gonzalez Fisher y Cia., of Tampa.

The Tribune "smoke fund" for the boys in France has reached, at this writing, a total of $7,554.60. It keeps going up all the time.

"Oh, Boys." The gas man has gone to war and the gas woman has come to replace him. The next time you telephone to the gas company for a man to come out and fix your range you will receive a neat and alert young woman.

James Sheridan, a local salesman who has been selling the Val Roma brand for Spector Bros., has resigned. He is going to remain in the cigar business and has some big deals in view.

When last heard of, Fred Oakes, of E. H. Gato Cigar Co., was in Butte working his way back to Chicago via St. Paul. Business at Fred's Chicago store increases right along.

George Smith, a well-known salesman who represented Melachrino for a number of years, is now selling paint for the American Paint Co. George likes his new connection; says he has only one "color" to give the trade and that is "Maduro," as he only sells black roofing paint. "Our best wishes for the future, old top."

Harry Alces, of Chas. Morris & Co., paid Chicago his last visit this year. Harry remarked to one of our dealers that this has been a very good year with him.

Breitung's Invincibles, selling at 7 cents, is a new offering in all of the Breitung stores. It is made in Baltimore by Heineman Bros. On Wednesday and Saturday it is sold at a special price of 6 cents.

Glance over this list of accounts secured for the new Francisco De Bances brand of the Preferred Havana Tobacco Co.: La Salle Hotel, Sherman House, The Blackstone, Tobin's, Chicago Athletic Club and Shoemaker & Co.

A report appearing in one of the trade papers that I. Briskin, the jobber, had returned is untrue. Mr. Briskin has not been seen since he disappeared sometime in August.

Nearly all the brands of cigarettes made by the American Tobacco Co. and sold in this market are now on sale in the new packages. Ten in box are now packed eight, and 20 in box packed 16.

Ramon Dobler has left us again. This time Ramon has gone to Cincinnati, Louisville and other eastern points to boost Park & Tilford's brands.

The 30-day deal of 20 per cent. in Helmars gratis on each 1,000 Murads is taking big. All the dealers are stocking up for some time to come.

Sam Paley, of the Congress Cigar Co., is getting ready for his annual trip to Havana. La Palina is selling big. October was the biggest month for the firm since they have been in business.

The report published last week in a New York trade paper that Harry Allen had connected as manager for Shoemaker & Co. is denied by the firm.

A nifty packing of Lord Salisbury cigarettes that contains 12 packages of 16 cigarettes each, a total of 192 cigarettes, and retails for $1.80, is on display in several stores. They are all done up for mailing and will make a big hit around the holidays.

Governor Edwards, the private brand of I. Briskin, made by Haas Bros., will shortly be advanced in price.

Detroit dealers are getting together and in the future they will only handle such brands as show them a profit of 30 per cent. or more.

Miss Maude Lawshe, of the office force of Best & Russell Co., won the contest to get smokes for Uncle Sam's fighters for the Daily News. She has the honor of being known as Chicago's "Uncle Sam Girl" and won a dinner for six at the College Inn and six theater tickets, besides a trip to Camp Grant at Rockford.

Miss Katherine Ryan, in charge of the general office of Albert Breitung, had many boosters and finished sixth in the list of prize winners. For her efforts, she also received a trip to Rockford, besides two theater tickets.

GETTING ALONG BETTER

Favorable Weather Enables Wisconsin Growers to Cure Their Tobacco More Satisfactorily—The Next Ten Days.

EDGERTON, Wis., November 9.—The week has witnessed the return of warm days which is aiding the curing of the tobacco so long delayed by unfavorable weather conditions. Growers contend that even a few days of Indian summer have made a remarkable improvement in the hanging tobacco and should it continue a week or ten days longer the earlier portion at feast will be entirely cured out. Even the frozen leaf, though curing dark in color, is believed to have some value. No one is able to estimate as yet what proportion of the crop suffered from the hard freeze of a week ago that entered the curing barns. Until stripping commences it will be largely guess work to say how far fat stems will figure in the crop.

Wisconsin cured leaf is traded in almost exclusively in the eastern markets for local packers have very little old leaf to offer the trade.

The shipments out of storage reach 650 cases and three cars of bundles from this market since last report.—Edgerton Reporter.

In Omaha it is said that within a short time all retail dealers in the city will follow the lead set by the few. In most of the small towns in Iowa, according to report, dealers are asking "a penny more."

Your Money Is Just as Welcome as You Are

Optimists, Up-State, Can See Prosperity Coming—Preaching Patience—The Long Arm of Coincidence—And the Strong Arm That Totes a Grip—Prohibition Isn't So Bad for the Cigar Trade—Camels Are Climbing—Ike Strasser Discourses on Tobacco Scarcity and Prices—Heralding the Red Eaglet.

New York State Capitol District,
November 12, 1917.

Thursday's the day! That's the time all us fellers must put on our Sunday-go-to-meetin' clothes and smile, then walk right over the top with the 18 per cent payments as the second quota for the ditto Second Liberty Loan!

'Most every chap will meet his neighbor at the Second National Bank on the 15th. And, without doubt, that is what the average smoker has been thinking about for the last week or so.

Else why would a usually busy Albany dealer say, as he did a few days ago, "My business has dropped off between $30 and $40 the day since two or three weeks ago."

Still another retailer said: "Our sales have decreased just about $10 to $12 daily. We are barely meeting expenses."

Many other tradesmen speak along similar lines. But, with optimistic vision, these same dealers look for a big boom in trade in a very short time. They appear to base their reasons upon the vast Government expenditures, especially the enormous wages paid to labor, and the general opinion is that this money will work its way down to the tobacco man much in the manner of the shifting and settling sands of the old original hour-glass.

"Considerable more territory has been wished upon me," said District Manager George Thompson, of the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. "My circle now includes two of the larger military camps, especially Camp Ayer in Massachusetts. So, you see, I have nearly all I can do just now to keep Miss Fatima and her sister products where the people can get them. We're selling more and more stuff every day, and it requires time to look after details, I'm sure."

Orphics have been preached upon patience, yet the logic of Aristotle and the philosophy of Socrates would be frazzled to a finish by those Garibaldi veterans who have been trying to complete the interior annex of the Hotel Ten Eyck, Albany.

Kerensky has confronted the Bolsheviki and Viscount Kikujiro Ishii has negotiated an important treaty since the contractors promised the finished job at the tall hotel.

Other events of world-wide importance have occurred, too, since Myron J. Canaday began his original preparations to install the lobby cigar stand in this Ten Eyck palace.

Fixtures are practically ready, so M. J. has decided to put the goods in condition for the winter's siege by having 12 electric cinnabar or vermilion vapor moisteners for cigar stock.

These humidifiers will keep the extensive selections of the Canaday cases in perfect condition. So, immediately upon the evacuation of the workmen, the cabinets and floor sections will be ready for instant opening. This date depends upon those artists of the Rue des Italiens.

"Good morning, gentlemen," saluted Fred Lewis, the Saugerties, N. Y., jobber and manufacturer, "how many thousand Clay cigars shall I enter in my little book? Up goes the price, effective this week, you know, so you'd better let me put you down for the anticipations of the approaching holidays, at least."

Connecticut calisthenics seems to be an excellent conditioner for Teddy. Even though he has but one remaining blinker, that single eye probably can see well enough to make Colonel Dan T. Moore hop around the mat like a flea on a cat.

Perhaps, then, the athletic Jack Cooper will train another student using methods suggestive of Roosevelt strenuosity. All bets on the contest will be deposited by cheer contestants with Fred Schumm, the Brooklyn betting commissioner.

Now, this Cooper-candidate we have in mind is L. Greenwald. Arm and shoulder development is particularly desired for Greenwald. So the same rules which apply to the T. R. training will do nicely for Greenwald.

Why? Well, in the first place Greenwald represents so many, so very many factories in New York, Pennsylvania, Porto Rico and Tampa, that he simply can't carry the samples unless he has the broadest shoulders and the strongest arms!

Most of the load in Greenwald's gymkhana-grip consists of shapes and sizes for the John Ruskin cigar. While most of the factories producing the brands which weigh the most, are from the numerous plants of the Inter-Borough Cigar Co., S. Seidenberg & Co., and I. Lewis Cigar Manufacturing Co.

Following the lead of the United Cigar Stores Co. in selling all popular brands of tobacco in foil packages for the former price of five cents, many Capitol District dealers are now using this method of attracting working men smokers of this class of long cuts and cut plugs.

Six cents is the newly established price for this line of goods. This is principally so because the well-known long cuts of the local market have advanced at wholesale to $7.20 the gross, or five cents the packet in dozen lots or more to retailers.

Numerous other outside smokings, however, are still jobbed at the old prices, so some retailers have re-established the nickel as the standard for all.

Men who use these tobaccos therefore go to the stores where the nickel is enough, and these dealers report lots of cigar and pipe sales as appreciation of the reduction.

"Yes," announced Manager C. J. Shaxby, of the J. W. Stevens' store, "I have arranged to return to the five-cent figure upon all of these popular smokings. It helps to bring business from the man in the street who needs the extra pennies for many other odds and ends."

Nearly every large selling cigar brand of the old five-cent division is now generally sold here for six cents. Included in this list are the Havana Ribbons, R-Bs, Rocky Fords, Bolds, Cincos, and similar stock.

Some stores sell either one or another item of the above as a five-cent leader while the old stock remains. But the only nickel cigars sold on local counters at the present time, day in and day out, are private brands of less wholesale value.

Starting Wednesday last, Distributor S. E. Fulder of North Pearl street, Albany, announced to the trade that his leading nickel cigar, the 512, would be six cents straight.

Sam is sorry to do this, but his increasing costs will not permit the five-cent value to be continued with present quality.

In the Civil War the designation of Albany's favorite home regiment was changed from the Tenth to the 177th N. Y. Volunteers. Then, in the time of the Spanish-American, the old Tenth was once again renumbered, this occasion as the First New York. When the Mexican trouble became acute the famous Tenth was ordered out, but was not sent to Texas, and the numeral was not altered.

Now, however, the Tenth is at the New York Guard Camp at Spartanburg, S. C., where it is about to be dismembered as the new 111th Infantry, U. S. A., to various commands of machine gun batteries.

Before this occurs, though, and the men are sent to France, the officers desire the folk at home to send useful items to the enlisted personnel who cannot supply the comforts themselves.

Among the extremely welcome gifts mentioned especially are the Fatima and Camel brands. These, captains and lieutenants say, "look like a million dollars to the men," particularly since the Liberty Loan subscriptions and the bounding prices at the camp have made the soldier's monthly thirty dollars look a great deal less than the vanastorbilt millions.

Carrying his cretonne bag, flowered with July hollyhocks, and containing the necessary 18-inch needles, olive drab yarns, with the other little things needful for the knitting of army sweaters and such, our brisk and busy friend, Wright McCastline, came to town last week to head off the Bersaglieri Brigade of business which the Capitol District jobbers insist upon doing with the Detroit tobacco factories of the Scotten, Dillon Co.

"Nothing under $40 this year in Holiday fortieths," advised Harry Stearns, when here last week for Estabrook & Eaton, Boston. "And I guess these goods are scarce, too. People who have been in the habit of giving 25 cigars in a box for Christmas, and who do not want to pay more than $1 for such a package, just won't get the goods this season, and that's all there is to that, you can bet! But, in finer boxes, the purchaser will have as wide a selection as ever, even though the price may be a trifle higher."

Friends of sub-jobber W. P. Dingman, the Albany dealer who has been seriously sick for some time, were glad indeed to see Will around town again last week. It is not probable, though, that Ding will go back to the biz yet a bit.

"They're duplicating, and that proves their success," announced Will Dearstyne the other day when Frank D. was preparing for a Capitol District canvass on Popper's Seven-Center. Under the new arrangement and label, the Dearstyne Brothers Tobacco Co., of Albany, will have control of this brand for the territory, with their own name upon the box cover.

To avoid the necessity of redecorating all their windows with entirely new lithographic signs, the United has sent to each store a series of price cards to insert in the frames over the old prices.

For the present, practically one-half the windows will be devoted to the cigarette brands of the Tobacco Products Corporation. Among these leaders will be Naturals, Nestors, and Melachrinos.

Thirty cent packets of Murads, Naturals, Melachrinos, Moguls, and so on will be favored by the United stores, and special certificate deals will be offered with some of these big boxes.

Twenty cents is the new price for Richmond Straight Cuts, 20s, though many independent retailers ask only sixteen or seventeen cents for them just now. Camels will go to 13 cents, it's said.

"Prohibition in the South this year looked as if it might ruin our business in that field," explained Phil Wilkinson, the representative of Bennett, Sloan & Co., New York. "But our Southern representative tells me that his trade was never better, in part due, no doubt, to the immense army training camps in that section.

DANVILLE BREAKS THE RECORD.

The Danville, Va., tobacco market sold during October 9,358,260 pounds of tobacco for $3,051,292.41, an average price per hundredweight of $32.60, the highest average on record there.

During two and a half months since August 15, when sales began, 15,566,756 pounds of leaf tobacco were sold on the Danville market for $4,666,030.03, an average per hundredweight of $29.97. As indicative of the growing demand for leaf tobacco it is noteworthy that the sales have shown a higher average price every week since mid-August.

The crop is being marketed with unprecedented rapidity.

UP STATE PHILOSOPHISING

At the same time, our trade up here is good, too, so it looks like a pretty fair year after all."

On the corner of Eagle and Hudson avenue, Albany, Thomas A. Geary has taken over the old-time cigar stand of the late Louis G. A. Snyder. This location has been in several other hands since Mr. Snyder's death, but Brother Geary appears to be bringing the store back to better times. It is a cut-off of travel for many people in the neighborhood who pass downtown.

Opposite, on the other corner of Hudson avenue and Daniel street, a live dealer is in possession of Quinn's former store. It is a combination haberdashery and cigar stand with excellent display windows upon Hudson avenue, the best street for passing workers. Manager Richter knows the value of this show space, and he keeps the fellows interested in his attractive offerings of segars and shirts.

Since Tobacco dug up the two old chaps in Albany who used to stand afront of every decent cigar store, still another wooden Indian has come out of the obscurity of the ages.

Either from Good Ground or Fourteenth Street itself, this latest recruit of Tammany Hall is now standing at the right hand portal of Quinn's Cigar Factory on Hudson avenue.

He is an inconspicuous brave, this Indian, and he looks, for all the world, as though neither Charlie Murphy nor Al Smith had said a word to him about the recent 'lection in his home town.

Perhaps this Tammany Chief doesn't know. Then, again, perhaps he doesn't care! Because, as it is, Quinn's Cigar Factory isn't in the Italian sector of the Bainsizza Plateau. Neither is it in present propinquity to the aboriginal tribes of the six nations. Still, it is better to be a wooden Indian in Albany than a barraconda in The Bronx!

That old ship-of-state, sometime likened to the symbol of the Sahara, which swings along with careless strides on four feet, two humps and a neck, has been scarce and costly this week just past.

Fact is, the Dearstyne Brothers Tobacco Co., Albany jobbers, have been practically cleaned out of Camel cigarettes. They have limited a dealer to a single carton or less per day.

And then, when the shipment arrived from Winston-Salem the goods went out and the price went up! Some retailers had been getting 11 and 12 cents for Camels. Now, many are asking 13 cents.

Perhaps the brand will soon reach a 15 cent level, and stay there.

On Pearl street, Albany, the La Preferencia is being used for a trade foot-ball. At the Morris Drug Co., on North Pearl, the brand is selling for 8 cents in the former three-for-a-quarter size. This firm is also reailing the Hoffman House cigar at the former nickel price.

There is a continuous shortage in local markets of such popular brands as Cycle cigarettes, Honest Scrap tobacco, and Serene tobacco in half-pounds.

In Leicester, England, there is a street occupied by commercial houses frequently noted for short orders. So it is suggested by a prominent Capitol District dealer that some of the manufacturers and distributors in this sector adopt the name the Britons have given their thoroughfare—Short Street.

"Yes, sir," affirmed Ike Strasser, the Albany leaf dealer, "the price of Sumatra is hovering around $6 the pound, with none obtainable. I sold a lot this week for $4.75, and it certainly was a remarkable bargain. All leaf is bound to be scarce and high for many, many months, even though the war were to stop tomorrow."

Sweet Caps, in the new packet of eight, are a recent arrival on the dealers' shelves. This is the fifth brand to be received in the smaller five-cent package.

Now that the Berliner Tageblatt admits the Kaiser is somewhat overstocked with iron crosses of the first, second, third, and fourth classes, it seems that Bill is distributing the entire assortment to gardeners, agriculturists, or any kind of plough-boy who'll guarantee good grub to the boys and girls who like sauerkraut better'n cream-o-wheat.

So the new order of distinguished service granted by Wilhelmstrasse and Potsdam to Dr. Arthur Newton Davis, the Kaiser's American Dentist, and other Yankees in the German terrain, consists of a badge known as the Red Eaglet.

This insignia is a burdock which old Bob Burdette would have called a stalagmite of "pizen" ivy. For it gets you nowhere outside of prison, unless you happen to be a Doc Dumbell or a Karl Mucker.

However, it is rumored here that the Red Eaglet, or a Johnhancock imitation, will very soon be offered by one of the large cigarette manufacturers to the retail trade.

Three States

This is a favorite brand among smokers who insist on a High-grade Mixture. It contains the very best grades of Kentucky Burley, Virginia and Louisiana Perique, and is made after an old formula that never fails to satisfy the demand for a blend of these fine tobaccos.

Yale

This famous old brand is a mixture of Long Cut and Granulated Plug Cut; its unique blend of Virginia, Turkish, Havana and Perique is especially pleasing.

Garrick

This famous brand is known all the world over and has a host of friends in America among high-grade smokers who prefer a mild, "light" tobacco of top-notch quality.

United States Tobacco Imports and Exports

WASHINGTON, November 12.—Statistics covering the tobacco industry of the United States for the month of August show an increase in the importations of leaf tobacco other than that suitable for cigar wrappers, of which there was a decrease. The former shows an increase as compared with August, of 1916, from 3,400,142 pounds at $1,321,698 to 3,514,191 pounds at $1,947,892. The latter showed a decrease from 740,460 pounds at $906,082 to 552,704 pounds at $605,973.

Under the head of manufactures of tobacco, we received during August 288,942 pounds of cigars, cheroots, etc., from the Philippines valued at $332,336, as against 204,074 pounds at $216,561 in August, 1916; the importations of cigarettes from the same source increased from 2,803 to 2,946 pounds, with a decrease in value from $2,161 to $1,643. There was a marked decline in the importations of cigars and cheroots from sources other than the Philippine Islands from 43,183 pounds at $262,019 to 26,163 pounds at $154,524. Those of cigarettes showed a slight increase from 1,012 pounds to 1,358 pounds, and in value from $5,075 to $5,097. Under the heading of "All Other Manufactures" there was an increase in value from $9,681 to $16,937. This gave a total for all manufactured tobaccos imported into the United States during August, last, of $510,537, as against $495,497 in August, 1916.

The decline in the tobacco exports, to which attention was called in connection with the July returns, continued throughout the month of August, the exports of leaf tobacco only showing a total of 19,269,287 pounds at $2,858,443, as compared with exports of 93,982,472 pounds at $11,580,527 in August, 1916. For the eight months ending August 31 the decrease is still more marked. For the eight months in 1916 the quantity reported was 333,553,832 pounds at $42,711,103, and for the eight months of the present year only 148,713,980 pounds at $26,161,017.

Quite a considerable part of the decrease for the month is due to the fact that Denmark, which took 9,099,137 pounds at $1,035,883 in August last year, has entirely dropped out of the market. The shipments to the United Kingdom fell from 22,987,588 pounds at $3,642,102 to 1,517,276 pounds at $342,063. France showed a decrease in her importations of unmanufactured leaf from 11,853,277 to 3,022,963 pounds, and in value from $1,003,078 to $373,662. Italy showed a decrease from 11,048,674 pounds at $1,311,732 to 4,588,250 pounds at $444,569, and the Netherlands from 26,406,178 pounds at $2,766,818 to 75,523 pounds at $6,500. Canada, however, showed an increase from 1,206,898 pounds at $276,290 to 1,929,831 pounds at $453,077. Other countries showing increased importations during the month included Portugal, from 238,192 pounds at $26,570 to 388,104 pounds at $87,042; Spain, from 2,698,100 pounds at $210,952 to 5,962,110 pounds at $815,007; Switzerland, from 29,860 pounds at $3,882 to 67,404 pounds at $21,424; Mexico, from 10,089 pounds at $1,428 to 254,574 pounds at $32,403. Other countries that reported no purchases during the month were Sweden, Hongkong and Australia; to the latter country we exported a total of 2,426,485 pounds of unmanufactured tobacco in August of last year at a total value of $517,900.

Our exports of cigarettes show a material decrease. In August, 1916, we exported a total of 663,227,000 at $1,124,170, of which 423,552,000 went to China at a value of $818,054 during last August our total exports of cigarettes totaled 247,431,000 at $488,985, and ou of that amount China received 135,350,000, a $254,956.

While the returns as shown above for th month are not very encouraging, those for th eighth months show a very satisfactory condition of trade, evidenced by the steady increas from a total of 1,297,758,000 at $2,044,597 i 1915 to 2,250,868,000 at $5,855,951 in 1916, an still further in 1917 to 4,182,293,000 a $8,046,261.

Cigars and cheroots exported during th month totaled 160,000 at $5,024, as compare with 171,000 at $3,587 in August of 1916. O the other hand, the returns for the eight month show an increase from 1,053,000 at $19,832 las year to 1,595,000 at $37,316 this year. Ther was a decrease in the exports of smokin tobacco for the month from 239,611 pounds a $130,786 to 87,041 pounds at $40,143, and i plug tobacco from 593,415 pounds at $163,39 to 297,424 pounds at $82,116. Under the general classification of "All other manufacture there was a decrease from $43,272 to $2,388.

The total of the above figures shows that th exports of all manufactured tobaccos during th month only amounted to $618,656, as compared with $1,465,212 for the corresponding month of last year. For the eight months, however, there has been an increase from $5,879,06 to $10,004,353. TENNILLE.

RED FEATHERS

Here's a nickel's worth of stamp, stationery and simplicity which would be sent direct to its proper address and destination—the waste basket:

Mr. Box Customer,
No. 767 Sales Street,
Purchasetown, U. S. A.

Dear Sir: I desire to call your attention to my Blue Mold cigar. It is the finest grade of Havarino in my store and I know you will be pleased with its quality, aroma and price. Permit me to send you a specimen box either to your home or office, and I am sure you will become a satisfied smoker of this superlative brand.

Yours truly,
JOHN JOHNSON,
No. 326 Bank Street, City.

Paper baling machines are crammed to the compressor with such soliciting letters as that! Dealers send them out, helter-skelter, then wonder why mail advertising doesn't bring results.

So, next time you contemplate a similar letter, do this: Go to your biggest and best milliner, wholesale or retail, and beg or buy a sufficient quantity of small pin feathers to completely cover your mail list, a feather for each name.

Get red feathers if you can. At least, get some bright color, red, green, or purple, in vivid hue.

Then have your printer set up a good imitation form-letter which will look more like a real letter than it does a dodger. Let a mimeograph man do the work. Tell him you want to enclose a feather in each letter, so have him leave a two-inch margin on the facing left side, where the feather may be attached through two slits.

Now give him this copy:

Mr. Five Dollar Sale,
No. 865 Prosperity Avenue,
Surplusville, U. S. A.

Good Morning, Sir: That Feather—did you get it? It's a Red Teazle; very lucky, so please don't lose it! And it is good for a La Dicto Havana cigar at my store, any time you may redeem it.

You see, Mr. Sale, I am just placing this La Dicto cigar on the Surplusville market.

This La Dicto is a cigar in which I, personally, have the utmost confidence. It is mild, aromatic, and very pleasing indeed as a smoke for men like yourself, who desire, generally, an Havana cigar with something to it besides mere band and beautiful box. So I have selected a box of fifty La Dictos, in your usual puritano finos size and colorado color, and marked them with your name and address.

Call me on the 'phone, if you wish, and simply say: "Send 'em up." Or, stop in the store today or tomorrow and smoke one with me—try it out.

Remember, the Red Teazle is your reminder of the La Dicto. Keep this lucky feather right under your eye, for it means to you that a really excellent cigar is yours for the asking!

Very few men will redeem the feather for a smoke. Don't look for it. Because it's merely inserted with the copy to create a novelty interest to the letter.

But, here's a proven result: That little red feather will stick in the mind of your average prospect until he either tries the La Dicto or some other cigar in your stock. Be assured of that!

THE SMOKER.

A MULE THAT CHEWS TOBACCO.

Thinking the animal made a mistake in not knowing whom she was kicking or it was his fault because he forgot to give her the usual chew of tobacco, Fred Wales, of Grass Valley, Cal., who carried his arm in a sling for some time as the result of a kick from Bessie, excuses his partner of fourteen years for injuring him.

The mule is known to every employe of the mine, 450 in all, and while there is no affection for her among 440 of them, they all have a wholesome respect for her despite her contrary disposition. It is a mine classic that she kicks the airpipe two feet above her for exercise.

With Fred Wales, however, it is different. He has worked with Bessie for fourteen years and has become attached to the animal. He excuses her vagaries as an indulgent mother condones the actions of a spoiled child.

It is merely a matter of temperament, he says, and the other men do not understand her. His faith was shaken temporarily, but not for long.

In the physician's office he took offense at a suggestion that the mule should be killed on account of her viciousness and rushed to her defense.

"It was perhaps my fault; it certainly was not hers. Bessie either did not know who it was when she kicked or I had forgotten to give her the usual chew of tobacco. I am willing to take all the blame."

TOBACCO CROP REPORTS

estimate on December 1, 1916, showed only 20,280,000 pounds, whereas this year the estimate shows almost one hundred per cent increase over the five year average, the total being 57,970,000 pounds. The Florida estimate is 3,410,000 pounds as against an estimate of December 1 last year of 3,025,000 pounds and for the five year average of 3,379,000 pounds. This State shows the highest quality percentage of any of those reported standing at 98 per cent against 92 per cent for 1916.

The States showing a decrease are Connecticut with a total of 31,080,000 as against an estimate of December 1 last year of 36,186,000 and for the five year period of 30,323,000. This was accompanied by a decrease in quality from 93 to 88 per cent. Wisconsin shows a decrease in quality from 87 to 58 per cent and in quantity from 55,753,000 pounds of December 1, 1916, to 45,885,000 this year.

WITH THE RETAILERS

Let us find who is to blame. If it is necessary to go to Washington to start action against the coupon, let us go to Washington. Or if it is best to go to up-State officials, then let us go there. And if we find we can do the work with the City Government in New York, we will stay here and fight. But above all start the battle."

So the association again will have a bill introduced in the New York Legislature as a measure to have the coupon investigated and eventually killed. New members of the assembly will be interviewed by a committee consisting of Sig. Weil, H. H. Hunter and Retailer Feiner of Brooklyn, regarding the attitude of each as to coupon legislation. Republicans will be appealed to first and then the socialists, at the suggestion of Neuwirth. The members playfully gibed the newly elected assemblymen and said election promises don't count now; action is the word.

The association received an invitation to attend a meeting of the Confectioners' Association held at Teutonia Hall, Third avenue and 16th street. This association is also trying to write the epitaph of the coupon. All members were urged to attend the meeting.

COULDN'T AGREE REGARDING PRICES

San Francisco Retailers Fail to Co-operate

San Francisco, November 7.

The Western Retail Cigar Dealers' Association, which was in session in this city for two weeks making an effort to stabilize the retail cigar business, adjourned without reaching any decision as to a course of action. As far as results are concerned the meeting seems fruitless, and as a consequence everybody is now for himself and price cutting is rampant. A later effort probably will be made to bring about co-operation, but selfish interest was too much in evidence in the recent meeting to hope for anything to be accomplished in that direction in the immediate future. Certain distributors are holding the retailers of their goods to a fixed price, and some even express the fear that if prices are advanced too much it will result in a reduction of consumption and that such reduction will show in the receipts of the Government taxes. If a reduction in tax receipts does occur to a serious degree it is possible that the Government may regulate the prices of tobacco as it has those of sugar, wheat and other commodities.

D. Frankel, of Frankel, Gerdts & Co., in speaking of his trip to Cuba, said that the tobacco growers of that country were growing rich, notwithstanding the fact that the crop is only about half of normal. He bought a year's supply for his factory, and says that he was fortunate enough to be able to secure a high grade of leaf.

Mr. Judell, of H. L. Judell & Co., reports that business continues good with him. He has been unable to obtain all the goods he wants, notably of Tom Moore, Sterlings and In-B-Tween cigars. He ordered some shipped by express.

While the Christmas trade has hardly opened as yet the dealers are looking for a brisk business. With so many of the young men away in the army, cigars will prove attractive gifts. Goods packed in tins and cartons will be the favorite for this trade.

Ehrman Bros. & Co. report that they are just receiving a large consignment of Manila cigars of very good quality. The public is accepting the advance of one cent to six cents on the Philadelphia, and the sales show no diminution.

"Mo." Selig, one of the most popular cigar men of the city, and right hand man for Ehrman Bros. & Co., surprised his friends this week by enlisting in the Regular Army, choosing the artillery branch of the service. He left yesterday for Fort Scott, where he will go into training for the European campaign. Mr. Selig was of the draft age, but had not yet been selected, and his entrance into the service of his country was wholly voluntary.

I. I. Hess, representing the Optimo Cigar on the Coast, is in Los Angeles this week visiting the trade.

Sam Israel, wholesale cigar and tobacco dealer of this city, has found business so good that he has added another delivery automobile to his equipment, and by this means he hopes to keep up with his increasing orders.

E. A. Perry, a salesman connected with the Tobacco Company of California, recently met with a serious accident in a peculiar manner. While in San Jose in his automobile visiting the trade he was struck with a swinging electric light wire and badly burned. He was knocked unconscious at once, but fortunately a passerby saw the accident and stopped the machine. Mr. Perry is now at St. Luke's Hospital, in this city, and while he is not fatally hurt, his condition is serious.

Jack Lowrie, formerly with the Juan de Fuca Cigar Co., is now selling the Gonzales & Sanchez in this territory.

John Bohlman & Co. are preparing to market the Obak at 5 and 10 cents.

Melachrino, Murad, Natural and Marquise have changed prices so that the 10's are now being sold for 5 cents and the 20's for 30 cents.

Bull Durham has appeared on the market here in 7/8-oz. packages.

The Rocky Ford cigar has been advanced in price to $41 a thousand, and is being retailed at 6c.

The R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. is already doing special Christmas work on Prince Albert in jars.

The effort to sustain prices in Eureka, Cal., has resulted in the raising of the price of 5-cent cigars to 7 cents. This action was objected to by one dealer and threats of bodily harm were made against him. This is the first "near" riot over the cigar situation.

L. M. Gobeille, who a year ago was selling cigars in this city, has abandoned the trade to become a rice farmer in the Sacramento valley, 25 miles north of Sacramento. He gets to San Francisco occasionally, however, and always visits the trade when here. This year's crop of rice yielded him a little better than 51 sacks to the acre, and he is very enthusiastic over his venture.

H. Bercovich will open the latest link in his chain of stores in this city in the new California Theatre, which opened its doors on the first of this month. This building is not yet entirely complete, and it will be some weeks before the store can be opened. Its location is central and the store should do an excellent business.

Regarding Internal Revenue Collection

Instructions Just Sent Out

WASHINGTON, November 12.—The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has sent the following very important communication to collectors throughout the country relative to the regulations concerning taxes on tobacco, snuff, cigars and cigarettes removed from factory or Custom-houses:

The sections of the Act approved October 3, 1917, imposing additional taxes on cigars, cigarettes, tobacco and snuff removed from factory or custom-house, and providing new sizes of packages for sigarettes and small cigars, tobacco and snuff, are as follows:

"Sec. 400. That upon cigars and cigarettes, which shall be manufactured and sold, or removed for consumption or sale, there shall be levied and collected, in addition to the taxes now imposed by existing law, the following taxes, to be paid by the manufacturer or importer thereof: (a) on cigars of all descriptions made of tobacco, or any substitute therefor, and weighing not more than three pounds per thousand, 25 cents per thousand; (b) on cigars made of tobacco, or any substitute therefor, and weighing more than three pounds per thousand, if manufactured or imported to retail at 4 cents or more each, and not more than 7 cents each, $1 per thousand; (c) if manufactured or imported to retail at more than 7 cents each and not more than 15 cents each, $3 per thousand, (d) if manufactured or imported to retail at more than 15 cents each and not more than 20 cents each, $5 per thousand, (e) if manufactured or imported to retail at more than 20 cents each, $7 per thousand; provided, that the word 'retail' as used in this section shall mean the ordinary retail price of a single cigar, and that the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may, by regulation, require the manufacturer or importer to affix to each box or container a conspicuous label indicating by letter the clause of this section under which the cigars therein contained have been tax-paid, which must correspond with the tax-paid stamp on said box or container, (f) on cigarettes made of tobacco, or any substitute therefor, made in or imported into the United States, and weighing not more than three pounds per thousand, 80 cents per thousand, weighing more than three pounds per thousand, $1.20 per thousand.

"Every manufacturer of cigarettes (including small cigars weighing not more than three pounds per thousand) shall put up all the cigarettes and such small cigars that he manufactures or has manufactured for him, and sells or removes for consumption or use, in packages or parcels containing five, eight, ten, twelve, fifteen, sixteen, twenty, twenty-four, forty, fifty, eighty, or one hundred cigarettes each, and shall securely affix to each of said packages or parcels a suitable stamp denoting the tax thereon and shall properly cancel the same prior to such sale or removal for consumption or use under such regulations as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall prescribe, and all cigarettes imported from a foreign country shall be packed, stamped, and the stamps canceled in a like manner, in addition to the import stamp indicating inspection of the custom-house before they are withdrawn therefrom."

"Sec. 401. That upon all tobacco and snuff hereafter manufactured and sold, or removed for consumption or use, there shall be levied and collected, in addition to the tax now imposed by law upon such articles, a tax of 5 cents per pound, to be levied, collected, and paid under the provisions of existing law.

"In addition to the packages provided for under existing law, manufactured tobacco and snuff may be put up and prepared by the manufacturer for sale or consumption, in packages of the following description: Packages containing one-eighth, three-eighths, five-eighths, seven-eighths, one and one-eighth, one and three-eighths, one and five-eighths, one and seven-eighths, and five ounces."

"Sec. 402. That sections four hundred, four hundred and one, and four hundred and four, shall take effect thirty days after the passage of this Act: provided, that after the passage of this Act and before the expiration of the aforesaid thirty days, cigarettes and manufactured tobacco and snuff may be put up in the packages now provided for by law or in the packages provided for in sections four hundred and four hundred and one."

"Sec. 403. That there shall also be levied and collected * * * upon all manufactured tobacco, snuff, cigars, or cigarettes, removed from factory or customs house after the passage of this Act but prior to the time when the tax imposed by section four hundred or section four hundred and one upon such articles takes effect, an additional tax equal to one-half the tax imposed by such sections upon such articles."

Section 1006 provides for continued use of stamps on hand, to be sold and accounted for at the new rates of tax, also that assessment shall be made against manufacturers having such stamps on hand on the day this Act takes effect for the difference between the value of same at the old and new rates, as follows:

"That where the rate of tax imposed by this Act, payable by stamps, is an increase over previously existing rates, stamps on hand in the collectors' offices and in the Bureau of Internal Revenue may continue to be used until the supply on hand is exhausted, but shall be sold and accounted for at the rates provided by this Act, and assessment shall be made against manufacturers and other taxpayers having such stamps on hand on the day this Act takes effect for the difference between the amount paid for such stamps and the tax due.

Graduated taxes on cigars weighing more than three pounds per thousand, the amount of tax to be paid being graded according to the retail price of a single cigar, are imposed by this Act. On all manufactured tobacco, snuff, cigars or cigarettes removed from factory or custom-house from October 4, 1917, to November 1, 1917, inclusive, there shall be levied and collected an additional tax equal to one-half the tax imposed by this Act, the full additional taxes taking effect on and after November 2, 1917.

Taxes are imposed on cigars and cigarettes, tobacco and snuff removed from factory or custom-house for consumption or use on and after October 4, 1917, and November 2, 1917, according to their several classifications, as follows:

Class.		Rates of Tax Effective Oct. 4.	Rates of Tax Effective Nov. 2.
A	Cigars weighing more than 3 pounds per 1,000 if manufactured or imported to retail at less than 4c. each, per thousand	$3.00	$3.00
B	Cigars weighing more than 3 pounds per 1,000 if manufactured or imported to retail at 4c. or more, and not more than 7c. each, per thousond	3.50	4.00
C	Cigars weighing more than 3 pounds per 1,000 if manufactured or imported to retail at more than 7c. each, and not more than 15c. each.....per thousand	4.50	6.00
D	Cigars weighing more than 3 pounds per 1,000 if manufactured or imported to retail at more than 15c. each, and not more than 20c. each.....per thousand	5.50	8.00
E	Cigars weighing more than 3 pounds per 1,000 if manufactured or imported to retail at more than 20c. each .....per thousand	6.50	10.00
	Cigars weighing not more than 3 pounds per 1,000, per thousand	.87½	1.00

Figuring on Selling at a Profit

Unless He Advances Prices the New England Cigar Manufacturer Will Have to Work on a Slim Margin—Peering into the Kaleidoscope of Trade in Boston—Things to Brag About—And Cause to Complain Occasionally—The Record for the Week

BOSTON, November 12.—A well-known cigar manufacturer informed me that the actual cost of making a long filler, Sumatra wrapped, five-cent cigar in Boston to-day, is more than $36 per thousand, not counting any overhead whatsoever. Then, how can a nickel cigar of high quality be sold under $40 per thousand and show any profit to the manufacturer? The trade is familiar with the prices paid for Sumatra wrappers, and the live ones keep informed concerning what is paid for Connecticut binders, and Havana fillers; also, they know that the cigar makers are paid one dollar per thousand more than they received last year. The packers get fifty cents additional and the strippers obtain higher pay. Boxes have gone up, so have ribbons and trimmings. And, on top of all these, the revenue has been increased $3 a thousand. Figure on such items with all the increases. Manufacturers jumped prices about five dollars per thousand on ten-cent cigars and gave as discount the equivalent of the $3. Some business at present prices; they could make more out of Liberty Bonds at four per cent. It will not surprise me if a five-dollar advance will soon be effective. Stripper help is scarce, and so hard to get that a labor shortage is restricting the output of many of the factories.

Lord Romeo panetelas, that formerly sold seven for 15 cents, now retail six for 20 cents.

The many friends of Joseph Trahey, manager of the cigar department of the Woodward Drug Co., extend their sympathy to him and his family because of the sudden death of his father, which occurred last Sunday.

Hattie Goodwin, one of the Goodwin sisters, who some years ago conducted the cigar store at the entrance of the Scollay Square Subway, is back in the game again, having secured the cigar stand in the Tremont Building, and refitted it with new mahogany show cases. Miss Goodwin knows the cigar business, and she has made an intelligent selection of the brands necessary to attract customers. Among the brands carried are the Overland, La Mora Florosa of S. S. Pierce Co.; Ginita and Optimo, of C. B. Perkins Co.; E. and E. Rockefellor, of Estabrook & Eaton; El Roi Tan, Preferencia and Chancellor, of the Commonwealth Cigar Co.; Admirations, and El Leons, of Joseph P. Manning Co., and for a leader in a nickel cigar the Nobles, of the Noble Cigar Co., Westfield.

Stover's Drug Store, at Winthrop Beach, Mass., has full window display of the Girard cigar.

Lewis Aaron's Sons, the Cambridge retailers and jobbers, are pushing with gratifyng results the Handspun nickel cigar made by Joseph Berran Co., New York city.

H. T. Dean Co., of Holyoke, Mass., has taken on the Boston Club, the new nickel cigar of the Commonwealth Cigar Co.

Daniel Frank & Co., are showing some very attractive sizes of Flor de Mendel.

Daily advertisements of In Between Little Cigars, selling 10 for 15 cents, are appearing in the papers. This brand is sold exclusively by Daniel Frank & Co.

Chairman Charles B. Perkins, of the Y. M. C. A. Campaign for $35,000,000, got his committee together last week and arranged for them all to get to work for the drive that started Monday.

A good sized crowd gathered in front of the offices of the Cigarmakers Union No. 97, at 11 Appleton street, to witness the raising of the 12-foot service flag with fifty stars. Short speeches were made by officers of the union. All members of the United States forces, both Army and Navy, are to be kept in good standing. Secretary-Treasurer William F. Kinder has two of his boys "Somewhere in France" at the present time.

Milton I. Deane, of the John M. Deane house at Fall River, Mass., who has been interested and active in the Massachusetts Naval Brigade for many years, is doing active service, having an officer's rating.

Gus Kimball, of W. P. Wilder & Co., is an old salt. He graduated from the Massachusetts Training School some years ago, and could pass the examinations for Ensign or Junior Lieutenant. If the war lasts much longer, Gus may be in uniform.

Baker Bros., distributors of the El Dallo cigar, will soon introduce a new 6-cent size, as well as a large Invincible at 7 cents, four for a quarter. The El Dallo has made a place for itself in this market.

Costello Bros., the Pawtucket jobbers, have taken on the Noble cigar of the Noble Cigar Co., Westfield, Mass.

S. S. Pierce Co. have got out a Soldier's Kit, called the Black Cat Kit, containing cigarettes and tobacco, as well as a number of dainties that will appeal to the soldiers.

The holiday packages of Ruy Suarez & Co., handled by Frederick L. Roberts, the Central street retailer and jobber, are being well distributed in clubs and hotels. El Planco is a favorite.

Joseph P. Manning Co. have a limited supply of El Leons packed in 1/40's, but judging

The Stabilized Price Question

WASHINGTON, November 10, 1917.—Hearings on the stabilized price question have been again extended by the Federal Trade Commission, announcement being made that the hearings must be concluded on Wednesday, November 14, to which date they were adjourned. The testimony of the last two sessions was confined almost wholly to advocates of standard price legislation. Among these were H. C. Brown, assistant general manager of Victor Talking Machine Co.; W. A. McDermid, sales manager of Gerhard Mennen Chemical Co.; Herbert P. Sheets, assistant secretary, National Retail Hardware Association, and Charles E. Butler, vice-president of Brentano's. Percy S. Straus, of R. H. Macy & Co., of New York, was the only opponent to appear at the last sessions.

Mr. Brown, of the Victor Co., insisted that in the whole country there were not more than 75 professional price cutters, that only an infinitesimal fraction of the consuming public derived any advantage from their activities. On the other hand, Mr. Brown declared these "trade pirates" constitute a disturbing element of the whole commercial world.

Mr. Butler, of Brentano's, the last witness, graphically explained the low standard to which book retailing had come and declared that this was due entirely to the methods of "the predatory price cutters, under-selling monopolies in a free market." The phrase quoted was repeated in full with such frequency by Mr. Butler that it gave his talk almost a rythmic quality. Mr. Butler said that in prior days the book retailer was a man of education and intelligence, and was called upon by his customers to advise them as to their purchases. This education influence has been removed by the cut-price methods and the consuming public is the loser.

The Commission gave notice that when the hearings are resumed on November 14, at least one-half of the day will be given over to persons who are opposed to the principle of the maintenance or standardization of price in the retail trade. The afternoon will be given to George L. Record, counsel to the American Fair Trade League, who will sum up the arguments for those who support the principle.

by the way they are going out, the quantity on hand will soon be exhausted. The retailer should order at once, if he wants his allotment of El Leons 40's.

Ohio Flats, the 2 for 5, hand-made stogies distributed by the Manning Co., have made the biggest kind of a hit! Express shipments are being received every day.

Al Kaffenburgh, of the leaf firm of I. Kaffenburgh & Co., Broad street, is in Cuba. Mr. Batchelor of the C. C. A. factory is with him.

Central Union Tobacco, in pounds and half pounds, is in demand again this year. Nate Ives, New England manager for the United States Tobacco Co., reports sales away ahead of last year on the Central Union.

Baker Bros. are pushing the Clovemint Gum, which retails at five cents a package; this gum is duplicating solely on its merit, and there is not one cent spent on advertising. It is made by the Scout Gum Co. at Rochester, N. Y.

W. D. Walker of the cigar department of S. S. Pierce Co. returned from his Western trip, where he booked some nice orders on Overland cigars.

Tom Hughes, of the Tobacco Products Co., had Nate Hubert in town with him last week.

Ben Straus, representing A. Sanetella Co., was a recent trade visitor. C. B. Perkins Co. have the Optimo Brand, and have made it one of the biggest selling shade-grown wrapped cigars in this market.

Fred Suss is due home shortly from a Western trip.

E. E. Steeves, representing Witter Co., makers of the Dolly Madison cigar, one of the newer brands of nickel cigars, that came into this market, says his factory is over-sold.

Frank Fallon, of the Commonwealth Cigar Co., worked this territory years ago on cigarettes for one of the big companies, and although he has not called on the trade for a number of years, they all remembered him, and gave him the best kind of a welcome, by buying El Roi Tans, Preferencias and Chancellors, as well as Kelley's Bouquets.

Frank Swick, of the Philip Morris Co., makers of the famous Cambridge Cigarettes, is in the city for a short time. He has placed in the most desirable locations in Boston displays of the Cambridge Cigarettes. He reports the sale of 50's and 100's ahead of any year. Many Philip Morris cigarettes are sent to France.

John Wardlow, of the Havana Production Co., arrived in New York this week from Key West. He is accompanied by his son Charles, who is an ensign in the Naval Reserve, having charge of a submarine chaser. Mr. Wardlow plans to spend several weeks here.

The United store in the Flatiron building has a display of the Willis pipe, "the pipe with the pan." The display occupies the cowcatcher window and has an electric sign showing a man extracting the pan from the pipe. The United reports an excellent demand for this pipe.

Chester A. Lincoln, of Lincoln Bros., returned this week from a trip to New England. He reports excellent business in Providence, Boston, Springfield, and other cities. Well satisfied in every respect with his trip, Mr. Lincoln is assured of a large holiday business for Lincoln Bros.

Al. Metzger, representative of Berriman Bros., will leave this week for a trip to the West. Berriman Bros. report excellent business on Jose Vila and have only one complaint to offer and that is the Tampa factory cannot turn out enough cigars to keep up with the demand.

The Kansas teachers, in convention at Topeka, Kan., last week, adopted resolutions "protesting most emphatically against the organized efforts of the tobacco interests to create a demand for their wares in our new National Army." Some people will do most anything to pass the time away.

The Lexington, Ky., tobacco market will open on December 3 for the winter season. This decision was reached at a meeting of the Lexington Tobacco Board of Trade one day last week. F. W. Blackwell was re-elected president; J. C. Stone, vice-president, and W. S. Letty, secretary-treasurer.

NOTES AND QUOTES

You can always tell a man who is a failure by the way he criticizes success.

The Manufacturers' Record urges the wearing of our old clothes to show our patriotism. A Tampa man boasts that he has done it until people are beginning to look right through his patriotism and catch glimpses of his hide.

There promises to be an unprecedented demand for Christmas post-cards this year. Tens of thousands of our soldier boys are already at the front, hundreds of thousands of others are in big training camps, and practically all of them will be the receipients of countless greeting cards.

A complete inventory of the stock of the Parker-Gordon Cigar Co., at 1029 Broadway, Kansas City, revealed that burglars who entered the stock room of the company escaped with nearly $7,000 worth of cigars instead of stock valued at $2,450, as first reported. The robbers entered through a rear window.

Heard of a Key West fellow the other day who bought a thousand fine cigars, insured them, smoked them up, and then sought to collect insurance for total loss by fire. He was about to succeed when a bright lawyer brought a criminal action against him for setting fire to his own property.—Tampa Tribune.

The Modern Merchant says: "This is the time of close profits. From every source, and from public conditions, we are being taught that in this time of stress we, as dealers, should take no advantage of the public, but should strain a point to make our profits fair. Inflation, extortion and excess in price or in profits are particularly to be guarded against just now.

"Here is a cigar new to the general public but quite old to policemen," observes the New York Herald. It is a "Good Morning, Officer!" May sound queer but fact, nevertheless. Ask any policeman. He will bear witness. He will tell you that early in the morning when well intentioned citizens are wending their way home along winding ways after an evening of spirited pleasure they like to make friends with the policeman on post, especially near their homes. A cigar, with a "Good morning, officer!" is proffered, and there you have the explanation of the latest brand. On a busy post a policeman is certain to collect a dozen "Good Morning, Officers!" in the wee sma' hours of the morning. It might be added that a policeman never gives a "Good Morning, Officer!" to a man whose friendship he wishes to keep."

The high prices for tobacco this season will no doubt stimulate farmers to plant heavily the coming season, and so far as prices in the future are concerned they are safe in doing so—provided, however, extensive new territories are not opened for its growth, and the present tobacco-producing sections do not neglect other crops and plant more than necessary to supply the demand. Suppose planters in the tobacco-producing sections should increase their acreage next year fifty per cent, and that new sections should be opened, it is easy to see that it is possible for the United States to produce a two-billion-pound crop. Summing the situation up, it is our opinion that farmers should be encouraged to raise their home supplies and then all the tobacco they can possibly handle. A reasonable increase is a safe proposition.—Southern Tobacco Journal.

"The Schoolmaster," says Printers' Ink, "the other day, happened to be passing a cigar store and saw a sign advertising some cigars at what seemed to be an extraordinary reduction—twenty-five cent 'straights' at about seven cents each, if his memory holds good. He stopped to investigate, and the cigar man dived under the counter and came out with a box of the cigars in question. Very good cigars they were, too, but the name of the brand was 'The Kaiser Wilhelm cigar' and the band on every one of them, as well as the label on the box bore a handsome, highly-colored portrait of his Imperial (or as some think it ought to be, Satanic) Majesty. There was nothing wrong with the cigars; but people simply would not buy them under that brand, without an extraordinary price inducement such as was being offered when the Schoolmaster stopped to investigate. And still you meet an occasional fogy who discounts the cash value of good will in the business world!"

SHOTS AND JOTS

The watchword of to-day: If in doubt, put it on the Ultimate Consumer.—Tampa Times.

Lubitskey Bros. & Kleinn, cigar manufacturers at Grand Rapids, are building a branch factory at Ludington, Mich. The estimated cost is $12,000.

Stricter measures to bar dangerous aliens from the waterfront of New York and other ports may be put into effect within a few days. It is said that the Washburn fire has brought matters to a head and that rules with teeth in them will follow.

While the Natividad wagon man was delivering some goods at a store on Market street, between Third and Fourth streets, in San Francisco, a thief deliberately picked the lock on the door and stole five boxes of Natividad cigars, worth about fifty dollars.

The Oneida Cigar & Tobacco Co. takes over the business of Sam L. Anderson, cigar manufacturer at 4½ South Brown street, Rhinelander, Wis. R. C. Luedke will be the manager of the new firm. Mr. Luedke conducted a cigar factory in Grand Rapids several years ago.

Cigar factories in Hastings, Neb., have been tied up by the strike of cigarmakers, who demand a flat rate of $6 per 1,000 on 5-cent goods and $14 per 1,000 on 10-cent goods. One of four factories offered to accept the scale but the cigarmakers have agreed not to return to work in any plant until all the factories in Hastings comply with their demands.

An order in council, published in the Canada Gazette for November 3, provides that "on and after December 1, 1917, and until the Governor General in Council has by order declared that the present abnormal conditions have ceased, no grain of any kind and no substance that can be used for food shall be used in Canada for the distillation of potable liquors. Any person violating the above regulation shall be guilty of an offense and shall be liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding $5,000, or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, or to both fine and imprisonment."

Alderman George G. Goetz, of the Borough of Queens, New York City, obtained an exemption from military service from the local board, but the District Appeals Board on Monday ruled that he must join the National Army at Camp Upton. On recommendation of Meier Steinbrink, who, as committee chairman, inspected the records in Goetz's case, the appeals body set aside a decision of Local Exemption Board 185, which had held that the Alderman's office made him immune from the draft. Under the draft regulations any municipal officer elected by popular vote and whose office may not be filled by appointment for an unexpired term is entitled to exemption, but Goetz is merely serving out the unexpired term of John Kochendorfer, who was appointed a City Magistrate last March.

Certain Minnesota farmers are more than "in clover" this year—they are "in tobacco," which means considerable at prevailing prices. The Minnesota tobacco crop now hanging in the drying sheds on hundreds of farms is of high quality of its grade and bringing three times the normal price according to Prof. C. P. Bull of the Minnesota Agricultural College. Mr. Bull has acted as adviser to the tobacco farmers for years. "The tobacco acreage last season was somewhat larger than ever before," said he, "and the crop was good. Much of it is already sold on contract at a price ranging around 14 cents a pound. Agents of the big tobacco houses usually come to the state before harvest and bid in the bulk of the crop. Whereas normally only a couple of houses enter the field this Fall there were at least six. The price was affected of course." Sherburne county is the center of the tobacco "belt" in Minnesota.

Determination of Rate of Tax to Be Paid on, and in Respect to Label to Be Affixed to Packages of Cigars Weighing More Than Three Pounds per Thousand.

In Section 400 the rate of tax to be paid on cigars weighing more than three pounds per thousand is based upon the retail price of each cigar, and it is provided in said section that the word "retail" as used in this section shall mean the ordinary retail price of a single cigar. The ordinary retail price of a single cigar is held to be the price at which cigars are or would be sold singly. Where cigars are manufactured or imported to retail at two or three for a certain price, the rate of taxpayment is determined upon the retail price at which such cigars would be sold singly. In the case of cigars which are sold only by the box and never retailed in less quantities, i. e., where the box is the unit of sale, the rate of tax to be paid thereon is to be determined by the maximum value of a single cigar obtained by dividing the box price by the number of cigars packed therein where the same brand of cigars is put up in different size packages. In the case of imported cigars, the importer will be required to file an affidavit with the collector of customs setting forth the necessary information with reference to the retail price of the cigars when sold singly, and the importer will be held responsible for the proper taxpayment of such cigars.

Under the provisions of Section 400 every manufacturer or importer will be required to affix to each box or container of cigars weighing more than three pounds per thousand a conspicuous label indicating by letter the clause of said section under which the cigars therein contained have been taxpaid, which must correspond with the taxpaid stamp on said box or container. Such label shall be not less than one inch long nor less than three-fourths of an inch wide, and shall be affixed to the front of the box or container and shall bear the following legend:

The contents of this box have been taxpaid as cigars of Class ——, as indicated by the internal revenue stamp affixed.

In each such label the class shall be indicated by letter A, B, C, D or E, corresponding with the appropriate class as provided for above under the head of Rates of Tax. This provision shall become effective on and after November 2, 1917.

Inventories of Stamps by Manufactures.

All attached and unattached stamps for the payment of tax on tobacco, snuff, cigars and cigarettes held by manufacturers in their factories on October 4, 1917, and November 2, 1917, before the commencement of business on said days are required to be inventoried and returns filed by the manufacturers for assessment of the additional tax due thereon, as provided in Section 1006 of the Act. Temporary inventory forms for the guidance of manufacturers in inventorying their stamps on the morning of October 4, 1917, were forwarded collectors with T-Mims. 1609 and 1610, dated September 10 and 11, 1917, with directions that upon receipt of telegraphic advice from the Department as to rates, etc., on passage of the Act they were to be completed and mailed by them to manufacturers. All stamps in transit from the collector or stamp deputy on the date inventory is required to be taken which were purchased at the old rates are required to be included in the inventory. Formal returns and inventories for assessment of additional tax on account of stamps on hand are to be made in duplicate under oath on Form 416a by manufacturers of tobacco and snuff and Form 416b by manufacturers of cigars and cigarettes and filed with the collector in the case of inventories of October 4, 1917, on or before November 2, 1917, and in the case of inventories of November 2, 1917, on or before December 1, 1917. These forms are in the hands of the public printer and will be forwarded to collectors for distribution at the earliest practicable date. Separate forms for the inventory of November 2, 1917, are provided.

Every manufacturer will be required to render a return and inventory on the forms mentioned, notwithstanding the manufacturer may have no stamps on hand on the dates mentioned. As to these additional taxes, payment must be made at the time of filing return, and cannot be extended beyond dates given above. No bond for extending such payment will be accepted, as in the case of additional taxes imposed on stock in the hands of dealers in tobacco, the law making no provision to that effect.

Entries in Manufacturers' Books and Monthly Returns.

Each collector was furnished with the mimeographs above referred to, copies of instruction to manufacturers of tobacco and snuff and to manufacturers of cigars and cigarettes in regard to the entries to be made in their books and monthly returns when the new rates of tax become effective. Said instructions which were to be forwarded to the manufacturers in their respective districts, and which are similarly applicable and which should be observed by manufacturers again on November 2, 1917, when the full increased taxes become effective, follow:

To Manufacturers of Tobacco and Snuff.

(1) In your revenue book under the head of "Removed Taxpaid" and "Stamp Account" at the close of the last day under the old rate of tax, rule lines and immediately below, enter in red ink the totals of the several columns.

(2) In stamp account under the head of "Value of stamps purchased," and immediately beneath the total filled in under instructions in the preceding paragraph, enter the amount of additional tax shown to be due on account of stamps on hand on date specified, to agree with temporary inventory on accompanying mimeograph form which is

REVENUE INSTRUCTIONS

(5) In your monthly return, under the heads of "Removed taxpaid," "Stamps purchased" and "Stamps used" in stamp account, the totals for the month should be filled in to agree with the entries made in your revenue book under instructions in the preceding paragraph.

(6) Manufacturers of cigars weighing over three pounds per thousand, taxpaying same under two or more of Classes A, B, C, D or E, at different tax rates, will, until new form of revenue book can be prescribed and printed, be required to indicate the class of cigars taxpaid in heading of successive pages of their revenue book, the lowest tax class being entered on the same page as their material, manufacture, removal for export and for personal consumption and experimental purposes is reported, the succeeding pages for the higher tax classes of cigars containing only entries under the heads of "Removed taxpaid," "Stamps purchased" and "Stamps used." In regard to the monthly returns of such manufacturers it will be necessary, until new blanks can be printed and furnished, for the data contained on the successive pages of the revenue book to be entered on as many different sheets of Form 72, each indicating the class under which taxpaid. The cigar account only need be recapitulated, showing the removals at each different tax rate on the first sheet, that is, the sheet showing the cigars removed at the lowest tax rate.

(7) Unattached stamps of the value of $3.00 per thousand for cigars weighing more than three pounds per thousand which you may have on hand at the time the new rates of tax take effect and for which you have no further use on account of manufacturing only cigars of Classes B, C, D or E, may be returned for redemption provided said stamps have been purchased within a period of two years from date of making claim.

New Sizes of Packages for Cigarettes, Small Cigars, Tobacco and Snuff.

Section 400 provides that cigarettes and small cigars shall be put up in packages or parcels containing five, eight, ten, twelve, fifteen, sixteen, twenty, twenty-four, forty, fifty, eighty, or one hundred cigarettes each. (The number in italics indicates the new sizes of packages.) It is further provided that to each package or parcel there shall be affixed a suitable stamp denoting the tax thereon which shall be canceled prior to removal for sale or consumption under such regulations as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall prescribe. Such stamps shall be affixed in such manner as to seal the package and shall be canceled by the manufacturer writing or imprinting on each stamp his factory number, the number of the district and State, and the date of cancellation to include the month and year. In the case of importer of small cigars or cigarettes the stamp shall be canceled by the owner or importer thereof by writing or imprinting upon the same his name and the date of cancellation to include the month and year.

Stamps for the new sizes of packages for manufactured tobacco and snuff provided for in Section 401, of one-eighth, three-eighths, five-eighths, seven-eighths, one and one-eighth, one and three-eighths, one and five-eighths, one and seven-eighths, and five ounces, shall be affixed and canceled in the same manner as are other strip stamps for tobacco and snuff under the provisions of existing Regulations No. 8, revised July 1, 1910, page 41.

Respectfully,
DANIEL C. ROPER,
Commissioner.

Approved:
L. S. ROWE,
Acting Secretary of the Treasury.

DIRECTED TO PREPARE FOR INVENTORIES

Washington, November 21—Internal Revenue Commissioner Roper today issued instructions to collectors relative to inventories of cigar and tobacco factories on January 1 next and verification of such inventories by collectors or their deputies. LAMM.

TOBACCO CROP SUMMARY

WASHINGTON, November 19.—A preliminary ummary of the entire tobacco crop of the Jnited States, based on the reports sent in o the Department of Agriculture shows a otal production of 1,185,478,000 pounds, as gainst December estimate of 1917 of 1,150,-22,000 pounds, and as against a five-year verage for the years 1911-1915 of 983,723,000 ounds. The total acreage was 1,418,400, as gainst 1,411,800 acres in 1916. While the stimate is still over the December produc-ion for 1916, it is less than might have been xpected, since the October forecast was for ,243,023,000 pounds.

An average yield per acre in 1917 is 835.8 ounds, as against 818.2 pounds for the ten-ear average.

North Carolina and Virginia crops are re-ponsible for the decrease, the former falling rom 218,117,000 pounds, the October forecast o 199,584,000 pounds, and the latter from 31,242,000 to 418,140,000 pounds. Other tates showing decreased preliminary returns s compared with the October forecast are lew Hampshire, 171,000 to 167,000 pounds; 'ermont, 170,000 to 165,000 pounds; Rhode sland, from 11,283,000 to 10,293,000 pounds; onnecticut, from 33,966,000 to 31,080,000 ounds; New York, from 4,388,000 to 4,250,-00 pounds; Delaware, from 59,013,000 to 58,-00,000 pounds; Maryland, from 22,654,000 to 2,594,000 pounds; Virginia, from 140,483,000 o 126,350,000; Illinois, from 604,000 to 560,-00; Wisconsin, from 55,753,000 to 52,164,000 ounds; Tennessee, from 81,760,000 to 81,710,-00; Louisiana, from 218,000 to 210,000 ounds.

The only States showing an increase over he October estimate are South Carolina, with 7,970,000 pounds, as against 57,015,000 ounds in October; Georgia, 1,600,000, as gainst 1,496,000 for October; Florida, 3,410,000, as against 3,240,000. The largest increase is in the crop for Ohio, for which the summary shows 101,760,000 pounds, as against 98,675,000 pounds for the October estimate; Indiana shows 14,060,000, as against 13,364,000 in October; Alabama, 146,000, as against 134,000, and Arkansas, 210,000, as against 208,000 pounds. BIG LA GIRALDA CIGAR FACTORY WAS BURNED

Cablegrams from Manila report the destruction of La Giralda Cigar factory, by fire.

This big, well known factory, owned and operated by the Philippine Co. Ltd. was one of the more famous establishments in Manila. Cigars made by La Giralda justly had a high reputation. From the factory, cigars by the million were shipped to the United States, Australia and Europe.

Concerning the rebuilding of the factory, no definite announcement has been made as yet. Nor is the exact extent of the loss known here.

It happens however, because of big orders placed by Bowring & Co., the American sales agents for the Philippine Co. Ltd., that a number of of unusually large shipments of cigars from La Giralda factory are now on the way to the United States. And Sales Manager Ernst J. Moss announces that during the next 90 days the requirement of customers will be met.

NO CIGARETTE SALES

Allowed in Nashville—The Lid Is Clamped Down—Authorities Give "Final Warning" to Dealers.

Heeding the final warning of the authorities in Nashville, all of the uptown cigarette dealers clamped down the lid Sunday. Smokers who failed to supply themselves Saturday found it impossible to buy cigarettes at any price in a Nashville cigar store.

Acting Sheriff Yeaman, following a meeting of the county officers at the court house Saturday afternoon, gave final notice that the sale of cigarettes in Nashville would be tolerated no longer. Instructions were given the deputies by Mr. Yeaman and County Attorney T. J. McMorrough to see to the enforcement of the cigarette law.

Sheriff Yeaman told a Nashville Banner reporter Sunday that he had received assurance from some of the dealers that the cigarette law would not be violated further by them. Uptown dealers, he said, have planned to sign an agreement to sell no more cigarettes as long as the law prohibiting it remains on the statute books. In the opinion of the authorities the cigarette is a thing of the past in Nashville.

"No arrests have been yet been made under the law, and the officers expect to make none unless attempts are made to 'bootleg' the prohibited smokes. It is believed the merchants will co-operate with the authorities in their effort to enforce this law.

"The recent imposition of the war tax and the increased cost of cigarettes have cut down the profit of the retail dealer and it is not believed that the action of the authorities will be a great blow to the merchants. The smokers themselves are making the clamor.

"The Nashville police department will also help to exterminate the cigarette, Chief Barthell having been instructed by Mayor Gupton to have his men see to the enforcement of this law. City Judge Madison Wells has announced that any case growing out of the unlawful sale of cigarettes will be bound over to the criminal court."

TO RELIEVE SUFFERING

George W. Hill, Vice-President of the American Tobacco Co., Will Devote All His Time to Red Cross Work During the War.

Percival S. Hill, president of the American Tobacco Co., from the beginning has been more than a generous contributor to the Red Cross fund. On various occasions, he has gone out of his way to render important assistance.

And his son has done likewise.

George W. Hill, vice president of the American Tobacco Co., will devote his entire time to Red Cross work, during the war.

The Red Cross Society urgently needs the services of trained and able men, energetic and capable executives who can get big things done quickly.

Called to Washington "to help out," George W. Hill promptly responded. He went to Washington Monday. And, if need be, he will stick to the work, wherever it may take him, until peace comes.

The better to make his ability and experience available, he was assigned to the committee on transportation and foreign relations. To expedite the shipment of supplies, to distribute relief in the manner most effective, is a task proportioned according to the extent of the war.

To alleviate the suffering and misery that war causes is a duty next to the achievement of victory. Successful Red Cross work just now requires intelligence, diligence, zeal and skill developed to the superlative. Incessant, multipled and heartrending are the appeals for help.

Though the American Red Cross Society has a working force and funds exceeding anything of the kind ever obtained before, even greater is the need for deeds of mercy. Each contribution that adds to the usefulness of the Red Cross is a godsend. Each worker that does something toward minimizing the horrors of war is entitled to gratitude.

Until the death blow is dealt to Kaiserism, Americans must fight. Havoc and slaughter will continue until the triumph of the right is assured. And next to swift and continuous success for our troops is desired the most beneficial utilization of the resources of the Red Cross.

No planning is too arduous, no toil is too strenuous, to be required of a Red Cross worker today. And, for the labor, the chief reward is the privilege of helping those who suffer.

Joining the Red Cross working force signifies willingness to be of service to humanity.

All who know him believe that, as a Red Cross worker, George W. Hill will prove to be unusually zealous and capable.

SECRETARY OF THE T. M. A. IN WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, November 20. — Counsellor Charles Dushkind, secretary of the T. M. A., was in Washington to-day to see Treasury Department officials in connection with certain revenue matters. He stated that his visit to the officials was not of general interest to the trade.

C. W. McCormick was heard from at Denver last week, where he finds the new Coronado size of Webster in tins of 50s are taking well.

Restrictions Must Be Reasonable

One Contract Held—Another Didn't—Why?

(Copyright 1917, by Elton J. Buckley)

In the same State, at about the same time, two men sold their businesses. One was a retail coal dealer, the other a manufacturer of a wrapping device. In both cases the buyers set out to protect themselves by inserting in the agreement of sale a clause binding the seller not to re-engage in the same business for a certain time. These clauses are always inserted in an agreement to sell a business, if the buyer knows his business. Otherwise a man may sell his store one day and immediately open another one the next day, of course taking all the trade he had just sold.

In both of these two cases I have referred to, the sellers, after getting the buyer's money, attempted to get out of their agreements not to re-engage in the same business. In both cases the buyers appealed to the courts for an injunction. One got it and the other did not. The difference between the two cases shows so clearly how to make and how not to make agreements restricting the seller of a business from going into the same business again, that I shall devote this article to pointing the difference out.

In the coal man's case, the seller sold his trade name, trade-mark, good will, fixtures, stock in trade—everything connected with the business—and agreed not to re-engage in the coal business in the same city for two years, and not within two miles from his former place of business for five years. Three years afterward he opened up another coal yard a little more than two miles from his old place, but solicited orders within the two-mile radius. When his old buyer took him into court on an application for an injunction, the court said the restrictive agreement was legal and would be upheld, and an injunction was granted restraining the seller from soliciting any business whatever within a radius of two miles from his old stand.

The court said this:

> We are of opinion that it is a breach of the agreement to conduct a business similar to the one transferred within the radius of two miles from Main and Price streets or to do acts in violation of the spirit and intent of the contract. The defendant cannot be restrained from establishing a coal yard, after the term of two years, beyond the territorial limits set forth in the agreement, but the soliciting of business, the selling and delivery of coal to customers within the territorial limits is carrying on business and a breach of the contract.

I am often asked, in cases like this, whether the seller of a business who binds himself not to re-engage in the same line for a time, and within a certain territory, could fill orders that came to him voluntarily from old customers within the prescribed territory. Of course he could, but he would have to show very clearly that the order did not result from some direct or indirect solicitation of his.

So the buyer of the coal business got his injunction. The buyer of the manufacturing business was less successful. Let us see why. In the latter case the selling agreement bound the seller "not to engage, directly or indirectly, in the busness of manufacturing or selling the same or any competing material in the United States." After a while the seller of the business started in to sell a competing product ar an injunction was asked against him. The cou said no; this time the agreement keeping th seller out of business was not legal and wou not be upheld, because it was not reasonabl Instead of keeping him out for a limited tin and a limited territory, merely enough to giv the buyer a chance to get settled, it sought keep him out for all time and in the who United States. This is from the court's dec sion:

> This restriction was not reasonable. Such a co tract in restraint of trade is clearly unreasonab Such a requirement is not at all necessary for th proper protection of the rights of the plaintiff ar it is oppressive to defendant.
> The restriction here is also unreasonable in that is unlimited as to time. It is a well-settled rule law that an agreement in general restraint of tra is illegal and void, but an agreement which operat merely in partial restraint of trade is good, provid it is not unreasonable and there be a considerati to support it. In order that it may not be unreaso able, the restraint imposed must not be longer tha is required for the necessary protection of the par with whom the contract is made (the buyer). longer contract, even in good consideration, is he void, as being too general a restraint of trade; but contract not to use a trade at a particular place, it be founded on a good consideration and be ma for a proper and useful purpose, is valid. Of cours a contract not to exercise a trade generally wou be obnoxious to the rule, and would be void.
> In Union Strawboard Co. vs. Bonfield, 193 Ill. 42 the contract was in connection with the sale of business, and a reasonable restriction was justifie but it was there said: "The courts will not enfor any contract which excludes a party generally fro following any lawful trade or business beneficial the community and to him."
> In the case at bar, the contract in restraint of tra being unlimited as to time, and as to space extendi over the entire country, must be regarded as exten ing the restraint further than is necessary for t reasonable protection of the convenantee. Referen to the nature and subject-matter of the restricti makes its unreasonableness more clearly apparent.

In other words, the buyer of the coal bus ness got his injunction because his lawyer kne the law of restraining agreements, and th other buyer lost his because his lawyer did not

"TIPPING THINGS OFF"

Regarding Trade Up State

New York State Capitol District, November 19, 1917.—In the syndicated weekly reviews of R. G. Dun & Co., Bradstreet, Henry Clews, Roger Babson, and various other commercial authorities upon the current conditions of business, statements are frequently issued which undeniably reflect the personal impressions of the individual composing the article.

Then, to eliminate this undesirable feature from the thought of the reader, the writer always uses a stock phrase. This phrase simply is a funny little word-group, which acts as a subterfuge to express the consensus of a digest upon opinions of those interviewed.

So the mode of speech becomes exceedingly familiar to all of us when the newspaper merely says: "It is pointed out."

Now, if this sentence means just what it indicates, we at once think of the fifth-reader school teacher, standing at the blackboard, pointer in hand, showing the class this understanding of the educational what and how.

Also, many of us immediately, almost automatically, recall the pointing index finger, firmly attached in our minds to the established hand and cuff.

While, with another instant's reflection, we see, too, the analogy of the pointing advertising arrows. Everybody uses them, pointing and shooting here and there over every red barn as the farmer's weathervane.

If it is "pointed out," then it should be extremely plain and understandable to each and every one except the class dunce.

But, the fact is, no one seems to be able to get at the point of this "pointed out" bull. Sure, they read about it in the Morning Bluff. And they read about it some more in the Evening Stuff.

Still the majority of business men, evidently class duncemen, fail to observe, notice and see these plain "pointed out" facts, even when the chart becomes a graphic, completely covered with the rise and fall of the red, blue and black lines of fluctuating trade.

Commercial laws, rules, regulations tell us, say these "pointed out" gentlemen, that thus and so will occur aprpoximately at a designated date.

Do they happen? Does the event occur? Does trade improve? Or does the doubtful dollar neglect to multiply itself as the teacher says it should when she "pointed out" the conclusive causes of both large and small values?

Well, ask the tobacoc man. He's pretty close to the man on the curb. Begin with the retailer. Go next to the jobber. Then to the manufacturer. Ask them all just how business really is.

Inquire, if you will, what the "pointed out" fellers told them weeks and months ago. Or take down a file of the library's old papers and see for yourself.

See if "it was pointed out" that cash registers and bank balances would be screaming prosperity or howling havoc for this present time and occasion.

Whatever the answer may be here in the Capitol District, center of the nation's 2 per cent of population, may not be true elsewhere in the country.

But here, right here, in the exact middle of an important financial and distributing territory, the "pointed out" lads have hunted cover, probably in a shell-crater, awaiting the cheerful sun of a more propitious moment to announce the approach of a more pointed period of general commercial prosperity.

Workmen are now engaged in constructing a turnstile entrance of glass and brass for the Flemish front of the State Street Keeler restaurant..

When completed, this improvement will greatly increase the desirability of the front tables for the winter season. For, with the former door, the service near the entrance was seriously impaired by draughts from the ever-open portal.

Temporarily, the entrance for the ground floor front is to the right of the cigar stand. Manager Richardson reports business a trifle slow.

Who's your dentist? Did he ever tell you your teeth were so poor that he would be obliged to extract all of them, replacing the entire outfit with a phoney set?

Well, that's just what he told Unser Fritz. You don't know Uncle Fritz? Why, man, he's known to nearly every one in Albany!

Because Fritz Bressler, you should be advised. has been a politician and a city clerk of the Capitol City ever since Hendrik Hudson sailed up the creek in his Half-Moon.

About that same time, too, the Mohawk Indians hereabout began to tell the Dutch traders how to cure toothache. Also, how to preserve those same useful teeth.

How? Simple enuf! Merely chew terbacker, that's all! Unser Fritz tried it, and saved his teeth without ever again approaching that deadly dentist.

And Fritz's father, 86 years alive, chewed likewise. But, the secret is—they never spit!

Where is little Mannie Edgeley? Thirty years agone he resided at Columbiaville, Columbia County, New York. He was then just about three years of age, says the Albany Evening Journal in its clip column of events coming and going.

So now Mannie should be a man 33 years young. And the idee of locating this present Mr. Edgeley is to find out if he still maintains his youthful record as a steinmetz-smoker.

For, at the time his championship was chalked on the board, Mannie had been smoking either a pipeful or a full cigar every day since he was old enough to stand alone!

Moreover, Mannie became indisposed, ill and sick unless he obtained his regulation smoke every single day!

MAKING TUVALS EVEN MORE APPEALING

An attractive packing just introduced by Marcellino Perez & Co. Because but a limited number of the glass fronted boxes could be procured in time, this form of packing will be restricted to the Novedades size this year. As holiday offerings, Tuval cigars always are appreciated. And the packing shown was designed particularly for club men and patrons of fashionable hotels.

Being absolutely clear Havanas of the highest grade, Tuvals invariably typify quality. Known from coast to coast, smoked by men who insist on having good cigars, Tuvals continually are acquiring greater popularity.

ACCEPTING THE SITUATION

It doesn't pay to be pessimistic. Nor is much gained by being grouchy. One can't have everything. Neither does prosperity bless all alike. He who is ready to whine always has a sad story to tell. But it is proverbial that "misfortune will not abide with a cheerful man."

"What's the matter with the cigar business?" From some wails that have been made, an outsider might infer that every cigar manufacturer was facing ruin. When, in fact, conditions are not nearly so bad as it might be. It is true that additional difficulties and increased expense are associated with production. Such troubles, certainly due in part to the war, are not restricted to cigar manufacturers.

Men engaged in other industries may have greater cause to complain. The cigar manufacturer has to pay more for material and labor. But in most instances, he has a stock of tobacco. And more tobacco is procurable at a price. Possibly he is unable to secure all the help he wants during the busy season. Yet skilled cigar makers seldom are persuaded to work at another trade. And, today, numerous factories are exceeding former outputs, despite the war.

There is a ready market. The average cigar manufacturer, at present, is unable to fill all orders. Almost without exception, the popular brands are far oversold.

The inflation of values, the increased amount of money in circulation, makes collections easier. The percentage of bad accounts now is notably small. Few and unimportant were the failures that have occurred in recent months.

Throughout the country, in many instances, cigar prices have been advanced. Admitting that some things are unsatisfactory, the cigar manufacturer is neither discouraged nor scared.

UNCLE SAM'S MERCHANTMEN

The merchant marine the United States is to have now begins to assume form on paper. The new vessels soon will begin to take the water with regularity. At the end of September 458 vessels carrying the American flag, either engaged in foreign trade or capable of it, and each with a capacity in excess of 1,500 tons deadweight, represented a total of 2,871,000 tons. This fleet is to be multiplied several times over. Twenty-seven shipyards are building thirty-five-hundred-ton wooden steamers on government account, and ten or more are at work on steel vessels. Engine-builders and makers of other equipment are busily at work, that their part of the task may not be backward.

Prospective totals are hard to guess. Official statements, however, afford some basis for an estimate. At the end of September the 458 vessels already in service under the American flag were to be increased by 117 German and Austrian ships, together with 400 steel vessels commandeered in all stages of construction. At the same time the Shipping Board's corporation had let contracts for 636 vessels. If all these vessels which are yet to be constructed are completed by the end of 1918, and there were no losses in the interval, we should then have sixteen hundred vessels in our merchant marine and they would have an aggregate carrying capacity of 9,200,000 tons. Although we may have some difficulty in rolling up such a total, we may recall that on June 30, 1914, we had American vessels registered in foreign trade to a total of only 1,076,000 tons gross.

The "suggestions" regarding hours of labor and wages issued by the chief of the Ordance Bureau of the War Department and the quartermaster general show that the government of this country has profited by a study of labor conditions in Great Britain during the war. While not directing the observance of an eight-hour day, these suggestions plainly indicate a belief in the desirability of short working hours, placing the ten-hour day as the maximum, with an eight-hour day for women employes, if possible, together with a prohibition of night work for women. Along with this, the maintenance of existing standards of wages is recommended.

MY DARLING PIPE

PIPE, my darling,
Fate is snarling—
Let her snarl.
Thou art my love,
Thee do I love
Best of all.
In thy kisses,
Truest blisses
Ever dwell.
Faithful ever,
Pouting never—
Ah! 'tis well.
Pipe, my darling,
Fate is snarling—
Let her snarl.

All foresaken,
Friends are taken
Day by day;
I am weeping,
They are sleeping,
Laid away.
But, with thee, love,
What to me, love,
Is this strife;
Since, caressing
Thee, my blessing,
Sweet is life?
Pipe, my darling,
Fate is snarling—
Let her snarl.

Summer's going;
Bleak are growing
Autumn hours;
Leaves are falling,
Spring recalling
All her flowers.
Man's ambition,
Like a vision,
Fades away;
And his nearest Hopes, and dearest,
All decay.
Pipe, my darling,
Fate is snarling—
Let her snarl.

Harry Lloyd.

Our army must have supplies. Supplies sufficient for our army cannot be produced without the full effort of labor; an effort based not only on the full efficiency of every man, but upon his patriotic endeavor to do a little more than he would ordinarily do. This work must be done without interruption, constantly, unceasingly and with the full knowledge that the stoppage of work means a certain increase in the cost of war, whether that increase be in blood or money. Everyone must accept the simple fact, that labor must give its full share in winning the war.—American Industry.

Samuel Gompers the Outspoken Patriot

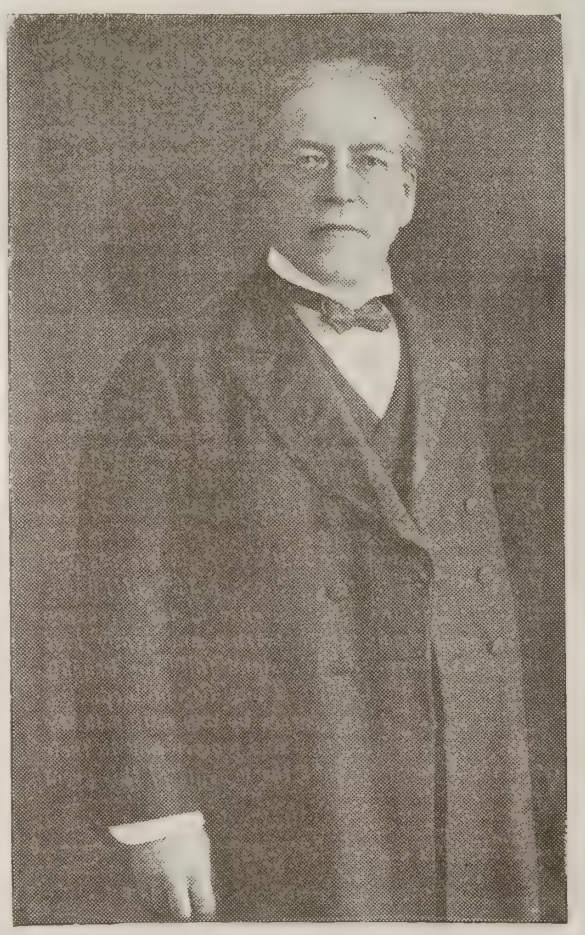
The Cigar-Maker Who Leads Organized Labor in America

Fifty-three years ago—the year of the Battle of Gettysburg—an undersized, though stocky, youngster of 13 followed his parents down the gangplank of the London packet and plunged into the New World, as represented by the East Side of New York, there to take up the trade of cigar-maker at the bench beside his father.

Starting work as a child, young Gompers might have become merely a skillful and plodding cigar-maker. But those who rolled cigars then were inclined to be philosophical. The experts rolled only with their hands; their heads were free to think. As aids to thinking they had reading while they worked; sometimes they hired a reader, or one of their own number would read and be paid by a pro rata contribution of the number of cigars which he would have made had he been working instead of reading.

Gompers soon became the favorite shop reader, and probably it was in that cigar factory that he cultivated the splendid speaking voice and the precise yet warm enunciation which has so often made the crowd his. Moreover, it opened his brain to new thoughts; he became an avid, omnivorous reader.

In 1864—he was only 14 years old and had been in the country but a year—the Cigar-Makers' International Union was formed and the boy joined it; today he is the oldest member of the union and carries card No. 1. Incidentally he can still roll a cigar as well as he can smoke one. Any one who has seen Sam. Gompers vigorously puffing will know the extent of this compliment.



The young man soon became the leading spirit of his union—he grasped what unions might do if they were brought together into one great body. His chance came at Pittsburgh in 1881, when the American Federation of Labor was founded; he was one of the guiding minds of the organization. The delegates so quickly recognized his ability that they elected him president. He refused the office that year and accepted the vice-presidency instead; but the next year the chief office was forced upon him and he has since been re-elected year after year with the single exception of 1895, when John McBride, the coal miner who died recently, was elected after a close vote.

During the first six years of his presidency, Gompers served without salary and continued at his trade. Then the Federation granted him the munificent salary of $1,200 a year. The salary is now larger, but it is still less than ten thousand a year. Gompers could earn many times that amount in civil life and has been offered more than that for lecture tours.

Gompers has not sought personal advantage in any of his work, and neither is he a candidate for political preferment. Back in 1887 he was offered the nomination for the State Senate in New York by both parties, but he declined; in the next year he would not consent to run for Congress, and Governor Hill of New York had to accept his declination of the chairmanship of the State Board of Arbitration at $3,000 a year—a sum that was great to Gompers in those days.

The American Federation of Labor has grown under Gompers from a body of 15 unions and 50,000 members in 1881 to 21,711 unions and more than 2,000,000 members in 1916.

How has he managed to keep the control, to maintain a steady progress and not be caught in the swirling tides of politics? By solid, feet-on-the-ground statesmanship, which is another way of saying by hard horse sense. Instead of being led off into utopian dreams, Gompers—though a dreamer—has recognized that labor and capital are not opposed but complementary forces and that both prosper best under conditions which beget mutual good will; he thinks that down under the skin the average capitalist and the average laboring man are not so very unlike and that they can always come together under some form of agreement. Therefore he advocates the voluntary trade agreement and looks at a strike only as a last resort of the wrongheaded.

SAMUEL GOMPERS
President of the American Federation of Labor

Gompers holds that strikes are never necessary except when some one has lost his head, and he never sanctions a strike when any other means of reaching a settlement is possible. For instance, at the time of the great Chicago strike he refused to call a general sympathetic strike in spite of the torrents of abuse heaped upon him, and he thus averted what would probably have been a bloody revolution. He has steadily avoided the pressure to form a labor party in this country because he thinks that the welfare of labor should not be confused with other national interests, but should be the concern of all parties.

Concerning himself, Gompers declares: "I am not in any sense a socialist. I have fought all my life against socialism; I am a trade unionist, which means that I believe in the natural, rational progress and development of society. That progress does not come by leaps and bounds. The socialists would have everything at once; their kind of progress also brings rebounds and reactions. The French Revolution brought good, but it also paved the way for the autocracy of Napoleon. One need not go into the past to demonstrate the fallacy of socialism—just look at the turmoil in Russia with the enemy at the gate. I am an internationalist, but my doctrine is an addition to nationalism and not a subtraction. I must first be a citizen of America before I can be a citizen of the world."

It is hard to catch up with Gompers these days; in normal times he is busy enough with the presidency of the American Federation of Labor and its more than two million members and with the editorship of the American Federationist, a monthly magazine in which he writes all of the editorials and usually the leading article. But now he is also one of the five members of the Advisory Commission of the Council of National Defense and chairman of the Labor Committee. And lately he has started, and is the leading spirit, in the American Alliance for Labor and Democracy, formed to combat destructive socialism and anarchy and more especially to thwart the doings of the vociferous, peripatetic People's Council. Each of these tasks involves time and traveling.

In Leslie's, describing Gompers as one of the "Men Who Are Winning the War," Samuel Crowther says: "I saw him at his office in the new Federation of Labor building; I had previously not been in the new building and I rather expected that his offices would have been elaborated to some extent and that at least he would have indulged in a little undemocratic furniture, but I found him in a good-sized corner room seated at the same long table that he has used for years and surrounded by exactly the same plain chairs and furnishings with which he had lived before. The office is entirely plain, and its sole decorations are autographed photographs of three presidents of the United States—Roosevelt, Taft and Wilson. It is an office to suggest peace and meditation and probably it does when it is tenanted by a less dynamic force than Samuel Gompers.

"It is the personal force of Gompers that drowns almost every other impression of personality."

In Crowther's excellent story in Leslie's (from which lengthy excerpts are here taken) it is further said that Gompers "finds his enemies not among employers, but among the fake labor leaders and the fanatics and the pro-Germans. He is apparently hot-headed and aggressive, but he never loses either his poise or his head in an argument; he can fight with apparent abandon, but with a weather eye always open, and he is as little disconcerted by a new turn in a debate as he was when once a man leaped at him brandishing two loaded pistols; Gompers, with the quickness of a Corbett, took away the weapons and went on with his speech. When a man has been running labor conventions for thirty years, a pistol or two under his nose does not bother him!

"He is an orator, half of the old school and half of the new; he starts easily and quietly and then warms into his subject with compelling force and resounding periods. He uses an almost classical diction and he knows nothing of slang; at times he reverts to trite phrases both in speaking and writing, but he chooses them consciously because he knows that his hearers will the better grasp his point by having it familiarly draped; he can roll off an old phrase as though he were the first to say it."

One of the best things Gompers ever said was: "We shall strip the mask from those who in the name of democracy, antimilitarism and peace are engaged in the nefarious propaganda of treachery to all that these noble words represent. Democracy will not be served by the victory of autocracy—by letting the Declaration of Independence be supplanted by the Kaiser's fist.

"We shall fight this war to victory."

Insurance That Every Soldier Should Have

The United States Is Just and Generous to Those Who Serve

A Statement by the Secretary of the Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury, through the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, has been charged with the administration of the War Insurance Law enacted by the Congress as a measure of justice to the men and women who have been called to give their lives, if need be, in the service of their country.

I wish to acquaint you with the benefits and privileges which your Government has placed at your disposal. It is essential that you and your families at home should know of your and their rights under this law in order that full advantage may be taken of them.

To care for the wife and children of the enlisted man during his service, the War Insurance Law compels him to contribute up to one-half of his pay for their support. The Government, on application, will generously add to this an allowance of from $5 to $50 a month, according to the size of the the family. Moreover, if the enlisted man will make some further provision himself for a dependent parent, brother, sister, or grandchild, they may be included in the Government allowance.

If, as a result of injuries incurred or disease contracted in the line of duty, an officer or enlisted man or an Army or Navy nurse should be disabled, provision is made for compensation of from $30 to $100 a month to him, and, should he die, compensation of from $20 to $75 a month will be paid to his wife, his child, or his widowed mother.

In order, however, fully to protect each person and family, Congress has made it possible for every soldier, sailor, and nurse to obtain life and total-disability insurance. This insurance applies to injuries received while he or she is in the service or after he or she shall have left it.

Exposure to the extra dangers of war makes the cost of life insurance in private life insurance companies prohibitive. It was, therefore, a plain duty and obligation for the Government to assume the risk of insuring hundreds of thousands of our soldiers and sailors who are making the supreme sacrifice. Under this law, every soldier and sailor and nurse, commissioned and enlisted, and of any age, has the right, between now and February 12, 1918, to take out life and total-disability insurance up to $10,000 at very low cost, with the Government without medical examination. This right is purely optional. The soldiers and sailors are not compelled to take insurance, but if they desire to exercise the right, they must do so before the 12th of February, 1918. The cost ranges from 65 cents monthly, at the age of 21, to $1.20 monthly, at the age of 51, for each $1,000 of insurance. This is a small charge on a man's pay—small in proportion to the benefits it may bring. The premiums will be deducted from his pay, if he desires, thus eliminating trouble on his part.

To provide adequate protection until February 12, 1918, during the period when the soldiers and sailors are learning the details of this law, the Government automatically insures each man and woman, commissioned or enlisted in the military service of the United States. It pays the man $25 a month during total permanent disability; if he dies within 20 years, it pays the rest of 240 monthly installments of $25 each to his wife, child, or widowed mother.

I desire to call the provisions of this just and generous law to the attention of our officers and enlisted men and women so that they may not be deprived of their rights through lack of knowledge. Full information may be obtained from the Bureau of War Risk Insurance of the Treasury Department, Washington, D. C. I earnestly urge that the officers of the Army and Navy give to the men under their command all possible aid in helping them to understand fully the benefits that this insurance may bring to their families and the small cost at which it may be obtained.

This is the greatest measure of protection ever offered to its fighting forces by any nation in the history of the world. It is not charity; it is simply justice to the enlisted men and women and to their loved ones at home, and each and every one of them should promptly take the benefits of this great law.

Anti-Coupon Laws Are Unconstitutional

In Colorado, Michigan, Indiana and Massachusetts—According to Court Decisions Recently Made—The Law as Interpreted in Various Cases

City ordinances in effect in Denver, "prohibiting the issue and redemption of coupons and the giving of prizes or premiums or other forms of bonuses for the promotion of sales," have been declared to be unconstitutional by the County Court in Denver. The decision was rendered in a proceeding begun by the city of Denver against the Post Printing and Publishing Co., proprietors of the Denver Post. The decision is looked on as an important adjudication of the question involved. The ordinances in Denver seek to prohibit the issuance and redemption of coupons and certificates of all kinds, trading stamps, etc., and therefore apply to the profit-sharing plan of the United Cigar Stores Co.

The constitutionality of an ordinance of this character is an old question in Colorado. Prior to the passage of the ordinances just declared unconstitutional, a substantially similar ordinance had been passed, and on being attacked in the highest court of the State, was declared to be unconstitutional, the decision being handed down in the case of Denver against Frueaff. The court, in deciding the Denver Post case, follows the Frueaff case, and the decision therefore is regarded by lawyers as likely to stand.

The Supreme Court of Michigan, in an opinion filed September 27, 1917, rendered a decision adverse to the enforcement of a recent anti-coupon law enacted in that State, and last April the Massachusetts legislature, in accordance with the provisions of the Massachusetts Constitution, referred a proposed anti-coupon bill to the Justices of the Supreme Judicial Court of that State for an opinion as to its constitutionality, and the Court reported that in its opinion such proposed legislation would be unconstitutional; likewise, on September 4, 1917, the Indiana Circuit Court for the County of Vigo, held the Indiana anti-premium law unconstitutional, in a proceeding brought by the State against the Surety Coupon Co. These decisions have all been rendered subsequent to the decree in the United States Supreme Court in the State of Washington case. The Supreme Court, it will be recalled, relegated to the several States, through their courts, the power to pass on the constitutionality of their own laws.

CUBA'S FIRST OFFERING

A Red Cross Unit and a Million Dollar Fund—Dr. Menocal Goes to Washington for a Conference.

WASHINGTON, November 18.—Dr. Rafael Menocal, a prominent Cuban surgeon, arrived here from Havana Sunday afternoon to take up with American Red Cross officials the necessary preparations for the field hospital and equipment to be sent to France by the Cuban Red Cross. This Hospital Unit, equipped and manned exclusively by Cubans, and with a staff of Cuban physicians and nurses, has been financed through the efforts of Madame Mariana Seva de Menocal, wife of the President of Cuba. Dr. Menocal brought with him the news that more than half of the million-dollar fund necessary to maintain the Cuban Red Cross Hospital Unit, has already been paid in, and that Madame Menocal and her assistants are convinced that the full million will be in hand in a short time.

He will confer with various officials of the American Red Cross, and in these conferences details of the formation of Cuba's contribution to humanitarian work in France will be finally determined. Dr. Menocal is a son of the late Dr. Raimundo Menocal, who, at the time of his death last August, was Secretary of Sanitation in the Cuban Cabinet.

OF VERY GOOD QUALITY

The Turkish Tobacco Grown This Year in the Trebizond—Platana District—Vice Consul Montesanto's Report.

I. Montesanto, American vice consul at Trebizond, reports that the 1916 crop of tobacco in the Trebizond-Platana district was very small, but on account of the stock left over from previous years there is on hand at present 340,370 pounds at Trebizond and Platana, 98,700 pounds at different villages of the district, and 1,438,200 pounds deposited with the Tobacco Regie, a total of 1,877,270 pounds of tobacco.

Because of the continuance of the war it was generally believed that the crops of 1917 would not be very important, but the latest estimate gives 169,200 pounds for Trebizond and 4,906,800 pounds for the Platana district. Although these figures are only estimates, the season is so far advanced that the total given should be a fairly close approximation of the final outturn. The quality of this year's crop is reported to be very good.

While the estimate is a great deal below the average crops of years before the war, nevertheless, considering the state of war, the lack of labor, and the high wages demanded, the returns of the Platana district are remarkable. The high prices of tobacco and the liberty to cultivate tobacco whenever the farmers wish and in any quantity they desire, without being restricted, as formerly, by the Regie, are contributing to this very satisfactory result. Before the war prices of tobacco varied from $0.04 to $0.20 a pound, according to quality. Now prices are 40 to 70 rubles per batman, which equals $0.47 to $0.83 gold per pound.

IT PRESERVES QUALITY

And Insures Against Breakage or Impairment—A Patent Transparent Paper That Makes an Airtight, Waterproof Encasement for Cigars.

Having the transparency of clear glass, being strong, waterproof, protective and tough, a new imported, patented paper, by a few deft twists converted into an air-tight, non-absorbent, sanitary container for a cigar, is something more than a novelty of the season. It is an application of inventive genius to preserve quality. Encased in this remarkable paper, a cigar long will retain its pristine freshness. Entirely visible, it has all the advantages of a humidor. Cigars so encased, though carried in a coat pocket, are protected against contamination or breakage. Rain won't hurt them. Nor will the tobacco absorb any odor.

Remove the transparent covering and you have the cigar just as it was when the cigar maker finished his work. The delicacy of the aroma is there. The beauty of the wrapper is unmarred. The excellence of the cigar is not impaired by exposure.

To light such a cigar is a pleasure.

To the smoker who truly knows the taste of well cured Vuelta Abajo tobacco, a finely made, high-grade clear Havana is capable of giving great satisfaction.

Accredited manufacturers of choice clear Havanas for 35 years, Garcia & Vega indeed have established a high reputation for making fine cigars. But, however good, a cigar will deteriorate soon, if improperly exposed. As beauty and fragrance depart from the delicate flower that is roughly handled, so a choice cigar may lose its rare aroma because of prejudicial environment.

It is possible now to secure continuing protection for a cigar after it is taken from the box in which it was packed at the factory.

By using the patent, transparent, entirely protective paper encasement, Garcia & Vega assure the retention of the aroma and other captivating qualities up to the last moment. Thoroughly safeguarded, however carried, the cigar isn't exposed to anything.

Yet the protective covering doesn't conceal the beauty of the cigar, nor hide a thing that might be off color or defective. Though the cigar reposes in an air-tight, water-proof container, impervious to odors, the purchaser can see through the transparent paper exactly what he is buying.

Utility outvies novelty in the patent transparent protective paper used exclusively to encase Garcia & Vega clear Havanas.

The protective covering, insuring each cigar against impairment by bad weather or the stench of the trenches, makes Garcia & Vega clear Havanas the more desirable for gifts to our soldiers in France.

And everywhere, smokers who appreciate fine cigars that can be kept in good condition without any trouble, will be quick to see the advantages of the transparent, impermeable encasements.

How Garcia & Vega happened to procure all the patent paper that provides cigar protection par excellence, makes quite an interesting story. But, not stopping to narrate the circumstances, it may be said, that they got it and are using lots of it. Nor are they charging extra prices for the admirably encased cigars.

Cigars for the Soldiers in the Trenches

THE WAR-SAVINGS PLAN

The war-savings plan provided for in the last bond act, of September 24, 1917, has been formulated and announced by the Treasury Department and goes into operation on Monday, December 3.

The plan puts it easily in reach of every American citizen to save money and at the same time aid the Government by supplying it with the sinews of war.

Stamps, which are the Government's certificates of indebtedness, are to be sold in two denominations—thrift stamps, which cost 25 cents each, and war-savings stamps, which cost from $4.12 to $4.23 each, according to the month in which they are purchased.

With the first thrift stamp the purchaser is given a thrift card with spaces for 16 stamps. When 16 thrift stamps have been purchased and affixed the thrift card can be exchanged for a war-savings stamp by paying the difference between the $4 the thrift stamps represent and the current value of a war-savings stamp, which in December, 1917, and January, 1918, will be $4.12, and thereafter 1 cent for each succeeding month during the year 1918.

With the first war-savings stamp obtained by purchase or exchange the owner is given a war-savings certificate containing spaces for 20 war-savings stamps. If the 20 spaces are filled during December, 1917, or January, 1918, the cost to the purchaser will be $4.12 for each stamp, or $82.40 for the full certificate, and on the first day of January, 1923, the Government will redeem the certificate at $100, given the holder a net profit of $17.60 for the use of his money.

Although these investments do not mature until January 1, 1923, provision is made whereby upon 10 days' written notice after January 1, 1918, such certificates will be redeemed by postmasters at their cost to the purchasers plus 1 cent a month on each war-savings stamp on the certificate.

The thrift stamps do not bear interest, but the war-savings stamps bear 4 per cent., compounded quarterly. The certificates will be dated January 2, 1918, and mature January 1, 1923.

Under the plan an amount as small as 25 cents can be invested in a Government security, and as soon as $4 has been thus invested an interest-bearing certificate of the United States Government can be secured.

The stamps and certificates can be obtained from post offices, banks, or trust companies, at most railroad stations, stores, factories, and many other public places.

Having the entire wealth of the United States back of them, and being redeemable as above stated, there is no danger of any depreciation in value of the certificates.

NOT TAXABLE AS CIGARETTE TUBES

WASHINGTON, November 19.—A decision has been rendered by the Internal Revenue Bureau relative to cigarette tubes under the new revenue bill, as follows:

"Sec. 404. Closed-end tubes used in the preparation of catarrh and asthma remedies are not taxable as 'cigarette tubes!'"

To operate a tobacco warehouse, Ben S. Clarkson, C. W. Clarkson and Charles A. Speith have incorporated Ben S. Clarkson & Co. at Louisville, with a capital of $100,000.

ADVOCATING A FIFTEEN CENT COIN

Business wants a fifteen-cent piece.

War time prices, war taxes and the change-making convenience of the retail trade call for the fifteen-cent piece as "war money," according to the exponents of the idea.

It is argued by the business men behind the money that trade and buyers convenience indicate the need for a coin between the dime and twenty-five-cent piece and that their need is more urgent than ever since war revenue taxes have added odd cents to prices that were formerly standard.

Men prominent in big business are aligned behind the campaign for a fifteen-cent piece, Edward Wise, president of the United Cigar Stores Co., being one of the most enthusiastic supporters of the plan, with John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation; S. A. Perkins, of Tacoma, Wash., publisher of seven west coast newspapers; John G. Shedd, of Marshall Field & Co., Chicago; Robert Mandel, of Mandel Brothers, Chicago; and Thomas J. Connery, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Mr. Wise concedes the existence of widespread demand for a fifteen-cent piece, due in part to the rise in prices which has established a fifteen-cent standard for innumerable small articles of commerce.

For instance, in the cigar trade, the price of a cigar of high quality generally is fifteen cents or two for a quarter. The department stores handle a huge volume of fifteen-cent articles, the sale of which would be facilitated and probably heavily increased by addition of a convenient coin to the currency, while the motion picture people point out that fifteen cents is rapidly becoming the standard admission price.

"My opinion is that a fifteen-cent coin would be of great value to the trading public," said Mr. Wise in discussing the plan. "There is necessity for more convenient coinage of the smaller denominations in nearly every line of retail business. I shall promote the campaign for a fifteen-cent coin in every way that I can."

"The plan to coin a fifteen-cent piece," said President Freuler, of the Mutual Film Corporation, by whom the campaign was originally launched, "does not involve the abolition of any coin now in use, but the introduction of a new coin between the dime and the quarter in size. It would be a silver coin.

"The psychology of salesmanship recognizes as a handicap to trade the necessity for changing a quarter to pay a fifteen-cent bill, or for searching a handful of small change to extract the necessary nickel and dime.

"In many instances the prospective purchaser, unable promptly to lay hands on necessary change, passes on without making a contemplated purchase. This is more especially the case in department stores, where a customer's wait for change becomes an appreciable factor in the situation, but it is hardly less true of motion picture patronage or any other business in which the standard price of the commodity vended is fifteen cents.

"We once had a twenty-cent piece coinage of which was abolished because it too closely approximated the twenty-five-cent piece in value, and the objection to that coin was well taken, but no such condition can be urged where a fifteen-cent coin is concerned, because it is now generally conceded that there is too great a gap between the ten and twenty-five-cent pieces to satisfy the interests of the trading public.

"A purchaser likes to run his hand into his pocket and be able to find the coin he needs for his small purchase. There is no good reason why this demand should not be fulfilled."

John G. Shedd, head of Marshall Field Co., said:

"There is no doubt that the coinage of a fifteen-cent piece would go far to facilitate trade and I regard the movement for such an addition to the existing currency as well taken."

Robert Mandel, of Mandel Bros., declared:

"Addition of a fifteen-cent piece to the coinage would prove of value in all lines of business and it would especially facilitate trade in fifteen-cent standard articles of which there are many handled by the large stores. I am strongly in favor of the fifteen-cent piece idea."

S. A. Perkins of the Tacoma Ledger, says:—

"There is no question but that a coinage of a fifteen cent piece would be an excellent thing. I shall urge the matter upon members of Congress in the west."

Mr. Freuler is receiving many indorsements of the fifteen cent idea. An organization of the interests principally involved to bring the matter before Congress in proper form is soon to be undertaken.

The Waldorf-Astoria "Kit."

Made especially for the boys in camp and featured by the Waldorf-Astoria Segar Co., the Kit consists of 10 Boldts Specials of the deliciosos size. The box is khaki colored and sells for $1.00. The Kit has been placed in all the prominent New York clubs and at various training camps.

WISENHEIMER BUYS LITTLE CIGARS.

"Something new," said the cigar man, shoving the small box forward. "Got up for small parties. Just ten in the box—two and a half, or twenty-five straight."

"Look like they're worth about a cen apiece," said Mr. Wisenheimer. The cigar stor was one of the few places along his rout through life where Mr. Wisenheimer, of Wa street, felt that he could always air his superio knowledge—of anything and everything. An the cigar man had always seen fit to humo him. But he didn't like the way Mr. Wisen heimer sniffed at his new fangled cigar.

"Well, you can have one for a cent," he sai in bantering, yet respectful tone. "I wouldn argue with a good customer like you. But, wit the understanding that if you like it enough t take any more of them you are to pay tw cents for the second one and twice as muc each time, and you can stop whenever you like whether the box is emptied or not."

Mr. Wisenheimer handed over a cent and wen on his way with the new cigar at a high angle later in the day he entered the shop with friend, just to show what a conservationist h was in cigars—six cents, he paid. After lun cheon next day he swaggered in with tw friends. Eight, sixteen and thirty-two; or fifty six in all it was this time—and still he was fa ahead of the game. So far he had had a dolla and a half's worth of cigars for sixty-thre cents. Homeward bound that evening he ap peared with two more friends. Each took cigar from the little "special box."

"Oh, you might as well have the last on yourself, and clean up the box," said Mr. Wisen heimer to the cigar man, tossing over a fiv dollar bill with some ostentation.

"Thanks," said the cigar man. "I'll smoke i after dinner. First time I ever smoked a ciga costing more than $5. Four dollars and sixty cents more, please—it's $9.60 in all."

Mr. Wisenheimer started to say something but didn't. He handed out another five dolla bill, snatched his change and hurried away from there.—New York Herald.

A POPULAR POLICY

buy from the Government life insurance up to $10,000 at a rate of from 65 cents a month at age 21 to $1.20 a month at age of 51, for each $1,000 of insurance.

Since October 8 the Military and Naval Division of the Bureau of War-Risk Insurance has received 64,168 applications, representing insurance of $552,093,000.

The average amount of insurance applied for counting officers and men, is $8,603.

Applications are coming in at the rate of approximately four or five thousand a day—often close to six thousand. The amount of insurance applied for on a given day ranges from twenty to fifty million dollars.

These figures do not include applications from the American overseas forces, which are known to be substantial. The first formal applications from France are not expected to arrive here for several weeks.

Intensive efforts are being made at all National Guard and National Army camps, and among the naval forces, to explain the terms of the new War-Insurance law.

Col. R. C. Howland, 343d Infantry, Camp Grant, Illinois, in a letter received by the Department today, said that he was forwarding in two registered mail sacks 14,037 applications, totaling $9,515,500.

"This makes a total of insurance written by me in this division of $109,376,500," said Col. Howland. The figures given by Col. Howland have not been added to the official totals, because the applications are not yet to hand.

Al Pearson has sold his cigar business in the gore of the Fife Building, at California and Market streets, San Francisco, to W. Wallace, who conducted a cigar stand at Fourth and Stevenson streets for six years past.

Expressing a Desire for a Jinx Ejector

Chicago Cigar Men Continue to Complain—Sales Are Not So Good as They Should Be—Neither Manufacturers Nor Dealers Are Receiving Orders That Cause Them to Be Enthusiastic—The Gladness Associated with the Holiday Season Hasn't Materialized as Yet in the Tills of Retailers—Hopes and Prayers for Prosperity.

CHICAGO, November 17.—Somebody has put a "jinx" on the retail business. All you hear around town is "How quiet it is." The local cigar factories also are complaining, orders being very light. Some dealers say that the falling off of trade is due to the raise in retail prices, while others insist that dullness is only a phase of conditions now existing. Pipes have taken a big jump in sale. High-priced cigars move more slowly, and it looks as though cigars selling from 5 to 10 cents will have the call in the future. Many of the larger dealers state that since November 1 their "2 for 25 cent and up" cigars are falling away in sales. The fact that the holiday season approaches does not seem to cheer them up, and, while they have stocked up for the rush, they do not hesitate to say that they think things are going to be very slow. The store windows are all showing fancy packings, and a large line of humidors are carried in the larger stores.

The United Cigar Stores are featuring Palma de Cuba in the media perfecto shape that retails for 7 cents.

"San Felice Cigars 6 cents sold here." That's what the sign reads that is now hanging up in all the stores. "Quality makes the price."

The new A. H. Woods Theatre and office building at Randolph and Dearborn streets will be finished January 1. As usual, there will be a scramble for the cigar privileges. It will be one of the biggest buildings in Chicago, and is located on one of the best corners in the city.

Ed Wodiska "himself" has been making the rounds. Ed came up from Memphis after visiting Samuelson & Co., his jobbers. He says Dulce's are going big in the southern city.

The Harmon Cigar Co., for its three loop stores, has been running an ad in the Chicago Herald reminding the public that now is the time to send gifts to the boys at the various camps. Their San Alto brand is featured in the ad. President Harmon states that store No. 3, which opened November 1, is doing remarkably well under present conditions.

The Deisel-Wemmer Co., makers of the celebrated San Felice, are using the daily papers to advise the smoking public that San Felice cigars now sell for 6 cents.

Judge Hand has appointed a receiver for the All Package Grocery Stores Co., a concern with a capital of $25,000,000. They have several retail stores in Chicago. Headquarters of the company is in New York.

Al Korn was here. He has a fine bunch of "spinach" on his lip, and says it has to remain for 30 days yet, as he is paying off an election bet. The Furgatch line has a lot of friends in this old town. "Al" is going to spring some real news on the trade around January 1. Get it from him, when he returns to New York.

The new Southern Hotel, at the northwest corner of Michigan avenue and 13th street, has been sold to L. C. Pranz, who was steward of the Congress Hotel and Annex for the past three years.

Pancho Arango, made in bond, will henceforth be represented in the cases of S. O. Deutsch & Co., at Congress street and Wabash avenue. "Billy" Seidenberg closed the deal on his last visit here.

What kind of a place is that "Cafe-au-Lait" you have in New York? Ed Wodiska says "it's great" and informed us "that there is plenty of action there." Ed knows, for he has traveled a lot. Dulce is on the increase here, and the Havana Production Co. is going to work this field strong next year.

La Amita, "Havana 5-cent cigar of the highest type," made by Perfecto Garcia & Brothers, are being placed with the trade. They are packed in fancy decorated tins. La Amita seems bound to be a winner, as it is one of the finest smokers ever offered to the "jitney" buyer in Chicago.

"Our Irish carpenter," Albert Reagan, manager of the Clayton Cigar Co., at 22 North La Salle street, has been made chief of the "utility gang." What do you say, Al? When are you going to take that trip to the trenches "over there"?

Home Run cigarettes are now up to $4 per thousand. They are packed 20 to the package and retail for 10 cents.

Wm. Tobias, former cigar salesman and manufacturer of Chicago, is now connected with the Brown Candy Co., 60 West Kinzie street. William is working the city trade with a lot of success.

Clarence Rowland, manager of the World's Champion "White Sox," has entered vaudeville. "Pants" will be before the footlights for the next few months telling the natives how he put it over the New York "Giants."

Ben Lesser, of the Hvana Production Co., came in from Kansas City. He will remain here a short while, and will then travel eastward. Ben says the factory is oversold for this year.

The Chicago Retail Cigar Dealers' Association has received a charter from the Secretary of State. It was incorporated October 22, 1917, for social and mutual benefit and for the promotion of the best interests of the cigar dealers. The fees are $1. No other charges will be asked of its members for some time to come. Its membership already includes several hundred cigar dealers of the west and north side. H. Kanter is the chairman, Louis Drell the treasurer, and B. Rapport secretary. It will be an association of retailers exclusively, and it is hoped that much good will be brought about through its efforts.

Sidney Windmueller, of the salesforce of the Havana Products Co., is in town working Dulce brand through the jobbing house of L. C. Marks & Co. Sid will remain here for the balance of the year.

Charles W. Pardrige, president of the large department store of Hillman's, one of Chicago's best-known merchants, died here a few days ago.

The winners in the "Uncle Sam's Girl" contest of the Chicago Daily News were rewarded for their efforts in behalf of the Daily News tobacco fund. They were entertained at several theatres and supper parties and enjoyed their visit to Camp Grant at Rockford, where they reviewed some 30,000 soldier boys.

Listen to this: "Cigar store men haven't been losing because of the war tax," says a Federal agent of the internal revenue department in an interview with one of the daily papers. "They have been profiteering. Take cigarettes, for instance. The tax to the government is 40 cents a thousand more. The most they sell in a box is 20; therefore on 50 packages they owe the government 40 cents. They sell the old 10-cent cigarettes for 12 and 13 cents and the 15-cent packages for 18 cents, and if they collected only 1 cent on each of the 50 packages they'd have 10 cents more than is taxed by the government." It seems that the revenue man is not aware of the fact that, besides the increased tax, prices of cigarettes have advanced because of the raise in boxes, tobacco and labor.

Chicago's annual fat stock show will be held the week of December 1 at the International Amphitheater. The show is indorsed this year by the United States Government and will exceed those of any previous year in size.

"When we shall have ended this war right it will be a long time before anybody starts another war," says Bill Clayton, head of the Clayton Chain of Stores. Guess "Bill" has it down right.

A large and fine display of Garcia & Vega cigars appears in the windows of the Steuben County Wine Co. They are the distributors of this brand in the local field. Frank Lopez gives this account his personal attention, and Garcia & Vega cigars are on sale in a lot of places.

John Merriman was here recently on his last trip of the year. He said "Merry Christmas" before he left, and also left with a big bunch of orders. John has a lot of friends in this market.

No other than Tony Kleiner, that "dapper" chap of Lubensky Bros. & Kleiner, of Grand Rapids, Mich., was in our "Windy City." Tony does some big things here, and he is always glad to be among the Chicago trade.

"Billy" Waldmann, of Francisco Arango & Co., Tampa, returned from a hurry-up trip to Detroit. While there he "hooked" a big order from the Sweeny-Houston Co. on Pancho Arango clear Havana. The Toledo Club of Toledo also handed Bill a nice juicy order for the same brand. He has left again for a short trip and then he is through for the year, as his factory is oversold.

The Weiss-May Co., which recently went into the candy jobbing business, is meeting with great success. They are doing a big business with the army camps throughout the Middle West.

In Milwaukee they say "it is to laugh." The Wisconsin Anti-Saloon League adopted a resolution petitioning Governor Philipp to call upon "all drinkers that they consume one less glass of beer per day, and that one day each week be observed as 'beerless day.'"

Blackstone cigars, made in Boston by Waitt & Bond, Inc., are getting into many new places in the loop district. They are controlled here by the well-known jobbing house of Steel-Wedeles Co.

W. H. Wolfson, of the Pall Mall staff, has placed many of the Personal Cabinet packings with the trade. They contain 500 Pall Mall cigarettes and retail for $15.

Manuel Vega and C. Puente, local manufacturers, are in Havana buying tobacco. Both are expected home shortly.

The United store at Adams and Dearborn streets recently featured Omars in a big window display.

The Berhoff Cafe, on Adams street, has fallen in line and is collecting smokes for the "Sammies." Lots of cigarettes and tobaccos are seen in one of their windows.

The Postoffice Department has received 868,000,000 three-cent stamps in anticipation of the new postal rates that went into effect November 2. The stamp is truly American. "It sticks; it is not two-faced; it is on top; it goes anywhere and everywhere; you may lick it, but it'll always come right side up."

A DESIRABLE LOCATION.

Rice & Hill leased for the Zabriskie estate to the United Cigar Stores Co. the corner store at No. 140 William street, southeast corner of Fulton street, New York. The store has been held at a rental of $5,000 per annum. The new William street subway, which is expected to be running in a few months, will have an entrance at this corner.

THE STRATEGY OF PHILADELPHIA RETAILERS

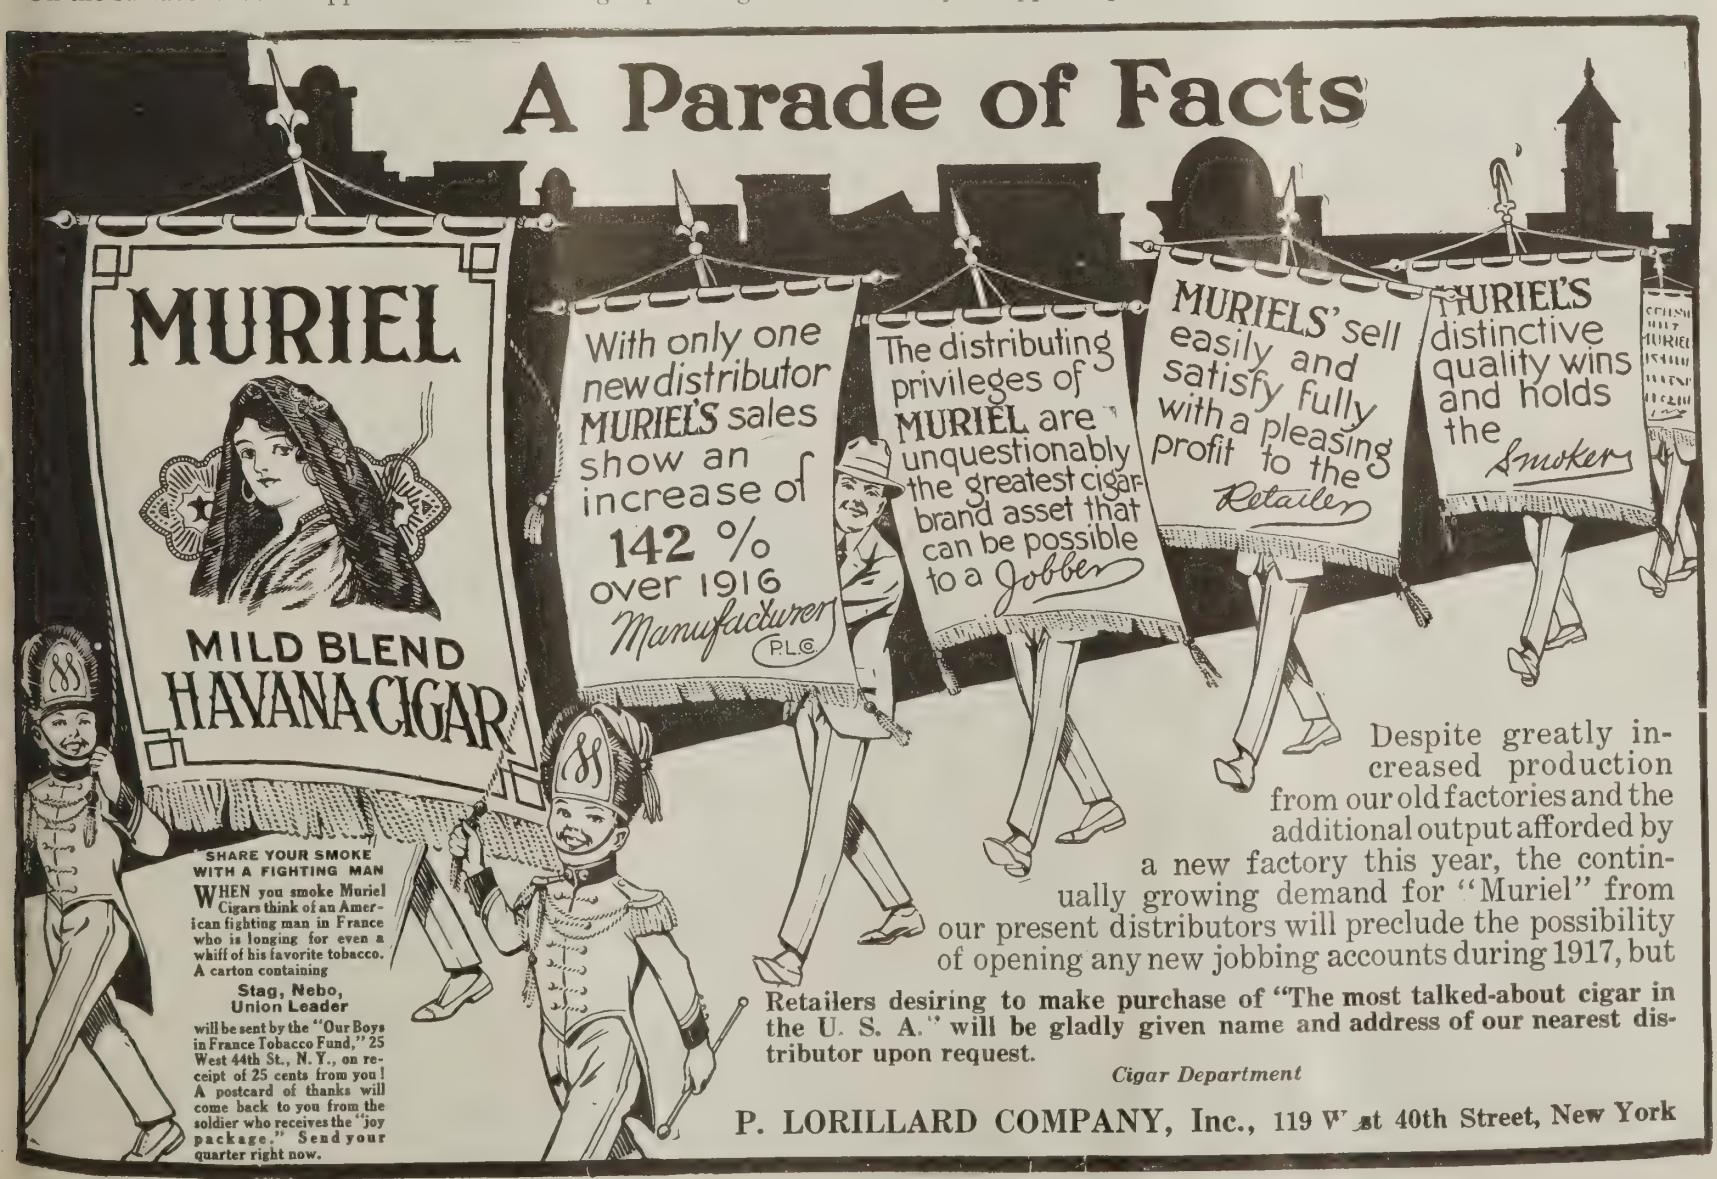
PHILADELPHIA, November 20.—The wisenheimers who have it all figured out that there ain't no such animal as a real association of retailers in the deah old Quaker City are in for the shock of their young lives. More than two hundred pledges to attend the second session for organization of the new Philadelphia association had been obtained up to the hour of going to bat with this justly celebrated correspondence, which was not long before the time of the meeting, but yet too late to delay any more and get in all the high lights.

Some intensive and extensive membership work has been done by the leaders of the new movement in the last week, with the active co-operation of the much abused middlemen. As a result, every retailer of the weed in Philadelphia has been receiving cute little advertisements of the association with every order of goods absolutely free of charge—the ads, not the goods. The indications are that from seventy-five to ninety per cent of the men who make a living—nay, smoker, not a fortune—out of the cigar and tobacco business will line up to boost the new movement.

From some absolutely confidential but highly authoritative sources of information, as the Washington correspondents say when there is no news breaking and modesty forces them to hide the light of their vivid imaginations under a bushel of bull; however, from sources which know whereof they or it speak or speaks, as the case may be, we have it that one of the first propositions to be laid before the association once it gets under full steam, will be substantially this: should manufacturers in this day and age go out of their way to boost the wages of employes?

On the surface it would appear to most employers of labor that there is only one answer to that question, and that it is in the emphatic negative, to put it mildly. But as a matter of fact there is another side. A situation has arisen in Philadelphia that makes it rather difficult for the manufacturer with orders to fill to avoid wage increases. Last week it was made known in this correspondence that nearly every big cigar plant in town had raised rates for its workers. The increase has been estimated at ten per cent, which is, roughly speaking, correct. So far it has been felt universally only on certain lines of work, but all the employers feel that despite the widely known backwardness of labor in asking for more money—(joke, see dictionary) sooner or later all other departments will get into the money bag.

The situation has been brought about by the invasion of this territory by manufacturers of cigars selling at ten cents and upward. Until a few years ago this element was negligible. But since the labor shortage started to become acute every big manufacturer has been scouring the country in search of good plant sites where there is a possibility of getting hired hands. As this city brags that it is the largest cigar making burg in the famous old world, it naturally follows that quite a few thousand cigar workers live here. And although the supply is so unequal to the demand that for a time last Spring manufacturers were paying premiums to workers who brought in others—until the workers got wise to the easy money and began to shift so rapidly that the employers likewise tumbled—outsiders thought the town looked good and came in.



One of the biggest of the new plants making high priced goods exclusively snapped up several hundred workers. Having a larger margin of profit than the five cent maker this was not difficult. But the big nickel cigar foundries are oversold in some instances to the tune of a sweet little million smokes or two, and they had to get the stuff out. So after the price went to $41 a thou, and in some instances to $43 a few weeks ago, one manufacturer got the jump on his competitors by increasing wages. Temporarily, anyhow, he solved his labor problem. As all the others have followed suit, it remains to be seen what will be the outcome.

For the first time in more than a year some of the smaller factories are finding things a bit dull in this region. The chances are that this situation, if it lasts a few weeks, will tend to restore the equilibrium of the business, as the little fellows in some instances will be able to get along with less workers and the big fellows can catch up on their oversales. Most of the Christmas buying for the soldiers in France is about finished, and the unsettled condition of the market due to the application of the tax, has been responsible for the lull, which is not at all serious.

Sig. C. Mayer is at Atlantic City.

Wayne Vetterlein, the youngest of the firm of Vetterlein Brothers, who went "over there" to do ambulance work a couple of years ago, got back home last week with another Philadelphia boy, one of his pals at the front—Price McQuillen. The latter lost a leg on the French front in the explosion of a big shell that killed four others and wounded Vetterlein in seven places. Mr. Vetterlein is now convalescing, but is far from fully recovered. He lost a great deal of blood and suffered severely. One leg may be permanently injured. In spite of this he is in high spirits.

Philadelphia retailers and manufacturers are showing the inroads made on their help by the service flags being hung out.

When Perkins Works for the Y. M. C. A.

Even the "Tight Wads" Are Expected to Contribute—A Big Cigar Man Shows What Can Be Done in Boston—A "Hunch" Concerning the Holidays—Approach of Thanksgiving Causes New England Dealers to Be Thankful That Things Are Not Worse.

BOSTON, November 19.—It is an old saying, and quite true, "If you want a thing done, and done right, ask a busy man." Charles B. Perkins, of Charles B. Perkins Co., was invited by the Y. M. C. A. to serve as chairman of the Tobacco Trade Committee to solicit subscriptions in the drive to raise $35,000,000. Accepting the honor, Chairman Perkins appointed the following committee: Marus Conlon, of Waitt & Bond, Inc.; James Logan, of J. P. Manning Co.; Maurice Hanauer, of Bieringer Hanauer Co.; H. S. Rowley, of S. S. Pierce Co.; Arthur Blacey, of the Bromfield St. Store of C. B. Perkins; R. B. Pearson, of the United Cigar Stores Co.; Reed Estabrook, of Estabrook & Eaton; Louis Hyneman, of Hyneman Bros. and Charles T. Ellis. This done Perkins set to work, devoting much time and effort to securing subscriptions. He called personally on practically every one in the trade from Roxbury Crossing to the North Station. He persuaded many to subscribe generously. The employees of the United Cigar Stores Co., Union News Co., C. B. Perkins Co. and others came up with their "bit." Chairman Perkins made a clean canvass and did not miss an opportunity to obtain a contribution. The retail trade here has "Kiteritas"; each store is showing one or more varieties of packings that will meet any pocketbook. Land office business is being done; quite a few box sales occur. But for remembrances to be sent to soldier boys cigars are not selected so often as cigarettes or smoking tobacco.

It is feast or famine with the jobbers. Either they are all out of different brands of cigarettes and tobacco, or they are stocked to the roof by the arrival simultaneously of several shipments long on the road. You can hear the jobbers talking over the 'phone: "I'll let you have some Meccas if you will let me have some Perfections, B. L. for Old Honesty; Prince Albert for Lucky Strikes." Jobbers' teams are kept busy on exchanges.

Jobbers say they are busy, and the retailers are stocking up heavily, yet they are pessimistic regarding holiday business. They all seem to have a hunch that the holiday trade is going to be quiet. I don't know where this epidemic started, but the most of them seem to be afflicted.

That there is a shortage of little cigars is surely attested by the ad in last week's TOBACCO, of the United Cigar Stores Co., inviting all manufacturers to submit samples. Retailers here have been out of many of the popular short smokes for some time. This ad got them all stirred up. And they tried to buy about anything that was shown in small smokes.

Archie Burrage, who for the past eleven years had charge of the bookkeeping department of the Boston office of the United States Tobacco Co., and previously for twelve years was with Stephen Tilton Co., resigned this week to accept a position with the Bates St. Shirt Co., of Lewiston, Me.

The H. T. Dean Co. was mentioned in last week's letter as being located in Holyoke, Mass.; in fact, their place of business is Everett, Mass.

Rules That Tobacco Stemmeries Must Observe

Relative to the Federal Child Labor Law

WASHINGTON, November 19.—Several interesting decisions have just been handed down in connection with the enforcement of the Child Labor Act. Julia C. Lathrop, chief of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, has the following to say in connection with packing tobacco:

"In your letter of recent date you ask whether tobacco stemmeries come within the meaning of the United States Child Labor Act.

"In the opinion of this Bureau any place in which the work of stemming, drying, or packing tobacco is carried on as a business, is a workshop within the meaning of the United States Child Labor Act. The standards laid down in Section I of the Act must, therefore, be observed in such stemmeries if the products are to be shipped in interstate or foreign commerce."

In connection with the bottling of soft drinks, a ruling just made is as follows:

"In your letter of recent date you ask whether a bottling plant comes within the provisions of the United States Child Labor Act.

"In the opinion of this Bureau, an establishment which is used for bottling carbonated beverages and so-called soft drinks including artificial mineral waters is a workshop, factory or manufacturing establishment within the meaning of the United States Child Labor Law. The standards laid down in Section I of the Act must therefore be observed in bottling establishments if the products are to be shipped in interstate or foreign commerce."

The following general opinion on the subject has also just been made:

Reference is made to your letter of recent date asking whether in computing the maximum hours of labor under the United States Child Labor Act a child may be employed or permitted to work more than eight hours in any one day, provided that the total number of hours of employment per week does not exceed forty-eight, or provided the employment is in connection with co-operative part-time educational courses in the public schools.

Section 1 of the United States Child Labor Act contains the phrase "have been employed or permitted to work more than eight hours in any day," which in effect, limits and restricts the period of employment to eight hours in any one day. The purpose of the Federal Child Labor Law is well known. The accomplishment of this large purpose should not be made to turn upon the argument that these same ends can be as well, if not better, attained by other methods. This Bureau is of the opinion that the phrase "more than eight hours in any day" limits the period of employment of a child of the ages designated in the Act to eight hours in any one day.

To sustain an interpretation of the Act by which a child may be permitted to work more than eight hours in one day, if he works less than eight hours in some other day, it would be necessary to construe the phrase "more than eight hours in any day" so as to make it, not a standard in and of itself, but merely a factor in some larger period of time. This would require that the words "on the average" be read into the Act. For this there is no authority.

Congress has chosen in this legislation to take the eight-hour day as a standard, and has provided no other. Whether other methods of employment would be more favorable to the child's physical or moral well-being than a strict eight-hour schedule is for Congress to decide. This Bureau cannot authorize or approve any other standard.

POTASH IN TOBACCO ASHES.

Says the Weekly Bulletin of the U. S. Food Administration: "If a practicable plan for saving and collecting cigar and tobacco ashes can be devised it is possible to reclaim thousands of tons of potash for fertilizer and other use. Tobacco is an oddity among plants in that fully 20 to 30 per cent. of its fiber is mineral substance, rich in potash. Its ashes contain 20 per cent. of potash and 5 per cent. of phosphorus, both valuable plant foods. An English expert figures that 45,000 tons of tobacco consumed yearly in that country yield 13,000 tons of ashes containing 2,700 tons of potash. In this country the total is much greater, being estimated at 100,000 tons of ashes containing 22,000 tons of potash and 5,000 tons of phosphorus, valued at $50,000,000. To devise a practical reclamation scheme is the chief problem. It has been suggested that we make a beginning by collecting cigar and tobacco ashes from hotel and club smoking rooms."

CHRISTMAS is coming, and it will be different from any Christmas in the history of the country; so many of our young men will either be fighting for our country or in training for the fight. There never was a time when cigarettes were in such demand.

The boys will be away from home, and what could be more welcome than cigarettes in his box from home? It must be the wish of every one who has some one dear to them in a camp in this country that on that day of all days he have every pleasure and comfort.

With this in mind, we have this year specially prepared packings of PALL MALL, LUCKY STRIKE, OMAR and LORD SALISBURY, as illustrated. They are attractive, practical and economical.

Your jobber will ship these Christmas packings as a part of your regular stock order. Display them—push them. They will be the biggest sellers in Christmas Cigarette Packings this year.

THE PALL MALL Magnum contains 100 plain and 100 cork tip. It is an irresistible gift purchase. Its rich, luxurious color scheme of red and gold, combined with the holiday dress, makes it a package of great appeal. No extra charge for this packing.

THE PALL MALL Library packing contains 100 cigarettes, either plain or cork tip. It is identical with the Magnum, except the size. It is going to be one of the biggest selling Christmas brands this year. Thousands of people who have 'their boys' or friends in the training camps know that the best is none too good to send their fighting lads of whom they are so proud.

OMAR. This Christmas box of OMAR contains 12 packages of 16s. Each package of 16 cigarettes sells to the customer for 15c., or $1.80 per Christmas box of 12 packages, as illustrated here. Activity Notably Increased in Cincinnati

Cigar Dealers Generally Report Good Business—Box Sales Reached a High Point —Appeal Heard in the "Penslar" Case—Limited Transactions in Burley Tobacco—Retail Druggists and Grocers Invited to Co-operate with Cigar Dealers.

CINCINNATI, November 19.—Business with the local retail cigarists is quite satisfactory and all indications point to a continuation of the active demand during the remainder of the year. There are many reasons assigned for the present spirited trade in retail circles but the outstanding one is the continued large shipment of cigars, cigarettes and smokers' articles to the numerous military camps throughout the country. In all, more than 5,000 Cincinnati youths are now in the service of the United States and with their families and friends regularly sending them quantities of smokes, it is quite natural the sale of these goods is going to grow, or at least continue even with the present big demand.

Between November 10 and 15, the dates the United States post office officials designated for shipment of Christmas gifts to soldiers now in France, box sales of cigars and cigarettes (in 100's and 200's) reached a high point. On Saturday of last week, and Monday all day, business was also very brisk and much of this extra trade was brought on by the soldier element—little Thanksgiving remembrances from those at home.

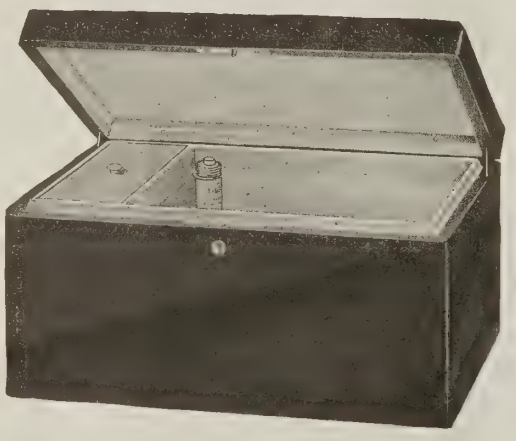
Holiday goods are beginning to arrive in large quantities and retail dealers, in some instances, are now making displays of these goods, urging early selection of Christmas goods. Many advance orders by large factories and other business institutions have already been booked by the jobbing and retail dealers and more and more of this very desirable trade is being sought for each day.

Many of the large Cincinnati concerns still hold to the custom of sending their customers a box of cigars for Christmas and some of the larger orders of this kind run up into the hundreds of boxes.

Cigar manufacturers here report business as being highly satisfactory and the only thing that is worrying them to any extent is the shortage of desirable labor. In some plants operations are being conducted with less than half the hands necessary to keep up with orders and according to leading tradesmen, it is going to be quite a task to fill all orders booked for delivery before December 15. Of course, the manufacturers are making every possible effort to take care of their customers in time for the big holiday business, but it is quite possible some of the late buyers are going to be disappointed.

Jobbing trade continues at the high point and everywhere the same story of brisk business is told by those in charge. The advancing prices on many brands of cigars and cigarettes has not affected sales in the least and, if anything, business with the jobbers today is better than it was six weeks ago.

Inactivity continues to prevail among Cincinnati leaf tobacco warehouses and the extent of the transactions in the local burley market the past week was limited to the receipt of three hogsheads at the Globe Warehouse. With the warehouse floors practically cleared of old crop stock, no sales of tobacco are anticipated until the new 1917 leaf is ready for sale and begins to move from the country districts, where it is now curing. Conditions confronting warehousemen at the present time are almost unprecedented, but a spirit of optimism pervades the ranks of the entire leaf tobacco trade of the city, and it is believed that a beneficial reaction will ultimately result.



Representative buyers in Cincinnati who have been through the growing sections of Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana and West Virginia, verify the reports which have come to hand concerning the new crop. There seems to be some difference of opinion about the size of the crop, but not much in regard to the quality or the high prices or the high prices which the 1917 planting is certain to bring in the open market.

At the last meeting of the Cincinnati Cigar and Tobacco Association, it was decided to invite officers of the Retail Druggists' and Grocers' Associations to the next regular session of the organization, November 23, at which time a campaign will be inaugurated for new members. It is the plan of the officers of the cigar and tobacco association to extend its membership so as to embrace independent retail druggists and grocers so as to present a more solid front to the chain cigar, drug and grocery stores which are alleged to be continually cutting prices. Many downtown retail druggists already expressed a desire to become affiliated with the retail cigar merchants' association, and it is freely predicted by the officers that many names will be added to the membership list when the body convenes next Friday night.

A statement was made at the last meeting of the body that the cigar and tobacco dealers and jobbers of Cincinnati are more liberal toward consumers in the way of prices and package sizes than those in any other city of the country.

Trade Between the United States and South America

Trade between the United States and South America is three times as great as in the year before the war. A compilation by The National City Bank of New York shows that the total United States exports to South America in the eight months ending with August (the latest month for which figures are available) aggregated $188,000,000 against $65,000,000 in the same months of 1914, and the imports from South America were $433,000,000 against $157,000,000 in the same months of 1914. Thus the total trade with that continent in the eight months of 1917 was $620,000,000 against $222,000,000 in the corresponding months of 1914.

To Argentina, Chile and Peru the exports have more than trebled; and to Uruguay quadrupled, while to Brazil, Colombia, Ecuador and Venezuela the exports are nearly three times as great as in 1914. To Argentina the total for the eight months ending with August, 1917, is $62,256,000, against $19,649,000 in the same months of 1914; to Brazil $40,157,000, against $15,973,000; to Chile $32,971,000, against $10,800,000, in the corresponding months of 1914.

Imports from each of the South American countries show large increases, but especially those from Argentina, Uruguay, Chile and Peru. From Argentina the imports of the eight months of the current year are $133,369,000 against $40,752,000 in the same months of 1914; from Chile $96,626,000 against $15,954,000; from Uruguay $28,389,000 against $8,522,000; and from Brazil $106,335,000 against $62,633,000 in the corresponding months of 1914.

This increase continues down to the very latest moment for which figures available, the August, 1917, exports to all South America having been $24,888,000, against $5,312,000 in August, 1914, and the imports from that continent in August of the current year $49,336,000, against $15,096,000 in August of 1914.

The share which the United States is now supplying of the trade of South America is very much greater than before the war. The bank's compilation shows that merchandise from the United States formed about 30 per cent. of the imports of all South America in 1916, while in 1913 we supplied but 15 per cent. of the total imports of that continent. The United States took in the calendar year 1916 approximately 30 per cent. of the exports of South America, and in 1913 but 17 per cent.

The principal articles in which the growth occurs are on the import side, wool, hides, copper, nitrate, India rubber, quebracho, coffee, cacao. Of wool, our imports from all South America in the eight months ending with August, 1917, amounted to $98,000,000 value, against only $11,000,000 in the same months of 1914; hides $64,000,000 in 1917, against $21,000,000 in the same months of 1914; copper $56,000,000, against $9,000,000 in the corresponding months of 1914; quebracho $6,000,000, against $2,500,000, and nitrate $36,000,000, against $11,000,000 in the corresponding months of 1914. In fresh meats the imports from South America have fallen off very greatly from approximately 7 million dollars in the eight months ending with August, 1917, even at the greatly increased prices.

Manufactures form over 90 per cent. of our exports to South America and in practically all of these the increase is strongly marked. Of cotton cloths, for example, the exports to all South America in the eight months of 191 amounted to about 6 million dollars in valu against about 2 million dollars in the corr sponding months of 1914; automobiles approx mately 4 million dollars, against about 1 mi lion dollars in the same months of 1914; co 4 million dollars, against about 1 million dolla in the corresponding months of 1914; tinpla approximately 5 million dollars, against le than one-half million dollars in the sam months of 1914; refined sugar a little over te million dollars, against approximately on half million dollars' worth in the correspon ing months of 1914, while iron and steel ma ufactures of all classes show large increases.

Lewis Nathanson, of Minneapolis, presider of the Northwestern Cigar and Tobacco Dea ers' Association, and Walter Short, presider of the Minneapolis Retail Cigar and Tobac Dealers' Association, spoke at a meeting of th newly organized St. Paul Retail Cigar an Tobacco Dealers' organization, at the St. Pa Association, Wednesday evening a week ag Mr. Nathanson talked on co-operation betwee the manufacturers, jobbers, retailers and cor sumers, while Mr. Short spoke on organiz tion. More than eighty attended the meetin Committees were named to arrange for booster meeting, November 28.

Speculators at Carlisle, Ky., are bidding hig for the present tobacco crop. The high lev was reached in Nicholas county when offer of $30 a hundred pounds for some of the be crops were refused. A farmer on the Lickin River reports that he refused a naverage o $30. Offers of $25 are numerous and a num ber of crops have been sold from $20 to $25.

ALL BUSY STEMMING

Wisconsin Tobacco Men Taking Full Advantage of Beautiful Weather—Growers Assuming Long Chances.

EDGERTON, Wis., November 16.—November thus far has proven so mild and pleasant as to work a great improvement in the curing of the tobacco, and were the fogs less frequent and the temperature a few degrees warmer the curing would be still further advanced. Every warm day, however, helps. Much of the crop is still a long way from stripping condition, and it is quite possible that the bulk of it ought to hang in the sheds until the early spring months, at which time it is thought most of the fat stems will be dried out. Growers will be assuming long chances if the heavy stems are not kept separate and delivered in bundles by themselves.

There is little news concerning old leaf in the local markets these days. Stemming is the only industry, furnishing employment about the warehouses, and there is more of this work being carried on in the State this season than ever before.

The shipments out of storage reach 300 cs. and 4 cars of bundles from this market to all points since last report.

The P. Lorillard Company has over 1,000 people engaged in stemming tobacco at their various plants in the State.

J. A. Jenson left Sunday evening for Dayton, Ohio, where he is arranging for putting up a packing of Ohio leaf this season.

Murphy & Holman, of the St. Paul cigar manufacturing firm of Hart & Murphy, were in this market for a short time the latter part of the week. Mr. Murphy departed for New York after completing his business here.

The carpenters are putting the finishing touches to the John Soulman warehouse at Orfordville, and all will be finished before the week is up. The Soulmans have made a splendid improvement in that village and assured the permanency of tobacco operations in that section for years to come. There never was a time in the history of tobacco growing in the State when the outlook was brighter for paying crops. The increased demands of the world and the shortage of good stock make certain good prices for several years.—Edgerton Reporter.

FOR BRIGHT TOBACCO

New Methods Employed in Piedmont—Advantages Secured by the Latest Process.

An Associated Press report from Winston-Salem, N. C., says: "A complete revolution in the method of handling leaf tobacco from the time it is gathered from the field until it is ready for the market has been made recently in Piedmont, N. C., one of the largest tobacco growing sections, to meet the increasing demand for bright tobacco used in the manufacture of cigarettes. The new method saves labor, time, and fuel.

"For many years the growers in this district have bent their energies toward raising heavy tobacco regardless of the quality, since practically all of that grown was used in the manufacture of chewing tobacco. They would allow it to mature in the field and when it began to turn yellow would commence gathering it, cutting the whole stock and stripping the leaves after curing by heat.

"Under the new method the leaves are stripped from the stalk according to the degree of ripeness. The tobacco is 'topped' in the field so each stalk will have an average of about twelve leaves, so the process of stripping requires about four trips over the field, at intervals of three or four days, allowing the leaves to mature regularly and evenly.

The new process has several points of advantage, the first and main one being that the leaf is allowed to cure evenly and bright. The stripping process, which permits of speedier handling, has resulted in a much shorter marketing time.

"The average amount sold each year on the Winston-Salem market in recent years has been about twenty-five million pounds, though the unusually short crop of 1916 amounted to only about seventeen million pounds. Last year the crop sold for an average of about eighteen cents a pound, the largest in the history of the market. This year with more than half the crop sold, the average price paid for it to November 1 was more than thirty-two cents a pound."

"WHITHER ARE WE DRIFTING?"

Say San Francisco Cigar Dealers

San Francisco, November 14.—Some of the jobbers take a gloomy view of the cigar situation in this city. With the readjustment of prices they claim that the retailer is not getting a square deal in all cases and that a lack of profit will cause many cigarists to go out of business. The more pessimistic believe that business, both retail and wholesale, will suffer contraction which will result in the concentration of trade in a comparatively few hands. It is possible that a great deal of the jobbing may be taken over by wholesale grocers who can place the cigars with less overhead charge than the present jobbers. They assert that the 6-cent cigar is not proving a success and that many brands are making enemies by being the pioneer in this increase in price. This point of view is not general, however. As a whole the consuming public is accepting the increased charges with good grace, and the dealers are getting closer to a working agreement. A meeting of the Retail Cigar Dealers' Association will be held the latter part of this week, and if a complete agreement is not reached it is believed that progress towards that end will be made. Throughout the State there has been a general increase in prices, and dealers are explaining to their customers that with the increased cost of labor, tobacco, taxes, boxes, labels and bands, the slight increase in retail price has been made necessary. Cigar smokers in the smaller communities see the force of the argument and the only reason that it is not equally successful here is that so many dealers are not advancing the price of their goods, but are trying to do business on a smaller margin of profit. The leaders in the trade believe that these men will either see the light in the very near future or that they will be forced to do so by thir failure to make a living. The jobbers and manufacturers have already reached a business basis and there is no reason why the retailers may not be expected to arrive at a similar understanding. When all 5-cent cigars go to 6 cents retail throughout the city, and other grades are placed on an equitable basis then the situation will have entirely cleared up.

It is announced that the Rocky Ford is to go to $3 on December 1, and the Bachelor went to $43 on November 10. It is also reported that the "44" will advance from $37.50 to $44 in the near future. Blaskower & Co. is agent for the first and Glasser Bros., agents for the two latter.

Holiday packages are making their appearance and meeting with ready sale. London Lifes, Murad and Deity are all put up in attractive packages for the Christmas trade. The Marquise cigarette is being put up in jars, and the Philadelphia Hand Made cigar is now being sold in 50 to the tin. The Philip Morris also appears in a pleasing package specially designed for the holiday trade.

The United Cigar Stores is raising the price of Camels to 13 cents, or 2 for 25 cents, effective November 16.

E. Golinsky & Co., manufacturers of El Primo Havana Cigars, report that the demand for their cigars, especially in the El Primo brand, is so brisk that they have difficulty in keeping up with it. They have drawn on their reserve stock to such an extent that they are now putting out the cigar fresh from the maker's hand.

I. Danziger, coast representative of the Manila Commercial Co., reports that business is very good with him and that the demand for Manila cigars seems to be on the increase in this market.

Harry Sklute has been added to the sales force of H. L. Judell & Co. He will make the Mission and peninsular territory. Mr. Sklute was formerly with Klauber & Waggenheim of Los Angeles.

Gus Dahlgren, who formerly conducted a cigar store at the corner of Haight and Fillmore streets, this city, has disappeared and his business has been taken charge of by Glaser Bros. It is believed that he was suffering from the unsatisfactory financial condition of his business, although no official statement to that effect has been made.

M. A. Gunst, of the Gunst Cigar Co., has been honored in an unusual manner by the management of the St. Francis hotel, one of the largest and most fashionable hostelries of San Francisco. In a new lobby of the hotel a large, beautifully upholstered chair was placed in a conspicuous position facing the desk and on it was placed the legend:

"This place is reserved for M. A. Gunst."

Mr. Gunst has been a "landmark" at the St. Francis ever since it was built and is a great friend of the manager. It is believed that the reservation of a special chair for an individual in the public lobby of a hotel is unique in America.

Arthur Meyers, Pacific coast representative for the Humboldt cigar is in Los Angeles looking after business. He intends to go as far as Salt Lake City before returning to San Francisco.

John Glenn, representing the Roi-tan cigar, and I. I. Hess, who booms the Optimo, have just returned from a business trip in the southern part of the State.

News has just reached here that Mark Healey, formerly a cigar maker at Auburn, Cal., has just been killed in action in France. He enlisted in a Canadian regiment about a year ago. Healey leaves a wife living in Auburn.

Side Lights on Tobacco Manufacturing

As Shown in the Census Reports

WASHINGTON, November 19.—The report of the Bureau of Census covering the manufacturing industries of Illinois as of the fiscal year for 1914 showed remarkable progress and development in all lines of industry. Measured by the value of its manufactures, Illinois ranked third among the States of the Union in 1914, with a total value of $2,247,322,819; its factories gave employment to an average of 506,943 wage earners which made it rank fifth among the States in this respect. In that year reports were taken covering 18,388 manufacturing establishments. How much this has been increased during the past three years will be difficult to estimate.

There are 1,622 tobacco manufacturing plants in the State of Illinois furnishing employment to 7,653 persons with a total output of $26,036,729, an increase of 19.1 per cent. over the output of 1909. Of the total value of products, $15,982,887 was added by processes of manufacture.

The number of employes, 7,653, was made up 67.7 per cent. of men 16 years of age and over, 30 per cent. of women 16 years of age and over, and 2.4 per cent of children under 16 years of age. The highest number of persons employed in this industry in any one month in that year was 7,796, in October. The lowest number was 7,532 in April. Of the 7,653 persons employed, 4,400 were employed in factories or establishments working only 48 hours or less per week; 923 worked between 48 and 54 hours a week; 389 worked 54 hours a week; 1,094 worked between 54 and 60 hours; 843 worked 60 hours and 4 people worked from 60 to 72 hours per week.

As an example of the way in which manufacturing interests are centralizing in large cities, attention is called to the fact that the value of tobacco manufacturing output in Chicago in 1909 was $4,827,492 or 29 per cent. of the entire industry; in 1914, however, the value of tobacco manufactures in the same city was $21,460,007 or 82.4 per cent. of the entire tobacco manufacture of the State. On the other hand the tendency to combine is evidenced by the fact that whereas in 1909 there were 1,102 tobacco manufacturing plants in Chicago, in 1914 the number had been reduced to 910, this was accompanied by a reduction in the number of proprietors and firm members from 1,166 to 961. The number of persons engaged in the industry, as a whole, increased from 6,936 to 7,152; the salaried employes increased from 427 to 747. The extent to which the business increased is further indicated by the fact that the primary horsepower increase was from 783 to 1,071. The capital invested in the industry in Chicago showed a slight reduction from $10,451,273 in 1909 to $9,946,487 in 1914. Salaries increased from $716,830 to $1,066,876; wages paid to workers increased from $2,864,769 to $3,321,340; cost of materials from $6,827,850 to $8,488,992, and the value of the products from $16,919,417 to $21,834,368.

Of the tobacco factories located in Chicago in 1914, two furnished employment to 1,675 people; one gave employment to 336 people; four gave employment to 599 people; ten, with an average of 51 to 100 gave employment to 715; 28 working an average from 21 to 50 people employed a total of 815 persons; in 188 factories running an average of from 6 to 20 wage earners a total of 1,794 people were employed, and in 832 factories employing from 1 to 5 people each the total was 1,719 persons. Out of the total number of 1,622 tobacco factories, 557 were located in the city of Chicago.

The number of cigar box manufacturers in the State remained stationery at 18 giving employment in 1914 to 390 persons with an expenditure of $165,000 for wages and of $298,000 for materials, and with a value of output of $672,000. Of these establishments, 9 were located in the city of Chicago, furnishing employment to 320 people at an expenditure of $141,000 for wages, $251,000 for materials and with an output valued at $577,000.

St. Louis reports for 1914 show 8 cigar manufacturing plants as compared with 12 in 1909. The average number of wage earners increased from 11 to 17; wages from $9,000 to $11,000. The cost of materials fell from $12,000 to $11,000, and the value of the product from $40,000 to $29,000. Peoria shows a reduction in the number of cigar manufacturers from 36 to 32; in the number of wage earners from 308 to 264; in the amount paid out for wages from $204,000 to $172,000; in the cost of materials from $240,000 to $192,000, and in the value of products from $647,000 to $512,000.

In Springfield the number of cigar manufacturing plants was 31 as against 30 in 1909; the number of wage earners 120; the amount expended for wages $65,000 as against $61,000 in 1909; the cost of materials were $67,000 and the value of the output $190,000 as against $206,000 in 1909.

In the State of Illinois there were, in 1914, 44 chewing, smoking and snuff tobacco manufacturers; these furnished employment to 1,721 persons, of whom 43 were proprietors, 24 were salaried officials and superintendents, 394 were male clerks, 64 female clerks. There were 1,196 wage earners. The capital invested was $5,885,510; the cost of materials was $4,947,569 and the value of the product $12,716,651; the total horsepower was 1,000, out of which 656 horsepower was electric. The number of cigar and cigarette factories was 1,578; the average number of persons employed was 6,457; the amount of capital invested, $6,136,000; the amount expended for materials was $5,045,396; for wages $3,924,031. The total value of the output was $13,320,078. TENNILLE.

The Patriotic Service League, 2741 Broadway, New York, displays a "Thankgiving Kit" for Uncle Sam's fighters. A pipe, a package of tobacco and two packages of pipe cleaners, are contained in the kit. Among other things are buttons, thread, playing cards and other useful articles for soldiers. The kit sells for $5 and unlike other kits, a metal safety box is used.

The Wellington is made of genuine French Briar, seasoned by our own special process. It breaks-in sweet and mellow. The bowl is guaranteed against cracking or burning through. The "well" catches the moisture as well as all stray crumbs of tobacco. Any tobacco tastes better in a Wellington.

W. D. C. Advertising Campaign 1917-1918

W. D. C. advertisements are now appearing in "The Saturday Evening Post," "Literary Digest," "Collier's Weekly," Railroad Men's Magazine," "Country Gentleman," "Hoard's Dairyman," "Breeder's Gazette," "Army and Navy Journal," and in many college publications.

The campaign will run for nine whole months. Generous space is being used in all mediums—all half pages and quarter pages. More than four million people will read these W. D. C. advertisements in the magazines alone.

Another big Wellington advertising campaign is now running in the Canadian newspapers.

The pipes of all nations are introduced and illustrated in the magazine advertisements—the Peace Pipe of the Indian—the Hooka of the Turk—the old Church Warden of the pioneers—the Whalebone of the Esquimaux, etc.

Watch for these W.D.C. Wellington advertisements in the magazines—cut them out and paste them in your windows.

Go over your stock and see that you have a full line of W. D. C. pipes—feature the Wellington in your counter displays—cash in on this big country-covering W. D. C. advertising campaign.

Don't let another season go by without carrying a full line of W. D. C. pipes—the Wellington in particular. Tie up with the largest pipe manufacturer in America and your pipe business will grow in a way you never thought possible.

Gladly will we send you further information on request.

Record Prices for Remedios Capaduras

He Has a Long Full Purse Who Can Buy Much Tobacco in Havana Now—Leaf Dealers Continue to Talk of Advancing Prices—Cuban Land and Leaf Tobacco Co. Invests Heavily in Vuelta Abajo—Romeo y Julieta Delivers 850,000 Cigars in One Week—All the Factories Very Busy.

HAVANA, November 16.—Remedios tobacco has reached a new record price, for first and second capaduras. The highest figures for first and second capaduras have been $80 and $70 per qq. in the country, and $82 and $72, respectively, in Havana, although now the asking prices are $85 and $75—for escogidas. Vegas of the farmers may be secured yet at slightly lower figures, but the stocks for sale are rapidly diminishing.

As there is still a good supply of Vuelta Abajo, in factory vega styles, prices are firmly maintained, but not quotably higher. Colas are in demand, but buyers are trying not to raise prices by too active competition, which also holds true concerning the loose leaves of Remedios. Partido resagos remain in fair supply, but are little inquired for, while fillers command good figures.

Planting is now under way, restricted in some places by a scarcity of seedlings, but if the weather conditions are favorable, we may count upon a larger and better crop in 1918. The high prices undoubtedly are a strong incentive to tobacco growers in Santa Clara province. It is claimed that a scarcity of hands in the Vuelto Abajo may prove an obstacle to raising a larger crop in that region, the coming year.

Sales during the past two weeks totaled 18,591 bales, divided into: Vuelta Abajo and Semi Vuelta, 6,983; Partido, 2,130, and Remedios, 9,478 bales..

Buyers were: Americans, 11,548; exporters to Europe, 50; shippers to South America, 1,348, and local manufacturers of cigars and cigarettes, 5,645 bales.

RECEIPTS OF LEAF TOBACCO FROM THE COUNTRY

For two weeks ending Nov. 8, 1917:

	Bales.
Vuelta Abajo	16,794
Semi Vuelta	1,744
Partido	827
Remedios	7,376
Oriente	....
Total	26,741

Since January 1, 1917:

	Bales.
Vuelta Abajo	170,134
Semi Vuelta	10,917
Partido	31,861
Remedios	125,563
Oriente	4
Total	338,479

Exports of cigars, per steamship Morro Castle, totaled 513 cases, containing 2,191,865 cigars, which were consigned to the following countries, viz.: To the United States, 1,135,420; Great Britain, 892,195; Uruguay, 64,500; Canada, 45,000; British Africa, 23,000; Australia, 20,000; Gibraltar, 10,750 and China, 1,000 cigars.

Exports of leaf tobacco from Havana during the last two weeks totaled 6384 bales, which were distributed to the following countries, viz.: To all ports of the United States, 4,333; to Canada, 1,065; to Great Britain, 50; to the Argentine Republic, 908, and to Chile, 28 bales.

Among leaf buyers who arrived this week were: Albert W. Kaffenburgh and Wm. Batchelor, from Boston; Francisco Diaz, of V. Guerra, Diaz & Co., and Francisco Arango, of Francisco Arango & Co., both of Tampa. Harry Vetterlein, of Julius Vetterlein & Co., of Philadelphia.

Manolo Rodriguez, of Rodriguez, Mendez & Co., of Havana, accompanied by his family, returned from his vacation in the United States.

Cigar manufacturers are very busy trying to rush off as many orders as possible for the coming holidays in the United States. Also in executing pending orders for the United Kingdom they are making such speed as the limited number of good cigarmakers will allow. There has been received, as yet, no news from British importers of cigars, whether they have permission from the Board of Trade to allow manufacturers here to ship cigars to England after January 1. All orders to other countries, which are not restricted by time limits, are held back nowadays.

It is reported that the Cuban Land & Leaf Tobacco Co. has bought heavily in the Vuelta Abajo, paying full figures for superior leaf.

Romeo y Julieta delivered from the factory last week 850,000 cigars for export and to customers in Cuba. This is a record never before equalled by a single factory, even in most flourishing ante-bellum times. This was not the output of a single week, as several shipments had been delayed, but it demonstrates the high pressure Romeo y Julieta is working under to please its customers in every possible respect.

Partagas factories are working to utmost capacity.

La Corona factory is achieving a large and notably fine output.

H. Upmann is as busy as usual in shipping cigars to the United States.

H. UPMANN HABANA

Because a cigar is a Havana cigar, it does not necessarily follow that it is remarkably good; all Cuban tobacco is not as fine as some Cuban tobacco.

But Cuban tobacco grown in the famous province of Vuelta Abajo is acknowledged to be supreme—the finest cigar leaf in the world.

Upmann Cigars Are All-Vuelta Cigars

No other kind of leaf is used in the UPMANN factory. Hence, the steadily increasing demand for UPMANN'S everywhere.

Rushing Ship Building

There have been so many contradictory statements printed as to number of ships Government is building, that this official statement procured from Rear Admiral Capps, chairman of Emergency Fleet Corporation, is of value:

During past two months Emergency Fleet Corporation has awarded contracts for 118 wooden vessels of 3,500 tons dead-weight capacity each, to twenty-seven different shipyards. There had previously been awarded contracts for 235 wooden vessels of similar type to the above and for 58 vessels of composite construction, thereby making a total award to date of 411 wooden and composite vessels and an aggregate dead-weight tonnage of 1,460,900.

Since August 1 there have been awarded contracts for 155 steel cargo vessels of 1,076,800 tons dead-weight tonnage, distributed among six shipyards. The most important of these contracts are for vessels of the so-called fabricated type, and special shipyards are being prepared for them. Previous to August 1, 70 steel cargo vessels of 587,000 tons total dead-weight capacity had been contracted for. These vessels were distributed among ten shipyards. Therefore, at the present time the total number of steel vessels under construction for the United States is 225, with a total aggregate dead-weight tonnage of 1,663,800.

By proclamation of August 8, 1917, the Fleet Corporation, under authority delegated by the President, under the provisions of the emergency act approved June 15, 1917, requisitioned all vessels under construction in shipyards of the United States of 2,500 tons dead-weight capacity and above, having a total dead-weight tonnage in excess of 2,000,000 tons.

Thus there are at present a total of 1,039 vessels of 5,924,700 tons dead-weight capacity under construction for the United States Government.

The Shipping Board has stated its belief that the United States will have 1,600 merchant ships, aggregating 9,200,000 tons, by the end of 1918.

BOSTON BREVITIES

Federal street retailers and jobbers, is back from Connecticut with a nice bunch of orders for Cafe Savarin and Hoffman House cigars.

Boston smokers have acquired the Regensburg expression. Joseph P. Manning Co., the distributors, have made a 90 per cent. distribution of Admirations in and around Boston. There is hardly a place where cigars are sold that Admirations cannot be purchased.

Don't wait until your cigars are all dried up before you put your moisteners in the cases. Dry cigars will drive away more trade than you can get back.

The Marie Antoinette brand, packed five in an attractive container, retailing at 50 cents, is being handled by many retailers around the city.

Favorita De Cuba, made by S. H. Furgatch & Co., is sold in many of the most exclusive clubs and hotels. It is a Sumatra wrapped, all Havana filler cigar, made by the Spanish method. C. B. Perkins Co. is the distributor.

The Chancellor, the mild Sumatra wrapped Havana cigar, which has had a big call in this market, is showing signs of real activity. The Commonwealth Cigar Co. is displaying some new sizes.

Bernard Lett Co., distributors of Sanchez & Haya cigars, have all the goods now in transit sold for the holiday trade. Mr. Lett informed me that his orders on Sanchez & Haya exceeded any previous season.

HAVANA NOTES

Hoyo de Monterrey has all it can do, executing the pending orders.

Punch has all the orders that Don Manuel Lopez can attend to for the present.

Calixto Lopez & Co. are doing splendidly. Cesareo Diaz and Saturnino Alvarez are in charge now, since Don Jose Diaz left for the United States.

Belinda is rushed on orders for the American market and Great Britain.

Por Larranaga, Ramon Allones, C. E. Beck and Sol and Devesa de Murias are all busy, filling good orders on hand. The temporary strike in the Flor de Tomas Gutierrez factory has been settled satisfactorily and the factory now is working in good shape. ROSAM.

At Hartford, Judge Edward L. Smith, of the Court of Common Pleas, at the request of Hugh M. Alcorn, acting for Irving D. Woodworth, of Suffield, issued an injunction against American Sumatra Tobacco Co., of Enfield, and Julius Lichenstein, of New York. Mr. Woodworth is the owner of certain land in Enfield, Conn., which he leased to the defendants and on which they raised tobacco under shade during the last Summer. According to the petition asking for the injunction, Mr. Woodworth says that defendants threaten to remove certain poles and wires from the land and posts from the sheds on the land. The legal claim made by Mr. Woodworth is the defendants have no legal right to remove the poles and posts because the posts are sunk into the ground and the poles are spiked to the tobacco sheds.

Come, Mannie, announce your permanent voting address. Then send us your testimonials about the brands you use, that's a good little boy!

"Burdened with almost daily contributions for various worthy causes, it is no wonder the man on the sidewalk is cutting down his smoking account," contends Gil Thompson, of Thompson & Hare, Clinton Square, Albany. "Why," he went on, "one day trade seems to be picking up, with an occasional spurt which resembles a really decent business. Immediately thereafter comes a day or two, sometimes a week, of the very rottenest cigar sales we can possibly have. But I believe things will change soon. They've got to."

Even money prices are the rule for all cigarette brands at the Rensselaer Inn, Troy's best hotel. Manager McGlynn, who is president of the State hotel men's association, and is now in New York for the hotel convention, issued orders previous to his departure that all 10-cent brands shall be 15 cents, 15-cent goods 20 cents, and so on.

Joking Joe McElveney is authority for the statement that a certain citizen on a West Albany street car had an unlit cigar in his mouth, enjoying a dry smoke.

"No smoking in there," shouts the courteous conductor. "Chuck it out of the window, or off you gets."

"Oh, say," sighed the passenger, "my feet are in my shoes, and my shoes are on the floor of this car, but I ain't walkin'."

After a minute's reflection upon this retort the buoyant bellman says, says he:

"All right, pop, keep your feet on the floor, and the cigar in your mouth—you don't need alight!"

This year not everyone in the United States will have a Thanksgivin' of ole Kaintuck fried turkey, trimmed with furbishin's of artichokes, celery, cranberries, co'n-pone an' mashies.

But Marse Hennery Watterson, colonel of the blue grass, and far-famed editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, is willin', like Barkis, to dispense with all 'cept the wish-bone, providin' he can have his usual dessert of cantaloupe, filled with vanilla ice cream, sprinkled with paprika, and topped with sliced cucumber!

Other and plainer people, such as, for instance, Bozo the piano-mover and Moe Boguslawski of Aeolian Hall, will be glad enough to take the thirteenth chair at Grandmother's or Aunt Kate's, providin', a-course, th' chicken ain't all neck an' wing!

Then, too, there's simply got to be some smokes after all this clatter! So that's the reason Capitol District tobacconists are prepared to sell Brother Bill and Cousin Charlie lots of cigars up to, an' includin', Thursday, November the 29th!

For surely, Jim, you can't expect the boys to bring their homey jo-jammers, an' hit up the burley after the banquet like a bunch of wops on the right-of-way of the Tidewater R. R.!

Box trade, contingent upon the anticipated Thanksgiving business, is usually a considerable factor at the store of Aaron Pareira, 7 North Pearl street, Albany.

Quite a quantity of imported goods, as well as domestic clear Havana stock, is sold, as a rule, around the several days preceding the Thursday feast.

And the establishment is prepared to swing a large amount of high-grade box sales this season, with its extensive lines of fine cigars in the opalesque humidor.

Down on Broadway, Albany, Manager Bobby Richford of the Arcade Cigar Co., is also getting ready for a holiday rush.

Transient trade from the Union Station, opposite, is always good when the out and in travel commences, just before an old-home week festival like Thanksgiving or Christmas.

House brands will be featured in both window and store for the approaching harvest.

Sheriff William H. Keeler, proprietor of the coast-to-coast known hostelry of Maiden Lane Keeler's, Albany, has been quite sick.

Because of his age, now well along in the seventies, the family has been worried very much about his condition.

But his many, many friends are now glad to know he is somewhat better.

His son, Rufus Keeler, looks after the restaurant, cabaret and cafe during the old gentleman's absence. While the hotel and cigar stands are jointly managed by John Keeler and Charley Mann.

Business is reported only fair here for this time of year.

One day, a while ago, when Sheriff Keeler sat down to his customary light luncheon in the Maiden Lane grill, he asked Mike, sometimes named Michael Angelo, the Italian tenor-waiter, what was on the program for the day.

"'Bout de sam' t'ing, boss," replied Mikey; "oysters, clams, fish, chops, steaks, eggs, an'——"

"Bring me a little toast and eggs, Mike," interrupted the Sheriff. "And say," he added in a whisper, "run over to the Stanwix Hotel across the way, and see if you can borrow a knife, fork and spoon."

Mike looked around a second, then blushed under his Sicilian tan when he noted the lack of the necessary furniture, which he speedily supplied from the tray of a passing bus-boy.

An anti-cabaret fight is now on in Atlantic City, where ordinances regulating and abolishing entertainment in places where intoxicants are sold are now being considered by the municipal law-makers. Sentiment among the city authorities seems to be for the entire abolition of cabarets, but it is possible that a regulatory measure imposing a high license fee will be adopted. It is suggested that dancing be permitted, but that all entertainment features except music should be prohibited.

A petition in bankruptcy has been filed by Henry J. Robanus, a tobacco merchant of New Haven, who lists his liabilities as $4,098.28 and assets as $2,570.41, including $1,729.53, book accounts.

Near Murray, Ky., a tobacco barn and about 5,000 pounds of tobacco were burned, one day last week. The barn belonged to Walter Lester. The tobacco was owned by Lester & Hayden. Neither the barn nor the tobacco was insured.

In Butte, Mont., last week, a tobacco salesman was quoted as saying: "In the near future it will not be a question of 'Give me this brand or that brand of tobacco or cigarettes, but it will be a question of 'What brand can I secure at any price?'"

Benjamin Gorlitzer has purchased the cigar stand in the Waldorf Building, 10 West 33rd street, New York, from Wm. A. Hollingsworth. Gorlitzer is a son-in-law of S. Sachs, who owns the cigar stand in the 30 East 42nd Street Building.

The average per capita earnings of manufacturing employes in New York State, including shop and office workers of both sexes for one week in September was $16.97, as compared with $16.44 in August. In September, 1916, the average weekly earnings were $14.87, two years ago they were $12.86 and three years ago they were $12.48.

To meet the increased cost charges by manufacturers and the greater internal revenue tax, the Atlanta Cigar and Tobacco Dealers' Association, Friday afternoon, at a meeting at the Chamber of Commerce, recommended a higher selling price for cigars. It was suggested that cigars now sold for 5 cents be sold at 6 cents, 10 cent cigars at 12 cents, and two for a quarter cigars at 15 cents straight.

About 2,000 people attended the ball given by La Nacional, the Spanish benevolent society, at Harlem River Park, on Sunday. Partly, because the midsummer night fiesta this year was postponed, and partly because next year the society will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary, the affair was somewhat informal. But it was greatly enjoyed. The dancing was made more pleasant by the splendid music furnished by the 71st Regiment Band.

The Fall and Winter issue of the New York City Telephone Directory, delivery of which has just started, contains approximately 425,000 names of telephone subscribers, 25,000 more than were in the 1916 Winter issue. Approximately 730,000 copies will be distr uted. A new central office designation, "Whi hall," which has been assigned to a numb of telephones in the Battery section of t city, is included in the book, making 87 ce tral office designations for New York City.

To secure funds to purchase smokes f soldiers, the Welcome Club, Inc., will give entertainment tonight at Central Casino, M comb's Dam road and 145th street, N York. In addition to theatrical stars w have agreed to appear, George Drumm, of t Welcome Club, has made arrangements wi several of the most prominent boxers to sp a couple of rounds each. Jack Britton, Joh ny Dundee and Benny Leonard are expect to be there to help make the affair a succe for the soldiers need smokes.

Conditions in the tobacco trade show b little change this week. Additional holid orders are being received. Apparently t war will not affect such orders adversely some predicted. All manufacturers are ge ting a share of the business. The ret market shows more promise. Cigar smoke who "quit smoking" when new prices we into effect are "coming back." In place holiday packings from local manufacture soldier kits containing five and ten cigars a being sold. Holiday packings on the mark are "eaten up" by retailers. Quinby Encounters an Amateur Mephistopheles

A Theatrical Story That Lawrence Irwell Told

"Well," Quinby remarked, " you wish me read your play. I am very busy and cannot so now. But you may leave your manuscript ith me and also your name and address. I ill look over your play at my leisure and will eturn it to you with my opinion of it."

The stranger smiled knowingly and shook his ead.

"No, no," he said with emphasis. "You will ardon me, Mr. Quinby, but such tactics will not ork with me. You would not read my tragedy I left it here. It has been to seven managers, nd has been returned by all seven as unsuitable. ut not one of them had read it. I am sure of at, because I stuck the sheets together with ucilage in a few places as a test, and when the anuscript came back, those pages were in exctly the same condition as when I sent them."

"What do you want, then?" ejaculated Mr. uinby. "You do not expect me to read your lay here and now, I suppose."

"I expect you to listen while I read the play loud to you," was the answer. Quinby's visitor olded his arms and glared at the playwright ith the calmest of stares.

The latter's patience was shattered by the mpudence of the demand.

"We have had enough of this folly," said Quinby. "There is the door."

The stranger drew himself up to his full height, his tall, powerful frame quite dwarfing Quinby.

"I decline to move until you have acceded to my request," retorted the amateur writer of tragedies.

"This is outrageous," gasped Quinby. "In my own house! I'll telephone for an officer."

"None of that," said the stranger, quickly interposing, as Quinby made a movement toward the door. "Don't irritate me; I'm quite dangerous when aroused. In this matter I intend to have my own way. Now, Mr. Quinby, be reasonable. I'll offer you a compromise. Listen while I read the first act—it is very short—and if at the end of it you assure me that you do not wish to hear any more, I promise to leave your house without one word of protest."

Quinby was speechless with indignation. But the tall stranger, with his flashing eyes and determined face, frightened the dramatist.

"Is it a bargain?" asked the stranger.

"Your conduct is disgraceful," answered Mr. Quinby, inwardly resolving to telephone to the police station as soon as he could get rid of his unwelcome visitor. "If you persist in this outrage, I'll take care that you regret it."

"I do persist," was the reply. "I'll take chances with the consequences. Please sit down while I read —Act the First!"

Glaring angrily at the intruder, Quinby sank back in his chair. He would have summoned assistance by shouting had he not been deterred by two considerations: first, the stranger seemed to be disposed to resort to personal violence; secondly, he would place himself in a ridiculous light. No, the safer as well as the more dignified way would be to remain quiet for the present, and on that course Quinby resolved.

The stranger began to read, taking no notice of his hearer's scowl. The man's voice was both musical and expressive; Quinby was compelled to admit that. And the play—well, there was some merit in it after all. At the end of five minutes, the enforced listener ceased to scowl; at the end of fifteen, he was intent and interested, and at the end of thirty, when the first act terminated, he was sitting almost spellbound.

"Do you wish me to stop now?" inquired the reader, "or shall I continue? I am quite ready to do as I agreed."

"Proceed," said Quinby. Every trace of anger and resentment had left him, and it was evident from his face and from his whole demeanor that he was alive to no other sensations than those produced by this extraordinary play.

SELL STAMPS

No, you needn't be a philatelist. You needn't sell stamps to collectors. Not unless you want to. Although there is excellent money in the game, at that.

But the sort of stamps you should sell pay no profit. Not a cent. Of course they're a nuisance. This idea is, however, to pretend they are not—not a nuisance, bother, trouble.

Fact is, you reverse the play. You fix it so you actually make people believe this stamp selling proposition is a pleasure to you.

Even though your location is directly across from the main postoffice, that doesn't matter. Compete with 'em. Make folk actually believe that you'd rather sell stamps than sell cigars!

"You can't?" You can! This way: Put a conspicuous sign in your window making STAMPS the feature. Here's how:

"Uncle Sam sells stamps. That's his business! But, Uncle Sammy gets tired once in a while and closes up. Especially Evenings, Sundays, and Holidays.

"Now we're always—that is, most always—wide open here. So we want you to know that we sell stamps at the same price as our Uncle, and we sell them all the time, day and night!

"Don't be afraid to buy stamps here. They're good, of course. And you needn't buy a pound of tea or a thousand cigars to get one stamp or a dozen, either.

"They're for sale at one, two and three cents each, and we would like to sell you what you need. Enter, and fear not!"

All around this display card you will make a double-play if you show up some attractive stationery, pens, ink, and so on.

There is good profit in such stuff, and many cigar stores clear their incidental expense from the velvet off this material.

Get the neighbors running in for stamps. You'll soon sell some cigars, too, for you and I appreciate a cheerful chap, particularly when he accommodates with such a needful article as a three cent stamp when the nearest station may be from a block to a mile away on a cold and stormy night.

So shove stamps—and smile!

THE SMOKER.

THE SHIFTING OF TAXES.

The new tax bill which became law on Oct. 3 is expected to add $2,534,000,000 to the government's income. If the figures prove correct when they are tested by experience, the annual results of all taxes and postage will now be $4,193,000,000. From similar sources England expects about $3,000,000,000 this year.

Opponents of Tobacco

Louis R. Frankel, of St. Paul, called attention to the crusade in Minnesota launched by the Federation of Minneapolis Ministers at a meeting held in Joyce Memorial M. E. Church.

After a long discussion, the use of tobacco by soldiers was unanimously condemned as "economic waste," he observed.

At this meeting, Rev. J. T. Bergen said, "when the Red Cross sends a package to a soldier it always includes tobacco in some form. Of course the Red Cross is not a religious organization nor does it profess to be, but by sending tobacco to our boys in France they are slowly but surely destroying the morale as well as the morals of the army."

"Could fanaticism go further? All the armies of the Allies give their soldiers tobacco."

Mr. Frankel added that the anti-tobacco movement was not confined to Minnesota and the same influences that won for prohibition were endeavoring to make this a movement of nation-wide scope. Some form of anti-tobacco legislation he said was pending in nearly 40 state legislatures. It is absolute cruelty to the wounded and suffering at the front to deprive our boys of the solace of tobacco. Those who are making these absurd suggestions are not undergoing any physical discomforts in the prosecution of the war.

"The Red Cross is doing splendid work and should not be subjected to attacks of this character. The proposal made at this meeting of ministers to use tobacco lands for wheat is absurdly impracticable."

WAR WORK CURING DRUNKENNESS.

A gratifying decrease of drunkenness is noted. Not only are arrests for habitual intoxication at a minimum, but the records of Magistrates' Courts, the emptiness of alcoholic wards in the hospitals and the lessened business of the farms treating inebriety, all testify to prevalence of sobriety unusual for New York.

And not less interesting than the fact of these changed conditions is their cause. They are not due to Prohibition or to any lack of liquor; the reserve accumulated to tide over the drought resulting from grain conservation in war is ample. No doubt the higher cost of drinking is conducing to its decline. But the all-important cause, as experts agree, is Work. The demand for labor being constant, "when a drinking man loses his job he can now get another as soon as he sobers up," and this is against habitual drunkenness. According to a Bellevue Hospital surgeon, cases of delirium tremens have almost disappeared.

The improvement is the main thing, regardless of the agency by which it has been effected. But that the agency should be work and that the war should have supplied that work is not the least remarkable aspect of the change. Industry has thus proved a more powerful factor in abstinence than moral propaganda, and by the freak of fate it is to war that we owe the industry!—New York World.

TAMPA TOPICS

TAMPA, November 19.

The county commissioners have named December 18 as the date for holding an election for the authorization of good roads bonds to the amount of $875,000. It is expected that the bond issue will be approved and the sum secured will be sufficient to give Hillsborough county the finest highway system in the South, more than a million dollars already having been spent in paving rural roads alone with vitrified brick. George S. Gandy, of St. Petersburg, announces that he is ready to begin the work of constructing a bridge across Old Tampa Bay, which is necessary for establishing an interurban trolley line between Tampa and Pinellas county points, and the engineering department of the government is expected to give him permission to begin work within a short time.

Jose Lozano is back at the Lozano factory after a selling trip to various points.

Business is reported good at the Perfecto Garcia factory, the force employed in getting out the holiday shipments being an unusually large one. The present year has been the best of history for La Amita and other Garcia brands.

Corral, Wodiska & Co. are supplying a record demand for the Julia Marlowe and other brands.

Tampa's first factory, that of Sanchez & Haya, will close the year with all past output records broken, the demand for the factory's favorite brands having been strong throughout the year.

The usual rush is on at the factory of L. Sanchez & Co., the various brands of which, including La Flor de L. Sanchez & Co., La Belle Marie, De Cervantes, and Don Laureano, have shown increase in popularity throughout the year.

CINCINNATI CHAT

the Southern District of Ohio, several days ago heard the appeal of the Peninsular Chemical Company, Detroit, Mich., vs. Samuel Levinson, et al., Cincinnati cigar manufacturer. The right of Levinson to use the trademark "Penslar," which had been adopted by the Peninsular company to cover drugs, toilet articles and supplies furnished to the retail drug trade, is involved.

In argument to Court, the Detroit company contended that United States District Court at Cincinnati erred when it held the Detroit Company's rights to the trade-mark did not extend to cigars and that the defendants had not infringed when the name "Penslar" was adopted for cigars, which were distributed in part through "Penslar" drug stores.

The drug company contended Levinson adopted the name for the purpose of taking advantage of the reputation and good-will of the Peninsular Company's line, and averred similar advantage had been taken by Levinson of another trade-name well known in the drug trade.

The case for the appellees was submitted to the Court on briefs, without oral argument.

J. Stacey Hill, head of the J. S. Hill Co., jobbing and retail cigarists of Cincinnati, and also president of the Hotel Gibson company, has just returned from New York City, where he attended the Hotel Men's Exposition in that city.

Charles N. Krohn & Co. have just mailed announcements to their customers that they have taken over the distribution of the "Harvester" brand of cigars, manufactured by F. Lewis & Bros. Co.

The Board of Directors of the Tobacco Products Corporation has been reduced from thirteen to nine members through the resignation of Daniel G. Reid, J. Horace Harding, Sewall Prosser and J. Du Pratt White. The Executive Committee for the year will be composed of G. L. Storm, chairman; L. B. McKitterick, R. M. Eliss, J. M. Dixon and Gray Miller.

TIPPING OFF THINGS

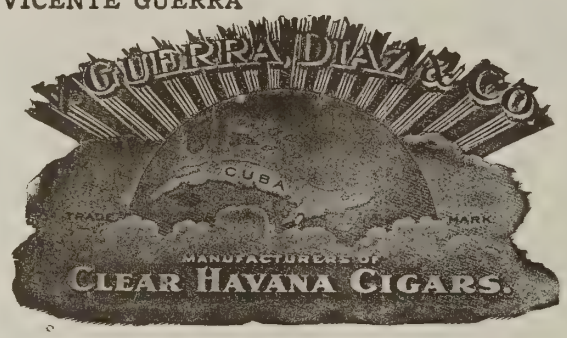
the restaurant arc lights, an employe of the lighting company was called.

This man made frequent trips to the wine cellar to observe connections. Soon afterward the step-ladder appeared to be extremely shaky. In fact, the ladder commenced to jump around like Joan Sawyer, to the tune of the cabaret orchestra's "Over There."

So over he went, ladder, arc light and all right into the dead center of a squascutum stew with exasperating results to a friendly group of Keeler diners.

Of course the chap lost his job. But he made such a poor face, also signing the parson's pledge, that the Sheriff agreed to reinstate him.

Everything went along all right for two or three weeks. Then, one day, the Sheriff called up the illuminating concern, and in that quiet voice he invariably uses in all matters of state the Sheriff said:



"Hello, Tom, is that you? Where is Peter your foreman? Please ask him to bring the wagon down here and get his understudy. He either lost his pledge, or some one stole it, poor chap!"

From the Caucasus to Archangel

The Standard Commercial Tobacco Co. Had Fifty Car Loads of Choice Leaf Specially Transported—Railroading Extraordinary in Russia—Seventy Days on the Way—Cablegrams from Vice-President Jones That Will Cause Big Cigarette Manufacturers in the United States to Feel Thankful—Shipments Will Arrive Soon

The Standard Commercial Tobacco Co. again has achieved big things despite extraordinary difficulties. Because of the war, for years, it has been practically impossible to procure Turkish tobacco of the Samsoun type from Asia Minor. Certain tobacco grown in a remote district in Southern Russia is about the only tobacco that can be used satisfactorily in lieu of Samsoun, in the manufacture of high grade cigarettes. And multiplied millions of such cigarettes are made in the United States every year. The demand for the required tobacco is urgent, always, and the utilization of it is very great. Under existing conditions, the desired tobacco is not easy to get. Nor, ordinarily, could it be brought now to the States. But resourcefulness and ability are embodied in the Standard Commercial Tobacco Co., so what was declared "to be impossible" becomes a fact accomplished.

In the preferred tobacco district of Southern Russia, the Standard Commercial Tobacco Co. secured for immediate shipment about two million pounds of desirable tobacco very similar to Samsoun. Obtaining a special train, for a through run from the Caucasus to Archangel, the company loaded 50 freight cars and started things.

Railroading in Russia, at present, is attended by all sorts of trouble. But representatives of the company stayed "on the job" night and day, and kept the train moving. To transport the tobacco by rail from the Caucasus to Archangel, required 70 days.

George O. Jones, vice-president of the company, cabled from Archangel, November 21, to President Ery Kehaya in New York, announcing success and relating what had been done. Mr. Jones, who has Mrs. Jones with him, will remain in Archangel for the present. No very encouraging advices were given regarding Petrograd.

George Mills has left Russia to take up his duties in the London office of the Standard Commercial Tobacco Co. And Harry Mills and Forest Stancliffe are proceeding to Yokohama.

Getting the tobacco and transporting for a tremendous distance across Russia, from the Caucasus to Archangel, was an achievement of which officials of the Standard Commercial Tobacco Co. justly are proud. Big cigarette manufactures in the United States will be glad to know that the tobacco will arrive soon in this country.

More than a million pounds thus imported, added to the 500,000 brought into the country by the Standard Commercial Tobacco Co. some weeks ago, will at least provide a supply, available when needed. The fact that practically all of the tobacco is "spoken for" or in other words sold on arrival, makes what has been accomplished even more important.

PROPOSED INCREASES

On Tobacco Freight Rates—An Interstate Commerce Commission Hearing in St. Louis—Arguments Pro and Con.

WASHINGTON, November 26.—The Interstate Commerce Commission has assigned a hearing to be held in the Hotel Jefferson, at St. Louis, before Examiner Thurtell, in Investigation and Suspension Docket No. 1132, "Southeastern Manufactured Tobacco, No. 2," for the purpose of determining whether or not the proposed increases contained in Cottrell's Supplement, No. 27, to his I. C. C., No. 49, involving commodity rates on cigars, cigarettes, and tobacco from Durham, Raleigh and other points in North Carolina and Virginia to destinations in Central Freight Association are just and reasonable.

This tariff was filed with the Commission in September and was suspended on representation from certain tobacco manufacturers that these rates could not be advanced by reason of the Commission's decision in the Fifteen Per Cent Case, upon which the carriers relied in attempting to put in these proposed advances.

The Virginia Lines Tariff Bureau will take the position that rates on manufactured tobacco from manufacturing points in so-called Carolina territory to destinations in C. F. A. territory have long been certain fixed differentials over the class rates concurrently applicable to similar traffic from the Virginia cities. They, therefore, contend that it is only right and proper that the long standing relationships as between North Carolina and Virginia manufacturing points should be maintained. They have sought to do this by means of the advances now under suspension. They contend that had they tried to maintain the relationship by reducing the rates from the Virginia cities, then the Carolina manufacturers would have had a right to call for similar reductions in the rates from that territory.

RELATIVE TO LABELS

Dated November 22, the T. M. A. issues a bulletin, as follows:

To Cigar Manufacturers:

Upon the request of some of our members, the T. M. A. has submitted to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, suggestions for a modification of the regulation requiring the affixing of special labels, showing the classification of cigars, as reported in Bulletin No. 117, with a view to obtaining permission to print the required notice on the box instead of attaching labels, and we have this day received an official communication from the Commissioner, stating that such notices

> "may be imprinted directly on the wood on the front of each box. The imprint should be conspicuous, and in order to make it so, a colored ink should be used. The imprint should be perfectly legible and not blurred in any case."

The notice need not necessarily be printed on the wood, but it may be stamped thereon with a hand stamp.

PRODUCTION STATISTICS PROBABLY DELAYED.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The monthly statement showing the number of cigars and cigarettes and the quantity of snuff and tobacco manufactured in the United States, compiled by the Bureau of Internal Revenue, is being held up and probably will be late because of the reorganization of the bureau on account of additional work entailed by the new revenue law.

ALLOWING DRAWBACKS

Tobacco Products Corporation and Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. to Receive Refunds of Duties Paid on Imported Cigarette Paper.

WASHINGTON, November 26.—L. S. Rowe, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, has sent the following communication to the New York collector of customs in connection with drawback allowance on cigarettes:

"Drawback is hereby allowed under paragraph O of Section IV of the Tariff Act of October 3, 1913, and the drawback regulations on cigarettes manufactured by M. Melachrino & Co., and Schinasi Brothers, of New York, for the account of the Tobacco Products Corporation of New York, with the use of imported cigarette paper, and with the use of cigarette tips manufactured by the Boucher Cork & Machine Co., in accordance with Treasury decision 36827, of November 24, 1916, providing for drawback on its products.

"The quantities of cigarette paper and cigarette tips which may be taken as a basis for the allowance of drawback shall not exceed the quantities appearing in the exported cigarettes, as indicated by the sworn statement and schedule of the manufacturers dated October 22, 1917."

Secretary Rowe has also notified the collector at New York that drawback will be allowed on cigarettes manufactured by the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. at its factories located at Richmond, Va., and Durham, N. C., with the use of imported cigarette paper.

WAS THE OLDEST MAN IN MAYTOWN.

Michael M. Hoffman, the oldest man in Maytown, Lancaster county, Pa., who died Saturday, was a most remarkable man for his age. He was born on a farm October 4, 1829, a son of Michael and Magdalena Hoffman. He spent the greater part of his life on the farm, and then went into the tobacco business. In this he became one of the largest dealers in Pennsylvania. He was married to Miss Anna L. Ziegler, of Harrisburg, who has been dead a number of years. He was the father of nine children, but only the following are living: Miss Helen, at home with her father; Walter Z., tax collector of East Donegal township; Ephraim, of near Maytown; Jacob, a practicing physician; Eli L., of Marietta, and Bertha, a trained nurse of Philadelphia. During the Civil War Michael Hoffman was an enrolling officer, and was a staunch Republican, having voted for every President since he was eligible. He was a member of the Maytown Church of God, and gave liberally to charity.

ALLOWANCE ON DERVISH CIGARETTES.

WASHINGTON, November 27.—The Collector of Customs at New York has been notified by officials of the Treasury Department that drawback will be allowed on the "Dervish" brand of cigarettes and smoking tobacco manufactured by Poulo Brothers, of New York City, partly with the use of imported leaf tobacco and partly with domestic tobacco.

PATENTS RECENTLY GRANTED.

1,232,073. Cigarette-case. Victor Vivois, Brooklyn.

THE BOYS FROM BARRE REMEMBERED.

Geo. M. Marrion, of Marrion's Cigar Store, Depot Square, Barre, Vt., will mail free of charge to every soldier and sailor enlisted from Barre City and Barre town a package consisting of a briar pipe, two dozen pipe cleaners, 125 cigarette papers, 40 cigarettes, and two 12-cent tins of tobacco.

Previously, for more than 20 years, Marrion's custom was to give free smokes to every one that entered his store Christmas Day.

He now announces a discontinuance of Christmas giving, substituting therefor the practice of sending free smokes to soldiers and sailors in the U. S. service.

The Leading Lady's Revenge

Two years ago a stranded actor was beating his way back to California, via freight, and his sole possession was a bag of "makins" and a pack of cigarettes. While he was riding through a wild part of the west he was suddenly ditched. Later in his wanderings he ran into a company of moving picture players who had been waiting two days for the supply wagon to show up. As usual, he was greeted with indifference until he chanced to pull out his tobacco to make a cigarette. Then the bunch gathered round him, all begging for a smoke. The actor sensed that something was up, that tobacco had become very scarce, and he kept stalling for a time. Finally the star took out a roll of bills and said: "How much do you want for that bag of tobacco?"

"I've got a long journey before me and no money," replied the actor, "so I guess it's worth it's weight in gold."

"And how much does it weigh?" asked the star.

At this moment the leading lady broke into the scene, raised her eyes in surprise, and smiled at the actor.

"Well, arn't you lucky," she said. "Why I think I've met you somewhere before. Won't you come and have a little chat with me?" And before the other players realized what was happening, she had taken him away. Inside the studio, she turned to the actor and queried:

"To me you look like the American Tobacco Co. Have you any cigarettes?"

"Yes; a box of Turkish cigarettes."

"What do you want for it? I must have it. I'm dying for a smoke, man!"

The actor rubbed the back of his head for a moment, then answered: "I want a good job with this company at $75. a week."

"Your're on," she smiled, showing her small, even teeth. "If the boss doesn't hire you I'll quit—but only on one condition; and that is, that you turn over to me the cigarettes and the tobacco, and I will give you a smoke whenever you want it."

"But why do you want the bag of tobacco?" the actor asked.

"I'll tell you, but don't let it out. The leading man in this company is a camera 'louse' and has been crowding me from the camera every time he got a chance. I told him I'd make him apologize for it, but he said I wouldn't, and with that bag of makins I can buy his soul, for he's just going wild for a few puffs."

The actor made the transfer and stayed with the company for nine months.

The man who sticks to business is the one who acquires holdings.

CALIFORNIA TOBACCO

Expert Shamel Discourses on the Feasibility of Growing Good Leaf for Cigar Purposes in the Golden State.

California is a potential tobacco producing State—a State that probably can grow good cigar tobacco. Already there are some tobacco plantations in California, but they are unimportant.

In a letter to D. C. Fessenden, Secretary of the California State Horticultural Commission, A. D. Shamel, expert of the United States Department of Agriculture, stationed at Riverside, speaks of the possibilities of tobacco growing in and reviews the history of experimentation along that line. A section from the letter follows:

I do not know of any published information concerning tobacco culture in California. Extensive experiments have been tried in the Sacramento Valley, the Santa Clara Valley and elsewhere with cigar and other kinds of tobacco. I think probably that the most promising variety tried was the Turkish cigarette leaf.

Owing to the small size of the cigarette leaf and the comparatively low yield of this variety, I do not believe that it was found profitable to cultivate it in California. I do not think any serious and consecutive experiments have been carried on by either the State or Federal Departments of Agriculture with tobacco culture, aside from the distribution of seed of a large number of varieties for trial by farmers in different sections of the State.

I remember that at one time I sent out from the Department several thousand samples of tobacco seed of different varieties and secured in return several hundred samples of leaf grown from this seed. Naturally, most of the men who grew the seed did not have facilities for curing or fermenting the leaf, so that the samples reached us in poor condition.

We did not find from many of these samples any particular encouragement for continuing the experiments with tobacco in California.

There is little question but that tobacco can be grown in California, and with the proper conditions the leaf can be cured and fermented so that it will make good cigars. It seems also possible that in some districts some of the heavier varieties of tobacco can be grown for the purpose of making smoking or plug tobaccos.

NOT MUCH STRIPPING

Will Be Done in Wisconsin Until After the Holidays —Tobacco Growers Urged to Take Unusual Care.

EDGERTON, Wis., November 23.—Favorable weather conditions that have prevailed so far during November is doing much in helping out the curing of the tobacco crop, which has already reached a point where there will be less fat stems to be found in stripping than was at first feared there might be. Even most of the shed-frozen leaf seems destined to be put to some useful purpose, so that losses from this source will be considerably minimized. A few packers are sending out circulars to growers urging that unusual care be exercised in stripping and the heavy stems rehung in the sheds until thoroughly dried out as the best means of receiving the full value for their tobacco. It seems doubtful, however, if much stripping will be attempted before the holidays.

A few Wisconsin dealers have longing eyes on the Ohio and Pennsylvania districts, where the crop is now moving, as there is little hope of any further business in their home state until another crop is produced.

The shipment out of storage is handicapped at present by the car shortage. —Edgerton Reporter.

MINIMUM WAGE LAW

Sustained in Arkansas—Girls Having Six Months' Experience in Cigar Factories Must Be Given $1.25 Per Day at Least.

An interesting decision of recent date is that of the Supreme Court of the State of Arkansas sustaining the minimum wage law of that State, which was passed in 1915 and by which women and girls who are employed in cigar factories and other branches of manufacturing, and having not less than six months' experience therein, are to receive a minimum wage of $1.25 per day for a working day of nine hours, all overtime at the rate of time and a half, with a maximum of 90 days' overtime in any one year. Those who have been employed less than six months in a cigar, tobacco, or other factory are to receive a minimum of $1 per day with the same time requirements as referred to above. The Court rested its decision, not only on similar decisions of the United States Supreme Court and the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon, but also on the fact that: "It is a matter of common knowledge, of which we take judicial notice, that conditions have arisen with reference to employment which have made it necessary for many of the States to appoint commissions to make a detailed investigation of the subject of women's work and their wages."

FOUGHT THREE ROBBERS

Clerk in United Cigar Store at 4024 Broadway the Victim of Hold-up Men Who Stole $60.

Orley Church, the only clerk on duty in the United Cigar store at 4024 Broadway, New York, at 10 o'clock Thursday evening, was behind the counter, stooping down to obtain a box of cigars.

"When you get up, put your hands up first," ordered the leader of three supposed customers, who had entered the store a minute before.

The man who spoke, emphasized his command by pointing a revolver at Church.

Though he expected to be shot, the clerk didn't surrender. Instead, he grabbed a box opener from the shelf and flung it at the man who held the revolver. It struck the ruffian on the shoulder.

While the third stood guarding the door, two of the robbers attacked Church. One used a blackjack. The other hammered the clerk over the head with the butt of a revolver. For a time, Church resisted desperately. Eventually, however, the robbers knocked the clerk down, thrust him into the narrow storeroom and locked the door. Then they took $60 from the cash register and skipped.

HIS FATAL QUARREL

A Cleveland Cigar Man Shoots—But He Telephoned First to the Police Station.

Henry G. Maurer, manager of a cigar store at 1840 Euclid avenue, Cleveland, telephoned Central Police Station at midnight Thursday to report that he had been robbed of his watch. At 1 a. m. the 'phone rang again and a man, telling the police that he was Maurer, asked permission to shoot the thief.

Half an hour later the police got a third call. The same voice came over the wire.

"You fellows can't get here for 20 minutes," the man said. "So I have taken the matter in my own hands."

An emergency wagon full of patrolmen was rushed to the Euclid avenue store. Policemen said that when they arrived Maurer was holding at bay several men who were trying to get into the store and overpower him.

At Maurer's feet lay James Lester, a waiter, with a bullet wound in the stomach.

The police were told that Lester, who lives at 1504 Euclid avenue, came into Maurer's store to buy a cigar and had hardly stepped to the case before he was shot. He is in a serious condition at St. Luke's Hospital.

When the police arrived, says the Cleveland Press, Maurer handed over a gun without resistance. He was arrested by Patrolmen Riley and Lapp on a charge of shooting to kill. His case was set for December 3 and he was released on $500 bail.

Later, when Lester died, Maurer was rearrested.

A TEN MONTHS' RECORD

Sales of American Tobacco Co. from January 1 to October 31 Exceed the Entire Business of the Previous Year.

Sales of the American Tobacco Co. for the ten months ended October 31 were larger than for the entire year 1916. The ten months' business amounted to over $71,000,000. Sales for the twelve months of 1916 were $70,009,000.

The gain in October touched the previous high water mark in the point of increased business, which was June of the current year. In each of these months the company's business gained approximately $2,500,000 over the corresponding months of 1916.

These sales figures are for the American Tobacco Co. proper and if continued during the closing two months of the year mean a business for the 12 months of between $85,000,000 and $90,000,000. This exceeds earlier estimates by at least $5,000,000. The previous record was last year's total of $70,009,000.

Including various subsidiaries, all or a majority of whose stock is owned by the American Tobacco Co., the big company will do a business in 1917 of close to $140,000,000. This means the exceeding of earlier estimates by at least $10,000,000 and compares with $110,000,000 for the same group in 1916 and $99,000,000 in 1915.

The American Tobacco Co. continues to experience great difficulty in keeping anywhere near up to its orders for cigarettes. In one brand alone on which orders are coming in at the rate of between 18,000,000 and 20,000,000 cigarettes daily shipments are being made of only 13,000,000. Plans have been completed for a great increase in cigarette capacity.

The war tax will probably cost the American Tobacco Co. $750,000 to $1,000,000 annually. This is equal to from 2 per cent. to 2½ per cent on the $40,242,400 common stock.

It is too early as yet, says the Wall Street Journal, to attempt to estimate net for the common shares in 1917. But the increase over 1916 will be considerable. Last year the company earned $22 a share for the common stock, as compared with $20.22 a share in 1915."

In all departments the American Tobacco Co. is having its record year. The American Cigar Co., of which the American Tobacco owns 70 per cent of the common stock, will show the largest net of any year since dissolution. This company is in a position to increase its dividend rate on the junior issue, which would, of course, work to the benefit of the American Tobacco Co. However, nothing along this line has yet been considered. The Cigar Co. earned twice the dividend of 6 per cent. paid on its common stock in each of the last two years and as stated above 1917 will run far ahead of these figures. The American Tobacco Co. is now receiving $420,000 annually from its holdings of American Cigar common.

William Lightfoot, of Chicago, said to be 102 years old now, was a tobacco salesman in 1874.

AIDS TOBACCO CULTURE

Recent Philippine Legislation—Appropriations for Propaganda—Restrictions On Curing—Assistance to Growers.

The Insular Legislature, during the past year, passed two acts intended to stimulate the tobacco industry in the Philippines. Act 2692 appropriates $17,500 to form part of the tobacco inspection fund provided for in Act 2613, of which it is provided that $3,500 shall be set aside for propaganda for leaf tobacco in the United States and in other countries where it is deemed necessary, and $14,000 for inspection in connection with the cultivation of tobacco in the northern Provinces of Luzon. Act 2713 amends Act 2613 making it unlawful for any planter or other person who has in his possession uncured or incompletely cured leaf tobacco, to cure, dry, ferment, or treat it in any manner other than in a building or curing shed constructed in accordance with the specifications of the Bureau of Agriculture. Those who produce tobacco on a small scale are exempted from the provisions of this act, and the Director of Agriculture is authorized by executive action to exempt the planters of any given locality from the operation of this act until January 1, 1919, provided it is clearly shown that it is impossible for the planters concerned to comply with the provisions of the law, on account of the distance of their plantations from the public forests, or for other good cause shown. This act authorizes the Director of Forestry, for the period of three years, to give and issue to any producer of tobacco a license to cut, without charge, timber of the first group to be used exclusively in the construction of standard warehouses for the curing of tobacco.

A FINE OF $25 IMPOSED

On a Mount Vernon Grocer Who Sold Cigarettes to a Minor—A New York Law That Must Be Obeyed.

For selling cigarettes to Peter Cavaioli, 10 years old, Francesco Grieco, a grocer of 28 North Fourth avenue, Mount Vernon, N. Y., was fined $25 by City Judge Sommer in the Juvenile Court, Saturday morning. The arrest of Grieco was incidental to a campaign conducted by the Mount Vernon W. T. C. U., to enforce the law against selling cigarettes to minors.

When arraigned before Judge Sommer, Grieco, through his attorney, Frank A. Saporito, pleaded guilty to the charge of violating section 484 of the penal law, the provision prohibiting the sale of cigarettes to minors.

In an effort to secure a suspended sentence for his client, Attorney Saporito told the court that Grieco has lived in Mount Vernon for 26 years. During that time he has never been accused of any crime. "The boy Cavaioli," said Saporito, "often came into Grieco's store to purchase cigarettes for his father." Lately, however, Cavaioli smoked the cigarettes himself. His parents complained of this to the W. T. C. U. and Grieco's arrest followed.

Judge Sommer in fining Grieco, said, "Selling cigarettes to minors is a serious offense. That Grieco thought the boy was buying the cigarettes for his father is no excuse for violating the law. It makes no difference whether the minor buys the cigarettes for himself or others.

"The fact that this man had been in the habit of selling cigarettes to the boy, far from mitigating the offense, makes it worse. The sale of cigarettes to minors must stop. Violators of this law will be severely punished."

A few weeks ago, the Mount Vernon school authorities warned store owners in the city that a law recently enacted had raised the age limit of purchasers of cigarettes or other smoking articles from 16 to 18 years.

Grieco received a copy of this warning.

A GREAT MOMENT

What great crises teach all men whom the example and counsel of the brave inspire is the lesson: Fear not, view all the tasks of life as sacred, have faith in the triumph of the ideal, give daily all that you have to give, be loyal and rejoice whenever you find yourself part of a great ideal enterprise. You, at this moment have the honor to belong to a generation whose lips are touched by fire * * * Let nothing human be wholly alien to you. The human race now passes through one of its great crises. New ideas, new issues—a new call for men to carry on the work of righteousness, of charity, of courage, of patience, and of loyalty—all these things have come and are daily coming to you. When you are old you will look back to these days. Perhaps, with the strange joy that memory throws, like a sunset glow, over even the most tragic events when once they are long past, you will some day say of these times of perplexity, of doubt, and of world-wide pain what Wordsworth said in the well-known words when he recalled the French Revolution and the hopes of his youth:

"Bliss was it in that dawn to be alive,
But to be young was very heaven."

But however memory brings back this moment to your minds, let it be able to say to you: That was a great moment. It was the beginning of a new era. The world was passing to a new life, and was greeting the new life with a loud call and with a strength of the passions of the nations that was never known before. This world in its crisis called for volunteers, for men of faith in life, of patience in service, of charity and of insight. I responded to the call however I could. I volunteered to give myself to my Master—the cause of human and brave living. I studied, I loved, I labored, unsparingly and hopefully to be worthy of my generation.

"Minor Coinage"

The shortage of pennies recently reported from various parts of the country is the more surprising in view of the fact that the Government coinage of one-cent pieces has been much larger in recent years than in any earlier period of the history of the country. A compilation by The National City Bank of New York shows that more than one billion one-cent coins had been manufactured by the Government and distributed to the people during the last dozen years. In fact the outturn of one-cent pieces in the last decade forms one-third of the total since the beginning of our present form of Government.

The Bank's statement on this subject shows that the number of one-cent coins manufactured by the Mints of the United States from 1793 to the end of the fiscal year 1916 was 2,804,000,000, while the number issued in the last decade alone is, in round numbers, one billion. Even in the single fiscal year 191 the number of one-cent pieces coined wa 101,230,317, while in the high record yea 1910 the total number turned out was 152, 846,218. The number of pieces coined neve touched the 100,000,000 line prior to 190 the total for that year being 108,138,618; an the annual average since that time has bee nearly 100,000,000 per year.

The number of one-cent pieces coined fron the beginning of the Government to dat would, even if all were in existence and cir culation, allow for each individual about 2 one-cent pieces. Of course, the number actu ally available is far less than this, for it i quite probable that out of the 2¾ billion one cent pieces coined by the Government no more than about 2 billions are now in exist ence, or at least in circulation, making th present average per capita for all the people of the United States of about 20 one-cent pieces

The coinage of one-cent pieces began with the first year's operation of the Mints, the total number coined in the first period for which details are available (1793-5) having been 1,066,033. In that same period there were coined 142,524 half-cent pieces. The half-cent piece seemed to gain in popularity in the immediately subsequent period, for the number coined in the period 1804-10 was about as great as the number of one-cent pieces coined. From that time on, however, the half-cent piece apparently lost popularity, for the Mints soon suspended their manufacture, though there were occasional issues of limited numbers down to 1860, at which time their coinage terminated. The number of one-cent pieces coined averaged less than 10 millions per annum down to about 1855 when there came a rapid increase, the number coined in 1857 being about 18 millions, in 1860 over 20 millions, in 1864 53 millions. Following the close of the Civil War the number again greatly declined being in 1870 less than 6 millions, in 1880 39 millions, in 1890 47 millions, in 1900 67 millions, in 1906 96 millions, crossing the 100 million line in 1907, and making the highest record in 1910—152,846,218—while the total for the fiscal year 1916 was 101,230,317.

All of the one-cent pieces now issued by the Government are of bronze. In the very early periods they were of copper, then for a comparatively short time of nickel, though the proportion which the copper or nickel coins formed of the total is very small, the entire number of copper one-cent coins issued having been 156,289,000, nickel 200,772,000, bronze 2,446,711,000.

The "minor coinage" of the United States, including in that term the half-cent, one-cent, two-cent, three-cent and five-cent coins, aggregates about 4 billions in number. Of the one-cent coins the number as already indicated is about 2,800,000,000, of which about 200,000,000 were nickel and 156,000,000 copper; of the two-cent coins there were issued 45,601,000; of the three-cent coins 31,378,000 made of nickel and 42,770,000 made of silver; and of the five-cent pieces the total number issued has been of nickel 891,818,000 and of silver 97,604,000.

All "token" coins issued by the Government are now of bronze or nickel, all of the one-cent pieces being of bronze, all of the five-cent pieces nickel. The use of silver for the manufacture of the minor coins was discontinued in 1874.

The face value of the "token" coins issued by the Government (the one-cent pieces and five-cent nickels) is of course much greater than the value of the metal which they contain. In fact, the profit on the manufacture of these coins, together with a slight profit on the manufacture of the minor silver coins (ten, twenty-five and fifty-cent pieces) is more than enough to pay the running expenses of the Mint.

THE PRICE OF A SONG

"Over There" Happened to Be $25,000 Spot Cash
A fine cigar sealed the bargain

Leo Feist, the New York music publisher, who has built up a million dollar business from a small beginning, mostly because he knows the utility and value of publicity, was seated in his private office one day about a month ago, when his general manager came in.

"Good morning, Mr. Feist," chirped the general manager. "I've some news. I just heard that 'Over There,' Geo. M. Cohan's big patriotic song, can be bought."

"What!" exclaimed Feist, as he clutched the arms of his chair. "Who told you?"

"I got it in a roundabout way. But I'm sure it's the truth."

"But the song is a hit," Feist said. "Why should any one want to sell a hit like that?"

"I don't know; but I do know that we can sell five times as many copies of it as any other publisher, if we could only buy it."

"How much does Cohan want for it?" Feist inquired as he prepared to light a cigar.

"I don't know. One firm offered ten thousand, another fifteen, and a third party may give twenty thousand."

When he had applied a match to his cigar, the big music publisher puffed, reflectively, and said: "Do you think it wise to offer more than twenty thousand?"

The general manager rolled a Pall Mall between his fingers for a few seconds before replying.

"Yes; I think we ought to raise the ante to twenty-five thousand. No one will go beyond it."

Feist blew a cloud of smoke towards the ceiling.

"How many copies do you think we can sell?" he demanded.

"Two million. With the publicity we can put behind the song we shouldn't have any trouble in selling two million."

"But supposing the war should end next month?"

"Then our money would be well spent. Under such circumstances we could afford to lose."

"All right; go to it," Feist said.

An hour later, the general manager called on Geo. M. Cohan's representative. The ensuing conversation brought out the fact that Geo. M. Cohan was desirous of seeing "Over There" become the greatest patriotic song ever written. He was ready to sell to a publisher who could place the song successfully before the multitude.

The two representatives argued. Each intended to make the best bargain he could. Finally they came to terms. A Corona corona sealed the sale. The price of the song was set at twenty-five thousand dollars. It was the highest sum ever paid outright for any song. The purchase put an end to the phrase "Sold for a song."

When other publishers heard what Feist had done they said that he had picked the biggest lemon of his career, but Feist did not think so. An hour after he became the purchaser, he and his staff were planning the biggest publicity campaign ever attempted in the music business.

Feist Paid Cohan More Than Ever Before Was Paid Outright for a Popular Song

Leo Feist, the Big Music Publisher

If Feist has faith in a song and he thinks it is something that the public will buy he advertises to the limit. A $5,000 advertisement in the Saturday Evening Post is nothing to him. His idea is to give the goods publicity and send customers to the store for them. In the trade magazines he spends enough in advertising to pay the salaries of a couple of publishers. Feist is a big business man because he goes after things in a big way. Every year he pays out approximately $100,000 in royalties to song writers, not because he always has the best songs written, but because he knows how to get every penny possible from the songs that he is able to purchase or publish on a royalty basis. And it looks like a trick of fate for Feist, to purchase "Over There" from Geo. M. Cohan, the man who dramatized the phrase, "It Pays to Advertise."

A Havana commission, headed by Count Leclerc, French minister to Cuba, which is collecting subscriptions for Christmas presents for French soldiers in the trenches, reported Sunday that $30,000 in cash, 50,000 cigars, 750,000 cigarettes, and more than $10,000 worth of merchandise had been given. A similar fund for Italian soldiers also is being raised in Cuba.

THE MACEDONIAN TOBACCO CROP

WASHINGTON, November 26.—A very interesting report has just reached officials here concerning the tobacco crop conditions in Greek Macedonia.

"The Greek Government has never published any data concerning crop conditions in Macedonia. The following information relative to the tobacco crop, the principal product in this consular district, is obtained solely from private sources.

"Filler leaf tobacco, unstemmed, is the chief article of export from Greek Macedonia, the value purchased in a normal year by American firms alone amounting to about $6,000,000. Since the more important producing centers, Kavalla, Drama, Serres, etc., are in the war zone, the export of a large part of the Greek Macedonian tobacco crop is impossible, and no information is available as to its condition and quantity.

"Ordinarily, the quantity of tobacco raised in the districts near Saloniki is relatively small. According to general reports of purchasing agents from various points in this district, this condition has been greatly changed. It is estimated that in this region, as far south as the old Greek frontier, there are this year about 5,640,000 pounds, which consist of all types of what is known as Turkish tobacco. This is an increase of fully 75 per cent. over the amount of the 1916 crop. Moreover, if there had been more rain, the crop would have been from 100 per cent. to 150 per cent. larger than that of last year. As it was, several months of drought hindered the growth materially.

"According to the same reports, the quality of tobacco is, on the whole, fully as good, if not better, than in 1916. As mentioned above, the crop will consist of all types of Turkish tobacco. This is caused by the fact that many refugees from Samsoun, Smyrna and Thrace, bringing with them small quantities of tobacco seed, have planted in small fields, and, furthermore, on soil which has never before been used for tobacco, thus producing a type concerning which even the oldest and most experienced experts are unable to say whether or not it will improve with age.

"Prices will probably be at least 100 per cent. over those of last year. This is attributed to the increased competition, caused, no doubt, by the fact that the various merchants are unable to get their usual stocks from the Kavalla, Samsoun and Smyrna districts. Moreover, shipping facilities are now such that it is almost impossible for the foreign, including American, factories to be supplied with raw material, and local factories have received large orders to supply the Allied forces stationed in this district. It is also learned on good authority that the Egyptian factories have received large orders from the Allies for cigarettes, and the merchants from that country are strong buyers."

QUINBY ENCOUNTERS AN AMATEUR MEPHISTOPHELES

The stranger proceeded, his deep, musical voice never missing a point nor slurring light and shade. The motif of the play—the representation of the devil in human form—was, obviously, far from original; but the treatment of the subject was absolutely so, differing both in details and essentials—and differing for the better—from every previous conception. It breathed throughout an air, not merely of powerful tragic interest, but of genuine reality and natural consequence which hurried the audience forward to the fatal climax by a series of irresistible developments. Long before the end was reached, Quinby, very far from being pre-disposed in his visitor's favor, saw that the tragedy would probably be a fortune to any manager, and inwardly confessed that his own just-completed tragedy, on which, up to now, he had somewhat prided himself, would be literally extinguished if opposed to so powerful a production.

But the remarkable strength and terrible pathos of the dénouement obliterated all sordid calculations from his mind and left him only conscious of an overwhelming sense of tragical emotion.

"There!" said the amateur playwright, laying down his manuscript, and regarding Quinby's expressive face with a look of placid triumph. "What is your opinion? Does the piece justify the strong measures that I found necessary to force it upon your notice, or does it not? Speak, sir!"

"It's—it's a masterpiece," gasped Mr. Quinby. "A work of genius—a superb tragedy. There are few men living, and not many dead, who could have written it."

"I agree with you," was the quiet answer. "It stands alone. I know it. And now I give you your reward for having heard me to the end. Take this tragedy; write your name upon it, and produce it at the Academy as your own!"

"I don't understand you," Mr. Quinby replied, supposing that his ears had deceived him.

"My words were quite plain," said the stranger. "My meaning was equally so. I make you a present of my tragedy—an unconditional present—with no reserve, except that you offer it to Himmelsbach of the Academy in lieu of the one which you are now writing."

"Impossible," cried Quinby. "Common honesty would forbid my appropriation of your work. Don't you realize that this tragedy is worth a lot of money to you? It means both fame and fortune."

"Bah!" laughed the other man scornfully, "What do I want with either? I have long enjoyed too much of both. All I desire is to have my tragedy produced; in whose name or to whose profit, I care not one peanut."

"But supposing———"objected Quinby.

"None of your buts," was the reply. "With my eyes open, and in good faith, I make you an offer, which, while it suits me, is highly advantageous to you. If you are too proud to accept—well, there may be others less—what word shall I use—'squeamish,' perhaps. Anyway, you have the first chance!"

"Pride is not concerned in the matter," Quinby remarked. "How can I bring myself to put my name to another man's work? It would be a species of literary forgery."

"Nothing of the sort," was the energetic reply. "The play is my own in every sense. I have an incontestable right to make it over to you. Will you take it, or will you not? I cannot wait. I must have 'yes' or 'no' at once. If the former, everything will be satisfactory; the latter, I will take the manuscript elsewhere. Which is it to be?"

"If you insist upon giving it away," answered Quinby, "I suppose I may as well profit by it as anyone else."

"Yes; considerably better from your point of view. Then you accept the manuscript on the conditions named?"

"I do," answered Quinby, after some reflection. He was not prepared to accept his extraordinary offer then and there, but he reserved (mentally) the right of canceling his verbal acceptance by letter, if, on mature consideration he considered it necessary to do so.

"Very well, I will not detain you longer," said the eccentric visitor, picking up his hat. "The probability is that I shall call again before very long."

"One moment," cried Quinby, "leave me your name and address in case I find it desirable to communicate with you."

"No," he said with an inscrutable look; "I'm afraid I can't. I have special reasons for secrecy, and I cannot explain at present. In time you will learn more about me. Just now I prefer to keep my identity concealed."

He rose and hurriedly left the room. Before Quinby had half recovered from his surprise, the street door slammed and the mysterious visitor was gone. Nor did he leave the slightest inkling of where his address might be.

* * * *

Quinby read the tragedy through again and more than before was struck with its power and force. It was, however, some time before he could make up his mind what to do about it. But, at last, he submitted the manuscript to Himmelsbach, manager of the Academy, telling him of the extraordinary circumstances in which it had come into his possession.

Himmelsbach read the play, and pronounced it a "cracker-jack."

"Say, Quinby, old man," he exclaimed with enthusiasm, "there's a pot of money in that piece. It's as certain to draw as a frog is to jump. But I don't like the queer way in which it has come to you. What are we to do if it has been stolen?"

"That's not probable, but you might fee your way by inserting a few preparatory notices in the newspapers."

"How would that safeguard us?" asked the manager.

"In the event of the play having been stolen, the notice might catch the eye of some interested person who would naturally communicate with you."

"I'll consider that idea," said the manager thoughtfully.

At this time, however, Himmelsbach was a little troubled because the piece that was "running" at the Academy was only paying expenses. But, said he to himself confidentially, there's big money in this new piece. Then he telephoned to Quinby:

"Quin, my boy, I've decided to put that tragedy on at the Academy at once. I'll take all chances, although it certainly came into your hands in a peculiar way."

Made by Boston Cigar Manufacturers

A Direct Appeal to Employees

To the Members of Cigarmakers' International Union, Local No. 97:

A committee of your Union has demanded increased prices for cigarmaking and packing.

It is the custom for committees to come to us to tell us what our employees want. This is a necessary custom. Where so many men are employed, a few must be chosen to speak for them.

But in many ways it does not work fairly for you or for us. We understand and sympathize with your burdens. We would like you to know something of our difficulties. There wouldn't be many misunderstandings between workers and employers if they could talk together and reason things out.

Of course, we can tell our side to your committee. We have already done so. But it is hardly possible for the committee to tell you the whole story. The committee presents your desires to us and endeavors to present our side of the question to you.

We want to tell you, frankly, man to man, just how we are fixed now. We want to show you what the future offers to you and to us. We want to ask you fairly if you want to help or hurt this great trade.

We know that as sensible men you want what we want—the increased success of Boston cigarmaking. It means constant employment. It means the highest wages and shortest hours and best shops in the world. It means that a cigarmaker or packer who applies himself diligently can earn $25 or $40, or more, per week.

There is a chance now to spread Boston-made cigars into markets that have been controlled by non-union goods. That will mean vast expansion and better times for you and for us.

You have it in your power to aid this work—or kill it. If you aid it, you will benefit just as surely and as quickly as we will.

Now what do we ask you to do? Not to give up your right to demand as much pay as we can give you. But to read this statement and consider it honestly, and then to postpone your demands until they can be considered without wrecking the business that is your livelihood and ours.

We cannot enter new markets and compete with goods made elsewhere, although we make the best cigars in the world.

The existence of our industry, and your own welfare demand more business. We can do business only if the volume is big enough to offset the small profit. And we will lose absolutely the present chance to hold our business if there is a further disturbance in prices. There can be no doubt of this. Any immediate increase in the cost of production will be a serious menace to this industry.

The prices of raw material have soared to a point far beyond anything that has existed in the past. Sumatra, which could be bought in 1916 for $2 a pound, without duty, was sold in New York during the past summer as high as $4.25 a pound. Binders, which in the past have sold at prices ranging from 25 cents to 35 cents, are now sold at 45 cents to 60 cents. Havana, which formerly sold at 75 cents, has practically doubled. Seed fillers, which could be bought formerly at less than 20 cents, are now out of the market, with 35 cents offered.

Tobacco is but one item among the many which are increasing the cost of production. Cigar boxes have increased greatly in cost. The present scarcity of lumber threatens further increases. Lithographing, advertising material, paper of all kinds have increased enormously. Moulds have doubled in price, presses have increased 50 per cent. Gum Tragacanth can be had only at very high prices. In fact, there is not a phase of the industry in which the costs have not increased greatly.

The high cost of production of Boston-made cigars has reached a point where the manufacturers believe they are treading on the verge of disaster. They have been forced to raise their prices to the trade three times during the past year, the last price-list going out on November 2. This has caused disquiet and discouragement among dealers and consumers.

We are asked how we can sell our five-cent cigars now at less than the prices asked by the non-union manufacturers. Here's the answer: Boston manufacturers have, in order to protect their business, figured the value of their tobacco at the purchasing price rather than at the present market value, as most large manufacturers have done.

This fact, alone, has made it possible to sell our cigars so far at a figure which insures successful competition. But when it becomes necessary for us to work raw material purchased at present market values, as it will in the near future, our prices necessarily will be as high as the highest.

There has been a general increase in the prices of cigars throughout the country. The manufacturers have been forced to follow in line, owing to increases in the cost of production. Their policy and aim, however, are to sell their product at a very small margin of profit, thereby protecting their volume of business for the more nearly normal times which must come in the future.

In considering the advances in prices already made, it must not be forgotten that these advances covered a war-tax of $3 per thousand and $1.10 per thousand for cigarmaking and packing on 10-cent cigars, and a war-tax of $1 per thousand and 60 cents per thousand for cigarmaking and packing on 5-cent cigars.

We must allow liberal discounts to the trade. Therefore, when prices are increased the manufacturer does not receive the entire increase. For instance, in the case of the $3 increase in the war-tax, we must pay the entire amount to the government, and we must allow discounts on that amount to the trade.

The manufacturers want to work in harmony with their employees. Our interests are the same. We must stand or fall together.

AND IT IS ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY AT THIS TIME THAT WE SACRIFICE TOGETHER FOR THE LATER BENEFIT OF ALL.

For this reason, we will meet your committee, with the object that we may adjust matters on a mutually satisfactory basis.

CIGAR MAKERS STRIKE IN BOSTON

Boston, November 28 — Cigar Makers' Union No. 97, without waiting for the sanction of the national body, caused all its members employed in Boston factories, to strike today.

The manufacturers are indisposed to meet the strikers' demands. And so things are at a standstill, for the present.

WAGES OF NORWEGIAN CIGAR MAKERS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—That the United States is not the only place which is feeling the effect of the increased cost of living is evidenced by reports recently received from abroad illustrating the wage situation for the different industries, among others that of the tobacco industry in Norway.

In 1895 a man employed in a tobacco factory earned 69 cents a day. By the year 1900 this had been increased to 83 cents; then it fell in 1905 to 80 cents, increasing again in 1910 to 90 cents and still further in 1915, the latest period for which statistics have been compiled, to $1.31. Women working in the tobacco factories in 1895 were paid 39 cents a day; in 1900 they received 37 cents, but in 1905 they were paid 53 cents, in 1910 56 cents and in 1915 58 cents.

Cigar makers in 1895 received 92 cents a day for the men; this remained stationary until 1910, when it was increased to $1.02, followed by a further increase in 1915 to $1.43. The wages for women were not reported in 1895, but in 1900 those employed in cigar making received 36 cents a day, in 1905 47 cents, in 1910 60 cents and in 1915 88 cents.

SEVEN CENT MANILAS

Sidney J. Freeman's Offering of Four Especially Fine Sizes of the Popular Flor de Intal Factory Brands.

From the first, persistent and successful in advocating "quality Manilas," Sidney J. Freeman now proposes to have seven-cent Manilas strongly featured in the trade. The better to persuade dealers and consumers concerning the excellent value of Manila cigars to be retailed for seven cents each, he has selected four especially attractive sizes. Flor de Intal factory brands are made of choice Isabela tobacco, showing workmanship first class in every respect. The cigars speak for themselves. They invite comparison, they prove quality through and through. The seven-cent sizes are Siestas, After Dinners, Estrellas and Grandezas. Cigars of such quality readily may be made popular in the seven-cent class. And the latest development of Freeman's big business promises to be associated with much success.

"Our Boys in France Tobacco Fund"

Remembering how important it is to provide plenty of smokes for American soldiers serving at the front, what smoker who stays at home will refuse to contribute a little?

Who will fail to avail himself of an opportunity to show goodwill toward the men who are fighting the nation's battles?

Who will hesitate to offer additional cheer to the men who are enduring the hardships and horrors of war?

What's the answer?

Remember the men in the trenches.

The American Tobacco Co. Kit

The "Our Boys in France Tobacco Fund" is receiving the support of 200 newspapers and 100 magazines. Many noted authors and artists, such as Gelett Burgess, Julian Street, Richard Le Gallienne, James Montgomery Flagg, Miss McMein and Anna Richardson Steele are doing their bit by writing and painting gratis.

The fund has been officially endorsed by the War and Navy Department, and the work is directed by Alexander Blaikie Dick, who plans to have 400,000 packages of tobacco, etc., distributed by the Red Cross to our soldiers in France before Christmas.

The two hundred newspapers are making special appeals and are sending all contributions to the fund at 25 West 44th street, New York City. The Louisville Courier-Gazette received 750 pounds of tobacco from one farmer in Kentucky.

Arthur Guy Empey, the man who went "Over the Top" and came back to tell this country all about it in his popular book, is taking up collections and giving lectures to help the fund, which up to the present time totals $107,000. The fund is getting the backing of the entire country and has already been endorsed by the governors of twenty-four states.

In addition to giving lectures Mr. Empey is writing special articles to arouse the American public to the need of "smokes" in the trenches.

Perhaps you will say, "My boy is over there and he doesn't smoke."

Don't fool yourself. After he has "sat it out" on the fire step of a front line trench for a few days he will smoke. HE CAN'T HELP IT.

The public to be convinced must have facts. Well, here are some facts, actual happenings in the trenches of France and in hospitals. These incidents will show the crying need of the soldiers for smokes.

Are we going to send them some or are we going to let them keep on longing?

A wounded Tommy Atkins is lying on the ground, the blood running from a hole in his leg made by a bit of shrapnel. He is yelling for stretcher bearers. Here they come at the double. They stop beside him, place the stretcher on the ground, open it up, and one of them unbuttons a little pouch he is carrying, sticks in his hand and pulls out—no, not a bandage, but a smoke. He hands it to the wounded Tommy, who is grinning. The grin makes cracks in the dried mud on his face. Then the following conversation ensues:

The Lorillard Kit

Stretcher bearer: "Want a smoke? Where are you hit?"

Tommy: "Yes. In the leg."

The stretcher bearer lights the smoke, binds up Tommy's wound and, placing him on the stretcher, the two Red Cross men start with him on their way to the nearest advanced dressing station. Wending their way through the muddy and narrow communication trench, the leading stretcher bearer stumbles over a trench grid. Down he goes, and Tommy is nearly dumped into the mud.

He lets out a yell.

The offending stretcher bearer, red faced and ashamed of his carelessness, in a nervoice inquires:

"Did I 'urt your wound, mate? I'm sorry."

Tommy answers: "'Ell; no!"

The stretcher bearer, indignantly, "Well, wot's all the bloody row about?"

Tommy, meekly: "I dropped me smoke, mate. Tip us another."

The stretcher bearers search their pouches and pockets, but find none.

The stretcher, with its bleeding burden, resumes its winding course through the trench, its wake blue with curses and sarcastic remarks from Tommy directed at the stretcher bearers.

If there had been another smoke Tommy would have been contented and happy, but as it was he was miserable and complaining, making it unpleasant for every one who handled him in his long trip to Blighty.

But such is the creed of the trenches—keep our boys warm, their bellies full, give tem plenty of smokes and they will plant te flag in Berlin. Just take any one of the ove three away, especially the "smokes," d, although the flag will eventually land here it belongs, it will take much longer.

We had gone "over the top" in a charge rly that morning. It was tough sledding. 'e were "clicking" casualties so fast that an lding machine was needed to keep count of tem.

There were ten of us—a machine gun, a rgeant, six Vicker's machine gunners and vo company men detailed from the battalion r the purpose of "bringing up 'ammo'" mmunition).

Our part in this little affair of "straightening the line" consisted in the operation of a achine gun to help break up the counterattack which the Germans would launch gainst our captured position.

When the counterattack started it was hot ork. Belt after belt was fed through the un. The water in the barrel casing was oiling. Shells were commencing to drop round our crater, too close for comfort. The erman artillery had "taped" us, and we knew would only be a short time before a shell would come screeching over, but we had to old our position.

Our ammunition was getting low. The ergeant detailed two men to go back for ammo," a risky job under that intense fire. The men were about to start when one of ne machine gunners shouted into the ear of ne sergeant.

"Don't send Collins; he's got the only pipe this bally crowd. Supposin' he gets a it?"

The sergeant, with a look of mortification on his smutty face, replied:

"Blime me, so he has. I'm a silly ass to forget it. Wallace, you go after 'ammo,' and, Collins you get on the gun."

Wallace started grousing, but went. He got hit in the leg. If he had had a pipe he wouldn't have been sent. Collins stayed with us. He wasn't wounded.

During a lull in the firing we each took turns at the pipe. We had our smoke.

Did we win? Well, I think we did. I can't rightly remember, but anyway Fritz packed up his artillery and we were safe. But, do you know, we certainly enjoyed that smoke.

Without Knowing What You Are Doing

If in your view it is of sufficient interest, I would appreciate it if you would straighten me out in a situation which has arisen in our business. If anything is published about this letter, do not mention names.

I believe other wholesale dealers would have the same question arise, but it has never arisen before in our business in exactly this aspect. We have a customer to whom we sell considerable goods. He is very particular and critical, and we have had some difficulty holding his business. We are now in an argument with him over a transaction that took place recently. He ordered a quantity of women's cloth, which we, relying on the representation of the manufacturer, stated was all wool. The price to him was based on the belief that the goods were all wool. The customer now says he suspected that the goods were not all wool, and had a sample analyzed, with the result of finding that they were nowhere near all wool. The writer waited on this customer for these goods, and distinctly remembers being asked if they were all wool and saying that they were, so there is no question about the representation having been made. He says he has made up some of this cloth into suits and it has been found out that it is not all wool, and he has suffered great damages, and he is talking about bringing a law suit against us. We would like to know the position of a dealer who buys goods in good faith from somebody else, on certain representations, and merely passes on those representations to his own customers. Can he get into any trouble, if the statements are false? It seems to us that it is highly important for every dealer to know this. We believe his kick is against the manufacturer.

E. K. B. & Bros.

I do not remember ever discussing this precise question. I have discussed the question which arises when a dealer sells something made by somebody else, which injures somebody—who is responsible, the manufacturer or the dealer?—and I only very recently discussed the responsibility of a dealer whose employe sold goods for him under false representations. But the question here presented is different: When a dealer, wholesale or retail, buys merchandise under certain representations as to its character or quality, which merchandise he sells again under the same representations, what is his responsibility, when the representations turn out to be false?

Really the whole answer can be condensed into a few words: It depends on how he sells again under the same representations. If he merely passes the representations on to his customer, stating that they are the manufacturer's and not his, he is not liable no matter what happens. If he makes the representations as his own, without saying that they are the manufacturer's, the liability is his, but of course he has a case against the person he bought from.

I apply this to the case cited by this correspondent. Suppose his customer had asked the question: "Is this absolutely all wool?" and he had replied, "Well, we have the manufacturer's word that it is. Of course, we really don't know much about it," no suit could have successfully been brought against him, even if the goods were all cotton.

But if when asked the question he had replied, as most merchants do, no matter how small their real knowledge on the subject, "Yes, indeed, it's all wool—every thread of it!" then the liability would be his, because he had made the false representation his own. The law imputes to a merchant either special knowledge of the goods he sells, or the means of acquiring it, and holds him strictly to the mark. The following is from a leading case on the subject:

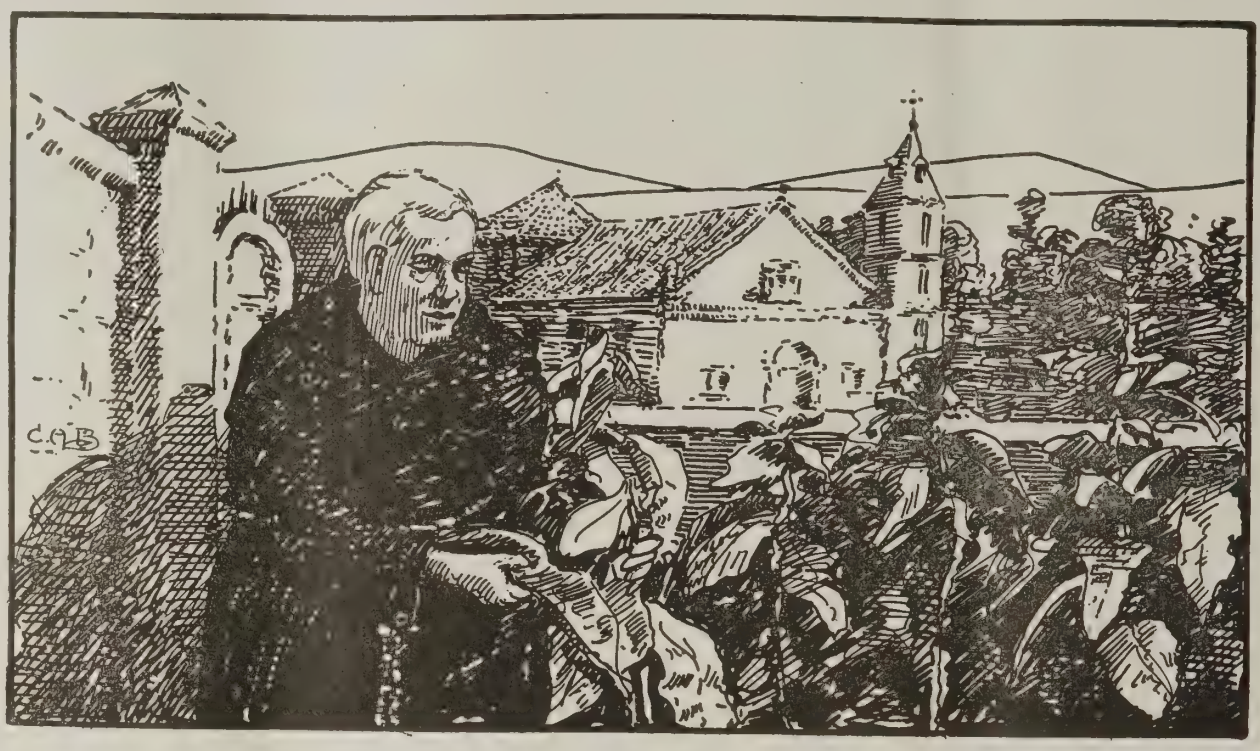
If a person makes a representation under such circumstances that he ought to know whether it is true or false, and it is in fact false, knowledge of its falsity may be implied. To bring a case within this rule, the proof should show that the party occupied such a special situation or possessed such special means of knowledge or made it his duty to know as to the truth or falsity of the representations made.

He who represents something which he does not know to be true, or knows to be false, to another's prejudice, or his own gain, is guilty of falsehood and must answer in damages.

If a person makes a statement with the affirmation, express or implied, that he knows it to be true, or that he makes it of his own knowledge, and the statement is in fact false, he is guilty of a fraudulent representation, if he knows that his claim of knowledge is false, and in such a case it can make no difference that he does not know that the statement is false or even that he believes it to be true.

The principle laid down here has been applied in all sorts of cases. Practically all the laws holding dealers in certain goods up to certain standards of quality, such as food laws, drug laws, milk laws, pure fabric and pure leather laws, etc., convict a merchant if he sells goods not in conformity with the law, whether he knew it or not. This on the theory that if he didn't know he ought to know what kind of goods he is selling.

A man who recommends another for credit, representing indirectly at least that he knows enough about the subject to speak intelligently, is liable if the person recommended turns out to be a beat. This whether the sponsor knew it or not.



A house selling a cash register or a computing scale or any store appliance, whether it made it or not, is liable if it says the appliance will do things which it actually will not do. Even though it implicitly believed them.

A long list might be given of cases where dealers have given personal guarantees of goods made by somebody else, which guarantees were mere repetitions of guarantees made to them by the person of whom they had bought. The following extract from a well-known case will tell merchants in this position exactly where they stand:

If a person receives information from others as to a matter, and believing the information to be true, honestly repeats it, explaining that he has no personal knowledge, he is clearly not guilty of fraud. On the other hand, if he makes the statement as of his own knowledge, and does not disclose the fact that he is merely relying upon the information received from others, he is guilty.

My judgment is that my Chicago correspondent is liable for whatever damages his customer can show he sustained. He made the guarantee of all wool his own. But of course he can recover all his damages from the manufacturer whose fraud was the original cause of all the trouble.

The ruling of the Federal Reserve Board that ninety-day notes issued by corporations under an agreement for their renewal extending for a period of two years are "undesirable as investments for Federal Reserve Banks" caused a lot of talk in banking circles. This decision was interpreted as declaring the notes ineligible for rediscount, and although the board made no specific mention of any particular note issue, it was assumed by some people that the board had in mind the $25,000,000 of American Tobacco Co. notes.

The Retailers Are Getting Together—The Second Meeting of the New Association —An Importer Who Had Excuse for Being Impatient—Tobacco Exhibits That Attracted Crowds—A Few Toots from a Prophetic Fog Horn

PHILADELPHIA, November 26.—Every once a while, and sometimes oftener, a person who might be described as a pessimist if he didn't have his facts so straight, halts us on the boulevard and pours into our shellac ear a tale of woe. Burden of said tale is that the worst is not over by a darn sight; that even with Lancaster tobacco quoted at 31 cents per pound, the trouble, like reform politics, is only starting. But unlike the type of politics known as "wrist watch" in disrupt and discontented Philadelphia—which it is today—the trouble reading for the dealers is only starting. Hark to the fog horn of our pet prophet:

"At 31 cents, tobacco is up 200 per cent. and then some. Same thing is true of boxes and other wrapping and packing material. Labor is almost as bad. The manufacturers push up prices on nickel smokes from a maximum of $37.50 to $43 a thousand and some retailers howl. They are wondering why they can't pay their bills. Of course some of us know. It's because they're selling 'em six for a quarter. The only encouraging sign is the fact that the retailer doing tricks like that is learning in the old University of Experience, and if the 'profs' there can't teach him, nobody can."

W. R. Taylor, of the Henry J. Dalton Co., adds to this, the following experience, just to show how charges mount. Recently the firm got a big consignment of smokes from Havana. They landed in New York and, pursuant to directions on the manifest or the bill of lading or whatever they put directions on, the warehouse company trundled 'em to the Pennsy station. At that point the driver was politely informed that Mr. Pennsy had established an embargo. So he took the cases back. After waiting until patience got frayed on the edges, the firm here wired to find out about the delay. It then notified the New Yorkers to ship via Reading. Now Mr. Taylor is waiting to see if the driver will trot around and find out in advance whether the Reading has embargo or not. Judging by all the precedents it will cost the firm another hauling charge if the Reading is also embarging.

At any rate, Samuel Bayuk, of Bayuk Brothers, Inc., has decided that in view of the prices of Sumatra at the recent sales in New York he needs a vacation and the situation needs looking into. And accordingly he has combined and joined the two needs so as to make of them one, and late last week he started for the island which the wrapper made famous. He will spend several weeks in the East Indies.

Free boosts for smokes are becoming the rule in this town rather than the exception. On top of a demonstration of how they make the El Producto for the G. H. P. Co. in the Ledger Central window at Broad and Chestnut streets, the School Bazaar Committee opened up on Monday night of this week a country fair with a lot of side attractions to swell the soldier tobacco fund. Exhibitors of the weed in its various forms include the U. S. Tobacco Co., the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co., P. Lorillard Co., Frishmuth Brothers Co., and the American Tobacco Co.

The El Producto exhibit was one of the best ads tried here in years. An expert cigar maker was installed in the big display window and he rolled 'em out for the edification of thousands, more or less.

Forty-one members attended the second session of the Philadelphia Cigar and Tobacco Merchants' Association, which is less than had been anticipated but was nevertheless looked on as a good showing. Most of the Philadelphia dealers are still somewhat pessimistic about the chances of an association here, but they all agree something has to be done. The association elected the following officers: Horace H. Leach, president; M. J. McDonnell, of Yahn & McDonnell, first vice president; Charles B. Lloyd, second vice president; N. W. Mead, third vice president; Daniel S. Ostrow, fourth vice president; Franklin K. Sterner, fifth vice president; Coates Coleman, treasurer, and J. S. Knight, secretary. Samuel Greenwald, Mead and Knight, comprising the committee on constitution and by-laws, read the result of their efforts and with minor changes both were adopted unanimously.

Charter members as lined up at the two meetings include Samuel Beckett, Charles B. Swift, the G. H. P. Cigar Co., Tuck Cigar Co., N. Solotoff, Arthur H. Holt, Samuel Wachter, C. Arthur Miller, Maurice Jones, William S. Rewalt, R. W. Nassauer, L. F. Weiss, A. G. Will, H. S. Martin, J. Gold, Antonio Roig and Langsdorf Co., Charles B. Lloyd, S. B. Rosenberg, D. Harry Moulsdale, Prizant Brothers Co., John C. McDonnell, W. Leiber, Michael A. Perry, Robert Pollow, A. L. Pollow, R. J. Gunkel, William H. Bailey, E. Cohen & Son, W. A. Haug, George Ulrich, of Ulrich & Co., W. R. Taylor, of the Dalton Co., Samuel and Sidney Gordesky, of the Franklin Tobacco Co., Addison Fowler, of the U. S. Tobacco Co., Nolton Lipshutz and Henry Harrison, the latter representative here of George Schlegel.

A board of directors to consist of the officers and five others was appointed, as follows: Mr. Weiss, Maurice Cohen, Maurice Jones, H. Prizant and Robert Pollow. William Leiber, Sam Greenwald and Charles B. Lloyd were named to the membership committee. Publicity, general trade and entertainment committees will be named later.

There was some discussion of the relation of retailers to manufacturers at the session, but as this was recognized as a big subject, it was postponed until the next meeting. The jobbers expect also to get into this, and no doubt if the association gets into the question heartily and thoroughly a great deal of good can be done.

Everybody is realizing that the present more or less chaotic condition of affairs is not altogether the fault of the retailer who doesn't know how to run his business. The jobber and the importer has been getting burned on a lot of things and is getting good and sore about it. Small retailers who used to buy blindly are being forced to run around and learn something about the market. And it is a fact that they are learning things in some instances which do not induce better relations. In one instance we know of, a retailer found that he could get the nationally advertised product of a certain manufacturer from the up-State factory and ship it to Philadelphia cheaper than he could buy the same brand from the local factory. Retailers have been known to object to the ironbound rule of one very large cigar making firm here, under which cigars are sold two off for cash, and no more, regardless of the size of the order or the buyer. Yet it is by methods such as this that this firm has bulit up an enormous demand for its goods. It has treated all dealers alike and made its goods uniform.

However, there's a silver cloud to every lining, as the Germans say when they blow up a church to see if there's any treasure in the walls. Advances are still being made by the factories to meet the demands of workers who didn't get in on the shove-up put over a few weeks ago, and without doubt there will be another advance in the wholesale price soon which will come near eliminating the dear old nickel smoke. Just now most of the local dealers are selling their own leaders at a nickel and showing up the other fellow's, which is of course good business.

THE "UNITED'S" EARNINGS

Sales During the Past Month Were Nearly $800,000 More Than in October, 1916.

Net earnings of the United Cigar Stores Co. for the full year 1917 will run approximately $1,000,000 ahead of 1916 after allowing for war tax.

The company will earn approximately $14 a share for its $27,162,000 common stock in the current year, as compared with $10.09 a share for the same amount of stock a year ago. The United opened and equipped 100 new stores in 1917. Its chain is now made up of about 1,100 stores and 500 agencies.

Sales in October gained slightly less than $800,000 over October, 1916, and represented the second largest monthly increase in the history of the company, being exceeded only by December, 1916.

Sales for the ten months, ending October 31, 1917, gained $5,900,000 over the same period a year ago. Sales for the first six months of the year increased close to $3,600,000.

Business for the full year on this basis should run slightly over $43,000.000. Sales of 1916 were $36,000,000 and in 1915 $31,000,000. The company has increased its business in a two-year period by $12,000,000, or approximately 40 per cent.

The war taxes under the present schedule will cost the United about $300,000 annually, or in the neighborhood of 1 per cent on the common stock. But, as indicated above, estimates of $14 a share for the junior issue are indicated after allowance for the war levy.

The Wall Street Journal recently forecasted an increase in the dividend rate on United Cigar Stores common stock early next year. "There is official basis now for this assumption. In some quarters an increase to 10 per cent. annually is talked of.

"Earnings indicated above show that the United Cigar Stores Co. is in a better position to increase its dividend now than a year ago, despite an extensive expansion program now in progress."

The United Cigar Stores Co. of America was formed in 1914. Dividends were started on the common stock at that time at the rate of 5 per cent. This was increased in 1915 to 6 per cent., and in 1916 to 7 per cent. Early in the current year the rate was raised to 8 per cent.

The United has not abandoned its plan for entering the candy business, but it is felt that the present uncertainty existing in the sugar market makes it the part of wisdom to postpone entrance into the new field for a time at least.

EXPORT TAX ON GREEK TOBACCO.

WASHINGTON, November 26.—A cable has been received from Saloniki, Greece, as follows:

"Greek Government has imposed immediate export tax upon new and old tobacco of 1 drachma ($0.193) per kilo (2.2046 pounds) on all Argos district and similar quality tobacco. Two drachmas per kilo on all other tobacco. On new tobacco which can be officially proved to have been sold before October 29 and which will be shipped before December 13 half tax only will be collected. The measure affects American concerns."

The Wherefore of Thanksgiving

Apply to the Up-State Philosopher for Information—Excellent Sales for Brands of the General Cigar Co.—A Dealer Is Not Always Happy When He Receives a Check—The Index Finger in Gloversville—Rameses and the Stock Market—Two Friendly Enemies Meet in an Albany Cigar Store—"What Do You Think of the New Fatima Tins?"—Bull Durham in Holiday Attire

New York State Capital District, November 26.—"Some folk wonder why business isn't better here just now," remarked Paul Wessells, of the General Cigar Co. "Well, take only a small section of my territory in North Albany for illustration. Dealers up there report 450 young men absent upon army and navy service in merely that single district. What is the result? Why, out of 42 cigarmen, formerly selling drugs, groceries, liquors and just cigars, 17 have already gone out of business! This is about 40 per cent. of the total, and the end is not yet."

"However," Paul added, "our M. A. Gunst branch really has no kick with their portion of trade for Robert Burns, White Owls and Owls."

Fire completely destroyed the stock of Sol Levy last week. His Albany premises at Hudson avenue and Green street were gutted in a $65,000 blaze which ruined the entire building. Besides the Levy leaf tobacco and cigar manufacturers supply material burned, it is understood the cigar manufacturing firm of H. Heck & Son also had a quantity of leaf lost. This was in storage in the same location. Levy has begun business again, at 9 Green street, within a block of his former location.

"Glory be!" exclaimed a Capital District tobacconist the other morning when he opened his mail and a certified check dropped out, "Somebody's sent a remittance in legal tender!"

And the dealer put on his specs to see who this careless individual might be. "Smokes!" he ejaculated, "ef it ain't mine own money a-comin' back from the Government inventory!"

Sure enough, this man was only one of the vast number of local tradesmen to get their reports and check returned for revision.

For it seems some of the mimeograph forms were attested by commissioners-of-deeds instead of notaries, as directed. These deed commissioners have authority in the county and State only, while the United States Government recognizes the more eminent power of the notary, with seal.

When the 'graphs were sent back, the dealer was directed to make out an entirely new report on the revenue department's recently printed forms, more businesslike.

Manufacturing jewelers and jobbers have been notified by the Revenue Office to pay the tax upon metal cigar and cigarette cases.

Collector Roscoe Irwin, of Albany's Fourteenth District, has received a ruling which puts the ax in tax for all of these silvered and gilded cases soon to be sold for the holiday trade.

Gloversville next! One of the deputy Revenue Collectors visited the shop of a chap in the Glove City where 20,000 Camels were on the shelf.

"Hey, there!" challenged the deputy, "those Caramel cigarettes up yonder have got to pay the $1.20 per M tax, you know."

"How so?" disagreed the dealer. "they are just the same as the other paper cigarettes at 80 cents the thousand."

"Say, son," advised the Revenue One, "you'd better do as I say and pay the full 50 per cent levy on those there goods. They weigh more than 3 pounds to the thou', do you get me?"

So the unhappy merchant sent in his check for the full amount, requesting headquarters to return the difference in case of error. But the cash money has not been restored to the man in Glover's Ville, although it will certainly come, that's sure!

Just a little bit farther up the State, at Utica, there is a live dealer named Pete Wald. He sells a raft of stuff in his several stores. And it is said he has his eye peeled for other good locations there and elsewhere. Ask Peter!

"These holiday packets of sealskin cigars are selling like fury," confessed Frank Dearstyne. "That little box of ten, Baby's 50 cents Perfectos $1, will be our one best bet for Christmas this year. Small packages will be extremely difficult to obtain, but the Dearstyne Brothers' Tobacco Co. is prepared to take care of some of this cigar shortage in special packings up to a reasonable date."

Men sitting and standing in Albany brokerage offices, the other day, watching the hitchy-koo of ticker and blackboard, were approached by a handsome stranger:

"Beg your pardon, sir," he would say, "but did you ever smoke a Rameses cigarette? Rameses smokers, as a rule, never change, so, if you've never had the previous pleasure of enjoying this brand I'll be glad to take your name and address for Stephano Brothers, 1014 Walnut street, Philadelphia, and have them send you a tin of 100, without cost to you, sir."

Very, very few of these keene-sages of State and Wall streets could muster sufficient courage, upon the spur of the opportunity, to refuse the gentlemanly philanthropist.

"Now, I wonder," speculated a speculator, who cheerfully furnished the correct mailings for himself at three separate addresses, under the necessary aliases, "could I get another hundred of these cigarettes if I have them sent to my regular dealer?"

But just then Little Steel went up one-eighth on the board, and the shrewd investor forgot the cigarette offer in the excitement of a Bull movement in the Street. (Censored and passed by M. J. Tropauer of Tobacco Products.)

Since E. C. Brumaghim suffered two strokes of paralysis, some time ago, he has not been able to manage his drug-cigar business at Madison avenue and Green street, Albany.

So the doctor has disposed of his store to J. B. Harvith, the former occupant, and the same man that Doc Brumaghim sold the location to previously, before the doctor re-entered active trade.

"On my way back to New York," smiled Sam Fisher, "and glad I am to return to the house of Storm, Fisher & Co., down there on Warren street, you bet! Business is considerably upset, right now, more so, perhaps, than you or I will ever see it again. But I thought I would stop over here and see how things are in the Capital District."

Two friendly enemies met in an Albany cigar store recently. Both represent tobacco factories. And both sell for Richmond firms.

Notes were compared. Views were exchanged. Gossip was gossiped. Neither one roasted the 'tother. Everything resembled the Russian front at Riga, where German and Russ fraternized like Belgian and Briton.

Then someone dropped a T. N. T. explosive from a French Spad, 10,000 feet over all, with the 200 horse engines racing as only the Hispano-Suissa can.

Well, the attending surgeons picked out the fragments of shrapnel, and the contestants shook hands, going two ways.

No, the difficulty didn't arise over the thickness of the lead-foils on Tareyton and Eutopia tobaccos. 'Twasn't that. Instead, it was about those Jefferson-Eutopia Xmas jars and cans as contrasted to the Serene-Tareyton designs.

Someone contended that the Cameron folk had the nicest red ribbon. And the bestest holly. While the Falk champions liked the Indian pottery effect of the aluminum cans. And the other little fixin's of the Falk products.

But it all ended happily. Bill Noonan admitted he had the finest goods, and Brother Barroll acknowledged he had the snappiest stuff. And the jury? Well, now that you mention it, the jury hemmed and hawed all over the lot. Then, at last, just so they could get home in time to doll up for the openin' of the Boulevard Rotisserie, all hands were piped up to the poop-deck, and they individually and unanimously concurred in this decision, ordered engrossed upon parchment and spread upon the minutes, thusly:

"Resolved, That Jefferson and Eutopia tobaccos are classy smokings, suitably suitable for every plumber-with-a-pipe, and, be it further

"Resolved, That Serene and Tareyton Mixtures are tobaccos with a Big T, especially special for every feller-who-wants-to-smoke."

After an educational tour of high-school and commercial college, jobber Sam Fulder, of North Pearl street, Albany, has placed his son in the service to cover city distribution.

Sam, brother Jake and the Junior will continue to put all their efforts upon Flor de Fulder, No. 512, Webster, Mi Hogar, Reynaldo, and the other old accounts of the house.

"What do you think of our new Fatima tin of 100 cigarettes?" inquired Charlie Fox, the Liggett & Myers specialty man. "It's selling like swagger sticks to soldiers and their friends. Even at the various retail prices, Fatimas, Richmond Straight Cuts, Chesterfields and Piedmonts are going out just about as fast as the Duke branch can produce them. So you'd better order up now for the holidays, else you'll probably be disappointed with your stock."

Staging a show comes to Flo Ziegfeld more like art and pleasure than work. His resulting revues are therefore attractive in design and coutourier. People then pay $2 the green coupon for a coupla hours of song and dance, a la M. Rodier et Mme. Jeanne Lanvin.

Now, this same Comedie Francaise may be observed in big time vaudeville, perhaps, without the Dillingham & Ziegfeld couleur de rose. Fifty cents is then the usual price for the soiree.

So, even our ancient and steadfast friend, Bull Durham, can be improved with a little of this same Ziegfeld magic. For proof, see the Holiday packed-for-mailing cartons of Durham. Also the combination set of three bundles of Lucky Strike cigarettes and four bags of Bull, instant post-um for the khaki kiddies at 50 cents the oblong boxlet.

Durham, of course, is stamped in the new ⅞-ounce packet, and the Lucky Strikes are of the famous 16s.

Postmasters have notified the trade that soldiers' holiday gifts may be mailed for somewhere in Europe up to, and including, Tuesday, December 4.

Originally the date was set at November 15. But it is now apparent that any parcel postings for the troops will reach their probable destinations if they arrive at the Hoboken piers on or before the date stated.

This additional time gives friends and relatives ample opportunity to prepare the Christmas stockings for the boys at the front. And dealers are requested to post such notices in prominent positions, both within and without their stores.

National Army and National Guard camps within the borders of the U. S. A., particularly in the South, require a week or ten days before the final holidays to distribute the cheerful gifts.

THANKSGIVING

Thanksgiving day to many may be merely the last Thursday in November and if a man happens to have an outstanding bill on that day or some other cause to be cross perchance he will think that he has nothing to be thankful for, entirely forgetting the good things that have come his way during the preceding twelve months.

Regardless of the high cost of living, most of us have much for which we should be thankful.

We are witnessing the greatest war the world ever saw and we are protected. Just picture how happy Belgium would be with half our joys. Think how much worse off we would be, if we were within fifty miles of the trenches. Then a good night's sleep undisturbed by the dropping of bombs, would loom up like an elusive luxury. We sleep well, we eat enough, and the war has brought more business than some of us can handle.

In summing up what you should be thankful for don't forget to include the bad breaks in life, business, and health that passed you by, and if Fate does happen to step on your pet physical or business corn, Thanksgiving day just smile, light a cigar and say, "Well, better luck next time, old top."

CONSOLATION IN ENGLAND.

Food and tobacco and shells are all munitions. The former two fortify the man and help him to make and fire the shells and to stand the shock of the enemy bombardment. And in this trade, with its distinct and important place in the plan of effectively waging war, there is some dislocation. Quite natural too that there should be. How could it be otherwise? The orderly mind of the citizen brought up in peace times likes all matters to proceed in an orderly routine fashion. The great marvel has been brought about by the valiance of our Navy and Army that this desire for things to go on much as usual was made possible of realization until somewhat recently. Smokers have smoked, and still do smoke, with a degree of facility which can be matched by the citizens of no other belligerent power. And while the gentle Hun draws what consolation he can from very low tobacco supplies and still lower substitutes, the laudable aim to keep the home pipe burning has been up to now splendidly attained in Great Britain.—London Tobacco.

HIGH PRICES LIKELY TO CONTINUE.

The present crop of tobacco is rapidly passing from the farmers' hands. South Carolina sold out long ago. Eastern North Carolina will soon be done. The Old Belt markets in North Carolina and Virginia will be practically through by Christmas. Kentucky and Tennessee, and the few markets in Ohio and West Virginia, will open up in a few days, and in three months the Western crop will be sold. In many respects this is a remarkable tobacco year. Never before in the history of the tobacco trade have prices been so high, and yet after all there is nothing so remarkable about this fact. Conditions certainly justify high prices. The United States has produced only a normal crop, and the world's production, on the whole, we believe has fallen short of former years. It cost a great deal more to produce tobacco, and in the face of these facts there is a steady and an active increase in the consumption of all kinds of manufactured tobacco. The question now is, What of the future? Our answer is that tobacco will continue to sell high for years to come. At the same time we want to again warn farmers from planting too much tobacco, to the exclusion of other important crops.—Southern Tobacco Journal.

Albert Freeman of Sidney J. Freeman & Sons leaves shortly for Camp Meade. A few weeks ago, while waiting for his country's call to the colors, he became engaged to Miss Malvina Schwartz. Albert's journey to the trenches will entail additional traveling for his father Sidney J., and his brother E. M. Freeman. The pair will cover Albert's former territory.

The San Francisco Grocer tells how a husky sailor rushed into one of the M. A. Gunst branch stores in San Francisco last week. He was evidently a member of the grabenheimer family, fresh from the rural districts. He looked about excitedly and saw the large red, white and blue barrels marked for the soldiers and sailors, and asked if the gift packages were for the soldiers and sailors. When assured they were by the young clerk on watch, he proceeded over to the barrel, loaded his pockets and disappeared in the fog before anybody realized what was happening.

Becoming a Fixture in San Francisco

The Six-Cent Price for the Erstwhile Nickel Cigar—But Otherwise Dealers as Yet Have Failed to Arrive at a Satisfactory Agreement—Getting Goods for the Holidays—Importing Wrappers Direct from Sumatra—Falkenstein Found Business Good in Washington and Idaho—"Smokeless Friday" Originated in Santa Clara

San Francisco, November 21.—The situation among the local retailers is unchanged so far as any agreement regarding prices is concerned. The meeting of the Retailers' Association, held a few days ago, did not result in anything tangible, so prices are unsettled as ever. The announcement to the trade by the General Cigar Co. that after the first of the year the price of the Owl Cigar will be advanced to 6 cents retail is taken to indicate the end of the 5-cent cigar, except for certain small sizes, which for the present will be sold at the old 5-cent price. The circular of the General Cigar Co. states that, "owing to uncontrollable circumstances, Owl Londres and all large 5-cent cigars manufactured by this company will, approximately January 1, 1918, be placed in the 6-cent class. The trade realizing that the present $37.50 list must accordingly be considerably advanced, will naturally endeavor to speculate heavily in Owl Londres. Therefore, in order to deal fairly with all our customers, we shall be obliged to distribute our limited stock on all allotment basis, and all orders received will be subject to our acceptance. Little Bobbies are being maintained on a 5-cent retail, $37.50 jobbing basis. After January 1, 1918, White Owls will be marketed on a 7-cent basis."

H. L. Judell & Co. also announce that all their 5-cent goods go to 6 cents on the first of the year. In order to prevent speculation on the part of the retailers this company has decided to prorate its sales among the buyers on a basis of their purchases during the past three months.

E. T. Stanley, northwestern representative of the Morgan Cigar Co., is in San Francisco looking over the field. He expects to appoint a San Francisco representative while he is in this city.

Sam Israel is putting in a large stock of candy for the Christmas trade. He reports that there is a scarcity of Beachnut chewing gum in this market.

Natural Cigarettes now appear on the local market put up in attractive Christmas packages. The wholesalers report a good demand for them.

H. L. Judell & Co. report that they are receiving some Christmas goods. They recently brought in a considerable shipment by express, as they could not trust the irregularity of freight shipments. Mr. Judell says that he expects to have to patronize the express for more goods, although the increase in express charges after the first of next month may render such shipments prohibitory after that date. This company has recently added Manila cigars to their other lines and are now selling "Fighting Bob" in several sizes from $25 to $35.

Fred Peterson, salesman for H. L. Judell & Co., has been ill with stomach trouble for about six weeks. He is now about town again and called at the office this week. He will return to his position about the first of December.

Philip Conradi, head of the firm of Philip Conradi & Son, importers of leaf tobacco, is in the East on a business trip. His son, Philip Jr., says that the company has been having trouble in getting Sumatra tobacco direct although he understands that a direct shipment is now on the way.

George Conradi, son of Philip Conradi, Sr. has entered the employ of the firm and will travel on the road, alternating with his brother Philip.

M. H. Falkenstein, vice-president of S. Bachman & Co., has just returned from an extended trip through Washington and Idaho. He reports that he found business excellent throughout that territory, except among the retailers who are troubled by the instability of prices. All 5-cent cigars of this company go to 6 cents on the first of the year.

Frankel, Gerdts & Co. report that they have sold between 150,000 and 200,000 La Natividad and El Canimo cigars in small 25 boxes. They say that they have orders for more, but that they cannot make deliveries because they cannot get the boxes in which to pack them.

Milton Esberg, of the General Cigar Co., is making the coast territory, placing sales among jobbers.

Morgan Gunst, of the same company, has just returned from Seattle, Spokane and other points in that territory, after an absence of about a week.

"Smokeless Friday" was originated in Santa Clara county, south of San Francisco. A man named Henry Roth inaugurated the practice, his plan being to refrain from smoking on that day, or to deposit the same amount of tobacco or other smokes usually consumed in one day for the benefit of the soldiers in France. About a dozen men agreed to the plan and promised to push it along by means of an endless chain.

Joseph Kurlander, one of the old-time cigar dealers of Santa Rosa, was in San Francisco this week shaking hands with his old friends.

New Tobacco Taxes in Chili

WASHINGTON, November 22.—Pursuant to new internal revenue laws of Chili excise tax of 36.5 cents will be paid on all imported cigars sold in sealed boxes, which boxes contain 25 cigars or less. On other imported cigars the stamp tax is .0365 cent each. On domestic cigars the tax is .0182 cent each and on small cigars, in boxes or packages, the duty is .0073 cent each. The tax on imported cigarettes is .0365 cent per package and on domestic cigarettes .0182 cent per package.

A package of cigarettes must not contain more than 14 cigarettes nor weigh more than 25 grams, including the container. An excess over these requirements is to be considered as a full package on which the full stamp tax is required. Cut tobacco must pay a tax of .0182 cent per package of 25 grams.

The following duties have been decreed:

Cigarettes, $3.65 per kilo, legal weight.

Cigars, $2.45 per kilo, legal weight.

Leaf tobacco, $1.09½ per kilo, net weight.

Snuff, $1.82½ per kilo, legal weight.

Tobacco, cut or shredded and pressed for chewing, $1.85 per kilo, net weight.

DR. SHAW URGES A "SMOKELESS FRIDAY."

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, chairman of the Woman's Committee of the National Council of Defence, at a mass meeting of Maryland mothers in Baltimore, Sunday, termed the war "a woman's war, man-made in Germany." She declared the greatest proof of patriotism in women was the fact that they gave their sons for war.

"We must send our boys away with a smile on our faces," she said. "The time for tears must be after they are gone. Let our children know that they live in the land where men are willing to die and where women are willing to give all for their country. All the world is calling to the womanhood and the motherhood of America."

Dr. Shaw urged a "smokeless Friday" for men at home, and that they send the tobacco so saved to the men in the field.

A message to America's men in the service was drafted and will be sent to the various units on Christmas. It is:

"The women of America are with you in spirit and in service. You are our standard bearers and our hope. We love you, believe in you and pray for you this Christmas morn."

UP STATE OBSERVATIONS

Mail should therefore be despatched to soldiers in these cantonments on or before Saturday, December 15. Retailers are urged to announce this date also. Because, in the event of late postings, the parcels will be jammed to the sky at various junction and distributing points. And the consignees will not obtain their cigars, cigarettes and tobaccos until the holidays are o'er.

Enter fair dame in a Capital District cigar store: "Please let me have 200 Rameses cigarettes in tins," she asked. "I wish you would enclose this envelope, and send them by post to France," giving the salesman an address in the Aviation Service.'

Then, that evening, when the goods were packed and sent to the postoffice for shipment, the parcel post clerk unkindly ripped the package in seven pieces with shears and bayonet-knife, digging the inoffensive two by four envelope from its comfortable place between the boxes, and opened it up for censorship.

"See," grinned the tired poster, "if the young lady could have kept those few words for another letter, or until after the war, this package could go for 23 cents. As it is, she'll have to pay 69."

And he tossed the outfit one side for future attention, calmly replacing his disarranged window sign plainly lettered, "We do not lick stamps here. Apply to the sponge at the next window."

From present indications, local jobbers will be unable to supply sufficient 8 and 16 ounce tins and glass jar packings of popular smokings for the Christmas demand.

Velvet, Prince Albert, Tuxedo, Lucky Strike, and Serene can't come fast enough.

Shipments are reported on the way for some of these goods, but railroad and steamer traffic is seriously impeded by the jam of troop and supply transport going through the important centers.

"Greeley was right," insists William Street-Smith, "for he knew from experience this little snatch of philosophy: 'That darkest day in any man's career is when he first fancies there is some easier way of gaining a dollar than by squarely earning it.'" THE SMOKER.

Chicago Dealers Made More Optimistic

Store Windows "All Dolled Up" for the Holidays—Bob Delaney Forsakes the Cigarette Business—Roi Tan Sales Accelerators Confer with R. M. C. Glenn —The Slot Machine That Fashionables Now Patronize—Union Makes Peace with La Kurba Cigar Co.

CHICAGO, November 24.—Dealers are scrambling now to get things in shape for the holiday rush. Orders placed in September and October are coming in and the stores have all kinds of cigars for sale. Windows are "dolled" up with fancy packages and the boys are hustling around for box orders.

Ernst McKenzie, the El Roi Tanner, has been appointed chairman of the cigar end of the Y. M. C. A. campaign to collect $3,000,000 for the boys in France.

Those attending the important meeting called by R. M. C. Glenn of Seidenberg & Co., here last week were R. M. C. Glenn, president; O. S. Schneider, vice-president, of Seidenberg & Co.; J. H. Parker, Jr., of Parker Gordon Cigar Co.; Harry Ernshaw, Fred Stribben and Dave Cargill, of Stone-Ordean-Wells Co.; Mr. Bock, of Bock-Stauffer Co., Pittsburgh; Mr. Brennan, Dallas, Texas; George Richardson, of Seidenberg & Co.; W. R. Morland, of the Cordove Cigar Co., Denver, Colo.; John MacMahon, of Reid Murdoch & Co., Chicago; Fred Lansing, of Denver, and Ernst McKenzie, head of the sales force of Seidenberg & Co., for the Middle West.

La Palina Monopoles is a new size that will shortly be put on the market by the Congress Cigar Co. It will retail for 11 cents.

The Sammie Kit put out by McNeill & Higgins Co., is on sale around town. It retails for $2.25 and contains 25 1872 5-cent cigars, 1 pipe, cigarette papers, four tins of smoking tobacco, 1 cut of plug and two boxes of matches.

By the way, did you know that John Collins from Ohio Flats had gone on a diet to reduce? It's a secret, of course, but he did.

Camels now cost dealers $5.25 and are retailing in the loop stores for 13 cents.

"Don't throw away your tin cans, save them; they can be straightened out and used to mend the leaky roofs," says Harry Totten. "Tot" must know, as he has a bungalow on the north shore.

The Monroe Cigar Co. has added to their fine line La Palina, Java wrapped cigars.

The big surprise this week was the announcement direct from Bob Delaney, who has been representing Schinasi Bros., that he has tendered his resignation, to take effect December 1. He will leave the tobacco business to represent a large chemical company and will have all the territory south of the Mason-Dixon line, with a large force of missionary men under him. Bob was one of the best known cigarette and tobacco salesmen that ever worked this field. For five years he was at the head of the Standard Tobacco Co.'s salesforce, with headquarters in Chicago. It was only a few months ago he changed to the Schinasi branch of the Tobacco Products Co. as road salesman.

Christmas packages of Murad, Helmar, London Life and Egyptian Deities, 100 to the box, have been stocked by the dealers. The packings are all very nifty and show up to fine advantage.

Ruhstrat Crowley & Co. are boosting Charles Denby very advantageously. They have sent out many postal cards to consumers who, on presenting the cards to specified dealers, will receive free of charge two Charles Denby cigars for each card.

Watching the bird pop out of the camera is a tame amusement to beholding the doughnuts drop out of a slot machine. At present this genial game is society's noonday pastime. Women who plunged into war work with vigor have discovered that luncheon downtown daily is a steady nibble on the cash account. Carrying sandwiches from home, even when put up by the finest chefs, proved dreary consolation and awakened new consideration for the army of wage earners. And so, with true class ingenuity, society set about finding a way to avoid each evil. At present the selection is the slot meals. Odd as it may seem, the slot carrying highest laurels in the estimation of the drive is that housing fishballs. This reminds one rather of the ancient pan-egyric, popular since Adam's youth—

The waiter roared it through the hall,
"We don't give bread with one fish ball";

for the bread has to come from another vending machine and demands still another nickel, but not a war tax.

With the government cutting out all the unnecessary freight traffic, the old-fashioned hobo who boasted that he came into town on a load of postholes will have to find a new metaphor.

Over on the north side are seen a lot of white and gold Palo signs on the fronts of many cigar stores. Thorwart & Roehling, local distributers of the Palo brand, have obtained a big distribution for this mild Havana.

Muratore is the new brand placed on the market by B. Link & Sons, manufacturers. It is named after the well-known opera star, Lucien Muratore.

Charlie Zeller has thrown down the village belle. He says now he is going to be a bachelor. "Charlie" sells the little "brown box" out here and his boosters on Philip Morris cigarettes are many.

Frank "Muscles" Cohn is still hard at work. He is a great worker and devotes his time to the loop trade. If you don't believe it, come out and see how he has placed Admiration and Lozano with the big fellows.

Wm. Istel, at 66 E. 12th street, says "business is good." We believe it, as his location is a very busy one, being a block from the Michigan Central depot. San Alto cigars are popular at the Istel store.

El Pavo, of the El Pavo Cigar Co., 222 North Wabash avenue, are proving ready sellers wherever they are placed.

How would you like that "grand and glorious feelin'" that would come if some joy vender slipped you a check unawares and the "comfy" sensation that you have when you have done a good deed, to be your portion in a compound measure? Well, they're getting this chance out here. The United Cigar Dealers Co., the Chicago branch of Welscher Brothers, New York, are going to give each of the five dealers sending in the greatest number of bands from their Cyro cigars to the Daily News tobacco fund a $50 Liberty Loan Bond. Two weeks ago the United Cigar Dealers Co. gave 5,000 Cyro cigars to the fund and pledged itself to redeem every ten Cyro bands sent to the fund with a sum sufficient to buy a package of smoking tobacco. The dealers collect the bands from the smoker, who drops them in a box on his counter which has been provided for him by the company. The time limit under this generous offer closes December 31, 1917. Contributions of the bands are to be sent to the Daily News in lots of 300 in a package and they will from time to time publish a list of the leading dealers.

Chicago's elevated railroads jammed 8,720,335 more people into their cars during the first half of this year, as compared with the same period of 1916. While at the same time the number of cars in service was reduced 43. The management succeeded in the six months' period in making each of its cars carry 5,000 more persons than during the same period in 1916, despite reports in the former year that the overcrowding was intolerable. "Still we find it hard to get a seat going or coming."

Clarence Hirschhorn & Co. find the sale on their leading sellers, Tom Moore, Optimo, Harvesters and San Martin & Leon, which they control for this territory, showing a big improvement over sales of last year. They are having much difficulty in getting enough Little Toms to supply the trade.

Friel & O'Hara, at 43rd and Indiana avenue, are selling lots of San Altos. This is a popular transfer corner and a big business is done by this well-known firm.

Bernstein & Schey, Van Buren and Franklin streets, make as their leading sellers, La Berach, Corina, Romeo and Garcia, and Perfecto Garcia in fine goods, and Idolitas and B. & S. Especials in 5-cent cigars. At present a large and attractive Murad display is appearing in their Van Buren street window.

The cigar department of Franklin McVeagh & Co. have sold a world of their "Kamp Kits" package. Many a soldier boy will be glad when he receives one of these from home.

Suit has been entered by Harry L. Harris against C. Waldbott & Co., a small local cigar factory, for repayment of a cash loan of $1,000 made to C. Waldbott & Co., and $670 due on back salary.

Another retailer that took on La Palina line is that old established firm of Geo. C. Knight, at Randolph street and Wabash avenue.

Guy Reed, of the Sherman Store, of Albert Breitung, who spent some time in the officers' training camp at Fort Sheridan this summer, says he reckons he can do anything when he is through with "Uncle Sammy." Guy is from old Missouri and does not own a "dawg."

We notice Fred Suss, of the R. Steinecke & Co., has returned to New York from his extended western trip. Congratulations, Freddy; may you have many more trips like the one you just finished.

While wading through the daily papers a few days ago I discovered the following ad. "To Cigar Dealers and the Public at Large: We, the undersigned, The International Cigar Makers' Union of America, do hereby certify and announce to the public at large that all differences heretofore existing between the undersigned and the La Kurba Cigar Co., of Chicago, Illinois, and Benton Harbor, Michigan, have been satisfactorily adjusted between the parties by arbitration, and we now desire to announce to you that all cigars manufactured by said La Kurba Cigar Co., including the brands known as Chicago Motor Club, Le Panto, D'eon, Dreamer Boy and El Renardo are manufactured, produced and sold to the public under conditions approved by us; and that all said brands and productions bear our stamp of approval. Signed, Progressive Local No. 527, of the International Cigar Makers' Union of America, by Charles W. Winfield, Business Agent." "The union fought the La Kurba factory for the past four years, and two years ago forced them to remove their factory from Chicago to Benton Harbor."

M. & H. Brown, who operate a chain of retail stores on the north side, have entered the candy jobbing field under the firm name of the Brown Candy Co. Several men are already at work placing the goods with the local dealers.

Gossip is excited because of the queer actions of Al Lovedale, of Geo. C. Knight store. He sits by the hour drawing plans for the cutest little bungalow, and we know Uncle Sam has no use for such things. Can he be thinking of bidding a bachelor's life farewell?

"Sno Matter," says Frank Cohn, of the sales staff of Nathan Fox & Co., "the more Admirations I book orders for, the more 'h——' I get from the trade. We simply can't get enough to supply the wants of the dealers."

And that's not all. Old "Mac" Ernst Mac-

CHRISTMAS is coming, and it will be different from any Christmas in the history of the country; so many of our young men will either be fighting for our country or in training for the fight. There never was a time when cigarettes were in such demand.

The boys will be away from home, and what could be more welcome than cigarettes in his box from home? It must be the wish of every one who has some one dear to them in a camp in this country that on that day of all days he have every pleasure and comfort.

With this in mind, we have this year specially prepared packings of PALL MALL, LUCKY STRIKE, OMAR and LORD SALISBURY, as illustrated. They are attractive, practical and economical.

Your jobber will ship these Christmas packings as a part of your regular stock order. Display them—push them. They will be the biggest sellers in Christmas Cigarette Packings this year.

THE PALL MALL Magnum contains 100 plain and 100 cork tip. It is an irresistible gift purchase. Its rich, luxurious color scheme of red and gold, combined with the holiday dress, makes it a package of great appeal. No extra charge for this packing.

THE PALL MALL Library packing contains 100 cigarettes, either plain or cork tip. It is identical with the Magnum, except the size. It is going to be one of the biggest selling Christmas brands this year. Thousands of people who have 'their boys' or friends in the training camps know that the best is none too good to send their fighting lads of whom they are so proud.

OMAR. This Christmas box of OMAR contains 12 packages of 16s. Each package of 16 cigarettes sells to the customer for 15c., or $1.80 per Christmas box of 12 packages, as illustrated here. The outside wrapper is lithographed in attractive colors. The Christmas touch will make it sell on sight. All ready for mailing or delivery. No extra charge for Christmas box.

LUCKY STRIKE. This Christmas box of LUCKY STRIKE contains 12 packages of 16s. Each package of 16 cigarettes sells to the consumer for 10c., or $1.20 per Christmas box of 12 packages, as illustrated here. The outside wrapper is lithographed in attractive colors. Key West Votes to Acquire a Park

Purchase of Property Authorized at Municipal Election—E. H. Gato Cigar Co. Will Have a Big New Factory Built of Reinforced Concrete—Havana American Cigar Co. Working to Capacity—Record Shipments—Tourist Season Begins.

KEY WEST, November 23.—At the municipal election last week, the proposal to issue bonds to purchase the E. H. Gato property for a city park, was carried by a good majority.

On the south beach, near the Athletic Club grounds, the E. H. Gato Cigar Co. will erect a large two story factory of reinforced concrete. It will be a thoroughly up-to-date structure, especially adapted for cigar manufacturing purposes.

The E. H. Gato Cigar Co., in the buildings it now uses, is speeding up production. Rushed with orders, the company would employ many more hands, if now cigar makers could be secured.

The Havana American Cigar Co. is working to capacity. But, try as it may, it hardly can catch up with orders. Shipments made by this company, during the past week were unusually large and more than ordinarily important. The Cortez cigar factories are as busy as can be. "They are working night and day, with Sundays thrown in" for good measure, and, could they get them, the Cortez factories cheerfully would employ 100 more workmen.

The Louis 1890 Cigar factory reports "a week of no regrets." The Louis 1890 cigar is constantly attaining greater popularity, and in the effort to fill orders, the factory is giving work to a big crew and the wish is expressed for more workmen.

In fact, practically every factory in Key West is breaking records for production.

The tourist season has begun and trains arriving here are crowded. HICKORY.

CHICAGO COMMENTS

Kenzie is in the same fix. Reid Murdoch & Co. are finding it very hard to keep any El Roi Tans on their shelf overnight.

Speaking of his recent visit to Havana, Julius Fernbach, the Cyrilla manufacturer, says "that the only thing that we don't have here that the natives have down there, is a cock fight every Sunday, a Salon De Baile and a square face." But we can manage to get along without these little things.

I am not trying to kid anybody, but am merely telling you that all the boys and some girls in the twelve stores of Albert Breitung are toeing the mark for the holiday rush. Every man has been put through his training and is busy lining up private box orders.

A great pile of boxes containing cigars, cigarettes, pipes and tobacco left here for France last week. They were gotten together by the American Business Girls' Patriotic League, composed of the secretaries of the big motor car and accessory dealers along Chicago Automobile Row.

Tibbets & Garland are offering "Sammie Kits" from $1.75 to $5.25. Couthoui Select blend is selling well with their trade. It is packed in flat tins and retails for 25 cents.

We will end up this column by telling a good one on Henry Hamann: "If an egg and a half costs a cent and a half, how much does—— Oh, I beg your pardon, sir, I'm in the wrong room." If you want this explained ask Manager Hamann, of Breitung's, but I advise you not to.

Over six hundred centers for army Y. M. C. A. work have been organized, and the work is being carried on in 186 camps. Besides this, for lesser groups and detachments, work is conducted at 242 other places.

D. E. Packard has bought Michael W. Buckley's interest in the pool room, bowling alleys and cigar and tobacco store on Main street in Ware, Mass.

MODEL STOGIE FACTORY

Woman Physician Employed by State Board of Health Pays High Compliment to the Pittsburgh Plant of the Standard Cigar Co.

The Standard Cigar Co., at 4035 Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh, has a factory that is a model of cleanliness, and efficient contrivance. Also, it houses satisfied employes. The company has two other big factories at McKees Rocks and McKeesport and is busily engaged in the manufacture of its two leading products, Dry Slitz and Pittsburg Cash stogies. It makes a strictly long filler product out of the best available leaf and places it on the market for the discriminating smoker.

The Pittsburgh Press reports that the factory of the Standard Cigar Co., recently was inspected most carefully by a woman physician in the employ of the state board of health. And, "she paid the establishment the compliment of saying that it was peerless in its sanitary arrangements. Normally a force of about 600 operatives is kept busy in the Pittsburgh factory, and every provision possible is made for their physical comfort.

TO GIVE A GRAND BALL

The Independent Retail Tobacconists Are Making Plans for the Annual Entertainment to Take Place on February 24.

Nothing of great importance developed at the regular meeting of the Independent Retail Tobacconists' Association, Thursday evening at Terrace Garden. Because of the inclement weather, the members were somewhat late in arriving, and the attendance was small. The meeting was opened at 9 o'clock by President Gompers.

H. H. Hunter, in presenting the report of the law committee, stated that the work of seeing the newly elected assemblymen, with reference to their stand on an anti-coupon bill, was going ahead rapidly. He said if one aggressive fighter in the next Legislature could be secured to work for the retailers' interests, much might be done. Someone suggested the Socialist assemblymen and Louis Fresco and Oasis Abramowitz stated that two Socialists had agreed to work against the coupon. President Gompers intimated that it would be most unwise to have any anti-coupon bill introduced by a Socialist.

The members who attended the meeting of the Confectioners' Association two weeks ago reported they were well received by the candy men's organization. Ike Ochs, H. H. Hunter and Lew Gompers spoke at this meeting on the coupon and kindred subjects.

Mainly, the evening was devoted to the coupon discussion and taxation schemes. Not forgotten, however, were plans for the annual ball to be held February 24, and it was agreed to make it the biggest success possible. Louis Fresco suggested home talent for entertainment, but a member remarked that food was too costly to be thrown at "ham actors." So the meeting closed at 11 o'clock.

Is a Boston Jobber a Money Grabber?

Without Uttering a Disparaging Answer, It Could Be Said That Some of Them Would Like to Clutch a Little Coin Right Now—Joseph P. Manning Co. Put Out a New Brand—Depicting the Favorable Aspects of the Holiday Trade Around the Hub.

BOSTON, November 26.—Jobbers today are chiefly interested in getting money; selling goods is a secondary consideration. Collectors are instructed to go after customers and not let up, until they come across. In a measure, the jobbers are to blame; they allowed the retailers to load up in anticipation of the tax, and increased prices, and almost every retailer has goods enough to last three months, but no money to pay for them. Now will the jobbers sit tight and wait? The jobbers themselves have done some loading on sure selling goods. They have big stocks. Freight shipments have been so irregular. A jobber would be out of goods one week and next week would be swamped by three or four deliveries that piled on top of each other. Ten day goods too, probably paid for two weeks before delivery was accomplished.

Joseph P. Manning Co. are putting out a new high grade Sumatra wrapped cigar, union label, under the trade-mark "Manco." The new Manco line has three sizes, Londres, Invincible, and Perfecto. The first selection of Sumatra wrappers are used with a No. 1 Connecticut binder, and Remedios filler. Smokers in New England are accustomed to such a combination. Introductory work is now being done.

Signs are displayed on the Dewey Square Building, owned by Wood-Pollard Co., that the entire building is to let, and will be subdivided to suit tenants.

The United Cigar Stores Co. gave five per cent. of their receipts recently to the Y. M. C. A. camp fund. Goodly amounts were received from the New England stores.

Pound jars of tobacco are in demand; all brands, as long as it is in pounds and half pounds, are sought.

Cigarettes in 50's and 100's, full cartons; Bull Durham in gross lots are being purchased, and will be purchased as long as the boys are away. It is not alone the holiday business that the retailers are now getting. They should realize that buying smokes for soldiers will be kept up as long as the war lasts. Some retailers have a long list of addresses to send smokes to each week, a certain amount, until further notice.

Mathews & Blanchard, Brockton, Mass., jobbers and retailers, have had success with the Charles Denby and H. Fendrich Cigars.

A. Gindin, of Brockton, jobs the Manuel and Counsellor brands of Allen R. Cressman, Philadelphia, Pa. Frank Mahoney, the representative of Allen R. Cressman Co., has done some good missionary work through Gindin's territory.

Frank Hener has been working Noble cigars through Costello Bros., Pawtucket, the past week.

William O'Brien, who is known as the greatest Irish diplomat in captivity, has been to Providence, saying soothing words to the trade, that is yelling for 7-20-4's.

George Baker, formerly at the Allston sto of Liggett Co., has charge of the cigar depa ment of Houghton & Dutton.

Tastefully arranged in the show windows Woodward's Drug Co., Tremont and Bromfie streets, is the Rancho cigar of the Americ Exchange Cigar Co.

The Commonwealth Cigar Co. received th week a large consignment of El Roi Tans, J Preferencia and Kelley's Bouquets in sm packings. John Dwyer of the firm says that these goods are sold, and many unfilled orde are on hand.

There is a shortage of the Lexie Invincil Cigars of A. H. Hall, 5 Water street.

Harry Williams, who has placed the Lex around the trade, says it is the greatest sell that he has ever put on the market.

Relu Cigarettes in quantities are bei shipped to the various camps.

Prince Hamlet cigars, jobbed by Baker Bro packed 10 in a box, is some packing, the neate yet seen. Baker Bros. received a large shi ment, which soon went.

Popular brands in 1/40's are distributed l the local factories, but allotments have been c down, which means a big shortage for holid demands.

The Phillip Morris holiday package has ma its appearance in the show windows.

The Pall Mall Magnum at 15 dollars, is son packing, and wherever displayed, is the cent of attraction.

Female purchasers of cigarettes are now ca ing for brands; this means that they receiv letters from boys, who specified what to sen

Muriel, known as the cigar of distinctive qua ity, made by P. Lorillard Co., and distribute in these parts by Rosenthal Bros. & Bendetso Co., has made a place for itself in the mouth of the smokers in and around Boston; the 191 sales in this section show a tremendous ga over 1916.

Statistics of Maryland Tobacco Manufacturers

WASHINGTON, November 26.—The manufacturing census of Maryland for the year 1914 shows a reduction in the number of manufacturing plants from 4,837 to 4,797, or of .8 per cent.; the number of persons engaged in these manufacturing plants increased from 125,489 to 131,391, or 4.7 per cent. The motive power employed increased from 218,244 to 263,753 primary horse-power, or by 20.8 per cent. The capital invested in these plants increased from $251,226,828 to $293,210,925, or by 16.7 per cent. The amount expended for labor increased from $59,052,718 to $71,801,109; the cost of materials used in these establishments increased from $199,048,905 to $238,071,973. The value of the output increased from $315,669,150 to $377,749,078, or 19.7 per cent.

Out of the 4,797 establishments reported for 1914, 217 were cigar, cigarettes and tobacco factories, whose combined output was valued at $5,361,600. Employment was furnished to 3,212 persons on an average. The cost of materials used in these factories amounted to $2,454,255. Detailed statistics relative to the tobacco industry have not been shown because, to do so, would disclose the work of individual concerns, a policy which is always discountenanced by the Census Bureau.

For the 217 establishments as a whole employing 3,673 persons, 242 were classified as proprietors and firm members to whom salaries were paid amount to $49,269. Twenty-five salaried officers, superintendents and managers, 161 male clerks and 33 female clerks were employed to whom is paid annually $199,097. The average number of wage earners employed in these cigar, cigarette and tobacco factories is reported at 3,212, to whom was paid $1,183,726.

The capital invested in the 217 reported factories was $4,172,472. The expenses included the following items: Contract work $750, rent of factories $27,623; taxes, including internal revenue and corporation taxes, $662,457; materials, $2,434,744; fuel and rent of power, $19,511. The total power used in the development of this industry was 354 horse-power, of which 203 horse-power was developed by steam engines owned by the manufacturers themselves; 151 horse-power was rented electric, in addition to this 122 horse-power was generated electrically by the factories owning the generating plants themselves.

Out of the 217 establishments reported for the entire State 174 tobacco, cigar and cigarettes are located in the city of Baltimore, in which are employed 3,396 persons; 126 persons comprise the proprietors and firm members of the 174 establishments above referred to. Out of the 3,212 wage earners reported for the entire State 2,988 are employed in the city of Baltimore. The capital invested in the Baltimore plants is $3,987,738. The value of the products is $5,032,685, of which $2,727,176 was added by manufacture and $2,287,137 represented the cost of the principal materials. The amount expended by the Baltimore factories for taxes, including both the internal revenue and corporation income tax was $621,214. TENNILLE.

CHEER 'EM UP!

Here's the time to do it! Now! Right NOW! Cheer 'em up! Make 'em sell! Give 'em a chance!

Those cigars. Those cigarettes. Those pipes. And the tobacco to go with 'em!

Bring them down off that there top shelf. Put a little spice and pepper on them. Like this:

Go around to that handy ten-cent store. You know where it is! Or ask your wife; she knows!

Get a half-dozen spools of red and green ribbon, assorted. They come in two-yard lengths in half and full inch widths, at a dime the spool.

Then get some holly, too. That there imitation stuff is what you want, durable and even better than the real berries.

Now hustle back to the store and doll up those boxes! Don't be stingy with the ribbon and holly! Stick it on!

Make a run of it up and down the package, each way, with a generous Fra Elbertus bow on top, near one end Jam a stick of the holly through the bow, careless like. That's it!

After you trim the cigar boxes up, tackle the tobacco. And, with every can or jar of 'bacco, run in a pipe on top. Do the same with the cigarettes. Two or three, even more, packets to the bundle, if you wish, with a cigarette holder or case to finish it off!

Figure up what the outfits cost. If they're old stock, which you're glad to see go, allow for that. Figure 'em close!

Set a price on each outfit that'll make 'em move! Get the money! You've had the goods long enough!

Now see about your placard. Try this:

Are you a Spug?

Then send your soldier boy a gift he'll like. Send him cigars, or cigarettes, or tobacco and a pipe.

And send NOW, while the going is good. Else later, when you want 'em, these Holiday Hints will be gone, and your boy in the trench will think you've forgotten him!

Lots of your customers will want to know about that Spug heading. Keep it quiet. Say it's a secret. Tell 'em you'll announce it Christmas or New Year morning!

It's simple. Just this: "Society for the Promotion of Useful Giving." Though some people say it should be: "Society for the Prevention of Useless Giving."

Have it either way. It'll create interest, and sell the Cheer Ups!

Note: If you want to make a further hit with your Spug trade, buy some red and green wrapping paper. Do the bundles up in a paper suitable for the occasion. Your store will be complimented for seasonable service.

Have a few bundles of stuff ready wrapped for quick delivery. Some customers buy on first sight, you know! THE SMOKER.

H. UPMANN HABANA

Because a cigar is a Havana cigar, it does not necessarily follow that it is remarkably good; all Cuban tobacco is not as fine as some Cuban tobacco.

But Cuban tobacco grown in the famous province of Vuelta Abajo is acknowledged to be supreme—the finest cigar leaf in the world.

Upmann Cigars Are All-Vuelta Cigars

No other kind of leaf is used in the UPMANN factory. Hence, the steadily increasing demand for UPMANN'S everywhere.

Vuelta Abajo Vegas Receive More Attention

But Remedios Capaduras Are Regarded as Price Lifters on the Havana Leaf Market—Big Buyers in Cuba—Paying $5 for a Thousand Seedlings in Santa Clara—Shipments for the Week—Factories Busy—"Nunca Cede, Siempre Excede" the Motto of "Tomas Gutierrez"

HAVANA, November 23.—Present activity on the Havana leaf market hardly needs to be explained. A number of big buyers are here and various transactions are pending, subject to registration of goods, unreported as yet by leaf dealers. The latest prices paid for first and second capaduras of Remedios were: $83 for the firsts and $73 per qq. for the seconds. Not a thing can be had now below $85 and $75 per qq. for Escogidas, though, possibly, some Vegas, which are no longer of the first pick, could be bought for a little below these figures. There are some thirds yet to be had, but the owners are asking as high as $60 per qq. Manchados are quoted at $40 per qq. Botes of loose leaves still are offered from $26 to $28 per qq., but holders are not anxious to sell, as they expect to get $30 or more as the season advances.

Vuelta Abajo Vegas have received more attention of late, particularly the so-called factory styles. Prices for Colas are firmly maintained; although the demand is not strong at the moment, cigarette manufacturers will be forced to buy more raw material before the new crop is available. Some holders think that next year even as high as $40 per qq. may be paid by some factories. Partido fillers are sought for, and even the Resagos may disappear ere long.

In a letter from a country buyer in Santa Clara to his firm here, it is said that seedlings are scarce, and that as high as $5 per 1,000 seedlings had been paid. It may be doubted, though, that such conditions prevail throughout Santa Clara province.

Additional sales of leaf during the first fortnight of November totaled 3,696 bales, consisting of Vuelta Abajo and Semi Vuelta 1,001 and Remedios 2,695 bales.

The buyers were: Americans 2,456, exporters to Europe 338 (including 200 bales shipped to Algiers), and shippers to South America 902 bales.

Exports of cigars from Havana per Ss. Mexico totaled 622 cases, containing 2,838,271 cigars, and which were consigned to the following countries, viz.: To the United States, 1,190,983; to Great Britain, 1,187,538; to Australia, 173,500; to Canada, 158,000; to the Argentine Republic, 85,250; to Uruguay, 33,000, and to British Africa, 10,000 cigars.

Exports of leaf tobacco from Havana for the week ending November 13, 1917, totaled 6,037 bales, which were distributed as follows, viz.: To all ports of the United States, 4,781; to Canada, 104; to Algiers, French Africa, 200; to Great Britain, 138; to the Argentine Republic, 150; to Uruguay, 44, and to Chile, 620 bales.

Among the leaf buyers arriving this week were: Maximilian Stern, president of the Cuban Land & Leaf Tobacco Co., and who is also the general manager of Henry Clay & Bock & Co., Ltd., and Bernhard Lichtenstein, of Lichtenstein Bros., both of New York. John L. Kolb, president of the Theobald & Oppenheimer Co., and Ventura Blanco, of Ventura Blanco, both of Philadelphia; Colonel Alvaro Garcia and his nephew, Francisco Gonzalez, of Garcia & Vega, and Salvado Rodriguez, the owner of "The Charles the Great" factory, from Tampa.

Louis H. Eisenlohr and Foreman Harry Eimerbrink, of Otto Eisenlohr & Bros., Inc. of Philadelphia, are expected here this week.

The cigar factories here are all busy and will continue to be so for another month.

Henry Clay & Bock & Co. shipped per French Ss. Venezuela 40 cases, containing 100,000 cigars, consigned to the American Army in France.

Romeo & Julieta is as hard at work as ever, trying to ship as many cigars as possible to the United States, Great Britain and other countries.

Partagas also is unusually busy. Pancho Gonzales returned from his vacation in Spain, restored to his full health, and is actively on duty now.

The cigarmakers in the Punch factory wanted to work for five Sundays. Don Manuel, however, told them this was too much, and compromised, giving them work for two Sundays consecutively, then rest one Sunday, and finally work two more in succession, which he thought was all the men could advantageously do. The factory is fully supplied with orders and is rushing shipment.

Hoyo de Monterrey, H. Upmann, Calixto Lopez & Co., Belinda, Por Larranaga, Ramon Allones, C. E. Beck & Co., as well as Sol and Devesa de Nurias are all very busy.

Flor de Tomas Gutierrez offered $100 for the best motto, in a contest open to everybody, and the jury awarded the prize to the one reading: "Nunca cede, siempre excede," or which translated is: "Never yields, always excels." This will be the motto of the factory in the future.

Strikers Return to Work and Factories Try For Record Output

TAMPA, November 25.—Following the overwhelming vote of the cigarmakers against calling a general strike at the present time, the differences between the Regensburg factories and workers were settled last Wednesday and the men returned to work. Their demand for an increase of $4 per thousand on certain cigars was turned down, but other concessions were granted. Factories generally are now working record forces in an endeavor to fill all the holiday orders.

"Ed" Berriman, senior member of Berriman Bros., manufacturers of the Jose Villa and other cigars, is in the city from Chicago. He and M. W. Berriman, who has leased a home in Tampa, are planning the campaign for next year.

Col. Alvaro Garcia of Garcia & Vega, arrived from New York last Sunday and sailed for Havana with Francisco Gonzalez, factory superintendent, on a tobacco-buying expedition.

Sales Manager Hammer of the Corral-Wodiska factory, is expected to arrive during the week and remain until after the holidays. The factory is doing an excellent business in Julia Marlowes and other brands at present.

Collector of Customs J. F. C. Griggs, who is in Washington, wired last week that his recommendations for changes at the customs house had been adopted. Succeeding Max Oberdorfer, chief deputy, who goes to Jacksonville as a special deputy of customs, is A. G. Watson, Jr. Louis Salisbury goes to Port Tampa, succeeding D. O. Curry, who is now stationed in the Virgin Islands. B. H. Humphrey has been transferred to Key West.

A. L. Cuesta, head of the Cuesta-Rey factory, for whom the public school in West Tampa is named, has donated to that school a handsome cup and flag to be given the pupil making the best record during the present term. Cups will be given other successful pupils in future years. A. Wolf, southern representative of the company, will be at the factory until after the holidays. Eli Witt, the well known jobber, who has spent the summer in the west on account of his health, is expected to return early in December. Mr. Witt's condition is reported to be improved.

Mr. Friedman, vice-president of Rothschild & Co., leaf dealer of Chicago, has been visiting the local trade for some time.

A. A. Martinez, manager of the J. M. Martinez factory, is on a southern trip.

Headed by former Congressman S. M. Sparkman, Mayor D. B. McKay and D. C. Gillett, a party of prominent Tampans left Saturday night for Washington, where they will work for the establishment of the Gulf naval base here and other projects in which Tampa is interested. Through the efforts of the Florida congressional delegates, with Tampans aiding, the war department has decided to establish a large aviation camp near Arcadia, DeSoto county. Other war benefits are expected to come to the city and section.

Tampans are elated at the announcement that the Tampa Engineering & Shipbuilding Co., which has been leased by the Oscar Daniels Co. of New York, is to build ten steel steamships for the government. These ships are to be completed in three years and other contracts, it is said, are forthcoming. The work will require the service of more than two thousand skilled mechanics and will increase the city's payroll about $32,000 a week.

Max Oberdorfer, the veteran deputy collector of customs, has been promoted to the position of special customs agent of the Treasury Department, with headquarters at Jacksonville. Manufacturers and citizens generally regret that Mr. Oberdorfer's duties will again take him away from Tampa, but they appreciate the fact that he has received deserved promotion.

Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Berriman, who have for years spent the winters at the Tampa Bay Hotel, have leased a home in Hyde Park in which they will reside until spring.

F. R. Diaz went to Cuba last week.

Claude Turner, who travels the East and Middle-West for Salvador Rodriguez & Co. is in the city awaiting the return of Don Salvador from Cuba. The Charles the Great factory has had an unusually good year and Mr. Turner has been particularly successful.

Twenty years ago this month, Jose Lovera, of Jose Lovera & Co., as he is shown by the files of the Tampa Times, resigned as manager of the Gonzalez-Mora factory and bought an interest in the Tampa Cigar Co., thereby beginning a deservedly successful career on "his own hook."

HUFFAKER.

A hearing to determine whether or not hotels are amenable to the regulations of the State Public Service Commission of Massachusetts may be held in the near future by the commission as a result of complaints lodged by guests who object to being charged ten cents for local telephone calls by certain Boston hotels. It is possible that the commission may take the stand that the hotels are buying their telephone service and have a right to sell it to their guests the same as any other commodity On the other hand, the commission may find that the hotels have entered the telephone business and are therefore subject to regulation by the commission the same as any other public service corporation.

TRADE NEWS FROM NEAR AND FAR

At Woodsfield, O., the Miller Cigar Co.'s factory has doubled its output during the past month and their factory at Beallsville is also working in full force.

At the opening sale of one sucker tobacco at Bowling Green, Ky., last week, at three loose leaf warehouses 150,000 pounds were sold. The average price was $18.27. The highest price per basket was $24.

A Zurich message states that tobacco cards have been introduced throughout Bosnia and Herzegovina, men being restricted to 12 grammes of tobacco or ten cigarettes per week. Women may have half rations on producing a doctor's certificate.

Busy indeed is the cigar factory of W. W. Stewart at Green and Cedar streets, Reading, Pa. "Barring the regulation of prices due to the new revenue law," says Mr. Stewart, "conditions are good. We are very busy on the John Hay brand and employ from 30 to 40 people. Some grades of tobacco are hard to get, but thus far we have been able to secure a sufficient supply to keep going."

Almost two-thirds of the tobacco imported into the United States come from Cuba and other Latin-American countries. Last year the entire imports, exclusive of those from Latin America, represented approximately 12,000,000 pounds. Estimates for this year indicate that there will be a slight falling off in the imports, exclusive of Latin America, and the balance of trade will shift from Eastern Europe to Asia.

Tobacco prices reached top marks in Louisville on Friday, when one firm disposed of 950,000 pounds of burley at 30 cents a pound and 450,000 pounds of Indiana dark, one sucker leaf and lugs, at an average of 18¼ cents a pound. The sale is said to be the largest single tobacco transactions in the history of Kentucky. Seventeen cents a pound was considered a fair price for burley in 1916.

The latest available import figures show that China in the last ten months has shipped 2,947,000 pounds of tobacco to the United States. In 1915 only three pounds were shipped in from China for American consumption. The increase represents approximately one-fifth of the American importation, exclusive of that from South America. In this country, the Chinese tobacco is used chiefly in the manufacture of cigarettes.

Net earnings of the Tobacco Products Corporation for the ten months ended October 31 increased approximately 100 per cent. over the corresponding period a year ago. Because of large orders for cigarettes the company is working some of its plants on a night schedule. Tobacco Products is doing the largest export business in its history, but it is small compared with the amount that will be possible when the expansion plans have been completed.

The Ludington, Mich., Chamber of Commerce has furnished the site for a new cigar factory for Lubetsky & Kleiner, who are being crowded out of their former quarters by the rapid expansion of operations in the Haskell Veneer factory, and the new building is being rushed to completion with a promise of being ready for occupation by the middle of December. The building going up is to be a modern factory building with dining room, lavatories and like conveniences for employees. Working space is provided for 200 cigar makers.

The work at the tobacco warehouse at Chippewa Falls, Wis., will begin earlier this year than last, according to the announcement of H. E. Edler. It is planned to begin operations about December 1 instead of after the holidays, as has been the case. Mr. Edler said that the girls employed at the warehouse will be able to make an average of $3 a week more this year than last because it has been decided to tie bigger "hands." This is a great advantage to the hundred or more workers that will be employed. Mr. Edler also stated that the weather now is just what is wanted for handling the tobacco on the farms, and that beginning next week the tobacco will begin to arrive at the factory. At Bay City, Wednesday, the local manager bought two crops of tobacco for which he paid an average price of 18½ cents a pound.

SHOTS AND JOTS.

William Keegan, proprietor of the East State street Cigar Store in Trenton, was chosen organizer for Trenton retail tobacconists at a meeting at the headquarters of the Chamber of Commerce in Trenton, last week. About 50 dealers were in attendance. The object is to have every tobacconist of Trenton become affiliated with the proposed organization.

Regulation New Year's festivities are to be barred in Kansas City, Mo., this year in order to emphasize the need of conservation, this decision having been reached at a recent meeting of the Kansas City Hotel Keepers' Association. It was agreed that no special inducements are to be offered to make New Year's eve different from any other night in the year.

Some years ago Dick Gerard, author of "Sweet Adeline," auctioned off the lyric of "I've Got My Eyes on You" in a little cigar store in Abingdon Square, New York, and the highest bid he received was fifty cents. Then the man who had offered fifty cents gave the lyric back to Gerard, saying it wasn't worth fifty cents, and Dick treated the crowd to a smoke. Three months later the despised lyric was the song hit of the country.

A short time ago the star in a big feature photoplay suddenly quit in the middle of a scene and asked for a cigarette. In less than a minute half a dozen brands of cigarettes were offered to him, including Meccas, Pall Mall, Themelis, Strand and Lord Salisbury, but none suited him. The female star offered him one of her monogrammed cigarettes. Still, he shook his head. Losing patience, he finally exclaimed: "Hasn't anybody here got 'the makins?'"

Nearly $100,000,000 will be received this month from ordinary internal revenue collections, mainly taxes on liquor, tobacco and automobiles, according to estimates made Friday in Washington, based on receipts of $71,000,000 since November 1. This record is almost three times higher than that of November, 1916. Since July 1, total internal revenue receipts have been $284,000,000, as compared with $176,000,000 in the same period last year.

"Gimme a cigarette" is as familar along the Rialto as "Good morning," and some persons have contracted the habit of repeating it so often that they have forgotten the trick of digging into their own jeans to buy smokes. The practice of the grubbers has become such a bother to many that the fashion is to carry two cigarette boxes, one box contains the good cigarettes, and the other, a fancy case, holds a cheap brand of smokes for panhandlers.

It is reported that a new steamship line is being planned to sail under the Cuban flag. It will be known as the Cuban Star Line and will consist of five or six vessels of approximately ten thousand tons. These will be constructed at Cabanas harbor in the province of Pinar del Rio, where a shipbuilding yard will be erected by the company. The capital of the company will be about ten million dollars in cumulative 8 per cent shares, the majority of which will be taken up in the United States, although the company will be formed under the laws of Cuba.

A stamp tax on accounts of all restaurants, cafes, and other public eating places will be imposed by the Italian government beginning January 1, 1918. Every bill amounting to not less than one lire for food consumed in such establishments, including clubs or societies which furnish meals in their rooms to members, will be subject to a fixed stamp tax of five centesimi. A notice of this tax must be posted conspicuously in all such dining places. In the case of clubs or societies, presidents or directors are held responsible for the notice to persons [illegible] meals.

INVENTORIES MUST BE MADE

WASHINGTON, November 22.—Commissioner of Internal Revenue Roper has notified manufacturers of tobacco and tobacco products that they must make inventories on January 1 next. The notice contained the following instructions:

"Actual and accurate inventories as required by law must be made by manufacturers of tobacco, snuff, cigars and cigarettes on the date specified. Each manufacturer should observe carefully the following instructions:

"1. All tobacco material in the factory should be segregated according to the classification provided in the prescribed inventory form.

"2. Each class of tobacco should be weighed separately. The inventory must include unstemmed tobacco authorized by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to be stored off the bonded factory premises.

"3. All stamped, as well as unstamped, manufactured plug, twist, fine cut and smoking tobacco, snuff, cigars and cigarettes, of the several classes, must be separately weighed, or counted, as the case may be. An accurate inventory of attached and unattached stamps must also be made.

"4. When the inventory, which must be made before the commencement of business on the date specified, is completed, correct totals should be entered immediately on the prescribed inventory form, which each collector of internal revenue will furnish each manufacturer for that purpose.

"5. Tobacco dust, siftings, sweepings and waste shall be inventoried by cigar manufacturers under the head of 'waste' only, and by quasi manufacturers of tobacco under separate heads, each properly described.

"6. The weight and marks of each unopened hogshead, case, or bale, or other package of tobacco, and all broken packages of tobacco and loose tobacco within the factory and inventoried by the manufacturer, should be listed and each item should be sufficiently described to aid the Deputy Collector in verifying the inventory as required by law. Such list should be made on the back of the inventory form or on separate sheets of the same size attached thereto and should include all unstemmed leaf tobacco stored off the bonded factory premises.

"7. An accurate record of the quantity of each class of tobacco used during the period from the date of inventory to the date of the visit of the deputy should be kept for the purpose of enabling him to arrive at the actual quantity of each class of tobacco which was on hand on the inventory date.

INVENTORIES MUST BE MADE

"The inventories referred to should be verified by deputy collectors at the earliest practicable date after January 1 next. Therefore, every available deputy should be assigned to this work and instructed in regard to mapping out his routes to comply with these instructions. Each deputy should be directed to determine the correctness of the inventory from the quantity of each different kind of tobacco sold and used between the dates of inventory and his visit and the amount on hand and purchased.

"The deputy should also require any necessary amendment to be made by the manufacturer before the inventory is sworn to by him before the deputy, and should see that the instructions in Regulations No. 8, approved July 1, 1910, page 60, headed 'Deficiencies found by examining officers,' are observed. Any deficiencies found should be reported immediately.

"Collectors are hereby instructed to cause a copy of this decision, together with the prescribed inventory form, to be delivered to every manufacturer of tobacco, snuff, cigars, or cigarettes, registered in their respective districts at the earliest practicable date after December 15, of this year, so that they can comply with the law in regard to inventories on the first day of January, next. Cigar manufacturers should be supplied with revised form 70 B, which will be forwarded to collectors without requisition."

ADVERTISE EFFECTIVELY.

Class says: "Don't assume that because a store is nicely stocked up with your goods, you can afford to forget it. As a matter of fact, unless the goods slip down off the shelves and across the counter to the consumer, there will be nothing doing on repeat orders.

"Maybe the merchant hasn't been able to present the selling points of your product to his customers as well as your salesman presented them to him. Maybe he is half-inclined to call the goods by the name which means eternal damnation in the eyes of the dealer—'sticker.' Maybe his first enthusiasm has turned into doubt that is soon to be converted into positive antagonism.

"What are you going to do about it?"

QUINBY'S ENCOUNTER

Within two weeks the new tragedy was in full rehearsal. From the beginning it went well. Himmelsbach was delighted: he saw phenomenal success before him. Then an accident happened which almost turned his hair white. On the night before the last dress rehearsal, and only two nights before the production of the piece, the leading tragedian, the well-known Manningham, was attacked and robbed on Twenty-fourth street, and was so seriously injured that the man who found him lying stunned in the gutter called an ambulance and sent him to Bellevue Hospital. There he remained in a very critical condition.

The manager who heard the unfortunate news while at supper at the Knickerbocker, was naturally very much disturbed, and hurried to the theater.

"Heavens above, Quin!" he exclaimed, with a groan, "the play's almost damned by this disaster, for everything depends on the leading tragedian's part, and Manningham's understudy will never play it satisfactorily on the first night."

"It is a bad predicament," admitted Mr. Quinby, regretfully.

At this moment a tall, dark man appeared in the doorway of Himmelsbach's private office. He stood still and bowed.

Quinby got up from his chair, walked behind Himmelsbach, and put one hand on that gentleman's right shoulder.

"It's the 'crank' who wrote the tragedy," he whispered.

"Good evening, Mr. Quinby and Mr. Himmelsbach," said the stranger. "This is unfortunate news about poor Manningham."

"You've heard of it, have you?" remarked the manager, examining his visitor in a shrewd, interested manner.

"Yes, and I came to see you at once. What do you intend to do?"

"The Lord only knows. I'm sure the understudy will make 'hash' of Manningham's part," groaned Himmelsbach.

"Certainly he will. But I am going to make a startling proposition to you. Entrust the part to me."

"You," shrieked the manager. "What do you know about acting?"

"A great deal. Try me and see for yourself," answered the "crank." "I'll now rehearse the third act for your benefit."

Himmelsbach said nothing, but he and Quinby exchanged glances. Taking their silence for consent, this extraordinary man began his self-suggested rehearsal. In ten minutes the sorrowful manager's face was elated, flushed, eager, with new hope.

"By Jupiter!" he exclaimed excitedly. "Repeat that on the stage, whatever-your-name may be, and we'll make the play a superb success."

* * * * * * * *

They did. The first night's audience received the new tragedy with enthusiastic favor. Himmelsbach was in high spirits. He believed that he had struck a theatrical gold mine. When he left the theater that night, he felt most amiably disposed toward the whole world. But as soon as he got outside the stage door he witnessed a scene that staggered him. A closed taxi was waiting, and being forced into it by three big men, against whom he was struggling like a tiger, was the mysterious author of the play! An elderly man stood by, apparently superintending the operations. When he saw the manager, he walked toward him.

"Are you Mr. Himmelsbach?"

"Yes, sir. What does this outrage mean?"

"There's no outrage, but you've narrowly escaped being the victim of one. I'm Dr. Ewart, of the Bloomingberg Lunatic Asylum. You've taken a very dangerous recruit into your company. That fellow (pointing to the now subdued person in the taxi) is one of our worst cases."

"You don't mean to say that the man's a lunatic?"

"Certainly I do, and he's both tricky and dangerous. This is the third time he's escaped in six months. From facts in my possession, I have no doubt that it was he who almost killed Mr. Manningham."

"You don't mean it," exclaimed Himmelsbach, his eyes wide open with dismayed surprise. "I had noticed that he was an eccentric, but neither I nor Mr. Quinby ever dreamed that he was insane."

"No; because his major delusion happened to fit in with your theatrical requirements and so passed, naturally enough, for a mere stage assumption. Fortunately for you, he never had a 'brainstorm' while you were around. He believes that he is the devil and," added the doctor, "I'm sometimes disposed to think that he must be."

KITCHIN TALKS OF TAXES

Washington, December 4.—Representative Claude Kitchin, of North Carolina, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, has stated that the revenue act of the last session will have to be amended in some particulars, and he announced today that certain additional taxes on profits will have to be levied. Where these extra taxes will fall remains to be seen.

"All that the traffic will bear," is Mr. Kitchin's idea of taxation, which means, he says, "that every man will be taxed until it hurts." He thinks that men who are reasonably well off should retain only for themselves enough to keep going, and that the government should have all over and above his necessary income.

Mr. Kitchin believes that the duration of the war will depend in large measure upon the making of the necessary financial sacrifice by the man who stays at home. He declares that it will be necessary, not only to float another bond issue, but to resort to additional internal taxation to supplement the funds required to carry on the war.

THE STRIKE CONTINUES IN BOSTON

BOSTON, December 3—However thrifty the union cigar maker in Boston may be, it appears that he is "up against" an endurance contest now.

It is asserted that prior to striking, the local union failed to secure the sanction of international headquarters. In fact, it is understood that head men of the international union advised against a strike in Boston at this time.

And the manufacturers are disinclined to make concessions other than those already offered.

Theatrical and other large advertisers are interested in the persistent and apparently well-grounded report that O. J. Gude Co., of New York, and the Cusak Co., of Chicago, the two largest advertising sign concerns in the world, had effected a consolidation which included the investment of $5,000,000.

The Record of the Tobacco Industry

Disclosed in the Annual Report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue—An Array of Interesting Figures—Notably Increased Production in Practically All Branches

WASHINGTON, December 1.—"The largest collections in the history of the Bureau, exceeding by $296,670,352.67 the receipts for 1916," says the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in his report for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1917. The ordinary receipts of the Bureau for the year, exclusive of income, corporation and other special taxes show increases amounting to $50,907,125.57, of which $31,003,348 represented the increases from distilled spirits, $16,906,110.90 the increase received from manufactured tobacco, snuff, cigars and cigarettes, $2,072,085.59 from fermented liquors, and $925,580.83 from miscellaneous items. The report estimates that the receipts for 1918 will far exceed those for 1917, and that receipts from tobacco including snuff, cigars and cigarettes, and not including special taxes for the manufacture and sale of same, will amount to $102,230,205.36. The work of the year just ended showed a substantial increase in the manufacture of chewing and smoking tobacco and in large cigars, with an increase of over 30 per cent. in the production and tax-paid withdrawal of small cigarettes.

The report calls attention to the special features of the industry, from which it appears that the four states producing the greatest number of cigars weighing more than three pounds per thousand during the calendar year of 1916 were: Pennsylvania, 1,955,169,488; New York, 1,122,251,404; Ohio, 708,041,968, and New Jersey, 533,089,455.

The two districts showing the largest production of cigars are the First Pennsylvania, 794,955,165, and the Ninth Pennsylvania, 701,373,698.

The States showing the greatest production of little cigars (weighing not more than 3 pounds per thousand) are: Maryland, 398,724,200; Pennsylvania, 290,556,840; New Jersey, 123,965,720.

The greatest production by districts is as follows: Maryland, 398,724,200; First Pennsylvania, 289,551,040; Fifth New Jersey, 123,965,720, and First New York 46,054,100.

The States of North Carolina, New York, Virginia, New Jersey, Louisiana, California and Pennsylvania in the order named show the greatest production of cigarettes weighing not more than 3 pounds per thousand:

North Carolina	10,743,467,940
New York	7,748,561,853
Virginia	3,636,450,705
New Jersey	1,786,861,210
Louisiana	941,571,020
California	307,737,825
Pennsylvania	88,877,070

The three districts showing the greatest production of little cigarettes are the Fifth North Carolina, which produced 6,802,665,240, the Fourth North Carolina, which produced 3,940,802,700, and the Second Virginia, which produced 3,626,933,505.

New York produced the greatest number of large cigarettes, showing a production of 21,164,170, of which number 17,309,705 were manufactured in the Third district and 3,780,565 in the Second district.

The States of North Carolina, Missouri, Ohio, Kentucky, New Jersey and Illinois, in the order named, were the States reporting the largest manufacture of both chewing and smoking tobacco, the quantity manufactured being as follows:

	Pounds.
North Carolina	117,337,285
Missouri	73,420,745
Ohio	44,486,535
Kentucky	41,246,776
New Jersey	34,517,005
Illinois	26,503,564

The districts producing the larger quantities were:

	Pounds.
Fifth North Carolina	92,909,201
First Missouri	73,344,285
Fifth Kentucky	36,334,212
Fifth New Jersey	34,500,896
First Ohio	32,852,507
First Illinois	25,934,305

Referring specially to tobacco the Commissioner reports:

"The receipts from the tax on manufactured tobacco snuff, cigars and cigarettes, including special taxes for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1917, amounted to $103,201,592.16, an increase over the collections from those sources during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1916, of $15,137,644.65. The collections from special taxes levied under the Act of October 22, 1914, and September 8, 1916, during the fiscal year amounted to $971,386.80.

"There were in operation at the close of the calendar year 1916 14,576 cigar factories and 311 cigarette factories, this being a decrease of 1,156 cigar factories and a decrease of 56 cigarette factories as compared with the previous year.

"There were also in operation at the close of the last calendar year 2,152 tobacco and snuff factories, 2,085 producing manufactured tobacco and 67 producing snuff, 4,139 dealers in leaf tobacco, and 331 retail dealers in leaf tobacco.

"There has been no material change in the volume of business of retail dealers in leaf tobacco, which is relatively small according to their quarterly reports forwarded to this bureau.

"Frauds upon the revenue by manufacturers of tobacco, cigars and cigarettes have been aided by unscrupulous dealers in leaf tobacco. This has been possible under the present laws governing such business weakness in which has been pointed out in previous reports. It is essential that every dealer in leaf tobacco should be compelled by law to give a bond, to be fixed by the collector of the district, based upon the quantity of business proposed to be done, the sum of which bond to be increased from time to time at the discretion of the collector or under instructions of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. Each dealer in leaf tobacco should also be required to make a true inventory of stock on the first day of January of each year and to render reports of his transactions monthly and within 10 days after the close of each month to the collector of his district. The necessary authority also should be given the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to propose and levy assessments against dealers in leaf tobacco for tax on tobacco not properly accounted for.

"The recommendation heretofore made that manufacturers of tobacco snuff, cigars and cigarette dealers in leaf tobacco, peddlers of tobacco, be required to register only on commencement of business and not annually, on the first day of July, when special taxes imposed upon these occupations are not in force, is urged again.

"The number of cigarettes weighing not more than three pounds per thousand tax paid has increased considerably over the previous fiscal year. The receipts from the sale of stamps during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1917, show tax payment of 30,501,735,144 small cigarettes, an increase over the previous fiscal year of 9,435,538,472 cigarettes, or an increase of 44.79 per cent."

The aggregate receipts from all the general sources from which internal revenues were received during the last fiscal year amounted to $449,712,412.48, to this was added $33,256.83 for the Alaska Railroads income tax, $179,539,631.03 corporation income tax, and $180,108,340.10 for the individual income tax, or aggregate receipts, $809,393,640.44. Of that amount the receipts from manufactured tobacco, including cigars, cigarettes and snuff, amounted to $102,230,205.36. The tobacco receipts for the past fiscal year included $24,800,311.78 received from cigars weighing more than 3 pounds per thousand, as compared with $22,170,549.51 for the year ended June 30, 1916, or an increase during the past fiscal year of $2,629,762.27. Cigars weighing not more than 3 pounds per thousand increased from $710,653.02 in 1916 to $712,597.89, or by $1,944.87; the receipts from cigarettes weighing more than 3 pounds per thousand totaled $98,850.22 as against $77,617.46 for 1916, or an increase for the past year of $21,232.76. The most remarkable increase was in the manufacture of small cigarettes, for which the receipts were $38,127,168.93 as against $26,332,745.84 in 1916, or an increase of $11,794,423.09 during the year. Of snuff of all descriptions there was an increase from $2,653,654.38 to $2,830,220.05, or of $176,565.67. Of manufactured tobacco receipts there was an increase from $33,378,874.25 in 1916 to $35,661,056.49, or of $2,282,182.24; the figures for the last fiscal year, however, included $507,533 derived from the sale of internal revenue stamps affixed to Philippine products coming into the United States under the provisions of the Act of Aug. 5, 1909. Under the heading of special taxes are the following: Manufacturers of cigars from which source the receipts fell from $300,403.89 in 1916 to $269,387.36 in 1917, or by $31,016.53; the taxes received from manufacturers of cigarettes increased from $42,071.25 to $46,783.26, or by $4,712.01. Dealers in leaf tobacco showed a remarkable decrease from $60,019.40 to $19,297.75, or of $40,721.65. The taxes received from dealers in tobacco in 1916 amounted to $2,297,705.01, whereas during the past fiscal year they were reported as only amounting to $605,296.27, a decrease from this source of $1,692,408.74; while the taxes received from manufacturers of tobacco decreased from $39,653.50 to $30,622.16, or by $9,031.34.

The withdrawals for consumption during the past two fiscal years show an increase in the number of cigars weighing more than 3 pounds per thousand from 7,390,183,170 in 1916 to 8,266,770,593 in 1917, or of 876,587,423. Cigars weighing not more than 3 pounds per thousand increased from 947,537,360 to 950,130,520, or by 2,593,160. Of large cigarettes, or those weighing more than 3 pounds per thousand, there was an increase from 21,560,406 to 27,458,394, or of 5,897,988; while of those weighing less than 3 pounds per thousand there was an increase from 21,066,196,672 to 30,501,735,144, or of 9,435,538,472. Snuff showed an increase from 33,170,680 pounds to 35,377,751 pounds, or of 2,207,071 pounds; chewing and smoking tobacco increased from 417,235,928 to 445,763,206 pounds, or by 28,527,278 pounds. The withdrawals tax paid for consumption of manufactured tobacco products during the past five years has been as follows, for the fiscal year ended June 30:

	Cigars.	Cigarettes.	Tobacco, Chewing and Smoking. Pounds.	Snuff. Pounds.
1913.....	8,732,815,703	14,294,895,471	404,362,620	33,209,468

Total..	43,024,448,179	99,095,112,076	2,082,112,212	164,363,714

The receipts from all classes of tobacco for the first three months of the present fiscal year amounted to $28,176,013.83 as against $25,465,867.79 for the corresponding three months of 1916, or an increase in favor of the first three months of the present fiscal year of $2,710,146.04.

The drawback allowed during the past year on tobacco withdrawn for export amounted to $8,889.53 as compared with $24,414.18 for 1916, the allowance on cigars and cigarettes withdrawn for similar purpose was $23,803.31 as against $31,585.92 in 1916. During the year of 290,292 cigars valued at $1,663.21, of 2,424 pounds of tobacco at $364.82 and of $68.60 worth of cigars for violations during the year of some one or more of the provisions of the internal revenue law.

The number and value of internal revenue stamps issued to collectors during the last fiscal year, including all stamps returned and reissued, included the following:

Kind of Stamps.	Number.	Value.

The quantity of tobacco snuff, etc., manufactured during the calendar year of 1916 amounted to 466,165,728 pounds, and included 165,630,918 pounds of plug tobacco as against 150,658,608 pounds in 1915; 15,998,082 pounds of twist tobacco as against 14,829,376 pounds in 1915; 10,846,358 pounds of fine cut smoking tobacco as against 10,045,001 pounds in 1915; 239,720,776 pounds of smoking tobacco as against 234,927,827 pounds in 1915; 33,969,594 pounds of snuff as against 31,898,497 pounds in 1915.

Of cigars weighing more than 3 pounds per thousand the number of output in 1916 reached 7,042,127,401 as against 6,599,188,078 in 1915; the quantity of tobacco used in the manufacture of these large cigars was 154,949,262 pounds as against 141,854,038 pounds in 1915.

The number of small cigars manufactured during 1916 was 890,482,790, for which was required 4,118,650 pounds of tobacco; in 1915 the number of similar cigars manufactured was reported at 965,135,187 and the quantity of tobacco consumed in the manufacture of same was 4,595,293 pounds. The quantity of large cigarettes manufactured in 1915 was 18,816,210, for the manufacture of which 92,374 pounds of tobacco was used; in 1916 the output was increased to 22,192,700 and the amount of tobacco required for their production was 104,4 pounds. The 17,964,348,272 small cigarettes manufactured in 1915 required 66,699,0 pounds of tobacco, whereas the 25,290,293,9 manufactured in 1916 required 93,233,7 pounds of tobacco. The quantity of tobacco converted into other classes of manufactured tobacco and snuff in 1915 was 338,448,0 pounds; the quantity used for the same purpose in 1916 was reported at 349,198,684 pounds. From the foregoing figures it appears that the total quantity of leaf tobacco consumed in the various branches of the trade in 1915 was 551,687,780 pounds, and in 1916 it increased to 601,500,351 pounds.

Attention is called to the fact that Section IV Paragraph M, of the tariff act of October 3, 1913, provided for the establishment of bonded warehouses for the manufacture of cigars wholly from tobacco imported from any one country and for the withdrawal of such cigars for home consumption on the payment of duty of such tobacco and the payment of the internal revenue tax accruing on such cigars in the condition as withdrawn. These bonded manufacturing warehouses are wholly under customs supervision, and business done by them has not been included in the foregoing figures, which showed only the operations of internal revenue factories. Reports received from collectors of internal revenue show receipts from the sales of stamps to such bonded manufacturing warehouses during the calendar year of 1916 of $411,105.83. The stamps so sold, if used during that year, so says the report, would cover the tax on 137,035,276 cigars weighing over 3 pounds per thousand and tax paid at the rate of $3 per thousand.

Aside from the suggestion that some better method should be devised for keeping check on dealers in leaf tobacco, the report contains no intimation of need for further legislation relative to safeguarding the internal revenue, so far as tobacco is concerned.

Concerning Import Licenses

Important Circular Issued by the T. M. A.

Attention is respectfully called to the Proclamation issued by the President of the United States on November 28, prohibiting the importation into the United States of a large number of articles or commodities, among which is included tobacco from various European as well as South American countries, including the countries from which tobacco is usually imported, without first obtaining a license therefor from the War Trade Board.

No mention is made in the Proclamation of manufactured tobacco products, hence it is safe to assume that the Proclamation only prohibits the importation of tobacco leaf.

Such licenses must be applied for at the office of the Bureau of Imports, War Trade Board, Bond Building, Washington, D. C., or at either of the following places:

Boston	1801 Customhouse.
Chicago	504 Federal Bldg.
Galveston	Customhouse.
Mobile	Customhouse.
New Orleans	Canal Bank Bldg.
New York	45 Broadway.
Philadelphia	305 Lafayette Bldg.
Portland, Oregon	748 Morgan Bldg.
St. Louis	402 Third Natl. Bank Bldg.
San Francisco	216 Customhouse.
Savannah	Savannah Bank and Trust Co. Bldg.
Seattle	825 Henry Building.

A separate application for such license must be made for each importation upon blank forms, furnished by the Bureau of Imports, which may be secured from the Bureau at its office in Washington, D. C., or at any of the other branch offices hereinabove mentioned.

The Proclamation became effective on the date that it was issued, to wit, November 28.

The following may be quoted from a statement just issued by the Bureau on Public Information:

"At present all of these materials are permitted by foreign governments to come into this country only under guarantee that they will not be re-exported except under specified restrictions; that they will not be used in trading directly or indirectly with the enemy; and that no purchase of any such material has been made as a speculation. At present these guarantees are given to the consul or other representative of the Allied Governments in this country, but this method of handling imports has resulted in some dissatisfaction on the part of American business men affected thereby.

Under the authority conferred upon the President by the 'Trading with the Enemy Act,' the issuance of a proclamation requiring a license from the importation of these various articles puts into effect a plan whereby the giving of guarantees by individual parties to a foreign government is obviated, and American individuals or firms will henceforth deal directly with their own government in connection with their importations."

Respectfully yours,
TOBACCO MERCHANTS ASSOCIATION OF THE UNITED STATES.

Glaccum's Star Salesman

"Jim" Glaccum, out West, some years ago, watched his star salesman try to sell a bill of goods to a stubborn dealer.

"I don't like you or your goods," the dealer said bluntly. And, though the salesman talked for half an hour he could not change the other man's mind.

"Come on, let us get out," said Glaccum. "We won't have to shut up shop because he won't buy."

They left the place, but when they reached the hotel the star salesman turned to his employer.

"That fellow has to buy our goods. You just wait here. I'll be back in half an hour with a sale. There never were but four men who could sell that chap and the other three are dead. I'm the only one left."

The salesman went back to the store. He returned to the hotel in less than an hour with an order for $2,000 worth of goods.

"How did you turn the trick?" Glaccum asked.

"I talked to him till I found he had a hobby for breeding squirrels. Then I let him talk me deaf and dumb about sqirrels, and when he said I was a regular fellow, I just sold him."

Several persons were seriously hurt and many suffered from the shock of narrow escapes as the result of a fire in Jersey City. The blaze started in Samuel Resnick's cigar story on Montgomery street, and Resnick, who leaped from a window of the third story of the building, is in the hospital with a fractured skull. James Resnick, son of Samuel, was severely burned before being rescued by firemen. Two buildings, in which more than forty persons lived, were completely destroyed by the flames.

MELVILLE TANNENHOLTZ.

Away down South in a training camp, one New York boy is proud and happy. Believing that the field artillery is a preferred branch of the service, he likes his work and strives daily to become more proficient. Concerning artillery drill, his only complaint is that it does not last long enough. Ambitious to be an excellent soldier, Melville Tannenholtz is "doing his bit" now just as cheerfully as he used to sell cigars.

Behind the cigar counter, he was a success. He was a good business man. He made sales and he made friends. At the cigar stand in the old Broadway Central hotel, for years, the Tannenholtz brothers, Melville and Harold, did well.

Able to judge cigars, knowing how to buy goods, expert in handling customers, alert, bright, attentive always, they made a favorable impression that was not soon erased. Customers remembered them, they received mail orders from all parts of the country. Later, acquiring the store on Thirty-eight street, near Sixth avenue, they put in a nice stock and immediately proceeded to build up trade. Not the least important part of the Tannenholtz Bros. enterprise is a large and developing box business.

The popularity of the Tannenholtz brothers and the repute of the store are attested by the fact that the little cigar emporium is made a trysting place by many salesmen.

When Melville was called to the colors, he didn't object. He was willing enough to fight for the flag. That he will make a fine record, is freely predicted.

LET WELL ENOUGH ALONE.

This seems to be the attitude of some manufacturers, which recalls a remark made by Ellis Parker Butler at a luncheon of The Authors' League of America. "If I were a trench digger," he said, "I would try to be the best trench digger in the world. And this should apply to every man in every line of business."

But all persons do not agree with him, or they do not realize the truth of his remarks, for many just plod along satisfied to make a living and a little to spare. Some representatives who have never been schooled in the value of publicity, having been too engrossed with their own little worlds, get the idea that publicity is pure "bunk." Few men have ever won success in life without publicity, free or paid for, because publicity makes the public acquainted with a man or an article, and the right kind of publicity creates a demand for him or it. And the fact that you are doing a good business is all the more reason why you should not shun publicity, for if you have what the public wants you can always sell twice as much as you are doing. No matter how well-known your goods are to you, don't lose sight of the fact that millions never heard of them. In some parts of the country there are people who never heard of George Washington, and the other day a man was discovered who did not know that this country was at war with Germany. In getting too close to your own line you occasionally lose the correct persepective. And when this happens you become one of many. Years ago when a man thought of cigarettes he thought of Sweet Caporals. When one thinks of cigars to-day does your brand come to his mind? If it does not, that is your fault, not his.

UNREASONABLE FREIGHT CHARGES REFUNDED.

WASHINGTON, December 4.—The Interstate Commerce Commission has allowed reparation amounting to $2,536.40 to the Imperial Tobacco Co., of Great Britain & Ireland, Ltd., against the Southern Railway because of unreasonable charges collected on 107 shipments of leaf tobacco forwarded during May and June, 1916, from Norfolk, Va., to Brunswick and Savannah, Ga., for export to England.

WHO IS BEHIND IT?

As an aid to conquest, the Kaiser has kept a publicity bureau, for years. Millions of dollars were expended to procure spoken or printed words that would serve Germany's purpose. German espionage persisted everywhere. Ubiquitous as German spies were deceivers who sought to pervert opinion to suit the Kaiser's desire.

In this country, German propagandists outdid themselves. They appealed to prejudice, they counseled pacifism, they preached the doctrine of cowardice, they attempted to terrorize the ignorant, they financed discontent, they fomented what labor troubles they could, they encouraged treachery; who can say how many crimes they abetted and committed?

Though the declaration of war caused Kaiserites who remained here to seek cover, they did not change their nature nor are they less vicious because they work beneath the surface.

The Kaiser's publicity bureau is busy yet in the United States. Not merely whispering lies or starting rumors of disaster, wherever it dares it tries to induce utterances of disloyalty. Or, perhaps, in a safer guise, a propagandist prates concerning the speedy attainment of peace.

Americans should know the origin and significance of any "peace talk," just now.

Not until Germany is beaten, contrite, democratized, regenerated, freed from Hohenzollern influence, can the world know what peace means.

A peace without guarantees against future wars would be but a prelude to additional trouble.

Having entered the war, the United States will defer peace talk until victory is won.

INDUSTRIAL AND FINANCIAL COORDINATION.

The turn of events in Europe has undoubtedly impressed upon the people of this country the necessity of preparing for a long conflict. The end is not in sight, and it will be the part of wisdom for the United States to lay its plans for participation upon a basis which can be maintained indefinitely. The full powers of the country cannot be exerted immediately, for it is only by degrees that the people can be brought to understand the part which as individuals they are required to play. They have to be educated to the war task. They have to learn that a great war, calling upon this country for eighteen or twenty billions a year, cannot be carried on by the government alone, in a purely official capacity, without interfering with the business or pleasures of the people.

It is natural for the people to go along in their accustomed ways, trying to do business as usual and live as usual, until they are shown what the government wants of them. It is for the government to coordinate the productive powers of the country and direct them into the channels where they will count for most. There is general appreciation of the fact that it is a stupendous task to raise twenty billion dollars in a year, but the public is slow in grasping the fact that it is also a stupendous task for the government to get twenty billion dollars worth of work done in a year. The problem would be immensely simplified if the public could see clearly that if the government is to take over labor and materials to this extent, individuals must curtail their demands to approximately the same extent, and that when they do this they will have the money to buy the government bonds.

This curtailment of private expenditures will be most effectively brought about by having the government exercise its priority rights to such essentials as labor, coal, materials and transportation. If there is not coal enough to go around it is clearly proper for the government to determine what industries shall go without, and as it does so public expenditures in those lines will be automatically curbed. If steel is not available for automobiles the public perforce will not buy automobiles, and so by the control of industry expenditures can be brought largely under control.

PRIVATE CAPITAL DOES PUBLIC SERVICE

The fundamental error of those who call for the "conscription of capital" is in not comprehending that private capital engaged in production for the government or for the public market is rendering the same service as though it was publicly owned, and probably rendering it more economically. The assumption that the government could take over industries on a large scale, even by confiscation, and supply itself with products more cheaply than it can buy them of privately owned industries is purely an assumption. The record of government operations does not justify it.

A speaker for the Socialist party in the recent New York City campaign is reported as follows:

"'You capitalists, your capitalistic government, that comes into our homes and conscripts the lives of our sons, so shall you conscript wealth.' We would summon Mr. Carnegie and say to him, 'Andy, how much do you require to live? Not on the east side, not in the Bronx, but just where you are, on Fifth Avenue? We would not take from you one lump of sugar, but how much, $15,000 or $20,000 or $25,000, do you require yearly to keep your antiquated soul in your capitalistic body?' Then we would take the rest of his income. That is not being done, and that is why we Socialists do not buy war bonds."

This shows the misconception of economic facts which is responsible for most of the agitation. The orator proposes to allow Mr. Carnegie to continue living as at present, but to confiscate the remainder of his income for public purposes—as though all the remainder was not used for public purposes now! The only portion of any person's income which is devoted to himself and withdrawn from the common fund is that portion which is consumed for his own support and pleasure. The real grievance of society against the rich is not on account of what they save and invest productively, but on account of what they spend needlessly and extravagantly upon themselves. What they put into business is used to increase production, to multiply the supply of things of common consumption, and it is a fair presumption that it is used more efficiently, and with better results to the public, by the leaders of industry than it would be by a government officered by campaign orators.

SCARCITY OF CIGAR BOXES.

Some cigar manufacturers are experiencing difficulty in securing enough boxes to fill their orders, and the salesmen who formerly solicited business seldom put in an appearance now. A good salesman, however, does not forget his customers when prosperity comes to him, or when he is rushed with orders, but works all the harder to see that his patrons are not handicapped. So it would be a wise policy for the manufacturers to keep tabs on the men who look after their interests too selfishly.

A "STAR" PERFORMANCE.

WASHINGTON, December 4.—Under the guise of "news," the Washington Star this afternoon prints the following under the heading, "War Tax Camouflage in Tobacco Business:"

"War tax camouflage" is the latest thing in the tobacco business. The war tax is camouflaged—and the smoker pays the bill.

When the war tax became effective the price of cigars, cigarettes and smoking tobacco was advanced sufficiently, and in most cases a little more than sufficiently, to make up for the tax. Goods that had sold for 10 cents were increased to 11 and 12; 15-cent goods went up to 16 and 17, and so on. Smokers didn't like this. They resented being taxed more than the government taxed the manufacturers, and they objected also to the odd pennies. The 1 cent or 2 cents or 3 cents addition they were called upon to pay became a standing grievance to which emphatic voice was given.

But what's the use of kicking, when you are an ultimate consumer?

Today some brands of cigarettes which used to retail for 15 cents are back at that price. But instead of twenty cigarettes in the package there are only sixteen. Other higher and lower priced goods also are back, or are going back, to the old figure, with a corresponding reduction in the number of cigarettes per package. Tins of tobacco which sold for 10 cents in pre-war tax days are to sell for 10 cents again, with less tobacco in the tins. Cigars are to go back to the old even-money prices, but are to be smaller.

Here's how it works. A popular brand of cigarettes used to sell for 15 cents a package, twenty cigarettes to the package. Because of the war tax the price was increased to 16 cents. The new 15-cent package contains 16 cigarettes. Figure it out: The pre-war tax price was ¾ of a cent per cigarette. But for the 1 cent they have taken off the price they take away four cigarettes—in other words buying them back from the consumer at the rate of only ¼ of a cent per cigarette.

IT PAYS TO PAY

Some men buy cigars, some beg them, while others have cigars, good and bad, thrust upon them. If you buy you save friends; the begging habit saves money, and the third formula conserves both. A normal minded man should have no cause to beg or borrow, and when he buys he should get the best. But a certain song writer, we will call him Harry for present purposes, was not what you would term absolutely normal in every respect Everything he did was sixty per cent. bluff. When he had a song to sell he did not enter a publisher's office with a dejected look and an air of timidity. He simply breezed in, passed the time of day, and then handed cigars to the boss, the professional manager, and the poorest one he had to the head plugger—pianist.

Harry had a logical reason for handing cheap cigars to pianists. He looked upon them as butchers with no taste, and cursed with an innate desire to chop everything that came into their clutches. They had on more than one occasion butchered a tune to such an extent that it sounded more like a

For the Inspection of Philippine Leaf Tobacco

Rules and Regulations Which (Subject to Possible Modifications Made, as a Result of a Public Hearing Held December 1) Will Be Effective January 1

Section 4. Sanitary rules respecting classification and packing of tobacco.—(a) All operations connected with the classification and packing of leaf tobacco shall be performed either in a drying shed or curing house constructed in accordance with the specifications of the Director of Agriculture, or in the warehouse or workrooms of a registered wholesale tobacco dealer or manufacturer of tobacco products. Under no circumstances shall any dwelling house or living quarters be used for the purpose.

The operations must be carried on in factories in the manner prescribed in the regulations governing tobacco factories. In other places all manual operations pertaining to the classification or packing of leaves shall be carried on in a sanitary manner upon dry clean tables, or upon dry clean mats spread upon floors or tables in such a way that neither the surface upon which the tobacco is handled nor the tobacco itself will be stepped upon by human beings or animals.

(b) Insanitary acts.—No person engaged in the classification or packing of leaf tobacco shall perform, cause, permit, or suffer to be permitted any insanitary act during such employment, nor shall any such person during such employment touch or contaminate any tobacco with his feet or with filthy hands, or use impure water or other unwholesome substance as a moistening agent, or trample, walk, or stand upon any tobacco or permit or suffer the same to be done; nor shall any person suffering from a dangerous communicable disease handle, touch, or manipulate leaf tobacco intended for consumption by others.

Section 5. Classification of leaf tobacco.—Leaf tobacco shall be classified as to the province of its origin and its use.

(a) As to origin.—The term "Isabela tobacco" will apply to tobacco grown in the province of Isabela; "Cagayan tobacco" to tobacco grown in the province of Cagayan, and in the same way tobacco from the other provinces of the Island of Luzon will be designated by the name of the province of its origin. Tobacco grown south of San Bernardino Strait will all be designated "Visayan tobacco."

(b) As to use.—Within each group there will be the classes "fine," "medium fine," "coarse" and "inferior," depending upon the suitability of the tobacco for the different uses. The designation to show use will be known as the "class" of the tobacco. "Fine" shall qualify leaf which is suitable for use as wrapper; "medium fine" shall qualify leaf which is suitable for use as binder or high-grade filler; and "coarse" shall qualify tobacco which is suitable for use as medium grade and low grade filler, and for cigarettes. In the case of "fine" tobacco, color, texture and elasticity, will be the points principally judged, and if the owner so desires the words "claro," "Colorado claro," or "maduro," may be used after the word "fine" to indicate the color of the tobacco, provided these words are truthfully applied. In the case of "medium fine" tobacco and "coarse" tobacco, the aroma and burning qualities will be given prime consideration in determining the class, leaf which possesses those qualities to a high degree being classed as "medium fine" and leaf which possesses those qualities to a lesser degree being classed as "coarse." Tobacco which lacks aroma and burning qualities to such an extent as to render it unsuitable in the manufacture of cigars or cigarettes of high or medium grade shall be designated "inferior." To the class of inferior shall also belong leaf which is more than 40 per cent. broken or worm-eaten, and leaf which is dirty, musty, moldy, mildewed, rotted, dried out, sapless, or otherwise spoiled, which has been handled under insanitary conditions, or which has not been dried and cured in a curing shed constructed in accordance with the specifications of the Director of Agriculture. Fine, medium fine and coarse tobacco only shall be standard for export to the United States.

Section 6. Measurement of tobacco.—When tobacco is not purchased and sold by weight, the unit of measurement shall be the "fardo." A fardo shall contain 4,000 leaves, i. e., 40 manos of 100 leaves each, or 160 pinongos of 25 leaves each, or, in the provinces of Ilocos Norte, Ilocos Sur, La Union, and Pangasinan only, 80 pinongos of 50 leaves each. Inasmuch as the quantity of tobacco in one "fardo" depends on the size and soundness of the leaves, the following size schedule will be adhered to and will follow the classification designation in all cases. Size A must have a length not less than 41.5 centimeters; Size B, not less than 32.5 centimeters; Size C, not less than 23 centimeters; Size D, not less than 16 centimeters; if less than 16 centimeters in length, the tobacco shall pertain to Size E. A tolerance of 1 centimeter will be allowed in the lengths of each size, provided that the difference in each hand or pinongo is as often above as below the minimum herein fixed. If the tobacco is more than 10 per cent. but not more than 15 per cent. broken or worm-eaten, its size designation will be reduced by one size; if more than 15 per cent. but not more than 20 per cent. broken or worm-eaten, its size designation will be reduced by 2 sizes; if more than 20 per cent. but not more than 40 per cent. broken or worm-eaten, its size designation will be reduced by 3 sizes; if more than 40 per cent. broken or worm-eaten its size designation will be reduced by 4 sizes; but no tobacco shall be classified lower than Size E. The following table will indicate the terms applicable to leaf of different lengths and degrees of soundness:

Leaf not broken or worm-eaten

Length not less than:	more than: 10%	15%	20%	40%	More than: 40%
	Size	Size	Size	Size	Size
41.5 cm....	A	B	C	D	E
32.5 cm....	B	C	D	E	E
23 cm.....	C	D	E	E	E
16 cm.....	D	E	E	E	E

Section 7. Packing of leaf tobacco.—(a) In bales, casks or cases.—Leaf tobacco before being sold in the Philippine Islands, or before leaving the provinces in which produced shall be packed either:

(1) In standard bales weighing 25, 50, 115 or 150 kilos to each bale, not including the weight of the wrapping; the wrapping to be of burlap or of matting (petate) made from the saja, buri, or other equally suitable material, so woven as to afford a surface sufficiently smooth to be marked permanently and legibly; the wrapping completely to cover the bale, which shall be securely bound with wire, bejuco or a substitute equally suitable as a binder. Bales exported to the United States shall be wrapped in saguran, or equally suitable wrapping.

(2) In standard casks or hogsheads weighing 100, 125 or 150 kilos to each cask, not including the weight of the cask; or

(3) In standard cases weighing 75, 100 or 125 kilos to the case, not including the weight of the case.

Whether packed in bales, casks or cases, the tobacco must first have been arranged into carrots, bunches (pinongos) or hands (manos) as hereinafter prescribed.

In case the leaf tobacco is intended for exportation from the Philippine Islands, it may be packed in weights other than those specified above, by the actual exporter.

(b) Exemption from bulk packing by planters.—Planters of tobacco shall be exempt from the requirement of packing tobacco of their own production into bales, casks, or cases before selling same, provided they make delivery to the purchaser of their tobacco packed in either of the following forms, after it has undergone its preliminary fermentation:

(1) Old-style hand.—The leaves are taken from the pole on which strung for drying, and smoothed and folded along the midrib so that the under side (dorsal aspect) of the leaves face out. The leaves are then classified as to size, soundness and quality, and leaves of the same classification gathered into bunches (manojitos) of ten leaves each, and ten of these bunches then tied together by the stems into a hand (mano) in such a manner that the midribs are exposed. Each hand (mano) is tied at each end and in the middle.

(2) Pinongo.—The leaves are taken from the pole on which strung for drying, and classified as to size, kind and quality, and leaves of the same classification gathered into bunches, or pinongos, of 25 leaves each and tied together with twine or fiber at the stems.

In case the planter delivers tobacco in the pinongo as prescribed above, the purchaser may, if he so desires, before bailing same, gather the pinongos of 25 leaves each into carrots of 4 pinongos, i. e., 100 leaves to the carrot, and tie the carrot around the stems, and then wind the twine or fiber spirally around the carrot down to the tips of the leaves where it is again tied.

(c) Special provision.—In the provinces of Ilocos Norte, Ilocos Sur, La Union and Pangasinan, the planter may pack his tobacco in pinongos of 50 leaves each, each pinongo to contain only tobacco of the same classification, and to be tied with twine or fiber around the stems.

(d) Delivery on pole or in imitation manos prohibited.—The sale and delivery, or purchase and receipt of tobacco on the pole, or in bundles formed by breaking a pole into short lengths or by folding over or doubling the pole or bejuco with the leaves still strung upon it, and then making same into bundles tied after the fashion of the hand, or arranged in any other manner than that prescribed herein, is prohibited.

(e) Official samples to be deposited.—In order to aid the planter in arranging his tobacco by class there will be deposited as soon as possible in the office of the deputy provincial treasurer in tobacco producing municipalities, for public inspection, a number of samples of the several standard classes. These samples will be officially sealed and may be referred to in cases of dispute as to classification between the purchaser and seller of leaf tobacco, and between the tobacco inspector and the person offering the tobacco for inspection. The samples will be obtained from the same municipality in which deposited.

(f) Temporary provision.—The requirements of this paragraph relating to the preparation of the hand (mano) will not apply to tobacco of the crop harvested in 1916 or previous years. But all the requirements hereof relating to the packing in bales, and the classification to be observed, as well as the marking requirements in the next preceding paragraph, will apply to all tobacco hereafter sold within the Philippine Islands or exported to the United States, whether such tobacco be of previous or future years' crops, and whether or not it be subject to inspection, unless it has already been inspected under the rules heretofore in force.

Section 8. Marking of bales, casks and cases.—Each bale, cask or case of leaf tobacco shall have permanently marked thereon the name of the province and municipality in which the

The Beginning of the Cigar Industry in Tampa

As Told by Mayor McKay

TAMPA, December 2.—Many stories have been tld and published relative to the founding of the ear Havana cigar industry in Tampa, but the llowing one is vouched for by Mayor D. B. cKay, who was a small boy when the cigar idustry started in his native city.

"The first clear Havana manufacturer in ampa," said the Mayor, "was a Cuban named olino, who had a 'buckeye' in a two-story ame house in the block just north of the site Chenshaw Bros. wholesale warehouse. Cigar-aking was a mere side-line with Molino, how-er, his principal business was breeding and ghting game chickens.

"The advent of the first big manufacturers, ie late V. M. Ybor and the late Ignacio Haya, ame in later years and was due entirely to ac-dent. Senor Gavino Guiterrez was then en-aged in the importing business in New York, is specialty being the importation of food prod-cts from Spain, Cuba, Mexico, South America nd other Latin countries. He heard that uavas were grown in Florida in large quanti-es and came to the state on a prospecting trip, is plan being to establish a guava factory if e could secure guavas in sufficient quantities. Jpon visiting Sanford and Tampa, however, he ave up the idea and returned to New York y way of Key West.

"At the Island City Senor Guiterrez met his ld friends, Senors Ybor and Haya, who in-ormed him that they were preparing to move heir factories from Key West on account f continual labor troubles. They planned to ocate their factories in Galveston. Senor Guitterez stated to them that Tampa was an deal location for cigar factories and suggested hat they visit the city, which they did im-nediately.

"Upon arriving here the pioneers of the in-lustry stopped at the old Collins house, a two-story frame affair at the corner of Whiting and Water streets and at that time the leading hotel n south Florida. When they made their wishes known the board of trade offered them factory sites and other inducements. None were satis-factory, however, and they decided to leave the city. While on their way to the Collins House to pack their wearing apparel the two gentle-men stopped in the store of Miller & Hender-son, located next to the building now owned and used by the Times, to bid goodby to the late W. B. Henderson, who had shown them courtesies during their stay. Mr. Henderson was surprised to learn that they intended leav-ing the city and insisted that they remain. 'If you are leaving because you think the induce-ments offered are not satisfactory,' he said, 'maybe I can satisfy you.' He told them he was the owner of the Campbell homestead, now principal residence section of Tampa Heights, a tract extending from Florida to Central avenue on Seventh avenue, and that they could use the property. Col. W. C. Brown, then clerk of the Circuit Court, who was present, stated also that he owned several thousand acres of land which he would place at their disposal. Ybor and Haya did not accept the offers, but they were so impressed with the attitude of the Tampans that they decided to remain. They did and within a short time Tampa had begun the journey to cigar manufacturing supremacy.

"Senor Ybor had Ybor City well started before his partner, the late Edward Manrara, came over from Key West. Manrara was so thoroughly displeased with Ybor's decision to locate in Tampa that he accused him of being insane and actually threatened to have a court inquiry made as to his sanity. Being in control of the company, however, Ybor won his point, and in later years Manrara stated that the move was the most fortunate the firm ever made. For a long time they made even more money through real estate transactions than they made by manufacturing El Principe de Gales cigars. Guiterrez, who was a civil engineer, was commissioned by Ybor to lay out Ybor City, which he did. The first Ybor-Manrara factory was a two-story frame affair on the north side of Seventh avenue, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, and the first Sanchez & Haya factory, a structure of similar type, was on the south side of the avenue, at the corner of Fifteenth street. The man who made the first cigar in the first big factory, Laureano Sanchez, of the Sanchez & Haya factory, is still living in Tampa.

"The Lozano factory, I think, was the third to be established in Tampa," concluded the Mayor, "and then others came rapidly. Enrique Pendas, manager of the Havana-American factories, told me that he came to Tampa as foreman of the Pendas & Alvarez factory about thirty years ago. Upon reaching the city Pendas asked an aged negro where he could find a hotel with baths. The reply was: 'De hotel am right over yondah, but you'll find de bath two blocks furder—in the river.'"

WALTER BLOCH

He shows capability; he knows human nature; he has persistence; he is a shrewd salesman who can attain success in the cigar business via the box trade route. For it is not easy to acquire a string of desirable customers. Nor is opposition the least of the worries of one who tries to build up box trade. So, it means something to develop a box business big enough to excite enduring envy in Chicago. And though the road he chose to prosperity was a dismal trail to most, Walter Bloch refused to be discouraged. He persisted cheerfully until, at the age of 33, he has obtained something well worth while.

He started in the cigar department of H. H. Kohlsaat & Co. in 1903. Two years afterward he went into the box business with Fred L. Wells. In 1911 he terminated that connection to be "box man" for Leopold & Morgenheim. Last March he engaged in business on his own account at 118 North La Salle street. Rated as a top-notch cigar man, he is doing unusually well just now, praise be. His specialties are Romeo-Garcias in many sizes and the Spartan brand.

He is prominently identified with the Masonic fraternity. Also he is happily married.

"GET WHAT THEY WANT"

Baker and Daniels Deny Petition to Allow Only Union Made Cigars to Be Sold by Army and Navy Commissaries.

An attempt by the National Tobacco Workers' Union and the Cigarmakers' Union of Boston to induce Secretary of War Baker and Secretary of the Navy Daniels to furnish only union-made cigars to United States soldiers and sailors in the war zone is revealed in a sheaf of correspondence which has passed during the last few months between the Secretaries and Samuel Gompers, head of the American Federation of Labor.

The correspondence shows that the cigar and tobacco unions persuaded Gompers to write to Secretaries Daniels and Baker, conveying the Cigarmakers' Union's protest against the purchase of non-union brands. In replying to Mr. Gompers, Secretary Daniels takes the ground that the 600,000 cigars were bought by officers of the commissary stores in specific answer to the "demands of patrons." Secretary Baker, in his answer, says:

"Our commissary stores merely sell the consumers the brands they ask for. It is not possible to restrict our soldiers to those brands bearing the union label. The choice of brands is determined by what the men themselves wish to buy, and it would surely not be possible for the army that the men buy a particular brand of tobacco."

There never was a better time for the cigar trade to get out from under the load they have been carrying all these years and to join the procession of other merchants, who in so many lines are using this opportunity to adjust prices that have needed adjusting for so long.—Cigar and Tobacco Journal.

SOME TROUBLE TO BUTTE

Dealers who raise prices may find that it pays to give honest and complete explanations to customers who "want to know why."

Prejudice is created rather easily these days. And, if an attempted justification seems insufficient, an explanation that "doesn't jibe" may cause a misunderstanding resulting in ill-will and loss of trade.

While dealers throughout the country have abundant and proper reasons for raising prices on cigars, cigarettes and tobacco, the excuse most frequently urged is "the war tax."

As a matter of fact, increased prices are made compulsory by the greater cost of tobacco, the higher wages paid to workers and the larger outlays required for all things incidental to manufacturing.

Yet, instead of ascribing the increase mainly to the much higher cost of material and labor, some dealers attempt to throw all the blame on the war tax, which is a futile proceeding. For wrong explanations hardly satisfy even the ignorant. Nor is it advantageous to excite the wrath of those who "do not understand." Witness the outburst of the Helena, Mont., Independent. In an editorial entitled "Even Butte Rebels," price raisers who use "war taxes" as their chief excuse are thus attacked:

".At last Butte users of tobacco and card players have broken out in a declaration of war against the cigar store owners of that town and have announced that they won't stand for plain brigandage any longer.

"The cap sheaf to the 'soaking' of Butte patrons came when the cigar store people raised the rent on card players' chairs from 15 to 20 cents an hour. It appears that the Butte cigar dealers not only get the money for chips used in trade for cigars won in card games, but have been accustomed to making a player pay 15 cents an hour to occupy a chair.

"Not long ago, as in Helena, the dealers got together and raised the price of tobacco and cigars, notwithstanding the fact that the manufacturers of tobacco had notified the public that the retailers were not being charged a cent for war tax. The Butte dealers gave the patrons a jolt by raising 10-cent tins of tobacco to 15 cents and raised 10-cent cigarettes to 15 cents and so on all along the line.

"The Butte dealers listened to the howl that went up from the smokers to whom they explained that 'on account of the war' they were compelled to charge more to cover the tax. Then came the announcement by the manufacturers of tobacco that they had reduced the package content sufficiently to cover the cost of the war tax and that retailers were not paying any more for their tobacco. In other words the patron is simply paying 15 cents for an ounce and three-quarters of tobacco, whereas a few weeks ago he paid 10 cents for two ounces of tobacco.

"The howl continued for a day or two but the dealers won out as they always do. Finding the patrons easy picking and long suffering they announced the rent of card players' chair had advanced from 15 cents an hour to 20 cents, all 'on account of the war.'

"The protest, this time, is noisier than ever and the patrons are boycotting the cigar stores of Butte, have quit playing cards and are hunting outlying dealers who sell tobacco at the old price.

"Whether the boycott will work remains to be seen. The dealers don't think it will continue long. The patrons are telling Attorney General Ford to start in on the cigar store owners under his theatened suits for 'combination in restraint of trade.'"

On a recent visit to Minneapolis, Nat Rosenheim, of San Martin & Leon, was called to the Western Union Telegraph office to explain what appeared to be a code telegram. But when it was explained to the officials, it was passed, being simply an order for holiday goods to be shipped to Minnesota distributors. The name of the firm to whom the telegram was addressed, the signature of the sender, the abbreviation of Stone-Ordean-Wells Co. to "S. O. W." and the designation of "fortieth" packing and the sizes of Perfectinos, Imperiales, etc., were what aroused the suspicion of the eve watchful telegraph censor.

Resident Commissioners from the Philippines

In the Congress of the United States, representing ten million people, the two resident commissioners from the Philippines uphold the prestige of an important constituency. They speak for the most populous "non contiguous" territory under the American flag. In the House of Representatives, they have rights and privileges very similar to the rights and privileges accorded to the territorial delegates from Alaska and Hawaii.

In the performance of their duties as spokesmen for the Filipinos, they testify convincingly concerning the progress made in the Philippines. And the advancement of the Filipinos in recent years is indeed remarkable. Education has spread. The condition of the people is steadily improving. The great resources of the Islands are being developed, properly. Commerce is increasing. Regions formerly difficult of access, now are easily reached. Where, aforetime only poor trails existed, the principal islands today are criscrossed by good roads. Where children once were allowed to grow up in ignorance, public schools are established and every native has an opportunity to obtain knowledge. English is taught in all the schools. Thousands of Filipinos to-day are college graduates. Probably, in no other part of the world can educators show greater results achieved during the past fifteen years.

Hon. Jaime C. De Veyra who has held many offices and filled them all most satisfactorily

Throughout the Philippines, important improvements are seen. In the cities and in the country districts, there is evidence that much good work has been done. New industries are appearing. More land constantly is brought under cultivation. The production of "the five staples," hemp, sugar, tobacco, rice and copra proceeds apace. The Philippines promise to produce much rubber in years to come. Despite high freight and the difficulty of procuring cargo space, Philippine exports increase.

The prosperity of the Philippines is apparent. The progress made is too big to be denied. Relative to political development, excellent proof of the judgment and capacity of the Filipinos is supplied, in the character and attainments of the men elected to represent the Philippines in Congress.

Undoubtedly, Jaime C. de Veyra is worthy and well qualified to represent the Filipinos in Washington. In public life for twenty years he has succeeded wherever placed.

Hon. Teodoro R. Yangco
President of the Filipino Y. M. C. A.

Born in Taniwan, in 1873, he enjoyed greater advantages than the average Filipino boy under the Spanish regime. He attended school at Tacloban, the capital of Leyte. Later he went to Manila when, in 1893, he graduated from the college of San Juan de Letran, receiving the degree of A. B. Then entering the university of St. Thomas, he studied law, philosophy and letters for two years. Returning to Leyte, he became the secretary of the Governor. In 1900, he moved to Cebu where associated with Osmena and Palma, he established the newspaper El Nueva Dia. After serving as a member and vice president of the city council of Cebu for several years he went back to Leyte and was elected governor of the province, in 1906.

Elected to the Philippine assembly in 1907 and re-elected in 1909, he was accounted one of the most active and trustworthy of Filipino legislators. He served on important committees and was distinguished in various ways.

President Wilson appointed de Veyra a member of the Philippine commission in 1913. As a member of the commission, on several occasions, he was acting Secretary of Commerce and Police. In April, 1916, he was appointed Executive Secretary of the Philippine Islands. Early this year, by the Philippine legislature, he was elected resident commissioner.

His associate, Teodoro R. Yangco, previously was not so much inclined to mix in insular politics. A leading business man in Manila, successful and wealthy, he was identified with various philanthropies, notably the Y. M. C. A. As president of the Filipino Y. M. C. A., Yangco saw it grow from a small beginning to a great force for good, throughout the Islands.

He was born fifty-six years ago in the Province of Zambales, at San Antonio. He received his degrees in the Ateneo de Manila and University of St. Thomas, and completed his preparation for his business career in Spain and in London.

Associated with large mercantile and transportation enterprises, he took time from his business to assist in building up the Y. M. C. A. And he was a frequent and liberal contributor to numerous charities.

You can't keep a good man down. You can't drive a poor man up. Yangco says: "If you are built of the right kind of timber you will succeed, if not, in spite of all your dreams and wishes you will go to your grave "broke" carved on your tombstone. If you were fortunate enough to be born in poverty, consider yourself lucky, as poverty has been the priceless spur in nearly all the great achievements all down the ages. If nature has blessed you with a healthy set of brains, a pair of strong arms and an honest heart, success is in your grasp if you'll only dig and work for it. Never worry, and photograph the word cheerfulness on your brain, and you will live to a ripe old age."

In the words of Yangco: "The people of the Philippines are learning fast the lessons of good democracy."

CONGRESS MEETS AGAIN

And Treasury Estimates of Required Appropriations Amount to More Than $13,500,000,000—To Win the War.

WASHINGTON, December 3.—With billions of money to be appropriated, with much essential war legislation to be enacted, and with the responsibility upon them to leave nothing undone in a legislative way to strengthen the arm of the United States for its part in the crushing of kaiserism, members of the House and Senate came together in solemn mood. Determination to drive the war ahead with vigor and efficiency was the dominant note of the utterances of returning members.

Because of the fact that the present congress opened with the extra session last April, there was little formality about the beginning of the regular session.

Estimates of more than $13,500,000,000—the greatest in the nation's history—for the conduct of the government and the prosecution of the war during the fiscal year 1919 were submitted to congress to-day by the Treasury Department.

In round figures more than $11,000,000,000 of the vast sum is for the war alone. Only part of it will be realized from taxation; the remainder will come from issues of Liberty bonds.

Deducting an item of $153,000,000, intended as an annual appropriation toward a sinking fund for the discharge of the old public debt, and some $330,000,000 which will be turned back to the treasury from postal revenues, the estimated sum for which congress actually is expected to appropriate is $13,018,725,595. No previous estimate ever has exceeded $2,000,000,000.

Following is a general statement of the estimates by general headings:

Legislative	$8,026,325
Executive	65,329,369
Judicial	1,396,190
Agriculture	26,458,551
Foreign intercourse	6,535,072
Military (army)	6,615,936,554
Navy	1,014,077,503
Indian	12,255,210
Pensions	157,060,000
Panama Canal	23,171,624
Public works (practically all fortifications)	3,504,918,055
Postal service	331,818,345
Miscellaneous	1,026,208,317
Permanent annual appropriations	711,166,825
Total (cents omitted here and above)	$13,504,357,940
Deduct sinking fund and postal returns	485,632,345
Balance	$13,018,725,595

FAVORS SOLDIER FUND

Major-General Leonard Wood has sent to the Committee engaged in raising New York City's quota of the $4,000,000 War Camp Community Service Fund a letter pointing out the importance of the work to which this money will be devoted. General Wood said:

"In order to be good soldiers, men must be clean mentally, morally and physically and nothing will contribute thereto so much as good surroundings, wholesome entertainment and recreation. In my opinion this ranks equally with training to create an efficient command.

"I hope your financial campaign will be a great success, and am sure that when the people appreciate not only the necessity for but the value of your work, they will respond liberally to the fund."

Philadelphia Detectives on the Trail of "Gus"

Who Is Alleged to Have Sold 25,000 Stolen Cigars to Lewis M. Brown—Lamenting the Labor Shortage—Speaking of Freight Congestion—Charles S. Whittrock Invited to Come to the Quaker City and Address the Newly Organized Retailers' Association—The Influence of One of Bayuk's Men—Schmidts and the War Tax—The Birth Announcement of Charles A. Krull, 2nd.

PHILADELPHIA, December 4.—The American International Ship Building corporation is hogging the labor supply in this fair city to such an extent that one wonders, whether or not one has a wondering disposition, whether there may not after all be something in a name. The A. I. S. C., be it known, is locating itself on Hog Island, down the Delaware from this F. C. What with its high prices for common labor and higher for that which is skilled, every industry in Philadelphia is feeling the pinch.

Everywhere we went in our diligent and conscientious search for news this week we ran into louder and louder complaints about the shortage of labor. In each instance it was politely set forth by the searcher that there was nothing new in the labor situation; it is just as bad all over the country. But this met with vehement denial, which anybody knows is the most explicit form of denial extant.

Despite increasing prices in the cigar factories, nearly every one in the city is running short of workers. All the crop of help wanted signs is sprouting anew on the factory buildings. And in the meantime the lull reported a few weeks ago has taken unto itself winglets or something and has flown hence. It may be in Camden or somewhere else in the wilds of the State that Hoboken made famous by this time, but to quote everybody in the industry "it ain't here."

And that's not all. A member of the firm of Juan Portuondo pointed out that conditions could be worse, but not much. Not long ago this firm had a big shipment of Christmas goods for New England distributors. It hung around the freight station here for a couple of weeks and showed no inclination to get a move on northward. When there was no embargo freight cars were a minus quantity, and when freight cars were plentiful, comparatively speaking, there was an embargo.

Finally the firm took the bull by the horns, so to speak, and side tracked the shipment to one of the bloated express companies. And then it was started toward its destination. After hearing some of the wails of big manufacturers here who got stuff started by freight and whose distributors are still looking for it some weeks after the shipments were made, the Portuondo company is quite satisfied that its stuff didn't go by freight.

Speaking of freight, one nice little shipment of twenty-five thousand smokes owned by a Philadelphia manufacturer almost got itself lost last week. In the course of human and railroad events this shipment made its tortuous way to Woodlane station on the Philadelphia and Reading Railway Co. Then it disappeared, leaving a gaping hole in the freight car. Detectives were put upon the trail. Bimeby the sleuths gumshoed around to the store of Lewis M. Brown, Fourth and Pine streets, this city, and snooped around looking over numbers. They then invited the said Mr. Brown to accompany them to Norristown, which he did. At a hearing before Magistrate Clark he was held in $1,500 bail on the charge of stealing the smokes. The detectives testified they found boxes in his store labeled with the same numbers as those on the stolen shipment, or other identifying marks. Just now the owners and the detectives are anxious to locate "Gus" from whom Brown said he bought the cigars at a reduction. According to Brown's statement before the magistrate, he had been dealing with Gus for some years. Gus delivered the 25,000 in two large auto trucks. The detective charged Brown with selling the cigars away off list prices with instructions to his customers to be mum and stay mum.

Charles S. Whittrock, president of the retail association in Cincinnati, has been invited to speak at the next session of the newly formed Philadelphia association. It is hereby predicted without fear of contradiction that the said next meeting will be a rousing success from the viewpoint of numbers. We have this straight from one of our psychological friends at one of the nearby educational foundries, but we suspect he stole the idea from a cook book. His argument is to the effect that eats attract the human male; merely a twist of the old saying about the way to a man's heart, perhaps.

Charter members of the association are keeping on their toes and according to the latest reports more than one hundred members have been lined up so far. One of Bayuk's men gets the medal of honor, having corralled twenty-five members all by his lonesome.

The experience of the Schmidt Brewing Co. of this city has had a salutary effect upon the few manufacturers of cigars who think they ought to hand out large quantities of gifts to their customers. Schmidts were getting ready to go through with the usual practice of presenting to customers—saloons—one per cent. of

Adjusting the Cash Register to Christmas Sales

When the Killeen Kids Went to Norman's Kill—Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Macy Celebrate Their Golden Wedding—Bernie Levy Is a Lieutenant Now—One Dealer Discouraged a Delegation—They Say That Charley Murphy and Other Tammany Chieftains Smoke Dubonnet Cigars—The Biggest Sign in Troy—And Some Other Things Noted Up-State.

NEW YORK STATE CAPITOL DISTRICT,
December 3, 1917.

Three weeks from this very day will be either feast or famine for the Capitol District retail tobacconists.

For the 24th day of December has always been the banner booty-booster in every retail store. And, perhaps, if the trade can banish the present glooms, all the cigar men will be out to feed the predicted famine with even usual-to-better stocks than the momentary conditions seem to warrant.

Surely, some of the boys are rather downhearted. But, on Monday night, at 11:59 P. M., just twenty-one days from date, these same blue-funk chaps will be right there with Sergeant Art Empey, first "over-the-top" with a cash register loaded to the adding wheels with red, white and blue chips, including some long green ones, too!

Please make a mark in your sales book with what you expect to take in during the Christmas rush. Put it down now! Then, after your sponge cups runs dry from the count of the moistened finger, take a look again!

If the result isn't better, considerably better, than you now anticipate, kindly send Cecil Rhodes the bill for the difference!

There'll be no invoice or any other claim to file. And that's why it's practically safe to make a Santa Claus of the late successor of King Solomon.

So, buy, boys, then buy again! Else your stock for the holidays will resemble an A. P. A. emporium in Punxsutawney after a successful Saturday night!

"I hope to sink," vowed Larry Edgeworth (per J. H. H.), "if our sales of Edgeworth tobacco haven't got the factory in Richmond all tied up in a tangle! Why, do you know that the business we have accomplished upon just this one brand is enough to keep the plant spinning for several weeks after the holidays? Manager Harrington tells me we can't begin to fill all the Christmas specialty orders. Things are certainly rushing at the Larus & Brother shops, you bet!"

Shortages of 8 and 16 ounce tin and glass tobacco packages is still a difficulty to be bridged at the wholesale house of the Dearstyne Brothers Tobacco Co., Albany. All the leading brands of holiday packings in the fancy smoking line are none to plentiful, while some are entirely exhausted.

Small cigars in various brands also continue continue scarce at this big jobbing headquarters. Shipments occasionally arrive, but are immediately snapped up by the hungry backorders.

"Lots of these goods are very hard to get just now," said Will Dearstyne, "and the prices on those coming in are going up in five and ten cent jumps on the pound. It's quite likely several of the popular half and full pound smokings will go out of business entirely, according to recent reports."

In the Dearstyne pipe repair department Manager Eddie Wilkinson has just about all he can jump at right now. Pipes are always being broken, and it requires lots of time to fix 'em up, he says.

Friday, that very unlucky day when even old Cap'n Joe Raynor won't leave his snug berth for jumpin' codfish, that's the rotten day selected by two good salesmen to tackle the Norman's Kill!

To make the entire affair somewhat worse, it was last Friday, too, the day after the turkey-trot!

And, to arrive ultimately at the Norman's Kill, you've got to go out around Albany's coldest, windiest thoroughfare, known to old residents, like C. J. Shaxby, as Delaware avenue.

Well, these two good men, as we say, started out Friday-after-breakfast with the usual grips and kits. 'Course 'twas cold!

Also chilly! Kinder day, y'know, that cuts right thru a feller! And the sun had an awful cold in the head, and it didn't show up all day!

So the men—the two brave men, braver yet than Private Peat—buttoned up their o'ercoats, buckled in 'nother notch of their trench-belts, and walked on an' on an' on in their hike for business.

At last, one of the heroes, trudging along in his Coward shoes, stopped, shifted his trunks and said:

"Say, Paul, where's the end o' this boulevard?"

"End?" says Paul, "which end?"

"Why," confessed The Other, "I don't know much of anything about this wilderness, an' I just thought we could back out of these here winds and breezes."

"That's easy," acquiesced Paul, "all we've got to do now is to take either of these three routes. Go up the Whitehall Road, there, go down he Southern Boulevard here, or continue

Cuban Export Decree Is Modified

Cigar Factories May Obtain Permanent Permits to Ship to the United States, Great Britain and France—Shipments to Neutral Countries Must Be Sanctioned in Each Instance—Attitude of the National Defense Committee—Leaf Market Active and Cigar Factories in Havana Very Busy.

HAVANA, November 30.—The war measure requiring manufacturers of cigars, as well as exporters of cigars and tobacco, to ask for a special permit in order to ship goods to any country, has been modified in so far as the Cuban National Defense Committee will grant permanent permits to ship goods to the United States, Great Britain and France, while exports to the neutral countries still remain subject to the issuance of special permits before any shipment can be made. Commercial bodies, The Union of Manufacturers and The Association of Leaf Dealers, are trying to get a modification of this decree.

Park & Tilford have appointed Angel Gonzalez del Valle as their agent here to make one consular invoice of all shipments of cigars by each steamer, thus saving the expenses of half a dozen or more invoices separately.

All the factories are very busy executing Christmas orders. Yet the opinion generally prevailing is that we may see dull times in the month of January. Those inclined to be pessimistic, however, may be agreeably surprised in seeing an extension of the time limit on British orders. In view of recent advices, such an extension seems probable. The chief trouble evidently is not based on any intent of the British Government to prohibit the importation of cigars, but on the present lack of available cargo space.

The leaf market was active during the past week, as Northern buyers have not slackened operations. Actually they are securing all the available leaf, despite high prices. Fortunately, the arrivals of leaf from the country have been larger than expected, and though not every lot which comes in is for sale (having been contracted for already), the supply has not been exhausted, therefore future buyers still may hope to find something to suit them. As far as prices are concerned it is unlikely that figures will be lower.

Exports of cigars, per S.S. Morro Castle, totaled 600 cases, containing 2.851,125 cigars, which were consigned to the following countries, viz.: to Great Britain 1,556,910, to United States 1,123,065, to Canada 110,550, to Egypt 28,600, to Australia 27,000, to the British West Indies 2,000, to the French West Indies 2,000, and to the Argentine Republic 1,000 cigars.

Exports of leaf tobacco from Havana during the week ending November 17, 1917, totaled 5,233 bales, which were distributed to the following countries, viz.: To all ports of the United States 3,178, to the Argentine Republic 1,929, to Uruguay 110, and to Chile 16 bales.

Among the leaf buyers who have arrived this week were: Marcelino Perez, of Marcelino Perez & Co., of New York; Sam Paley, of the Congress Cigar Company, Harry Landfield, of Landfield & Steele, and Mike Friedman, of M. A. Friedman & Co., all of Chicago. Louis H. Eisenlohr and C. H. Eimerbrink, of Otto Eisenlohr & Bros., Inc., arrived from Philadelphia last Wednesday morning. Walter Sutter of Walter Sutter & Co., returned from Chicago and Harry Mendelsohn and family returned from their vacation in the United States, thus allowing Joe Mendelsohn to leave to-day for the North, to attend to the business of Mendelsohn, Bornemann & Co., of New York.

Sam Paley has been making extensive purchases of leaf, to keep the Congress cigar factory running smoothly for the coming year.

Romeo y Julieta is as busy as ever, in producing and shipping cigars.

Partagas is not less busy, trying to expedite orders.

Hoyo de Monterrey has its hands full, in despatching all calls for its cigars.

The Governor General Signs the Decree

In 1781, Vasco, the Governor General of the Philippine Islands, decreed that the government should have control of the production, manufacture and sale of tobacco. By this decree a monopoly was created which remained in operation a hundred years. Due to the strict enforcements of regulations, especially in the earlier period of its operation, the monopoly secured for Philippine tobacco an enviable reputation for quality throughout the world.

Careful supervision of the industry by the American government in the Philippines, together with the enterprise and the business sagacity of Manila manufacturers and importers, is building anew a splendid reputation for Manila cigars.

"Transitory" Troubles and Temporary Woe

When It Comes to Putting Up Prices Some San Francisco Dealers Are Slow and Reluctant—Hopes That Approximate Co-operation May Be Agreed on at the Next Meeting of the Retailers' Association—Bits of Trade News Picked Up Along the Pacific Coast.

San Francisco, November 28.—The situation as regards the retail cigar dealers is badly mixed. While a majority realize that conditions are transitory, many find it difficult to adjust daily business to the rapid changes. For example the reduction of the number of cigarettes in a package so cigarettes may be sold for even money instead of with the odd penny change, was thought to be a step in the right direction. Ultimately doubtless it will prove popular. But in the meantime dealers have in stock two sizes of the same goods which they sell at different prices. This means a deal of explanation and more or less irritation. Added to this is the very persistent rumor that the prices now being quoted by the manufacturers and jobbers are not final, and that by the time the public gets accustomed to the new prices another advance will be announced and the dealer will have to go through the agony of explanation to his customers again. But it is not only the dealers who are worrying about conditions. Makers of cigars, especially of grades more expensive than ten cents, have not advanced prices yet except to cover the increased tax. Now the price of tobacco, particularly Havana tobacco, is going up to a figure where there is little profit in selling cigars at the old price. But the pioneer, in advancing the two for a quarter cigar to fifteen cents straight, to say nothing of raising prices on cigars of even higher grades, feels that he will make enemies among the consumers, who may abandon ten centers for erstwhile nickel cigars now selling at 6 or 7 cents. The dealers themselves do not seem to agree upon any policy. Those whose places of business are in the outskirts will not agree to act with those who are located in the down town districts. Usually the dealers located in the outskirts handle different brands of goods, and their business touches the downtown merchant only as regards a few standard brands. For this reason they prefer to act independently. However another effort will be made to get together at the next meeting of the retail dealers' association the latter part of next week. One dealer summed it up in a few words thus: "Situation, chaotic, transitory; future outlook, good after the first of the year." Adding "But in the meantime——?"

Arthur Meyer, Coast agent for the Humboldt brand, has returned from a month's trip over his territory, going as far east as Salt Lake. He reports a good business everywhere, but says that the retail trade is as much in the air in the States of the Rocky Mountain region as it is in San Francisco.

Arnold Pollock, manufacturer's agent for Heyman Bros., of Baltimore, has just returned from a very successful trip to Los Angeles and other Southern sections of this State.

The many friends of H. L. Judell, the senior member of H. L. Judell & Co., will regret to learn that he is confined to his home with a severe cold. His son says that he expects that his father will be able to be out again in a few days.

George Coleman, one of the best known cigar dealers of Eureka, is visiting his friends in the trade in this city. During his stay Mr. Coleman is stopping at the Palace hotel.

Eugene Stoltz, representing the Palo cigar factory, is in San Francisco boosting his goods among the trade. Joe Rinaldo, agent for the factory, is showing Mr. Stoltz about town.

Clarence Mahlmann, for many years salesman for Sam Israel, enlisted in the regular army shortly after the first call for men was made. He is now wearing the stripes of sergeant in the Quartermaster's department. He looks very soldierly in his new uniform and former associates in Israel's wholesale house are very proud of him, and the fact that he has already earned promotion.

Sam Israel is making some changes in his place of business preparatory for his display of Christmas goods. He is putting in an unusual amount of Christmas candy for sale among retail cigarmen.

J. C. Chuck, representing Frankel, Gerdts & Co., has just returned from a very successful trip to the southern part of the State. He reports an especially good business at San Diego particularly at Camp Kearney, near that place where he found the student soldiers eager to invest in La Natividad.

Milton Esberg, in charge of the cigar business west of the Rocky Mountains for the General Cigar Co., has just returned from an extended trip through his territory.

E. C. Hull, popularly known as "Mollie," representing the General Cigar Co., is here.

Milton Esberg, of the General Cigar Co., has just been appointed a member of the Convention Board of the San Francisco Advertising Club.

W. H. Munson, formely with M. Melachrino & Co., is visiting San Francisco with his wife.

C. W. McLennan, Chicago cigar dealer, and M. Burke, a retailer from Los Angeles, were among the visitors to San Francisco this week.

on to the 'Kill' with Delmar, Sligerlands and Voorheesville for an objective."

"Well," reckoned The Other, "these great white ways all look alike to me, and they all seem to have a bit of the Winds of Winter blowing thru them. So, if there's anything in a name, let's turn here, an' take this Southern Boulevard. That sign there says it's only 167 miles to New York. Let's hurry!"

But they didn't! Instead, they stood in the center of the street 'till a Delaware Avenue car came bouncing along. They cheerfully paid the conductor the two nickels he asked, and they snuggled down in the capacious seat over a Consolidated car-heater, runnin' full blast on all five points of the Traction Company's intermittent Speir Falls current!

While the grips and kits, containing samples and advertising for Robert Burns, White Owls, and Owls of the General Cigar Co., property of one Paul Wessels, and the similar baggage of one widely known as Prince Albert Joe (no connection with Velvet Joe), all laid there on the floor in a heap, chilled to the very bone!

Up in Schenectady, where Joe and Paul are better able to stand the gentle breezes of the Electric City, every one knows them as the Killeen Kids. For they are post-graduates of the Louie Killeen jobbing house, which is always warm and comfortable, especially to cold and weary workers like Paul and Joe!

"Since stock became scarce, and prices went out of sight," remarked Irving Fulder, "business has been terribly upset around here. Though father, recently returned from a Buffalo trip, reports trade in much better shape in the western end of the State. Uncle Jake is worried because we can't get goods on time to fill our additional holiday orders. And I'm going the rounds of Albany and vicinity posting these six-cent window bulletins for the 512 cigar. All in all, however, I guess the firm of S. E. Fulder, of North Pearl street, will pull along as well as the other wholesale cigar houses!"

Just a trifle of advice that Boss Hoover is handing out to the ladies may also be useful to tobacconists: "Reduce your waist, increase your bustle."

Don't use an axe! Simply twist the keen-kutting-kiver, remove the tin-top, and there you have it! Vacuum, of course, all in a neat round package.

But, it isn't tobacco. Nor is it a can o' jam. For it is comfortably filled to the very bottom with cigarettes! Helmar cigarettes. Or Murad cigarettes. And Mogul cigarettes. Fifty in each can.

They are sold in the Capitol District, m'frens, by busy-boy S. Anargyros Dunn, of Mamaroneck and Kew Gardens, Short Island.

After Xmas, you'll find Dunn at Doornkoop Kastle, which is where the P. Lorillard Co. will holiday him. Meantime, you'd better listen to his chatter about the cigarettes in the cute cans.

About the same time that the Dominion of Canada came through the hopper as an established government in 1867, something of even greater importance happened to Frank A. Macy.

It was on November 26 of that year, when Frank got married. So, a few days ago, Mister and Missus Frank took a day off and had a 22-karat Golden Wedding.

Before Frank's brother, George H., died, the firm of Macy Brothers was known better in the Capitol District than Pears' soap.

This week all the local Liggett drug branches are making a general biff-byng-bang on Padova and Black and White cigars. Troy, Albany and Schenectady stores, of the chain, report business quiet.

From top-sarge of Company A, 10th Regiment, N. Y. M., to 2nd lieutenant of-the-line may be only one more step toward that ultimate job of generalissimo which Bernie Levy is sure to get.

Still, when you come to think that Bernie went into the sojer game as a high private in the rear rank only a few months ago, you'll have to reluctantly admit it takes an ex-tobacconist to take the military cake!

Previous trade experience, especially as assistant to Godfrey Mahn, New York, and as deputy boss at his father's plant on Green street, Albany, made Myer Levy's son ready for the great responsibilities of the character he has now accepted.

What's your husband doing? This impertinent question has been hurled from one lady to another in many a merthyr-tydvil scrap.

Probably the poor man is right upstairs, all the while, slippered and smoking. Yet the ladies are not satisfied! They insinuate, to one another, that the crafty critter is wasting lots of valuable soldier subsistence, puffing at ye olde bruyere pipe.

So these goode dames propose a smokeless Friday. Entering an Albany smoke shop, the other day, one of the Theda Baras said:

"We are soliciting donations to a fund for the soldiers' smokeless day committee. Idea, you know, is to request all men to abstain for smoking just one day each week. Money saved in this manner will be used to supply tobacco and cigarettes for our boys in camp. Please contribute what you can to start a propaganda for the purpose. It is a worthy object, and it will be considerably appreciated, I assure you."

When the tobacconist recovered his Killarney smile, he replied:

"Ladies, I have just looked at the cash register totals. From the appearance of the tape, I should say this is smokeless day! Your plan

Record Revenue Stamp Sales in Tampa

Collections Made During the Past Month Exceeded Receipts for November, 1916, by Nearly $100,000—Manufacturers Thankful Because Labor Trouble Was Averted—Hopes for a Naval Base and an Army Camp

TAMPA, December 2.—Due somewhat to the increased war revenue on cigars and partly to the heavy holiday business at all factories, local internal revenue collections for the month of November passed those made in former years by a margin of nearly $100,000. The total was $233,702.99, being nearly three times as much as those of November of last year. The total collections on cigars alone was $200,-094.58, form 416 which is that on which the additional war tax is noted, netting $31,001.13.

About the only expression heard from manufacturers nowadays is one of thankfulness for the fact that a general strike has been averted. This is allowing the filling of holiday orders to go ahead at full speed and desperate efforts are being made to meet every demand of the trade. Quite a number of factories, however, will be unable to fill all holiday orders.

Headed by Mayor D. B. McKay, a committee which visited Washington for the purpose of presenting Tampa's claims for a naval base, army camp or branch hospital has returned to the city. Members are greatly encouraged, and the belief is growing that Tampa will be selected as the naval base site, and possibly given an army camp. Admiral Helm, who heads the naval base commission, sent for the committee when he heard that they had arrived in Washington, and his attitude was most encouraging.

"In discussing Tampa's claims," said Mayor McKay, "Secretary of War Baker made this statement, which may mean a great deal for Tampa with reference to army camp projects: 'You may rest assured that if any additional cantonments are established, they will be established in the South—the real Sunny South.'"

Salvador Rodriguez, pioneer manufacturer, is back at the Charles the Great factory after a tobacco buying trip to Cuba. Frank Diaz, of V. Guerra, Diaz & Co., has also returned from the Island.

Sig. Meyer, western representative of F. Lozano & Sons Co., is at the factory from Chicago.

M. B. Pendas, of Pendas & Alvarez, is in the city from New York.

"Jim" Burns, who was for years with the Lozano factory, but who is now in business for himself, states that the volume of his trade is steadily increasing. The Tierra del Lago factory, at which the Burns cigars are turned out, is doing a good business.

their yearly purchases. Along comes Unc. Sam, and after casually inspecting the plan announces that it looks good to him for some $822, the same being a tax which the Congress of these United States has made and provided for gratuities. "Blooie" said the Schmidts, or words to that effect, "we don't mind the beer, but we can't see the tax." So now the brewing firm is arguing it all out in the Federal court here, trying to convince Uncle Sam that he really is not entitled to that $822.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman J. Krull are being congratulated upon the birth of a son, Charles A. Krull, 2nd. Mr. Krull, who is the son of Charles A. Krull and a member of the big jobbing firm of that name, thought he had nature figured out in advance and bought a nice assortment of birth announcing cards attempting to predict the sex of the youngster. Result, a card reading something like this:

"Mr. and Mrs. Herman J. Krull announce the birth of their daughter, Charles A. Krull, 2nd."

Frank Boultbee, head of Boultbee & Colby, manufacturers of cigarettes at No. 145 Lafayette street, New York, died Friday from pneumonia at his home in Montclair, N. J. He was born in Toronto, Can., fifty-four years ago.

The Wellington is made of genuine French Briar, seasoned by our own special process. It breaks-in sweet and mellow. The bowl is guaranteed against cracking or burning through. The "well" catches the moisture as well as all stray crumbs of tobacco. Any tobacco tastes better in a Wellington.

W. D. C. Advertising Campaign 1917-1918

W. D. C. advertisements are now appearing in "The Saturday Evening Post," "Literary Digest," "Collier's Weekly," Railroad Men's Magazine," "Country Gentleman," "Hoard's Dairyman," "Breeder's Gazette," "Army and Navy Journal," and in many college publications.

The campaign will run for nine whole months. Generous space is being used in all mediums—all half pages and quarter pages. More than four million people will read these W. D. C. advertisements in the magazines alone.

Another big Wellington advertising campaign is now running in the Canadian newspapers.

The pipes of all nations are introduced and illustrated in the magazine advertisements—the Peace Pipe of the Indian—the Hooka of the Turk—the old Church Warden of the pioneers—the Whalebone of the Esquimaux, etc.

Watch for these W.D.C. Wellington advertisements in the magazines—cut them out and paste them in your windows.

Go over your stock and see that you have a full line of W. D. C. pipes—feature the Wellington in your counter displays—cash in on this big country-covering W. D. C. advertising campaign.

Don't let another season go by without carrying a full line of W. D. C. pipes—the Wellington in particular. Tie up with the largest pipe manufacturer in America and your pipe business will grow in a way you never thought possible.

Gladly will we send you further information on request.

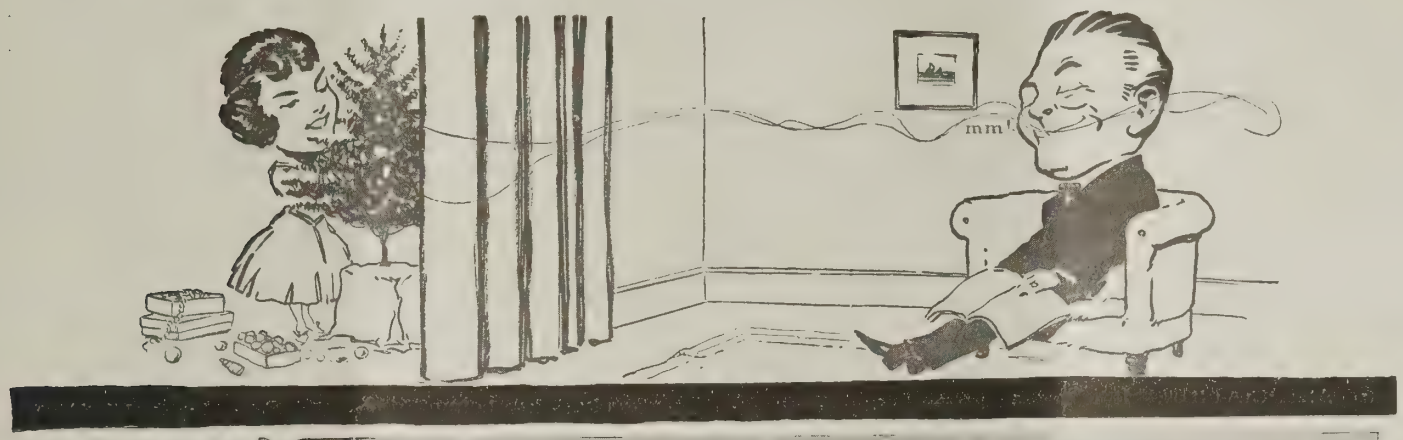
The Power of the Press

Exerted to Help "Our Boys in France Tobacco Fund"—284 Newspapers and 97 Magazines Associated with Special Effort to Procure Smokes for Soldiers.

With the exception of San Francisco, the small contributions coming from the west for the "Our Boys in France Tobacco Fund" seems to indicate that people on the sunset side of the Mississippi do not realize the necessity for keeping the boys in the trenches constantly supplied with smokes. At present 281 newspapers are collecting money from their readers for the fund, but the response in the majority of cases is very slight. Giving to this fund, or any other fund organized for the welfare of the soldiers, is not charity, but a duty that every one left behind should take upon himself. Every one should lend his support to help his own town paper to make a creditable showing.



A. Blaikie Dick, who has charge of the fund, plans to send a tobacco kit once a week to every American soldier in the service, but in order to be able to do this it will be necessary to get $125,000 a week, which is not much when one considers what comfort smoking means to the soldiers. Tobacco to soldiers is almost as vital as food. Too many persons take it for granted that others will attend to this phase of the war, and as a result the lads who have willingly offered their lives to protect the ones left behind are forgotten.

New York and a few other cities are doing wonderfully well, and if New York, which is supposed to be a city without a heart, can do this, there is no reason why other cities and towns cannot do likewise in proportion. All is needed is a few live persons in every town to get matters started. The cigarette booth in Hero Land is a good example of what New York City has been doing, for here $200 a day has been collected.

Collections for the fifteenth week of the fund are reported as follows:

HOW do you know you're going to have a Tree?

"Your Nose Knows"

By the spicy balsam fragrance that fills the house. What hearty cheer it proclaims. You just know it's Christmas. No fooling you on that fragrance! Nor can anyone deceive you either on a fine tobacco whose appealing fragrance proclaims purity, for—"Your Nose Knows."

There is merry Christmas cheer in the pure fragrance of

Tuxedo

The Perfect Tobacco

The rich, ripe Burley leaves of which Tuxedo is made store the sunshine of the Blue Grass region of Old Kentucky and bring cheer and satisfaction to you with every smoke—"Your Nose Knows."

Try this Test:—Rub a little Tuxedo briskly in the palm of your hand to bring out its full aroma. Then smell it deep—its delicious, pure fragrance will convince you. Try this test with any other tobacco and we will let Tuxedo stand or fall on your judgment—

The Plea of the Retail Cigar Dealers' Association—A Public Disinfector—Looping the Loop in the Dark—La Kurba's Contribution—Cigarette Ordinance May Be Modified—The Sorrows of Saloonists—Burglars at Work—And Price Cutters Keep Slashing.

CHICAGO, December 3.—To each retailer in the cigar business in Chicago the newly organized Chicago Retail Cigar Dealers' Association has sent a letter, as follows:

The critical condition of the retail cigar and tobacco business demands that the retailers shall organize. Our business, as you know, has become so demoralized that a bare existence is all that we can hope for. Our salvation is to form an association for our mutual benefit.

As individuals we can accomplish nothing. We have therefore organized THE CHICAGO RETAIL CIGAR DEALERS' ASSOCIATION. It is not a money making organization. Its sole purpose is to secure organized action of the cigar retailer for his best interests. Our membership at present numbers about 100, but before we can become effective we must have at least 1,000 members. We therefore urge you, for your interest as well as ours, to join us now. The initiation fee is only one dollar.

We intend to stop reckless price cutting and to secure a living profit upon everything we sell. We intend to hold monthly meetings for the discussion of matters of mutual interest.

Do not cast this aside, as this is for your interest as well as ours. All of the members are actively engaged in the retail cigar business. Please sign the enclosed card and mail it, together with a remittance of one dollar, to the above address.

Bernard Pollack passed away a few days ago. He was the father of Victor Pollack, the well known cigar and tobacco salesman, who has the sympathy of the trade.

A public disinfector, uniformed and placarded, laden with "germ-killer" and cards of warning, now walks the downtown thoroughfares and fumigates the loop.

It's part of the crusade against spitting begun to-day by the Department of Health. Jacob Hagopian, who is conducting the campaign of education, is a quarantine officer. He wears the uniform of the department, and printed on his arm is the assurance:

"No spit, no consumption."

He carries a brass tank containing the "germ killer," and passes out cards warning that pneumonia, consumption and other diseases are conveyed in expectoration; that spitting is against the law and punishable by a fine of from $1 to $5. The smokers are being warned "hold their spit."

Business is in good shape now, and if it keeps up as it has started a big holiday trade will be had by all.

A few "short timers" are here, late travelers, hurrying home to spend the holidays. An old-timer coming back to visit the trade would quickly recognize the changes that are taking place, very few fine Boite Nature cabinets, such as used to be carried in stock, are now to be found. Even the small packings of 50 cigars in Boite Nature are few and far between, while 10 in a box are only seen in a very few places.

Holiday windows are seen all over the city and all we need now is the rush, so let it come, "we have prepared." The council license committee has recommended for passage an ordinance which abolishes the limiting of the sales of cigarettes to stores 600 feet or more from a schoolhouse. It also permits the $100 license fee to be paid in quarterly installments of $25 each.

Judge Edward T. Wade will not permit women to knit in his court room, "However, many things are unraveled there, and many a fine yarn is spun."

Chicago's night excursionists are now finding the loop dark after 11 P. M. This is one of the effects of the war. They have to grope their way through the loop at the hour which the fun used to commence in the cabarets and cafés. This was brought about by the enforcement of the fuel administration's edict that electric signs be operated only between the hours of 7:45 and 11 P. M. each night.

Pittsburgh is said to have 800 millionaires. Thus do we see, children, the advantage of smoking stogies.

Prince Albert and Tuxedo in the 16-oz. Christmas jars are now on sale. They are catching on big and there is bound to be a shortage of them this year.

Benson & Hedges' Christmas packages are on display, a fine line of fancy boxes are for sale in the loop stores. Harvey Vreeland did some good work in placing them with the best trade.

A new cigar store will be opened at the northeast corner of Lake and Dearborn streets, by Issy Cohn, who formerly was a partner in the retail cigar business, of Cohn & Nathan. This is an old Schermerhorn location. Some time ago the store was sold to Schulte, who later closed it up.

William Getzelman, a popular cigar man, is worthy of mention because he is always very busy. If he has nothing else to do when he is off duty at the Sherman Hotel cigar store you will find him hustling around for orders or brushing up stock. Billy is one of those very neat fellows who is bound to get there.

The vest pocket edition of Cob's original Londres Finos size selling at 3 for 5 cents is being placed with the trade by Sprague,

GARCIA GRANDE'S undeniable mildness is associated with the distinctive quality of Vuelta Abajo tobacco.

When we originated the Garcia Grande, we gave the world a real mild Havana, a large cigar, a good cigar that could be sold for a moderate price. The Garcia Grande represents the triumph of a new idea.

The Garcia Grande has attained a national distribution, not through extensive advertising, but strictly on its merits. It has developed continually increasing sales in all parts of the country. The fact that it appeals to everyone who likes a mild Havana, makes the Garcia Grande a brand that both the jobber and retailer may depend on for steady business.

COMFORT FROM CHICAGO

Warner & Co. They come in packages of 3 and cost the dealer $12.50 a thousand.

Al. Korn, we hear, is now in New York. He can eat four or five ordinary rations and then claim that his appetite has not been satisfied. He is the same when it comes to taking orders for the popular Furgatch brands of cigars. He grabs off the biggest ones.

Softa cigarettes from the Pera Cigarette Co., are now on sale in the stores of the Clayton Cigar Co.

Murads, Helmars and Egyptian Deities cigarettes are out in "new dress." They are now packed in round, air tight tins of 50 each. All the dealers carry them in stock.

Five per cent of the sales of all the United Cigar Stores was given to the Y. M. C. A. fund recently. It made a big hit with the United customers.

Fancy Christmas boxes of 100 Melachrino cigarettes are now on sale. They are very nifty.

Another new Christmas packing is the Magnum box of Pall Mall cigarettes containing 100 plain and 100 cork tips that retails for $5. This is one of the swellest boxes ever placed here.

Chicago will only have about 6,000 saloons next year, but, at that, who expects to die of thirst.

Something for the rest of the country to remember at Great Lakes, just a few miles north of Chicago is the biggest naval training station in the world.

La Prefencias, to keep step with many other cigars, have gone up in price. They now have an 11-cent size of this brand.

Qualite Fino Egyptian cigarettes made by Benson & Hedges are sold by many dealers. They retail for 15 cents straight.

George Bennett is doing a great business. By the way, George has acquired quite an appetite this winter, and specializes on hot mince pies. Flor de Mendel cigars is a steady seller with E. G. B.'s box customers.

We lost a fine fellow when George Smith quit the cigar-selling game. All the boys wish him the best of luck.

Frank Lopez, that "young" lion, goes on "liberty" quite regularly of late. Ten-shun Frank. They are calling for Garcia & Vega cigars all over, and the sale is growing fast.

Al. Regan has a regular date at the Boston Theatre these days. Funny how the "movies" get on the cigar man's nerve. Habit with Al.

"Watch the bands come in." Three thousand boxes have been placed on the counters of as many cigar stores by the La Kurba Cigar Co., of Chicago, and Benton Harbor, Michigan, to receive bands from La Panto cigars. For every ten bands they will give one Le Panto cigar to the Daily News tobacco fund. That means the boys in France are going to get a lot of good smokes this winter. Sol Lazar, president of the La Kyrba Cigar Co., hopes the Daily News will receive a million bands, "that will mean 100,000 cigars, and we will be g'ad to give that many and ten times that, if the smokes send in enough bands." Already the Daily News has received several thousand from the stores. The cigars will be shipped in lots of 5,000 to the men fighting for Uncle Sam.

J. A. Moos, on Wilson avenue, is doing well with Cuesta Rey cigars. A fine display holds the center of his large window.

Johl's Pharmacy, at 4601 North Clark street, has a fine glass El Roi Tan sign at the entrance to the store.

La For de Gonzalez & Sanchez is jobbed by Many Blanc Co. They are sold in a lot of stores. The "6-cent Havana Winner" is a new offering that is selling well.

The Merit Cigar Store, on Wilson avenue, under the elevated station, carries a big line of La Vengas and Van Dycks. Clear Havanas are staple sellers here.

Alderman John G. Horne has drafted an ordinance to take from Mayor Thompson the saloon license administration, and rest it in a commission of three men at an annual salary of $6,000 each. The proposal was modeled after the liquor ordinances of Boston.

"There is a shortage of alarm clocks," but why worry about getting up on time as long as there are milkmen? To parents of new babies, alarm clocks are also unnecessary.

Although the saloons in Chicago have been steadily dwindling, the city has been hustling, collecting new license fees. Though the Sunday closing law has knocked out many, and the high prices of liquors and shortage of stocks has forced others to close, some 6,000 saloons were on the paying list, at this license period; 700 dropped out. Looks like the "water wagon" is soon due to hit Chicago. The Rev. "Billy" Sunday spent a day here recently on his way to Atlanta. He said he was glad to be in Chicago, and that he looked forward to the next revival here next March. This is just before the spring election, when the question of wet and dry will come up before the voters. Billy says our big city can't feaze him, and that he knows Chicago will come across with thousands of converts before he gets through.

T. G. T. Stieber's store, at 3256 Indiana avenue, one of the largest on the south side, also felt the effects of a visit from the "yegg" band that is holding forth in Chicago right now.

Brevity Bespeaks Busy Boston's Benevolence

BOSTON, December 3.—It happens that Senator DePew, ambassador extraordinary of Y. Pendas & Alvarez, was one distinguished visitor to these parts recently. He can find his way around Boston now without the aid of a guide. Websters, the good old favorites, head the list in Boston for Havana goods.

Tanforan has made many friends in all parts of the city. A very complete distribution is made on this brand.

The Dubonnet Coronas of the American Exchange Cigar Co. are appearing ten in a box for the holiday trade. Many retailers have stocked heavily this season, as the Dubonnet Coronas were one of the best sellers here last year.

Charles B. Perkins Co. has taken on the Boston Club nickel cigar of the Commonwealth Cigar Co. They control the brand for New England.

Edward Davis, of the Inter-City Cigar Co., sole distributor of the Girard cigars, is supplying the trade with 1/40's and 1/100's. Girard is the pioneer shade-grown wrapped cigar in this market, and is firmly entrenched.

King Clay nickel cigars are being jobbed by Baker Bros.

Arthur Barr, who had charge of the shipping department of Baker Bros., has been drafted, and is awaiting to be called. Baker Bros. will lose a valuable man, but Samuel Baker says that when Barr returns his position will be open for him.

A Boston cigar manufacturer, Abraham Bronkhorst, of Brookline, died at the City Hospital last night. He was taken ill on a train in the South Station. Mr. Bronkhorst was a member of the C. C. A. Cigar Company. He was born in London and came to America as a boy. He learned the cigar trade in New York and was for many years employed by the makers of the J. A. cigar. When the C. C. C. Co. was formed Mr. Bronkhorst became a member. He leaves a wife, Ruth Bronkhorst, and a son, Thomas L. Bronkhorst, who is connected with amusement enterprises.

D. Emil Klein, of E. M. Schwarz & Co., was a trade visitor this week.

E. L. Cauley, who owns one of the best up-town cafes, invited seventy-five soldiers from Ayer for Thanksgiving Dinner.

Joseph P. Manning Co. received a big shipment of 1/40's of Fort Hill nickel Union Made cigars this week. These are packed in white glazed paper cartons, embossed in colors, making most attractive holiday packages.

A lot of 1/40's of El Leon also has arrived.

Van Dycks, Robert Burns, White Owls and Owls in various packings are shown prominently in all of the windows of Bieringer-Hanauer Co.'s stores, on School street, Federal street, Dock square, and at Salem, Mass.

Salesmanager Finkelstein reports that the General Cigar Co. was very liberal on 1/40's and 1/100's, but with all their generosity, the salesmen of Bieringer-Hanauer could have disposed of double the amount.

The three Musketeers, Alexander, Fallon and Armstead of the Commonwealth Cigar Co., have been the original speed artists the past month, covering territory, and if one can find a store that has not El Roi Tans, La Preferencias, Kelley's Bouquets, Chancellors, Cremos, or some one of their brands, there's a good reason. They combed the region with a fine tooth comb, and let no important buyer escape.

BE ON THE SAFE SIDE

Wisconsin Tobacco Growers Urged to Let the Leaf Cure Thoroughly—Work Postponed Until After the Holidays.

EDGERTON, Wis., November 30.—The week has brought a season of fair casing weather, during which a small portion of the earlier tobacco has been taken from the sheds for stripping. If the great bulk of the crop was sufficiently free from heavy stems, much more would have been removed from the poles, as this is about the usual date to commence stripping. However, the fear of fat stems will prompt growers to allow their tobacco to hang until it is more thoroughly cured out. There is but little advantage in stripping this early, as few, if any of the packers are yet ready to receive their purchases and are not likely to find enough of the crop ready for delivery to warrant the opening of their warehouses until after the holidays. They are still urging the growers not to commit the error of taking down their crops until the stems are in condition for packing.

Trading in old leaf from local packers' hands is becoming rare because of the lack of supplies to meet the pressing demands of manufacturers.

The shipments out of storage reach 525cs. and five cars of bundles to all points since last report.—Edgerton Reporter.

The Appellate Division of New York State has ruled that a booth six feet square, in an amusement park, for the sale of chewing gum, and, presumably, candy, cigars and similar articles, is a mercantile establishment within the meaning of Section 2 of the Labor law, defining a mercantile establishment as "any place where goods, wares or merchandise are offered for sale."

TRADE NEWS FROM NEAR AND FAR

Martin Degnan, a cigar dealer, of East Chatham, N. Y., has been granted a discharge, in bankrupcy.

The R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. has filed with the Secretary of State of New Jersey a certificate increasing its capital stock from $20,000,000 to $40,000,000.

A fire, occurring one day last week, at Main and Niagara Streets, Buffalo, caused damage amounting to about $300 to stock in the United Cigar Store there.

Accused of selling liquor and otherwise violating the "dry law" of the State of Washington, Jack Hall and Dan Ruark, owners of the Little Brick cigar store at West 226 Riverside Avenue, Spokane, were arrested last week.

A cigar store conducted by Thomas H. Kennery, at 621 East Pike street, Seattle, was closed by the police Saturday morning when dry squad men searched the place and a partly-filled bottle of liquor was found. Later a search of Kennery's rooms was made and three gallons of liquor in jugs and a demijohn and three quart bottles were seized. Kennery was arrested and released on bail.

Michael J. Linnig, seventy-one years old, a retired tobacco manufacturer, formerly with the Nall & Williams Company, at Eighth and Breckinridge streets, Louisville, died last week of a cerebral hemorrhage at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. G. Terrell, 2025 Baringer avenue, Louisville, where he has made his home for the past few years. He retired from active business about five years ago. Besides Mrs. Terrell, he is survived by another daughter, Miss Pearl Linnig, and one son, Michael J. Linnig, Jr.

According to report, the American Tobacco Co. has decided to abandon its proposed issue of $25,000,000 two-year 6 per cent. notes, which would not be accepted for re-discount by the Federal Reserve Bank, and borrow instead a similar amount by putting out a one-year acceptance credit in four issues of three months' maturity, each in a form eligible for re-discount. Banking syndicate which has arranged the issue is composed of the Guaranty Trust Co., Chase Securities Co. and Kidder-Peabody & Co. It is expected that about twenty-five banks will participate in this acceptance credit.

Members of the Cigar and Stogie Manufacturers' Association met in the Fort Pitt Hotel Pittsburgh, Friday night, a week ago, discussed business conditions and held an election of officers. After discussing labor conditions, price of material and other expenses the manufacturers said that unless they had relief shortly the industry would be placed in a critical condition. The following officers were elected: M. W. DeWaters, president; W. D. Sharpe, vice president; William Wagner, secretary, and J. Benjamin, treasurer; Charles Bock, J. Weckerle, S. B. Goldsmith, B. Hargrave, A. Goldbloom, D. A. Floto and Howard Hazlett, directors.

Raymond Steber, who for several months has been operating a cigar factory in Oil City, Pa., on Wednesday declared that he would suspend operations until such time as market and labor conditions more nearly approach normal. While he found it difficult to secure skilled labor, that difficulty was not unsurmountable. But the great advance in the price of the grade of tobacco he was using made it impossible to manufacture profitably a grade cigar to retail for five cents.

The total Long Island Railroad passengers were 13,224,258, and Pennsylvania Railroad passengers 4,924,347.

Greensboro, N. C., warehousemen declare that never before in the history of the Greensboro market has such a large amount of a crop been sold this early in the season. They firmly believe that already 85 per cent. of the 1917 crop has been marketed, that sold including a great majority of the best grades. Although fine and fancy grades have been largely disposed of the prices paid for medium grades cause the general average to be maintained and tobacco growers now are receiving fancy prices.

The Farnum Tobacco Corporation, of South indsor, Conn., has decided to bring its tocco to Hartford to be sorted rather than to re workers to go to the tobacco plantations. he company has leased for a term of years om the Industrial Realty Title & Guaranty o. the old International Silver Co. factory at and 69 Temple street, Hartford, and there 00 or more women are employed daily busily sorting tobacco. The Farnum Tobacco Corporation has large plantations in South Windsor, but has found the labor problem hard to solve.

Scarcity of labor and increased cost of fertilizers and farming implements threaten to materially reduce the tobacco acreage of Connecticut the coming year, according to Frank H. Whipple, of Olds & Whipple, of Hartford. Connecticut's tobacco plantations in previous years have covered about 22,000 acres. Of the past season's tobacco crop in Connecticut, it is estimated by growers and packers that about 62 per cent. was injured by hail and frost, and that while the rest is being sold at high prices, the heavy losses have discouraged growers and are likely to contribute to reduced tobacco acreage for some time to come.

Harry E. Litty, who began his career as an engineer on a switch engine at Columbia, Tenn., and who recently was appointed Mayor of Memphis, following the ousting of T. C. Ashcraft, has entered on a career of strenuous enforcement. In the sweeping instructions to "close up the town," issued by Mayor Litty, police activities are extended, not only against liquor selling, gambling and segregated vice, but also to secure a rigid enforcement of the laws pertaining to the operation of theatres and poolrooms on Sundays, the sale of cigarettes, reckless automobile driving and the closing of groceries on Sundays after 10 a. m.

With a capital of $200,000 the Kentucky-Virginia Leaf Tobacco Co. has been organized and will establish a business at once at Owensboro, Ky. The incorporators are J. M. Vaughan, Owensboro, and R. O. Tuck, Louisville. Mr. Vaughan formerly was identified with the Ross-Vaughan Tobacco Co. of Owensboro. He will be president of the new concern. G. O. Tuck, head of the Louisville tobacco firm that bears his name, will be vice-president.

Charged with felony embezzlement, J. D. Mazzani, a cigar dealer who conducts a cigar stand at 130 J street, Sacramento, Cal., was arrested one day last week by Detectives Warren and Desenfants, and is being held in jail in default of $1,000 bail. Joseph G. Adams, the complaining witness, stated that he gave Mazzani $100 for safe keeping Sunday night, and that the cigar dealer gave him a receipt which was understood to be used as a check to have the money returned. Adams says he showed up and asked for the money, producing the receipt, but Adams says Mazzani refused to give him the $100, saying that he had given it to him Sunday night when he returned intoxicated. Mazzani could not account for having given up the money without a receipt.

tobacco was grown; the year in which harvested; the class and size designations of the tobacco; and, in case it is subject to inspection, its net weight at the time when presented for inspection. No objection will be raised if additional private marks are shown, provided same are not false or misleading.

Section 9. Inspection of leaf tobacco.—Pursuant to the provisions of Section 6 of Act No. 2613, it is hereby required that all leaf tobacco removed from the province of its origin to the City of Manila or to the Provinces of Bulacan, Pampanga, Rizal, Cavite, Iloilo or Cebu shall be inspected, and inspection labels shall be affixed thereto in the manner hereinafter prescribed. The inspection shall be made at the point of shipment to Manila or to the provinces of Balacan, Pampanga, Rizal, Cavite, Iloilo or Cebu. In the municipalities of Lal-loc and Aparri, Cagayan and San Fernando, La Union, the inspections shall be made by the duly appointed tobacco inspectors at those places, so soon as such inspectors shall have been assigned thereto. Whenever an inspection is required at any other point, same shall be made by the treasurer of said province or a deputy selected by him on account of his knowledge of leaf tobacco, unless the Collector of Internal Revenue shall have designated some other person to perform such inspection.

Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions hereof, any person consigning tobacco to the City of Manila, or to the Provinces of Rizal, Iloilo or Cebu, may secure from the Provincial Treasurer a permit, under Schedule L, paragraph 9, for the inspection of the tobacco at the point of destination instead of at the point of embarkation, upon making an application on B. I. R. Form No. 525 provided for that purpose, in which it is agreed that the consignor, in consideration of this exemption, will submit the tobacco for inspection immediately upon its arrival at destination, will pay the proper inspection fees, and when so required by the Collector of Internal Revenue, recondition and repack the leaf tobacco to conform to the provisions of these regulations, should the tobacco be rejected upon inspection. Any provincial or deputy provincial treasurer or internal-revenue agent may, upon presentation of the L-9 permit by the consignor, and a duly accomplished application for inspection, B. I. R. Form 526, authorize the shipment without prior inspection, by signing a notation in the following form upon the L-3 guia of the shipper and in his official register book:

"Shipment without prior inspection authorized this..... day of.....191.., under Permit L-9..... for the year 191...

....
(Signature) (Title)"

The shipping L-3 dealer will make the following notation on the advice slip corresponding to the shipment:

"Shipped without prior inspection under permit L-9-No..... for the year 191..."

The application for inspection shall be attached by the consignor to the official guia corresponding to the shipment.

Any consignor who fails to submit the tobacco so shipped without prior inspection within five days after its arrival at point of destination after having agreed to do so shall have his L-9 permit revoked and shall thereafter be debarred from the privilege, and shall be proceeded against under the penal provisions of Act No. 2613. Persons shipping tobacco from the province of Isabela to the city of Manila or to the province of Cebu, Iloilo, Rizal, Bulacan or Pampanga, may by means of a similar agreement secure its inspection at the port of embarkation in Cagayan Province.

All leaf tobacco ultimately arriving in the city of Manila or the provinces of Pampanga, Bulacan, Rizal, Iloilo or Cebu, shall fall within the requirements of this paragraph, even though same may pass through, or be detained for a time in some other province. This paragraph shall also apply to all tobacco shipped from the Philippines to the United States.

(a) Inspection fees for leaf tobacco.—Section 8 of Act No. 2613 provides that for inspections made in accordance with this Act there shall be collected a fee of 25 centavos for each 100 kilograms of leaf tobacco or fraction thereof in the lot offered for inspection. Leaf tobacco which has undergone any process of manufacture, other than curing and fermenting, is subject to inspection and to the payment of the inspection fees as hereinafter provided for manufactured tobacco.

(b) Application for inspections.—The inspection of leaf tobacco shall be made upon application in the form of a declaration under oath by the person shipping the tobacco on B. I. R. Form No. 526. Said application, while addressed to the Collector of Internal Revenue, shall be submitted to the inspector in charge at the point of inspection, and it should be in his hands at least one week before the scheduled date of shipment. A separate application must be made for each class of leaf tobacco offered for inspection. In case of shipment without prior inspection under an L-9 permit, the application shall be accomplished by the consignor, attached to the official guia, and presented by the consignee.

IT PAYS TO PAY.

drunken Chinese orchestra than a semi-high class ballad, and Harry never forgave them. To him they were natural enemies for the remainder of his life.

Harry's little bit of stage play would have been all right had he bought his cigars, instead of begging them from friends before he set out for a publisher's. Being a beggar in this respect he was taking chances with the quality of the goods. He realized this in a vague sort of a way, but he did not believe in giving a publisher or his accomplices anything that cost real money—not from his pocket. If they desired good cigars they could buy them with some of the royalty he was positive they kept back from him.

One spring morning, Harry had a song called "When It's All Going Up in Smoke." Although March had a couple of days to run, the morning itself was like summer, and the warmth of his body reminded him that he needed a new spring suit. Cigars he had none. So he stationed himself at the entrance to Tin Pan Alley and waited for victims. The third friend that passed parted with a Corona. Fifteen minutes later he won a good-loking wrapperless weed from a performer who had just been booked for twenty weeks. On fishing for the third from a doubtful acquaintance he met with this reply:

"What do you want a cigar for, you don't smoke?"

"Maybe I don't," Harry replied, "but I'm broke and I'm going to see a friend in the hospital and want to give him a smoke."

"Well, you've never been much of a friend of mine, Harry. You've always knocked my act. Is this fellow a real friend of yours?"

Harry nodded.

"All right; here's a cigar I was saving for some one else I didn't like."

Harry laughed at the joke and took the smoke. Then he headed for the publisher he had in view as a possible market for his manuscript.

The office was clear of performers. It was too early for them and Harry was glad. After handing out the cigars, which in some way got mixed, the pianist getting the Corona, Harry pulled out his manuscript. Elated over his present, the pianist settled down as if he intended to do justice to the melody. The boss, the manager, and the pianist were puffing away at their cigars, with Harry looking over the piano player's shoulder and singing the song. As he reached the chorus and said "When it's all going up in Smoke" there was a loud report to his left, and when he turned he saw the boss expectorating like a man who had swallowed poison, while his face was enveloped in a cloud of smoke.

"What the h--l do you mean by handing me April fool cigars?" the boss howled when he was able to get his breath." Do you think this is a burlesque?"

Harry did not wait to reply, but just grabbed his song and bolted. Now he buys his cigars and asks the clerks at the counter to guarantee them. His slogan is "It Pays to Pay."

FIGHT WITH FRUIT!

Fresh fruit, fine fruit, the best you can get! Seasonable fruit—oranges, apples, plums, peaches, grapes, even strawberries and such—especially when they're a novelty in the early days of the demand.

Take oranges. They cost, in the best grades, $2.50 to $3 the hundred. Apples approximately the same, best grades only.

But don't buy too many! Instead, try a small portion of a different sort each morning. Get an attractive basket, with a high handle. Decorate it with a big bow of wide ribbon.

Use yellow, orange or red ribbon for oranges. Use red or emerald green for apples. Use similar contrasts of agreeable tint for the other fruits. These colors attract attention and finish off an otherwise one-tone picture.

Now, don't overcrowd the basket! Put in, say, a pyramid of a single dozen, just enough to make a neat showing.

Keep the balance of stock in reserve to fill the gaps, sure to come. For men, yes, even your smokers, like fruit, and they'll buy it if it looks appealing.

Particularly if you'll put a little card near the display, something like this:

"Good Morning!

"Will you have a little fruit this morning?

"These have been specially selected to sell at 5 cents each."

Selling at a nickel per piece, the fruit pays a nice profit, you see. Always a bonus of from 40 to 50 per cent, deducting some slight and unavoidable waste, providing you buy sparingly from day to day.

And that's the way to fight these rising costs of business. Tackle new things! Don't be afraid of criticism! Get in first!

Even the fellow who yells about it will probably follow your very example after you've blazed the trail!

Remember the successful drug chains! They sell cigars. But they're not afraid to handle teas, coffees, spices, cocoas, and all other specialties in which there's a larger profit!

Ancient druggists stood still, just like some old-time cigar men do. They never take a chance! They smile to themselves at the bug-housiness of the more progressive dealers. Then, when it's entirely too late, these famous boys buckle up to the modern game with a me-too imitation!

Fight with fruit! There's money in it! It'll cover the costs upon less profitable stock; you know it!

And, if it becomes necessary, sell henfruit, too! Right in the center of a big window, filled with cigars, tobaccos and cigarettes, a certain dealer displayed choice eggs!

They were a big novelty to the passing crowds, just because a tobacconist offered them! That's the big idea!

is undoubtedly an excellent one. Still, I am inclined to think you'd better not urge the scheme with merchants in this line of business. For, if you do, neither soldier nor civilian will be able to purchase smoking materials in a retail store. They'll be obliged to secure their supplies of this sort at a joss house!"

Chief Gungunhama does not smoke Dubonnet cigars. Because, sorry to say, the chief is not here with us any more. But all the other Tammany chiefs, from Murphy to McCooey, are said to favor the mild Dubonnet.

Its distribution in New York is therefore wide. Wide and deep. Everyone sells the Dubonnet in the hamlet-on-the-hasenpfeffer. Someone has even remarked that there is a Dubonnet store in N'York to equal each mile of the 771-mile waterfront.

An echo of such immense popularity, you see, is bound to have its call and repeat heard 'way up here in the wilderness!

That's why Bobby Richford put it in. And Bobby is making a window showing of the brand this week in his Broadway Arcade store, Albany. Manager Shaxby, of the J. W. Stevens store, has also stocked Dubonnets in the cedar Christmas box. It'll sell!

On the front steps of Troy's City Hall are two lamp posts. Both have circular white globes with something on the glass.

So folk crowd nearer to see just what they read. It may be something important. Or perhaps Mayor Burns has merely issued another manifesto proclaiming his third election!

But, no! It's not that! Instead, it's one of Herbie Hoover's slogans. And it goes: "Food will win the war. Don't waste it!"

Now, across the street, at 69 Third, you'll see another sign. It's the biggest sign in Troy! And what does it say?

Just this: "William Fitzpatrick, Tobacconist," in the great gilt letters reaching to the top of the building! A splendid sign.

There, you see, is the difference. When the City of Troy makes a sign it's so small you have to use a Sir William Crookes glass to read it!

Then, when Billy Fitzpatrick makes a sign, Mayor Burns himself can see and read it without leaving his office chair!

Another live Troy house is the firm of Albert Bloch & Son, 156 River street, corner of Congress. Business is said to be just a trifle quiet.

Probably one of the smallest cigar stores in Troy is that of H. T. Phillips, on River street. Yet business runs into real money here when conditions are correct.

In both of the C. L. Hulett stores, 327 and 382 River street, Troy, the boys are pushing the soldier-kit specials, arranged for holiday mailing.

At the lower store, a very attractive pipe display is a feature of the window space. Jobbing business here is holding its own with the present peculiar trade situation.

Their leader for years, the Professor Morse, is still the foremost ten-cent product of James McGahan & Brother, 347 River street, Troy.

All the old-time favorites of O'Connor & Elkenburgh, 385 River street, Troy, are having a generous output.

Otello, Rob Roy, and the Lily are O. & E. brands of some standing, and this cigar factory is fairly busy with the usual help.

Since selling out his cigar business at Newburgh, N. Y., E. R. Barrett has been located at Troy. He is now division manager for the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., whose branch retail stores completely cover the Capitol District.

"Just about two new places are opened up every week," said Mr. Barrett, "and we find that old-time cigar men make excellent help to have around our stores. These tobacco chaps are particularly clever with window work, which we are making a play upon just now."

ATTENDING NATIONAL DEFENSE COUNCIL

Washington, December 12.—The war service committees are meeting here today under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. The tobacco industry is represented by Edward Wise and Charles Dushkind. The meeting is for the purpose of telling the members of the committees how they can best co-operate with the Council of National Defense.

America's Greatest Crops

WASHINGTON, December 11.—America's war crops this year were the most valuable in its history, according to final estimates on acreage, production and value announced by the Department of Agriculture today.

The record corn crop amounted to 3,159,494,000 bushels, with a farm value December 1 of $4,053,672,000. Winter and spring wheat production was 650,828,000 bushels, valued at $1,307,418,000; oats, 1,587,286,000 bushels, $1,061,427,000; barley, 208,975,000 bushels, $237,539,000; rye, 60,145,000 bushels, $100,025,000; rice, 36,278,000 bushels, $68,717,000; potatoes, 442,536,000 bushels, $543,865,000; sweet potatoes, 87,141,000 bushels, $96,121,000; cotton, 10,949,000 bales, $1,451,819,000; sugar beets, 6,237,000 tons, $45,780,000; beans, 15,701,000 bushels, $102,426,000; onions, 13,564,000 bushels, $22,523,000; cabbage, 502,700 tons, $17,080,000; hay, 95,030,000 tons, $1,567,325,000.

Cotton production will amount to 10,949,000 bales of 500 pounds gross weight each.

WHICH WAS REAL CHARITY WORK

The employes of the Garcia Grande cigar factory in New York worked Sunday and contributed their entire earnings for the day to the Jewish fund for the relief of war sufferers. To the contribution thus made, Julius Klorfein added $300.

U. S. Supreme Court Upholds the "Open Shop"

Of Far Reaching Importance Is the Decision Handed Down in the Case of the Hitchman Coal and Coke Co. Versus John Mitchell et al.—"The Right to Unionize Labor Must Always Be Exercised with Reasonable Regard for the Conflicting Rights of Others—Three Justices Dissent.

WASHINGTON, December 10.—Decisions defining the rights of both organized labor and the employer were rendered to-day by the Supreme Court of the United States.

While the right of workmen to organize for lawful purposes was re-affirmed, the court held that employers legally may operate their plants as "open shops" and prevent conspiracies to bring their non-union employees into labor organizations.

The opinions were rendered in the case of the Hitchman Coal and Coke Co. against John Mitchell and others, upholding a restraining order to prevent union labor from bringing a strike in a non-union coal mine in West Virginia. Justice Pitney delivered the opinion for the court, in which the Chief Justice and four other Justices concurred, and Justice Brandeis, Justice Holmes and Justice Clark dissented.

The Hitchman Coal and Coke Co. case was brought to the Supreme Court on a writ of certiorari from the United States Court of Appeals from the Fourth Circuit. This was a suit in equity brought by the Hitchman Coal and Coke Co., owner of a coal mine in the Panhandle District of West Virginia, against officers and mine owners of the United Mine Workers of America.

The Hitchman mine was operated non-union, under an agreement between the company and its men that the employees should not become connected with the union, and that if they joined it their employment should cease.

A suit was brought to obtain an injunction to restrain Mr. Mitchell and other defendants from interfering with the relation existing between the Hitchman Company and its employees in order to compel the company to unionize its mines.

Union mine workers entered the Panhandle District, and tried to organize or unionize the miners of the Hitchman and other mines. They were stopped by a restraining order, which was dismissed by the Circuit Court of Appeals, on appeal from the District Court, where a decision was rendered in favor of the plaintiff.

The Supreme Court to-day held that the coal company was acting within its lawful rights in employing its men upon the terms that they should not be members of the United Mine Workers of America; that having established this working agreement between it and its employees with the free assent of the latter, the plaintiff is entitled to be protected in the enjoyment or resulting status as in any other legal right.

The opinion of the court says that by way of justification or excuse the defendant set up the right of workingmen to form unions and to enlarge their membership by inviting other men to join. This right is freely conceded by the court, provided the objects of the union be proper and legitimate, which is assumed to be true in a general sense with respect to the United Mine Workers of America.

But the court holds it is erroneous to assume that this right is so absolute that it may be exercised under any circumstances and without any qualifications; that, in truth, like other rights that exist in civilized society, it must always be exercised with reasonable regard for the conflicting rights of others, according to the fundamental maxim: "So use your own property as not to ruin the rights of another."

Summing up the case, the court holds that the purpose of the defendants to bring about a strike at the Hitchman mine in order to compel the plaintiff through fear of financial loss to consent to the unionization of the mine as the lesser evil, was an unlawful purpose, and that the methods resorted to by the organizer—inducing of employees to unite with the union in an effort to subvert the system of employment at the mine by concerted breaches of the contracts of employment known to be in force there—were unlawful and malicious methods, not to be justified as a fair exercise of the right to increase the membership of the union.

The court adds that since the plaintiff was threatened with danger of an immediate strike and irreparable damage as the result of the defendants' efforts, it was entitled to be protected by an injunction.

Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, in a statement to-night, characterized the decision upheld as "far-reaching and unwarrantable."

PATRIOTIC DEMUTH EMPLOYES.

One hundred employes of William Demuth & Company's pipe factory purchased through the Hillside bank $10,000 worth of bonds of the second Liberty Loan.

Each emplpoye is to pay one dollar or more a week, and on payment of the face value of the bond being complete it will be delivered to him with all coupons attached. Employes will receive interest for full amount, even though they have not paid for it.

To help Democracy a plan has been devised to teach the foreign employes English. Circulars in several languages urging the foreign element to attend evening school, have been distributed. To date more than fifty employes have taken up with evening school work.

The firm purchased two hundred barrels of Long Island potatoes and distributed them at cost among its employes.

Posters calling for contributions to the Red Cross brought $1,000 within forty-eight hours, which included donations from the New York office.

The firm's service flag carries thirty-nine stars, and Gus Freitag's enlistment has made it just an even forty.

INTERESTING DECISION

Made by the Interstate Commerce Commission, Relative to Complaints Made by the American Sumatra Tobacco Co.

WASHINGTON, December 10.—The Interstate Commerce Commission handed down a decision the latter part of last week in case No. 8774 of the American Sumatra Tobacco Company against the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad et al. In the syllabus in this case the Commissioners say:

"Rates on second-hand cheesecloth in carloads and less than carloads, from Windsor Locks, Conn., to Quincy, Fla., found to have been and to be reasonable. Shipments found to have been undercharged and overcharged. Reparation awarded." The opinion, in full, is as follows:

"Complainant is a corporation engaged in the tobacco business at New York. By complaint, filed March 10, 1916, as amended, it alleges that the charges collected on three lots of second-hand cheesecloth shipped November 5, 1912, from Windsor Locks, Conn., to Quincy, Fla., were illegal and unreasonable. Reparation is asked and the establishment of reasonable rates for the future. The claim was presented to the Commission informally October 10, 1914. Rates are stated in amounts per 100 pounds.

"The article shipped, which was similar to mosquito netting, had been used for a year in shading growing tobacco in Connecticut. It was packed in bundles or bales, not machine pressed, averaging about 93 pounds each. At destination the better prices, estimated at from 50 to 60 per cent of the whole, were utilized to patch holes in complainant's tobacco shades.

"The shipments moved over defendants' lines, and charges aggregating $308.73 were assessed, based on actual weight of one less-than-carload shipment, 3,700 pounds, and a rate of 69 cents; and on carload minimum weight of 24,000 pounds for each of the other two shipments and a rate of 59 cents. Neither rate can be verified. There was no commodity rate in effect nor was there a specific rating on second-hand cheesecloth in the southern classification, which governed. Complainant contends, and defendant Seaboard Air Line Railway concedes, that under rule 5 of the southern classification the rating on rags should apply. Defendant Clyde Steamship Company takes the position that this old cheesecloth was used at destination for substantially the same purpose for which it was originally purchased and used, and that therefore it should take the same rating as new cheesecloth. New cheescloth falls within the description 'cotton piece goods, n. o. s.,' in the southern classification, which was and is rated first class, any quantity, in bales or boxes. In our opinion the ratings on rags were, under the classification rule referred to, legally applicable to these shipments.

Prior to November 1, 1912, southern classification No. 38 named any-quantity ratings on rags as follows:

Rags:	Class.
In sacks or crates	3
In bbls. or hhds	4
Pressed in bales	A

"On the date mentioned southern classification No. 39 canceled these ratings and named the following carload and less-than carload ratings, which are still in effect except that the carload entry is now subject to graded minima for cars of extra length:

Rags:	Class.
In bags or in bales not machine pressed, l. c. l.	2
In bbls. or crates, l. c. l.	2
In machine-pressed bales, l. c. l.	A
In packages named, carload, minimum weight 24,000 pounds	A

"We find that the second-class rate of $1.24 was legally applicable on the shipment weighing 3,700 pounds. At that rate the charges would have been $45.88, so that this shipment was undercharged $20.35. On the other two shipments the class A rate of 50 cents was legally applicable in connection with a minimum weight of 24,000 pounds. The charges at that rate and weight would have been $120, so that each of these shipments was overcharged $21.60.

"A number of articles rated class A in the southern classification were cited on behalf of complainant. These articles are not analogous to the one under consideration and are of little value in determining reasonable ratings thereon. It was stated that complainant is now machine pressing its bales of second-hand cheesecloth and that 24,000 pounds can be loaded in a standard car.

Defendant's witness testified that the southern classification, which prior to 1912 had been on an any-quantity basis, now provides carload and less-than-carload ratings on a large number of articles; that rags are ordinarily shipped in machine-pressed bales weighing 10 or 12 pounds per cubic foot; and that shipments in bags or bales not machine pressed weigh 2 or 3 pounds, and never more than 5 pounds, per cubic foot. There were cited, by way of comparison, the first-class rating on cotton piece goods above mentioned, second-class any-quantity ratings on paulins and cloth covers for wagons, and a first-class less-than-carload rating on tents.

"The present descriptions and packing requirements conform to the recommendations of the Committee on Uniform Classification, and the official and western classifications provide second-class ratings for rags in less than carloads, in bags or bales, not machine pressed, and in carloads, sixth class and class C, respectively, minima 24,000 pounds, subject to graded minima for cars of different lengths.

"We find that the rates legally applicable to these shipments were and are reasonable, but that the charges collected on the two carload shipments were illegal to the extent that they exceeded those that would have accrued at the rate of 50 cents per 100 pounds, subject to a minimum weight of 24,000 pounds, which rate we find was legally applicable; that complainant made the two shipments as described and paid and bore the charges thereon; that it has been damaged to the extent that such charges exceeded those legally applicable; and that it is entitled to reparation in the sum of $43.20, with interest."

HAAS BROS. WIN SUIT

Tobacco Grower of Tippecanoe City, O., "Compromises" with Cigar Manufacturers by Paying Full Amount Claimed.

That cigar leaf tobacco growers may not repudiate contracts entered into with cigar manufacturers or others because of any increase in the market prices was demonstrated in Cincinnati, last week, when a compromise was entered into by the parties to the breach of contract suit of Haas Bros., Cincinnati, cigar manufacturers, against John Wertz.

This compromise is said to be a distinct victory for buyers of tobacco in Southern Ohio in that it assures to them redress in case any grower fails to carry out contracts made during the planting season to furnish his entire output of tobacco leaf at the end of the growing season at stipulated prices.

E. H. and R. A. Kerr, Tippecanoe City, attorneys, represented Haas Bros. in this suit, which was instituted in the Court of Common Pleas for Miami County last March. In its petition the Cincinnati concern set up the contract entered into by it with the grower and charged the grower had disposed of his entire crop to others at a price of four cents a pound in excess of the contract price. The amount sought to be recovered represented the difference between the contract price and the selling price.

"UNITED DRUG" GAINS

Returns For October Show the Largest Month's Business in the History of the Company—Earnings Increased 48 Per Cent.

BOSTON, December 10.—The United Drug Co. in October did the largest business for any month in its history. Sales were $4,236,515, against $3,306,482 in October, 1916, an increase of $930,033. Gross profits were $1,384,770, against $1,105,702, an increase of $279,068.

After paying all expenses, deducting depreciation and provisions for taxes, final net profit available for dividends was $453,614, against $305,503 for October a year ago.

It will be noticed that sales increased 28 per cent.; gross earnings increased 25.25 per cent., but the net earnings increased 48.5 per cent. Percentage of gross profit upon which the company did business in October was 32.68, against 33.44 last year, or a reduction of .76 per cent., which is the result of company's policy of holding prices to the public at as low a level as possible. Indeed, as will be seen by comparison of percentage of gross, it did not raise prices to the public the same proportion that cost of ingredients increased. That this policy is successful shows itself in increased sales and in final profits, which increased 48.5 per cent., due entirely to reduction in operating expenses and to increased volume.

Economies that were to be created through the consolidation of United Drug Co. and the Riker & Hegeman Co. in the early part of 1916 are now being reaped in the reduction of expenses, through higher efficiency of organized effort.

Allowing for proportionate part of earnings required for dividends in the first and second preferred stock applicable to the month of October, the net earnings this month are at the rate of $18.21 per share per year on the common stock outstanding. The common is now paying 5 per cent.

GREEK TOBACCO CROP

In 1917 Is 30 Per Cent. Greater Than in 1916—Quality Said to Be Excellent—Growers Obtain Doubled Prices.

WASHINGTON, December 11.—A good tobacco crop was produced this year in Greece according to word reaching the government officials here. Following is a report just received from Athens relative to the crop.

"The excellent prices brought by last year's tobacco crop in Greece caused many experts to predict a vastly increased acreage this year, and this was in part the case. The crop, however, is only about thirty per cent in excess of that of 1916, on account of rather unfavorable climatic conditions during the greater part of 1917. The total production for 1917 is estimated at about 102,175,000 pounds.

"The quality of the crop is said to be excellent. Owing to a great demand, particularly from Egypt, the prices brought by the various brands of tobacco are about double those obtaining last year. The demand exceeds the supply, and since nearly all of the great American firms have active and capable representatives on the ground who are determined to buy what they need, the price is not expected to decline during the season.

"About eight and a half million pounds will be consumed in Greece, and an equal amount by Italy. Egypt will require nearly twenty million pounds, while an estimate of the needs of the other countries is as follows: United States about 25,215,000 pounds, and 14,107,500 pounds for the following markets combined: Brazil, Tunis, Spain, France, Holland and Switzerland."

RECOMMENDED AS A REMEDY

"The economic significance of trade associations and the correction of abuses which arise in their operations has forcibly indicated to the Commission the need of a comprehensive investigation. Certain facts have been already clearly developed from the investigations of this Commission and from those of the former Bureau of Corporations, which was merged in it, namely, that in various industries one of the chief obstacles to the normal operation of competitive forces is the lack of adequate trade information regarding supply and demand and prices; that where trade associations collect such information it generally does not become a matter of public knowledge; and that such associations are frequently tempted to extend their activities beyond the useful function of collecting the information referred to above and to engage in activities tending to artificially control prices and the channels of distribution. It is recommended as a partial remedy for these conditions that all trade associations' files should be made public records. Such publicity would extend the knowledge of all producers and consumers regarding conditions of supply and demand and help to prevent abnormal trade fluctuations in supply and prices. It would also tend to curb association activities of an objectionable character."—From the report made to Congress, December 12, by the Federal Trade Commission.

A DISPLEASING SAMPLE.

It has been developed that there are not only makers of various commodities that enter into the daily life and habits of the people, but dealers in them as well, who are making the war tax not only a burden their patrons must pay, but are also making it a source of revenue. One official instance is cited in The Times which illustrates the game these profiteers are playing. An officer of the revenue department went into a store where tobacco is sold and inquired the price of a certain well-known brand of plug tobacco. The price, he found on inquiry of the dealer, had advanced 36 cents the pound. "War tax," said the proprietor. "Not on your life," replied the officer, "the war tax on that tobacco is 5 cents the pound." And so it goes. The Times was told the other day by the proprietor of a cigar stand that the makers of a certain popular brand of 5-cent cigar had advanced the price to him $5 on the thousand, and that he had advanced another $5, so that now that same cigar that only a short time ago sold for $4 the box of 100, now sells for $5, while the war tax is only 10 cents on the hundred. "Making money out of the war tax," said a bystander, and that seems to be about the size of it.

The commissioner of internal revenue, Daniel C. Roper, in the communication referred to, requests that everybody report to his bureau "cases that may come to your notice of the deliberate misrepresentation of war tax for the purpose of justifying increased prices." That means what it says, for the department cannot correct abuses or punish offenders if its agents are not notified in specific cases.

This notice applies to dealers in all commodities and is intended as a protection of the public against unfair and unlawful exploitation. The people may expect to have to pay the tax, though the government intended that the manufacturers and the dealers should at least pay their part of it, but the government never intended that a profit should be made out of the people's burdens.—Chattanooga Times.

Neither well written nor in strict accord with the facts, such a screed could be dismissed with scant notice, were it incapable of working injury.

But it is harmful. Possibly it is made worse because it embodies prejudice and misinformation. More sorrow is attached to it, because it is a sample of editorials now appearing in numerous newspapers that prefer to print "hot stuff" rather than the exact truth.

Undeniably, prices have been increased. Cigars, cigarettes and smoking tobacco cost more. But no one who is informed and wants to be accurate will ascribe the advances chiefly to the war tax.

Let the Chattanooga wiseacre inquire of Tennessee farmers what they are getting for their tobacco today. The price that growers receive in the various markets is no secret. On the contrary, the extraordinarily high prices the farmers are obtaining for tobacco are told in important news items in many Southern newspapers.

If the Chattanooga editor doesn't know that the price of tobacco of every kind has been advanced almost phenomenally, of course, he can take refuge behind some careless little cigarist who said that the war tax was the cause of high prices.

WIND OF THE NIGHT

Wind of the night of winter—blown from a starless track,
Whispering there in the Darkness, where the shadows whisper back,
Why must you haunt my casement, under the rain-wet eaves,
With voices of ghosts forgotten in the rustle of withered leaves?

Wind of the night of winter—calling to me as you creep,
Whispering there in the shadows where the dark of the night is deep;
Crying of days forgotten—sighing for dreams long sped,
Why must you blow gray ghosts again from graves of the vanished dead?

And there is a voice in the shadows—a Voice from a vanished day—
A song from the heart of Springtime blown from the fields of May;
Clear as a woodland ripple from the roll of a silver stream.
Till the Night is sweet with the music and the Dark with an old, old dream.

Wind of the night of winter—here I have come for rest—
For peace in the gloom of my lonesome room as a worn bird seeks its nest;
Why must you haunt my casement, under the rain-wet eaves,
With voices of ghosts forgotten in the rustle of withered leaves?

From "Songs of the Stalwart" by Grantland Rice.

FOOD SAVING—A JOB FOR THE SALESMEN

By James H. Collins

Forty thousand traveling salesmen through-at the country are co-operating to spread the ospel of food saving. In their work they uch every part of the United States, and parcularly every mercantile trade. Each traveler a message-bearer to perhaps twenty-five or ity merchants weekly. Each merchant is mself a salesman, and will have from two to dozen clerks at least who are also salesmen.
o each traveling salesman is really a message-earer to from 100 to 500 other salesmen week-
. Thus, food saving has a sales force in that eld which runs up into the millions, with all iat it means in the way of skilful sales state-ient of facts, and the passing of those facts to ie public over the counter, and in mercantile isplays and advertising.

Some sales force!

What, precisely can the United States Food dministration give it to sell?

First of all, undoubtedly, the business strucure of food administration. No class of busi-ess men in this country have been asked to nake greater war adjustments than the merhants, especially in food lines. The wholealers and manufacturers are often under Govrnment license, and held to new principles of roduction and distribution which eliminate peculation and hoarding. Many old methods nd habits of business have been abandoned.
Where the manufacturer and wholesaler for-nerly exercised business judgment in providing stocks of goods months in advance, taking the ordinary risks of fluctuations in their markets, they are now protected against fluctuations by the licensing system, and are asked to become broad, stable channels through which goods may flow regularly to the retailer and consumer.

What this means in the way of change is shown in our visible supply of wheat this year.
For under the careful supervision of the United States Grain Corporation it has been possible to feed ourselves and our Allies with a visible supply averaging 12,000,000 bushels, and someimes running as low as 6,000,000 bushels, whereas in an ordinary year, to keep all the channels of the grain and milling trade going, from 50,000,000 bushels to 70,000,000 bushels were required.

Visualize this same change in all food commodities, and you have a situation tremendously suggestive to the economist.

But let the economist deal with its possibilities as he pleases, while we view it simply as salesmen. What a field for the department of new distributing methods! Think of the trade explanations required to enable merchants to adjust their methods so that they will reduce stocks to the minimum, yet always have sufficient supplies on hand! Whose job is that, if not the traveling salesman's?

Then follow this new way of doing business into the retail stores, and behind the counter.
What ever speculative profit a merchant had under the old system is gone, and with it some of his profit on basic food staples that he is asked to sell as near cost as possible. Only a few of the largest retail merchants are required to take out Government licenses. But the whole rank and file of the mercantile world is working upon honor to carry out the simple, ethical policy of the Food Administration, which is, briefly, that all goods shall be sold at what the merchant himself deems a reasonable profit upon the actual cost to him, regardless of replacement value or daily price changes, and that he shall carefully regulate his stocks without hoarding. This makes every merchant and every clerk a better salesman, because goods must be kept moving. In just the degree that the merchants and their clerks can back up this great war plan of distribution with increased selling effort, they will keep capital at work by prompt turnovers and the elimination of dead stock.

Sales ability is also needed to make good the reductions in profit on staple goods. If the grocer makes less money on flour and sugar, he has a field for broadening his business by pushing substitute foods, like cheese, fresh fruits and vegetables. The butcher can develop fish, and perhaps fruit and vegetables too. There is an opportunity to broaden the whole basis of business by bulding up new departments, and this means sales ability applied in new directions.

Then, there is the very valuable sales service of explanation to the consumer to secure team work in economies connected with such problems as deliveries and cash sales, as well as to overcome the temptation of the consumer to hoard, which is practically the last element of speculation left in our distribution system.

Almost any day a local food panic is likely to arise among housewives, causing complications. German agents are not overlooking this field of endeavor, you may be sure!

A week or two ago, throughout the East, for instance, there was a senseless salt panic. Some occult influence led housewives to raid the grocery stores for bags of salt, and that started the newspapers with articles about a threatened salt shortage. The largest salt producing concern in the country states that there never is,
and never can be, any shortage in the supply of salt at our factories, but that at any time a temporary artificial shortage can be created in the supply among distributors if thousands of people suddenly lose their heads and try to lay in a year's supply of salt simultaneously. This puts abnormal pressure upon our mercantile and transportation system, of course.

First aid in overcoming such panics can be rendered by the retail merchants and salesmen better than anybody else.

They are the men on the spot, and the people to whom the consumer will listen. The use of sales ability in overcoming such irregularities is really part of the great national adjustment in distribution which the mercantile world is now carrying out, and every merchant and every salesman behind a counter should stand ready to meet such an emergency where-ever it may arise, or whatever may be the commodity involved. His sales instructions for this work are simple and unmistakable—Uncle Sam is at the head of our whole distributive system, keeping reasonable supplies of every commodity flowing to consumers, and there will be no cutting-off of necessary supplies, nor any Government action making it necessary for the public to resort to stone-age methods of filling its larder.

So, the salesman all through business has his work cut out for him in connection with food saving.

More than that, when he enlists for teamwork in the Food Administration, he is rendering the greatest possible service to business.

For out of this present war situation, with its many radical adjustments, we shall get better business methods of permanent value.

The salesman who throws himself heartily into work marked out for him in these momentous days is bound to get a training that will fit him for bigger work in the new business era that is coming after the war. And the salesman who does not see his work cut out for him in these times, whether on the road or behind the counter, and does not profit by the opportunities for personal development, may find himself living in a by-gone generation when peace returns.

SINCERE PATRIOTS ALL

The Tobacco Salesmen—Loyalty Well Attested at a Largely Attended Meeting—Every Member Pledged.

As an incorporated body, duly organized under the laws of New York, the Tobacco Sales-men's Association of America celebrated its growth and transformation at the regular meeting held in the Hawthorne building, Friday evening.

President Joseph Ollendorf occupied the chair and much important business was transacted. When routine matters and other affairs pertaining more strictly to the association were disposed of, Jesse Powell spoke eloquently, not only eulogizing those who as soldiers and sailors were preparing to fight for the flag, but also urging "all of us" to make sacrifices and perform some special service for the country.
The advantage and necessity for food conservation were dwelt upon, and every member present responded by pledging himself not to eat meat on Tuesday or wheat on Wednesday during the war.

It was pointed out that tobacco salesmen could do effective work by encouraging restaurants and hotels to follow immediately the rules laid down for food conservation.

In thought, word and deed, ever to be loyal to our country is a part of the tobacco salesman's creed, and the patriotism of members was very evident at the meeting. Each contributed toward the purchase of a handsome flag for the association and all promised to send encouragement and comfort to men in active service. Those who were about to join the army were given an ovation.

John H. Collins, of the Salesman's Association of Chicago, honored as a visitor, made an excellent speech, expressing appreciation of work done and voicing hope that the Tobacco Salesmen's Association eventually would have flourishing branches in every large city.

The association will hold its annual theater party on Saturday evening, January 5.

"THOSE WHO WILL GET BY."

S. Taussig, leaf dealer of Minneapolis, was asked about conditions with the small manufacturers in the country, and replied: "The manufacturers who do business intelligently will get by, although the leaf dealers will be obliged to give them all possible assistance. But there are a lot of manufacturers, so-called, who have been no credit to the trade, and who relied upon saloon purchases to keep them going, who will be forced to quit, but they will be small loss.
Of course the leaf dealers, like every one else, must make a legitimate profit, and this our house will continue to do. But we shall scan credits more closely than ever, and do the best we can by those who are deserving of our aid."
—Cigar and Tobacco Journal.

Ellis Rowland, a tobacco farmer near Williamstown, Ky., sold his crop to Leo Aswerus for 22 cents per hundred. He has fourteen acres of the weed growing and in ne condition.
Last year Mr. Rowland sold his crop at 12 cents and afterward saw it sold on the floor at 19 cents. It is said that several growers in the vicinity of Williamstown have been offered 20 cents.

A RAMBLER THAT OBTAINED MEDALS

In Algiers, about two years before the war, a certain dog thief entertained the belief that he followed a lucrative, if dishonorable, profession. His practice was to accomplish his nefarious purpose by wile and stealth rather than violence. He made a specialty of stealing valuable dogs. This descendant of Gypsies naturally was of a roving disposition. Yet, known to the police in various places, there were reasons why he should sojourn incognito and not too ostentatiously in the least recommended quarter of Algiers. For weeks he had lain perdu, hardly daring to venture from his hiding place.

Having money and that influence which secures assistance, if not friends, in the underworld, he easily induced a disreputable Arab to serve him in the capacity of messenger and purchasing agent.

"Here is silver," the Gypsy said to the Arab, "go, buy me something to smoke. Not the vile tobacco they sell to the Kabyles, nor the poor cigarettes of the bazaars. Search around and get some cigars."

"Trust me, now I have the money," the Arab answered. "I'll get them. I know where to go. Is not my first wife's nephew an attendant at the officer's club? Surely, you shall have the cigars."

"Also, try and bring me a newspaper," urged the Gypsy, "reading perhaps will help to pass the time away. It will be two days yet before I can smuggle myself aboard the steamer for Marseilles."

Promising to do the best he could, the Arab departed. Patiently the Gypsy waited. Hours later the Arab returned, bringing three cigars and a Swiss paper, a Geneva weekly, that the obliging nephew had pilfered from the club room.

The Gypsy could read French, but after a glance at the paper, to see what it was, he tossed it aside, languidly. He preferred such solace as a cigar might afford.

When he had finished his cigar, he picked up the paper again. Idly he turned the pages. Hardly interested, he read little bits here and there. As he shifted from item to item a longer story caught his eye.

"Sapristi!" That might be worth reading carefully. It was about a wonderful dog owned by an American lady who had visited Berlin.

"A dog having a pedigree that required many pages to record, a little dog valued at thousands of dollars, a prize winning ruby spaniel, an international champion, a flat-faced dog, a dog that had been kissed and caressed by the Kaiser,——.

"While enjoying a carriage ride in the park, the lady had taken the dog along. Champion Rosemary Red Rambler (for that was the dog's name), sitting up proudly on the carriage seat, had attracted the attention of a juvenile member of the German imperial family.

"If a cat may look at a king, a scion of royalty is privileged to admire a handsome dog. So, the fame of Rambler reached the ears of the Kaiser.

"Followed a command to visit the palace so that the champion ruby spaniel might be inspected by Wilhelm himself.——

"When the Kaiser heard that Rambler was a winner of first honors in every show in which the dog had been entered, the German monarch picked up the spaniel and said: 'You are the son of a hundred noble sires and fit for a king to caress.'

"The summons to the palace made Rambler a hero over night. The kiss of the Kaiser caused the spaniel to be a semi-sacred dog in Germany, an animal to be adored. Little German children followed Rambler on the streets, and begged to be allowed to stroke his silky hair. Puffed up as Rambler may have felt, he never lost his love for sausage."

MRS. MEYER COHEN AND "RAMBLER"

Rambler is as well known in this country as he is on the other side. During the six years that he graced the bench here he beat every dog that was pitted against him, including scores that had been imported for the sole purpose of wresting from him his laurels. To date he has won 26 cups, 63 medals, and hundreds of blue ribbons. In the near future he expects to appear in book form in "The Rambles of Rambler," where he will tell of his wonderful career. Rambler, by the way, is one of the three flat-face Ruby Spaniels in this country. All his personal belongings are gifts from royalty. Taken all in all, Rambler is a very lucky little dog. He bears his honors lightly, however, and loves to play with the children in the vicinity of Tipo Kennel, Valhalla, New York, where he lives.

Not all of Rambler's life history was told in the newspaper story, but what was set forth caused the Gypsy to vow that he'd steal the dog if ever opportunity offered. A few days later the Gypsy made his way safely to Marseilles.

And it happened about the same time that the American lady, Mrs. Meyer Cohen, with her famous dog Rambler, arrived in Southern France.

By chance, informed that the prized canine was in the vicinity, the Gypsy laid plans to steal the dog. Trying several times, the persistent Gypsy failed to effect the theft. Nor could confederates that he procured do any better. Baffled but not despairing, the dog fancier went to the hotel where Mrs. Cohen was a guest. Disguised and presenting "faked" credentials, he secured work as a waiter.

Availing himself of an opportunity one afternoon, he sneaked upstairs and, using a pass key, succeeded in entering the room where Rambler lay asleep. He grabbed the dog, but the spaniel's yelp caused Mrs. Cohen to come quickly to the rescue.

With one arm the thief roughly thrust the lady aside. As he did so, he caught sight of a costly ring that she wore. He decided to take that, too.

Compressing the dog under his arm, he clutched the lady's hand and attempted to remove the ring. As she struggled, he could not prevent her from screaming. Help came before the Gypsy could get away. Caught, the thief couldn't deny his guilt. But he blamed himself for not being satisfied when he had the dog. And he cursed the day the Arab bought cigars for him in Algiers. Never again would he read a Swiss newspaper.

CHICAGO RETAILERS MEET.

CHICAGO, December 5.—The Chicago Cigar Dealers Association held their monthly meeting this evening at Northwestern University Hall, Lake and Dearborn streets, with 150 out of the loop dealers and a few in the loop in attendance. Henry Kantor called the meeting to order and the secretary read the minutes of the last meeting.

Mr. Davis, secretary of the Chicago Retail Dealers' Association, an organization composed of presidents and secretaries of all retail trade organizations in Chicago, delivered an interesting address.

Harvey L. Harris spoke of the work being done by the Cigar Dealers' Association, and suggested that salesmen, jobbers, and manufacturers should be asked to join and lend their support to the movement.

Short talks on trade conditions were given by J. H. Weiss, of J. H. Weiss & Co., S. M. Bernstein and Morris B. Seigel, of Bernstein & Schey; Nate Rosenheim, of P. San Martin; and Leon, of Tampa. Mr. Winkleman, of the jobbing house of Manny Blanc Co.; Mr. Weber, of Nellbauer & Weber, and Harry Burgess.

The election of permanent officers was postponed until the next meeting scheduled to take place early in June.

Chairman Kantor reported that new members were being added daily.

The firms of H. B. Franklin & Co., Wohl & Comstock, Manny Blanc Co., Spector Bros., and Grommes & Elson were given a vote of thanks for donating cigars for the meeting.

TO BE BETTER PREPARED

The American Tobacco Co. May Issue Stock "Class B Common" to the Amount of $50,000,000.

The American Tobacco Co., in a letter issued by President Percival S. Hill, announces a special meeting of the stockholders to vote on the question of issuing $50,000,000 "Class B" common stock. The meeting will be held on January 7.

In his letter to the stockholders Mr. Hill states that the company has an authorized capital stock of $100,000,000, whereas but $40,242,400 is outstanding, leaving $59,757,600 unissued.

"The Board of Directors," the announcement continues, "have passed a resolution declaring it to be advisable to make $50,000,000 of this stock a class 'B' issue with the same rights as to dividends and upon liquidation as the present issued common stock, but without any voting rights. Operations during the current year have been successful. Up to December 1, 1917, the sales of the company show an increase of $16,207,669, or more than 25 per cent. over the corresponding period of 1916, and the sales in 1916 were greater than in any preceding year since the company, as at present constituted, began its operations. Our profits for 1917 will, we believe, be somewhat larger than last year or any preceding year, even after provision for increased taxes.

"Growth of business and increased cost of raw material have required the investment of a much larger amount of working capital than was formerly required, and the company has therefore borrowed $25,000,000 to meet the growing demands for its manufactured products.

"Naturally the directors have not taken this step of incurring so large an indebtedness without giving grave consideration for the ways and means of caring for it, and while the requirements that they have made are such as to require no action in the immediate future, they deem it prudent that measures should now be taken which will enable them to meet the necessity when it arises.

"While they have adopted no hard and fast plan, preferring to await the conditions which will exist when action will become necessary, they are very decidedly of the opinion that the creation of the 'common stock B' should now be authorized in order that it may be made available in the carrying out of such plan as may be ultimately determined upon."

Commenting on the proposal outlined in President Hill's letter, the Wall Street Journal says:

"Officials of the American Tobacco Co. state that the company is fully financed, such financing having been noted in the newspapers some weeks ago when it was stated that the American Tobacco Co. had established a credit through the sale to a syndicate headed by the Guaranty Trust Co. of $25,000,000 of acceptances. There would naturally be no reason to doubt that, unless times are very abnormal, the company could arrange for renewal of its obligations or such part of them as it would not be convenient to pay off at maturity.

"Taking the letter issued by President Hill at its face value in connection with this financing shows that the proposed conversion of half the common stock into 'B' common stocks is only a precaution against the possibility of abnormal times.

"Since the disintegration of the tobacco combination by the courts, there has been more preferred stock outstanding than common and since all stock has equal voting rights, the majority control has been in the hands of the preferred stockholders. Whatever the legal rights of the company may be, it is easy to understand that those in charge would prefer that this condition of control should not be changed, and that if a new stock should be issued it should be without voting rights.

"It is hard to conceive under President Hill's letter that any immediate sale of 'B' stock is contemplated or that any would be made unless there are abnormal conditions at the maturity of the present credit.

"On the other hand it certainly is conceivable that the creation of the 'B' stock joined with the evident desire of the officers of the Tobacco Co. to provide resources against the $25,000,000 credit when considered in connection with the increased earnings of the company may lead to a common stock dividend or a scrip dividend convertible at the option of the scrip holder into common stock as payment in whole or part of the common stock dividends.

"Two years ago when the American Tobacco Co. was barely earning its 20 per cent. dividend, it was asserted that no change in the rate was likely. Subsequent events confirmed this forecast. The 20 per cent dividend appears fully as safe at the present moment as it was at that time, although as indicated above the possibility exists that a part of the payments on the junior issue may be paid in scrip.

"In other words, the American Tobacco Co., always operated with the soundest of business judgment, has prepared itself for the worst possible conditions that may arise, but in doing so has in no manner jeopardized the position of the common stockholders."

OBTAINING STATISTICS

Relative to Stocks of Leaf Tobacco—Modification of the Law Is Recommended by the Secretary of Commerce.

WASHINGTON, December 13.—The Secretary of Commerce in making his annual report to Congress says in connection with tobacco statistics gathered by the Bureau of the Census:

"The law providing for the collection of quarterly statistics of stocks of leaf tobacco held by manufacturers and dealers requires that the blanks be mailed 10 days before the date to which the report relates and gives the persons reporting 10 days after that date in which to prepare and forward their returns. The time elapsing between the date on which the blanks are received and that on which they are filled out and returned to the Census Bureau—more than two weeks in many cases—is thus so great that many of them are mislaid or lost, with the result that the receipt of the returns and consequently the publication of the reports are delayed.

"The law requires an affidavit, which compels a needless expense in places where there is no deputy collector of internal revenue, who is required to administer the oath without charge. This at times occasions delay, since some wait for a visit from the deputy collector in order to save the expense of making the affidavit before a notary public or other official.

"It is recommended that the law be amended (1) to provide for mailing the blanks 5 days, instead of 10, before the date to which the report relates, and to allow only 5 days, instead of 10, after that date in which to prepare and forward the returns; and (2) to empower and require the postmaster or assistant postmaster to administer the necessary oath without expense."

A "BONE DRY" DECISION

Made by the United States Supreme Court—Affirming the Constitutionality of the Idaho Prohibition Law.

WASHINGTON, December 10.—With a decision upholding the Idaho Prohibition Law, the United States Supreme Court gave an opinion to-day which may be one of the most far-reaching victories for "bone dry" conditions yet recorded.

It was held that a citizen has no constitutional right to possess liquors for his personal use if a State wishes to forbid it.

Justice McReynolds, who gave the court's opinion, held that a State "has power absolutely to prohibit manufacture, gift, purchase, sale or transportation of intoxicating liquors within its borders without violating the Constitution."

"We further think," he added, "it clearly follows from our numerous decisions upholding Prohibition legislation, that the right to hold intoxicating liquors for personal use is not one of those fundamental privileges of a citizen of the United States which no State may abridge.

"A contrary view would be incompatible with the undoubted power to prevent manufacture, gift, sale, purchase or transportation of such articles—the only feasible way of getting them. An assured right of possession would necessarily imply some adequate method to obtain not subject to destruction at the will of the State."

Constitutionality of the North Carolina liquor law requiring railroads and express companies to keep for public inspection records showing liquor shipments received in the State was upheld by the Supreme Court to-day.

HEATED THE FLATIRON

A Fire In the Famous "United Store" Destroys a Lot Of Imported Cigars and Considerably Upsets Manager Flaherty's Plans.

A fire caused by crossed wires broke out in the United Cigar Store in the Flatiron Building at Broadway and Twenty-third street, New York, Monday afternoon, and upset some of the holiday plans of John J. Flaherty, the manager. Before the fire was extinguished, $10,000 worth of imported cigars had gone up in smoke, prematurely. Two persons not connected with the store sustained minor injuries. The flames were confined to the balcony at the rear of the store. Several weeks will be required to make the place look like its old self again, but business will go on just the same.

THE TOBACCO COMMITTEE

WASHINGTON, December 10—Announcement was made here tonight of the following war service Committee on Tobacco to cooperate with the Council of National Defense: Edward Wise, of the United Cigar Stores Co., chairman, Charles J. Eisenlohr, of Otto Eisenlohr & Bros.; Alfred S. Rossin, of S. Rossin & Sons; Jesse A. Bloch, of Bloch Bros. Tobacco Co.; J. L. Graham, of R. J. Reynolds Co., and Charles Dushkind, secretary of the T. "Our Boys in France Tobacco Fund"

"An army travels on its belly" is a proverb accredited to Napoleon, which makes it obvious that food is absolutely necessary to keep an army moving; but a moving army does not necessarily mean a successful army, especially if it happens to be moving backward.

If hunger and privation eventually impair fighting qualities, so does a lack of tobacco make a soldier uncomfortable, if not less efficient.

In a hundred ways, by tens of thousands of witnesses, the necessity for tobacco on the firing line is declared.

Some folks here may be slow to realize the wisdom and kindness of keeping our boys in France well supplied, but a glance at the picture, a glimpse of the eager, outstretched hands, is sufficient to convince. The photograph was taken in France shortly after the arrival of a consignment of tobacco for the American soldiers. Note how eager the men are to get their hands on some of the precious stuff. Were they waiting for food it is very likely they would be shown in line patiently biding their turn. With tobacco it is different. An inveterate smoker can go without food for a while more easily than he can do without tobacco. A man will forget hunger, but he doesn't quit longing for a smoke. In France, today there are thousands of American soldiers who, when deprived of a smoke for a length of time, would be willing to face a regiment of Huns in order to get some cigars, tobacco or a pack of cigarettes. In France the arrival of a new shipment of tobacco is just as welcome as mail from home.

The Hands of Our Soldiers in France Are Outstretched to Receive Tobacco

Alexander Blaikie Dick

The father of "Our Boys in France Tobacco Fund," whose sole aim is to make the fund so large that he will be able to send a kit of tobacco once a week to every soldier in France as long as the war lasts.

Alexander B. Dick, who has charge of the "Our Boys in France Tobacco Fund," is one who appreciates the value of tobacco to soldiers. Last spring his two brothers, now fighting with the British Army, wrote to him every week pleading with him to send all the tobacco he could, as they and their comrades were sorely in need of smokes. There was plenty to eat, drink, and read, but not half enough to smoke.

Mr. Dick might have bought enough tobacco to meet the needs of his two brothers and forgotten about the rest, but he is not of that calibre, and the more he pondered over his brothers' pleas the more he felt it to be his duty to work for all. If you have no bad habits to discontinue with the end of the coming year you should begin the New Year by making a resolution to contribute a quarter every week to the fund. You won't miss it, and you will feel a great deal better when you come to realize that you are actually doing a real service. Every time you feel like spending a dime or a quarter foolishly, just kill the temptation and slip the coin into a vest pocket, which should be known to you as your smoke fund pocket.

Mr. Dick felt that if his brothers were not well cared for in this respect, it was very likely that the American boys, once they reached the other side, would be in a similar plight, and as a result he went to several prominent persons in this city and finally interested them in starting the fund. Then he took the matter up with newspapers and magazines and found many of them willing to lend assistance. The only surprising feature about the matter is that every editor, not pro-German, is not using his paper to collect funds for the men in the trenches.

Though he was born and educated in Scotland, Dick has been in this country ten years and is a real American citizen.

Up to date, $117,000 has been collected for "Our Boys in France Tobacco Fund." And if every American soldier in France is not kept supplied with tobacco it will not be Dick's fault. He is doing his bit. The question is, are you doing yours?

The Tobacco Industry in Honduras

George A. Makinson, American consular gent at Amapala, reports that Honduran obacco has always enjoyed a preeminent position in the estimation of Central American obacco smokers, so much so that native toaccos of the neighboring Republics are often put on the market under the name of Tobacco de Honduras" for the purpose of btaining higher prices. It is commercially nown as "Copan tobacco," because the best uality and largest quantities are produced n the Department of Copan, which borders n both the Guatamalan and Salvadoran fronters. It is also produced in commercial uantities in the Departments of Ocotepeque, Gracias, Santa Barbara, and El Paraiso, the apitals of the respective Departments being he marketing centers. The estimated averge annual production of each district is as ollows: Paraiso, 7,500 pounds; Santa Barara, 250,000 pounds; Gracias, 50,000 pounds; Ocotepeque, 410,000 pounds; and Copan, ,000,000 pounds.

Tobacco is planted during October—that s, from 2 to 4 weeks before the close of he rainy season—so that the young plants ave sufficient time to take root before the ong dry season sets in. The seeds are planted in nurseries during July and the young sets transplanted about 4 months later. One pound of seed should produce approximately 20,000 plants, and growers place about 2,250 plants to the acre.

The leaves are ready for gathering between February and April and the custom is to start harvesting as soon as the plant has fully developed; this is sometimes determined by the appearance of yellow tints in the leaves or when the leaves show signs of brittleness on being doubled or bent. The stock is cut whole a little above the roots and the seed is obtained later from the suckers that sprout from the remaining lower part of the stem. The stocks are then hung out, head down, in the open air and exposed to the sun. If any is harvested in the rainy season, which is rare, it is dried in the shade. After being dried in the sun for 15 or 20 days, the stocks are subjected to a 3-day pressing, and the leaves are then separated from the stems and assorted into 3 grades, according to size. They are then tied in bundles of 1 pound each—the stems being utilized for fastening —and are alternately pressed and sunned until the veins are thoroughly dried. Owing to negligence and the varying judgments of different farmers the resulting product is not always uniform, which sometimes results in obtaining lower prices. Dried leaves average from 9 to 20 inches in length, and a well-cultivated acre should yield from 400 to 650 pounds.

Both strong and mild and dark and light tobaccos are produced, these properties depending largely upon the nature of the soil and to a somewhat lesser extent upon the amount of rainfall and the time and method chosen for cutting and curing. If the plants are permitted to ripen thoroughly the leaves will be rather dark in color, whereas if cut earlier a lighter shade will be obtained. A poor, sandy soil is said to produce a mild tobacco and a rich clay soil a somewhat stronger plant. In seasons of copious rainfall it is noticed that the leaves are invariably of a darker hue.

It costs from 8 to 12 cents United States currency to raise a pound of tobacco in this country, and the market price ranges from 15 to 25 cents, depending on the class and quality. It is supposed that most of the tobacco in cultivation in Honduras was originally derived from Cuban seed, and the more progressive growers still continue to import Cuban, Jamaican, Porto Rican, and American seed. When ready for market, Honduran tobacco closely resembles that grown in North Carolina and Virginia. It burns well and has a pleasant aroma, and connoisseurs state that its failure to achieve just recognition of its worth is due solely to the primitive and unscientific methods employed in its harvesting and curing.

Tobacco is packed for shipment in bales of 100 pounds each, which are well wrapped in several layers of banana leaves and tightly tied with strong banana fiber. Although apparently crude, this method of packing is considered the most practical, combining as it does the qualities of lightness and cheapness.

As the tobacco fields of this country are in closer proximity to the railroads and seaports of Salvador and Guatemala than to those of Honduras, nearly all the crop is strapped on the backs of native Indian runners or mules and carried over the frontier trails to the neighboring Republics. These caravans pass the border at remote hamlets, where no customhouses are established, so that statistics showing the volume of this trade are not available. However, it is well known that practically all of the high-grade cigars and cigarettes manufactured in Central America are either of pure Honduran tobacco or contain a large admixture of same. The amount and value of tobacco exports through the seaports of this country for the years 1915 and 1916, respectively, were 56,800 pounds, worth $6,810, and 89,025 pounds, worth $19,610.

Honduras tobacco, after being manufactured into cigars and cigarettes in Guatemala and Salvador, is exported in considerable uantities to South America, particularly Peru, the Caribbean countries, and Europe. The volume of this business amounts to many thousands of dollars annually.

Of recent years the National Government has taken measures to foster the industry, and aside from maintaining several schools where young natives are taught to scientifically cultivate and cure the crop, steps are being taken to improve the quality of the plants and to find new outlets for the constantly increasing production. The Government recently sent several youths to the tobacco districts of Cuba, where they were able to observe and study the up-to-date methods employed there in the various branches of the industry.

Tobacco is principally used in Central America for cigars and cigarettes; pipe smoking and chewing have not been introduced among the natives, although nearly all of them, including minors and women, smoke. Among the laboring classes the women of nearly every household prepare the cigars and cigarettes for the family needs. During the fiscal year 1914-1915, $7,480 worth of cigarette paper was imported, the greater part of this supply coming from Spain and small shipments from the United States and Germany.

Up to the present no attempts have been made to manufacture high-grade cigars or cigarettes on a large scale, although with an abundance of raw material and cheap labor it would seem to warrant a careful investigation on the part of expert tobacco men from the United States. Nearly every man and woman of the laboring class understands the rudiments of cigar making, although none of them are particularly expert at it. However, they are nimble with their fingers and very handy at such work and could soon be trained to turn out as good cigars as are manufactured in Cuba. An almost unlimited supply of this labor could be obtained at from 25 to 50 cents per day. Cigar factories in Guatemala utilize native labor and their goods (Honduras tobacco with Sumatra wrappers) are said to compare favorably with those of many factories in Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Philippines.

In addition to supplying the demand for good cigars in Honduras itself, a profitable market could be worked up among the other Central American Republics which are now dependent upon Cuba, Jamaica, and the United States for these goods.

A firm (whose name can be obtained from the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce or its district or co-operative offices by referring to file No. 94989) recently obtained a concession from the Government for the establishment of a cigarette factory at Tegucigalpa. This firm has placed orders in the United States for a considerable amount of modern machinery and equipment. Although it is proposed to manufacture cigarettes for the local market, the firm has contracted to export considerable quantities to Panama and the Canal Zone, where it is expected that it will fulfill the present strong demand for a cheap cigarette among the negro laborers.

EDELSTEIN'S LATEST PACKING

When a manufacturer of clear Havanas builds up a reputation for making good cigars, neither the container nor the style of packing are so important as the brand. Yet one who makes a practice of achieving the best is equipped to succeed in every particular. To knowing smokers who have tried Constancia de Garcias, J. I. Edelstein's fine clear Havanas are well introduced. But the new packing in tins, just brought out, is an excellent bid for additional favor.

CONDITIONS UNPRECEDENTED IN ENGLAND

Trade conditions in England of late, have been absolutely unprecedented. The rigid rationing of clearances from bond, imposed by the Government Order of March 12th, has left manufacturers in an extraordinary position. They have been quite unable to execute more than a percentage of the orders they have received, so that the rationing imposed by the official Order has been, perforce, passed on by the manufacturer to the wholesaler, from the latter to the retailer, and from the tobacconist to the public, with much consequent dissatisfaction and a great deal of unreasoning complaint. Charges of profiteering have been freely bandied about, and the entire tobacco trade has been accused of holding up supplies in anticipation of a big increase in duty.

The Governor General Signs the Decree

In 1781, Vasco, the Governor General of the Philippine Islands, decreed that the government should have control of the production, manufacture and sale of tobacco. By this decree a monopoly was created which remained in operation a hundred years. Due to the strict enforcements of regulations, especially in the earlier period of its operation, the monopoly secured for Philippine tobacco an enviable reputation for quality throughout the world.

Careful supervision of the industry by the American government in the Philippines, together with the enterprise and the business sagacity of Manila manufacturers and importers, is building anew a splendid reputation for Manila cigars.

Higher Prices for All Grades of Vuelta Abajo

Partido Fillers Nearly "Sold Out"—Remedios First and Second Capaduras Hard to Obtain—A Busy Week on the Leaf Market in Havana—Some Big Purchases Recorded—Complaints of Drouth in Cuba—"But No One Need to Worry Yet for Fear of the Failure of the Coming Crop."

HAVANA, December 7.—Leaf tobacco business has been exceedingly active during the past two weeks. Available stocks, for sale at first hand, are now so reduced that in future, buyers who come here may find difficulty in securing what they desire. Much leaf purchased by exporting houses has been reserved for regular customers, and such can count upon obtaining supplies, although they may have to be satisfied with purchases smaller than in former normal years.

Transactions during the past two weeks were distributed. Exporters to South American republics, in view of short tonnage, have operated extensively; in doing so prices advanced on first and second capaduras, of Remedios, above the figures paid by the American cigar manufacturers. The last prices paid were 85c. and 75c. per qq. respectively, but otherwise the figures are "whatever the holders may be willing to let tobacco go for." There may be a few vegas that may be bought cheaper eventually, but in some respects they are said to be "not so desirable."

Vuelta Abajo prices have further advanced on all grades. Even colas are beginning to be scarce at $30 per qq. Partido fillers are nearly "sold out," but resagos remain still in better supply.

The Cuban Board of National Defense will grant a general permit to certain houses to ship cigars and tobacco to the neutral countries as long as there is not the slightest suspicion of benefiting the enemy ultimately.

Crop prospects are still uncertain, as complaints concerning drought are made throughout the island. With the exception of the Partido section, where a good irrigating system exists, and a few isolated plantations in the Vuelta Abajo, the transplanting of seedlings is delayed. On the north edge of the Vuelta Abajo, where a heavier soil produces the heavy quality leaf, a few showers have aided the vegueros, and in this section the transplanting of seedlings has progressed. Prices are ranging, however, from $1.50 to $3 per thousand plants. In the Remedios region seedlings have commanded a price as high as $7 per thousand, and which is almost prohibitive. The cost of production will be increased accordingly if the vegueros are forced to pay such exorbitant prices. Nevertheless, there have been years when the principal planting, done in the month of January, gave good results. So nobody need worry yet for fear of a failure of the coming crop, provided the fields have the benefit of one or two good showers.

Sales during the last two weeks totaled 31,538 bales, which when divided, consisted of: Vuelta Abajo and Semi Vuelta 14,158, Partido 1,783, and Remedios 15,597 bales.

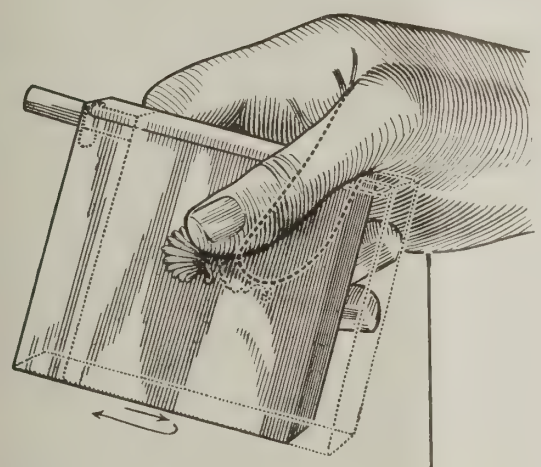
Buyers were: Americans 15,557, exporters to South America 3,655, and local manufacturers of cigars and cigarettes 12,326 bales.

Exports of cigars per SS. Mexico totaled 582 cases, containing 2,819,690 cigars, which were consigned to the following countries, viz.: To Great Britain 1,582,660, United States 1,023,030, to Canada 96,050, Argentine Republic 27,500, Australia 37,000, British Africa 24,700, Gibraltar 17,250, Brazil 7,500, and to the British East Indies 4,000 cigars.

Exports of leaf tobacco from the port of Havana for the week ending November 24, 1917, totaled 5,086 bales, which were distributed to the following countries, viz.: To all ports of the United States 2,916, to Canada 70, to the Argentine Republic 2,050, and to Uruguay 50 bales.

Among the leaf buyers who arrived last week were Lewis Cantor, of Lewis Cantor; E. Starlight, of Starlight Bros., and Ted Smith, of Hinsdale, Smith & Co., all of New York: Vivian M. Myers, vice-president of the Cortez Cigar Co., of Key West. There also returned, accompanied by his family, Juan Diaz Inguanzo, of Diaz Hermanos & Co.

Louis H. Eisenlohr and foreman C. H. Eimerbrink returned to Philadelphia this week, having made a selection of second capaduras, which they usually utilize in the production of Cinco cigars, leaving the registry, weighing, and the receiving part to Ventura Blanco. Report says they have purchased the ordinary yearly supply of the goods which had been reserved for them, notwithstanding the higher prices.



The Cuban Land & Leaf Tobacco Co. again was the most important buyer in the local market, securing 6,030 bales of leaf.

C. del Peso & Co. added another 3,020 bales of Vuelta Abajo, clean fillers and colas, to their stocks of leaf for their Flor de Tomas, Gutierrez cigar and cigarette factories. The cigarette factory is working splendidly, and the cigar factory is steadily gaining in importance.

The Havana Tobacco Stripping Co. purchased in the month of November 5,000 bales of leaf for account of Northern customers.

Calixto Lopez & Co. were buyers of 2,351

Explanatory of the Best Policy Up State

New York State Capital District,
December 10, 1917.

Suppose you found $400. What would you do with it? Would you do as Hjalmar Heldberg did?

Would you keep it for 25 years? And then return it with compound interest, amounting in total to $1,026, not to the unknown original owner, but to the chief of police?

Yet such a man did that very thing, the other day, merely as a sop to conscience. Sure, there was a 250% interest charge since 1892, the finding date, but that all went in, too, with the plagued cash!

Now, on the other hand, considerable money in small sums is frequently found upon upon the floors of retail cigar stores.

If it's only a few cents the man who picks it up usually and casually mentions the fact, sometimes leaving it with the merchant for claim.

But, when the recovered sum is a dollar or more, look out! Seldom will such a man as Hjalmar Heldberg find the stuff!

And, tho he does, who can wait 25 years for the dough to bake into bread upon the waters?

Here's a case: Last Friday afternoon a customer in the South Pearl street United store in Albany sees $5 on the floor.

He wraps it into his wallet. Then, either from honesty or belief he has been seen, the man reports the occurrence to the salesman on duty. And he keeps the cash, leaving his name and address for possible claimant.

Question before the house: Should the man turn the five into the United, or do as he did do?

Your answer may win a prize—it may be your opportunity next!

Then here's still another little matter. It occurs almost daily in every retail shop.

Customer buys a quarter's worth of cigars in the same United store. Puts his quarter down, and asks for certificate. Man behind the case says he hasn't received the money—where is it?

Either the customer or the salesman is wrong. Which? For the customer may think the salesman has knocked the quarter down, and the suspicion may flash thru the salesman's bean that the customer is either mistaken or fibbing about the quarter being paid.

What's the answer? Next day, when the customer asks about the subject, the case-man smiles, and says:

"Oh, yes, here's your quarter. Found it in the cigar box, where it must have dropped when you put it down."

Probably the Rt. Hon. Sir Leander Starr Jameson, better known to the South African diamond interests as plain Dr. Jim, the famous Scot who led the Transvaal raid, knew of even larger diamonds than the Kohinoor worn by Art Lauer!

No one else, however, ever saw such a stone! Not even in a ten-cent store!

Likely that is the reason almost everyone Art goes to see looks first at the diamond, then at the El Yu Tan cigars!

In Rochester, where Art lives, and helps the H. P. Brewster people to distribute his Yu Tans, the folk know all about Art and his mazda lamp.

But in Scranton, Pa., where Art also works the Yu Tan for the Scranton Tobacco Co., the Lauer ever-ready day-lo flashlight is still something of a dazzle to the coal barons who mine equally valuable black diamonds.

Their entire State street window is being used this week by the A. B. Huested Co., State and Eagle streets, Albany, for Christmas cigar and cigaret packings.

Small boxes of Que Placers' Schuylers, Fulder's 512, Rocky Fords, and other big selling smokes center the display.

Around the edges, in attractive arrangment are cigarettes in hundreds. These include Helmars, Murads, Philip Morris, Deities, and many more big favorites.

Starting in to-day for the final windup of the season, Joe Schilling will comb the Capital District once more on Prince Albert in 16 ounce glass jars.

Local jobbers report recent receipts of 8 ounce tins, and the new two-ounce tin of Prince Albert to retail for 13 cents.

That other Reynolds product, the Camel cigarette, still goes to the consumer in packets of twenty at retail prices running from the downtown rates of 12 cents to the uptown figure of 15.

"When you take stock, be careful you don't add your totals to the Year of Our Lord!" was the frequent warning of the late Francis Shields, the Church street tobacco manufacturer, Albany, at the approach-to-inventory season.

Quite likely the addition of the figures 1918 would help out many an otherwise unlucky inventory this year, especially if the top-o-page numerals were figured into the carried forward of each and every page in the wider dollar column!

One very successful Capital District cigarist has never taken stock since he has been in business, now over thirty years. But few can follow such a method and continue to do business at present prices!

"Our Business is Growing!" says the slogan of a Capital District florist. But it won't grow anymore, now that Bellinger has cast aside his former daily lapel-carnation!

Ever since Judas Maccabeus licked the Hasmoneans, 'way back there in 165 B. C., our good friend Bellinger has worn a fresh pink on his coat every morning.

So it'll seem strange indeed to see my Lord Stirling minus his hall-marked emblem of color and beauty.

Perhaps that's why a Broadway waiter didn't recognize Bellinger when he tendered the shirt-and-bib chap a quarter for his dinner check-tip last Friday.

At any rate, the benevolent stew-and-fry specialist waved aside the two-bits, mumbling "You may need that, my friend, for it won't buy much in this town while the war is on!"

Bellinger was just about to grab the silver flying eagle when the dvornik changed his mind, reaching it first.

Then my Lord Stirling would undoubtedly have given the pleasant fellow another quarter to call it square if the chappie hadn't immediately hustled into the kitchen with a short order for a western sandwich, Newark style.

While Bellinger proceeded to a nearby druggist for 6 Bell-ans in hot water, instantly followed by an emetic which cheerfully brightened the situation.

This was an order of sorts, Prince Cigar Co. style, which my Lord Stirling booked with more pleasure than he enjoyed after his dejeuner a la carte.

Do you know how much money thirty-five thousand people earn and spend in Schenectady every week?

No? Then ask the three boys behind the cigar counters at the State & Jay street store of Louie Killeen!

Maybe they can't tell you to a nickel. Maybe they don't know even to a dime. But, from their regular Friday-Saturday experiences each weekly pay time in shovin' out cigars and trimmin's, these boys can safely say the amount is conservatively estimated now at something more than a million weekly!

Snails travel around in a terrible rush at the astonishing speed of 10 feet each day!

That is the maximum for a union schedule of 8 hours, of course. But, should an inquisitive airedale terrier attempt to nose 'em along at a more rapid pace, these nervous slugs simply quit action entirely, doing the crab and turtle act, to the dog's disgust!

War workers are much the same. Governments, airedale-like may sweat and stew, but a union day's a union day, and, darn it, it can't be changed!

So, in Schenectady, where unionism-socialism are hyphenated similar to another term you know of, the airedales have just about decided to break the snail-shell, and see what in blazes is the difficulty inside where the guts are.

When this happens in Schenectady there'll be an awful scream. Then more noise and shoutin'. Eventually, however, the town'll be better off. There'll be more than 10-foot progress, that's sure!

When you count the cash, each day, take $20 out and set it one side. Yes, that's for the landlord!

Some stores, even in cities the size of Schenectady, would not find this a profiteering scheme, to say the least.

Yet that's what the State street store of Quinn, the drug-cigar man, must do every 24 hours to satisfy the 30 day demand for $600, or $7,200 annually.

But, from the very minute the key opens the door in the morning until the same key or a duplicate locks the place at midnight, things are moving at Quinn's!

More cigars are sold here than in most regular cigar stores. One reason is, to be sure, the handsome cigar display case is right up agin the front door knob, where gentlemen and others either see it or they don't, just as they desire.

Since Cross & Heath took over the management of the store at 4½ Market street, Amsterdam, N. Y., they have established a most satisfactory business in the cigar line at that place.

Trade in Amsterdam hasn't been up to the notch, but dealers look for better conditions after the usual January thaw.

"Going home for the Holidays," declared A. Rego, the F. Garcia & Brothers partner-salesman. "And, after my long trip to Denver, I'm quite ready to get back to New York. Really, I can't complain about my western trade. Things seem to be better there than here, tho I've done fairly well around Albany

It's a long way to Tipperary, it's a long way to go, but time flies.

Perhaps that's the reason the Albany folk are even now preparing for the welcome and entertainment of the World's Salesmanship Congress, to be run off in this town on June 16-21, 1918.

Several thousand delegates are expected here, providing the war and the railroads don't object. And, to help the idea along, George Van Slyke, of G. W. Van Slyke & Horton, is on the job with his customary able assistance to the local executive committee.

So the visiting salesmen needn't be a-tall surprised to see the Peter Schuyler cigar down on the cards as the official convention smoke.

Why not? Peter Schuyler himself was the first, the very first and foremost mayor of Albany, and a famous figure even at the present time, both as a man and as a cigar!

Just as Bold as usual, Salesman Shufelt, of the L. W. Killeen staff, Schenectady, announces another advance on the Bobrow Brothers famous cigar.

This time the Bold goes to $45, a little $2 boost. Xmas goods in Bolds are scarce, ex-

Blanket License for Tampa Tobacco Imports

Cigar Manufacturers Officially Assured That the Trade Will Not Be Inconvenienced—Every Factory Working at Full Speed—Mat Berriman Has a Gifted Grandson—More Recognition for the "Payroll City"

TAMPA, December 9.—Local manufacturers were considerably worried by the President's proclamation of November 28, relative to importation of various articles, strict enforcement of which would have closed the factories for a time, owing to the fact that there were only 5,000 bales of tobacco in the bonded warehouse. The matter was taken up with the War Board by Deputy Collector of Customs A. G. Watson, Jr., and L. P. Dickie, secretary of the board of trade, and the reply was that a blanket license for tobacco could be used and that the manufacturers need fear no inconvenience.

There is not a factory in the city at present which is not going at full speed, and every indication is that the coming year will be even more productive than the present. Prosperous conditions in all sections are expected to increase the demand for Tampa-made cigars of all grades.

Ludwig Lasker, for 22 years with E. J. Stachelberg & Co., and five years European representative of Beck & Co., of Havana, has connected with Perfecto Garcia & Co.

Jerome Regensburg, resident partner of E. Regensburg & Sons, leaves in a few days for New York to spend the holidays with relatives and friends.

M. W. Berriman, of Berriman Bros., is in receipt of a letter from his son-in-law, George F. Worts, a well-known writer of Port Washington, L. I., announcing the birth of a baby boy, who is named Robert Berriman Worts. Mr. Worts writes the letter announcement as if the "kiddie" was writing it himself, and the youngster expressed a desire to "give grand-dad the once over, although my eyes are now somewhat bleary because of the hard journey I have had." A letter from Lieut. George Berriman to his father states that he expects to be assigned to work on the general staff in France.

The people of Tampa are firm in the belief that the proposed gulf naval base, the building and maintenance of which will require millions of dollars, will be established near this city. They also expect a hospital and camp for convalescent soldiers to be established in Plant Field, directly behind the Tampa Bay Hotel.

Manuel Corral, of Corral-Wodiska & Co., will spend the holidays in Havana with his brother, Celestino Corral, leaf buyer for the firm. Hiram Hammer, sales manager for the concern, is still in the city mapping out his campaign for the coming year.

Delphin Rodriguez, son of Salvador Rodriguez, veteran manufacturer of Charles the Great cigars, has gone to New York to enlist in the National Army.

Sig. Meyer, Western salesman of the Lozano factory, is here mapping out his 1918 campaign.

bales of leaf tobacco, principally Vuelta Abajo, last month, for their cigar and cigarette factories.

Other buyers of importance were: Leslie Pantin 2,275, Walter Sutter & Co. 2,274, J. Bernheim & Son 1,711, Mark A. Pollack 1,492, Hijos de Diego Montero 1,305, Allones, Ltd., 1,120, Hija de José Gener 927, Manuel Suarez Co. 817, Salvador Rodriguez 775, Garcia & Vega 512, and Cuesta Rey & Co. 350 bales additionally.

All of our cigar factories still are very busy, but soon the holiday shipments to the United States will come to an end (and unless the British importers consent to extend the time limit to our cigar manufacturers, with the end of this month the exports to Great Britain will also cease) excepting what Government orders might come forward for the Army and Navy. The few delayed orders from South America, Australia, and a few other countries would not be sufficient to keep the same number of hands employed.

Romeo y Julieta is still working under full steam, straining every point in the filling of the holiday orders for the United States, and the balance of the pending orders for Great Britain. After these are despatched Romeo y Julieta has still enough delayed orders for other countries, so perhaps it may have to let go only a few of its cigarmakers after January 1, 1918.

Partagas is also in a very favorable position as regards orders from South America and Australia.

Punch has usually managed to give its cigarmakers steady work throughout the whole year, as Don Manuel Lopez, the owner, works upon a different plan, never rushing orders, and refusing at the time of acceptance to be bound by any time limit.

Belinda, Hoyo de Monterrey, Calixto Lopez & Co., La Corona, Por Larrañaga, Ramon Allones, C. E. Beck & Co., El Rey del Mundo, Devesa de Murias and Sol are all very busy at the moment. ROSAM.

SHIPPING CONDITIONS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Government officials here in touch with the ocean traffic situation say that it is becoming more of a problem to obtain shipping space for British ports. No space is available for London, Manchester or Hull, and only limited quantities for Liverpool and Glasgow. This situation, which is always expected at the present time of the year, is said to be likely to prevail up to the end of December and possibly during January. Ocean rates are correspondingly high.

Space is scarce and rates are strong also to the French Atlantic ports. After government requirements are satisfied, priority is given to goods which are classed as essentials. To Marseilles, all steamers in view are booked full. It is possible, it is said, that a limited amount of space may be available later this month. To Italy, the situation continues fairly easy. Rates are high, but prompt clearance can be obtained.

The service has been resumed to Greece. To Holland and Scandinavian countries, shipping remains at a stand-still. South American ports are an exception to the general situation. Space in that direction is plentiful and rates have eased off. To the Orient rates continue strong. There are only a few steamers sailing from New York, and space from the Pacific ports is becoming scarce. To Australia, the service from New York has been augmented. Although rates are steady, space is more readily obtainable. From Pacific ports, steamers continue to be booked full in advance of their sailing dates.

Excess Profits Tax Tangle

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Involved legislation in the $2,534,870,000 war revenue bill, passed by Congress at its last session, which has thrown Federal officials and corporations into a quandary as to the application of the excess profits tax, may soon bring a concerted effort in both the Senate and House for the repeal of the entire measure. In any event the introduction of amendments to clarify the excess profits and income taxes is assured.

Since Congressional leaders returned to Washington their mail has been burdened with anxious inquiries from corporations as to the application of the profits tax. These have been referred to the advisers appointed by Secretary McAdoo to straighten out the kinks in the revenue law and have admitted their inability to do so even with the help of legal experts called in by the Secretary of the Treasury.

The almost hopeless tangle which the revenue measure presents drew the fire of Senator Smoot of the finance committee to-day. He criticised it as "impracticable" in many respects and went on record as favoring "a rational, workable substitute for it."

"Nothing more grotesque has been passed by Congress than the excess profits tax in the war revenue law," Senator Smoot declared. "There is not one corporation in the country that is sure of how the tax is to be applied, and the Secretary of the Treasury has been unable to give them a satisfactory interpretation. Congress should not hesitate to repeal the entire measure."

The repeal of the measure or at least its revision is also favored by Senator Simmons, who is chairman of the finance committee. He characterized the law as "pioneers' legislation," and said its faults were due largely to the stress under which its was enacted. At any rate, he asserted, Congress could not be blamed, as it was guided in the passage of the law by the Treasury Department.

Encouraging Christmas Shopping in Chicago

Soldiers' Kits and Cigarettes Are Strongly Featured—Many Stores Have Attractive Displays of the Finer Havanas—Retail Cigarists Preparing to Make All Sales Possible—The "United's" Donation—Higher Licenses for Motion Picture Theatres.

CHICAGO, December 7.—Shopping is being done early this year, so as to avoid shipping congestion. The boys all are hard at work, many fine orders have been booked, and the present stocks both in jobbers' and dealers' hands are sure to be cleaned out in a hurry. Fancy packings of cigarettes, and there are plenty on the market, are going to be the big noise. Soldiers' Kits have made a hit and those who have them for sale report a big demand. Beautiful windows showing the usual holiday spirit of Chicago are now in evidence and taking everything as it comes, the trade is ready to make all the sales possible.

Wonderful holiday displays are featuring Pall Mall cigarettes. At Shoemaker & Co.'s store in the Ashland Block is a six foot Christmas tree loaded down with gold and silver tinsel, and hanging all over are different sized boxes of Pall Malls. The display is a work of art. Another fine display of this brand is seen at the shop of Tibbets & Garland on Michigan Ave. Credit for the showing made by this well known brand should be given to Billy Wolfson, the factory representative.

The space in the lobby of the Masonic Temple has been rented to Wm. Creutzburg and is already open for business. The stand displays a full line of popular brands and cigarettes.

The jobbing house of McNeil & Higgins has discontinued handling the Apropo brand made by Ruy Suarez & Co., New York. All the salesforce are hard at work placing the Eden imported line with the trade manager. Al Belmont states that they will soon be ready to market the Henry the Fourth line.

Bumped into George Stocking, the Tuval preacher, the other day. George is home to spend the holidays. Closed a fine year on the brands made by Marcelino Perez & Co.

The Judge Wright cigar is now in the 6 cent class. The brand is made by J. C. Newman Cigar Co., of Cleveland. S. Laycock is the representative in this field.

G. A. Johnson leaves the jobbing house of Franklin McVeagh & Co. January 1st. For the past year he has been manager of the cigar department.

OVER THE TOP goes the Daily News Tobacco Fund. It has passed the $11,000 mark and is still soaring.

The United Cigar Stores here gave 5% of their receipts on Dec. 5 to the Jewish Charity and Welfare fund.

Jose Diaz, president of the Preferred Havana Tobacco Co., was expected here this week to confer with Clark Cutler. The latest report is that he will surely arrive this coming week.

Paul Alberty, the Hansel & Gretel ambassador, is getting ready to depart for New York headquarters. Paul will leave in a few days for his holiday sojourn along the gay white way. He has done wonderful work out here this year and the H. & G. brand is a staple seller. All the good places carry several sizes.

Something new in the way of Cigarette displays are appearing in the stores featuring Murads and Egyptian Deities. Hand painted scenes of different characters set off by two stately Christmas trees in flower pots are just the thing right now. The Chicago department of P. Lorillard have some wonderful trims around town this year.

Wengler & Mandell have put out a Tom Palmer Kit. It sells for $3.50 and contains 25 Tom Palmer cigars, one Chesterfield pipe, one tin King Bee tobacco and 40 Omar cigarettes. It is selling very well.

Over at 1403 West Madison St. is a busy store owned by Henry Kantor, a progressive young cigar man. Henry is chaiman of the recently formed Chicago Cigar Dealers Ass'n. He carries a fine line of cigars and here you may purchase such leaders as Cyro, Jose Vila, Romeo Garcia, Valkyrie, Kelly's Bouquet, Tom Moore, Mozarts, Robert Burns and Tom Palmer. Big lines of pipes and cigarettes are also handled.

The telephone girls in Evanston no longer are allowed to act as alarm clocks, ringing the phones of subscribers who wish to rise early. Some of the cigar boys who live up north will be reporting late to business on account of this.

The plea that the war is driving moving picture film exchanges out of business failed to convince the council license committee that it should not increase the license fee for that business. The committee recommended that the fee be increased from $25 to $100.

Food Administrator Hoover suggests that a temperature of 68 degrees be maintained in American homes—thus not only saving fuel but bettering the health and increasing the physical resistance of the people. "Use less coal and make it hotter for the Kaiser."

That famous toasted cigarette Lucky Strike is having a big run. All the papers are carrying big ads of this favorite brand.

The Marco Cigar Co., 118 South Fifth avenue, has a big La Palma display. This is a new brand with the house of Marco and is offered to their trade in several sizes.

The Dutch Inn, a popular cafe at 206 South Clark street, features a full line of well known brands.

In several stores on the west side is to be found the Big Six brand of Selak & Hoffman Co.

Valkyrie intermission, a five-cent size of this big selling mild Havana cigar, has a good sale. It is a small breva shaped cigar and comes packed in boxes of 50.

Cubador, that used to sell for 6 cents, is now offered for 7 cents, or 4 for 25 cents. E. Hoffman & Co. are the jobbers.

Gato Keywesters are now packed in cardboard drums of 50 cigars. Formerly they came in tin boxes.

Grosvenor Nicholas & Co., of New York, have sent to the trade a very neat holiday folder showing fancy packings of Eden, Ramon Allones, Por Larranaga, Punch, Romeo & Juliet, and Partagas brands of imported cigars.

Breitung's are offering a fine packing of La Venda that retails for $6.25 the box of 50.

The Army and Navy Kit put out by the United is selling well. The kit retails for $1.

Ben Woolf has purchased the interest of J. Polachek in the firm of Marks & Polachek, on 47th street. The new firm of Marks & Woolf features the well known Corina cigar as a leader.

Hazel Harris, of the Hotel Sherman cigar stand, is striving to win one of the five liberty bonds offered by the United Cigar Dealers Co. to the five persons who turn the greatest number of Cyro cigar bands in to the Daily News Tobacco Fund. She is cornering every Cyro smoker and encouraging the saving of the bands for men in France.

Fifth Avenue redeemed by Time's gentle ministerings, dropping the soiled reputation of a sinful past, has resumed the old name of other days. The thoroughfare drops the cloak it has hidden behind and dons again its rightful garment—Wells Street.

The None-such brand of cigars made for McNeil, Higgins & Co., the wholesale grocers, has a large following both locally and with the country trade.

The Mansart Cuban Blunts, selling at 5 cents straight, are now offered in the twelve stores of Albert Breitung. This is an all Havana short filled shade wrapped cigar and is made by the Harris-Schwarz & Co., New York.

Going around the different stores one sees a lot of new faces in the "ranks" behind the counters. Many of the old time clerks have left our city ticketed for somewhere in the U. S. A. to join the new drafted army. Everybody is hoping for their safe return and all have been assured of their old positions. After all the position of the cigar clerk is not so bad, when "The boss will keep your job open for you."

The Boite Nature package of Romeo-Garcia, packed 10 in a box and selling for $1, is shown by many of the large loop dealers.

A steady sale is noted by the larger dealers for Philip Morris smoking mixture. Thorwart & Roehling are the local jobbers.

Mr. Stein, selling Pera and Softa cigarettes, made by Pera Cigarette Co., of New York, was here showing some fine holiday packages. He left for Minneapolis and Denver.

J. H. Weiss & Co., 329 South La Salle street, are putting the Admiration brand over in great shape.

At the main store of Albert Breitung, Jackson and Dearborn streets, is a fine showing of holiday cigar humidors.

Garber's Club House, a new 6-cent cigar made by Julius Fernbach & Co., for Phil Garber, 329 East 51st street, has made a "hit." He can't get enough to take care of the demand.

R. J. Lytle is now all fixed up in his new quarters at 5616 Blackstone avenue. Lytle's stogies are numbered among the biggest selling stogies in town and are carried by all dealers. Bob Lytle also represents Selak & Hoffman, makers of the Big Perfecto.

Big advertisements appear in all the local newspapers boosting Osterloh's Mixture and sales have taken a big jump.

Does anyone know where Bob Delaney is? He is missed by the trade.

Walter Bloch, the box trade star at 118 North La Salle street, has taken on the Flora de Mast brand of cigars, made by Harris-Schwarz & Co.

About the handsomest glass signs ever seen here are now being distributed by the Melachrino sales force. The signs are of heavy French plate glass with the lettering in red, white and blue with gold borders. The sign hangs on a heavy brass chain.

Where is Chicago when the lights go out? The city is in bed, and before nidnight, an unheard of thing made possible only through the patriotic need to conserve coal by extinguishing the huge electric signs at 11 o'clock. Habitues of the gay white way hoped at first that candles might be permitted to replace the incandescent globes in the wee morning hours. But candles are out of the question, for they are made of tallow and tallow is badly needed. Gasoline and kerosene are also taboo; and no other substitute is satisfactory, so we have got the habit of "early to bed and early to rise."

C. C. McDonnell has contracted the dancing fever and when he closes up Fred Oakes' store he can be seen nearly every night in the week tripping the light fantastic in one of the local dancing academies.

J. L. Beck has opened a cigar store in the Warwick Hall Building, on 47th street, near Forrestville avenue. He will feature a full line of popular brands.

As a Tale That Is Told in Philadelphia

Frightfulness Approaches in the Form of a War Cigar—Dealers Can't Get Goods Fast Enough—Don't Tell Your Troubles to a Quaker City Policeman—Burglars Open the Safe of Hartman & Sons in Camden—Retailers Will Have More Than Food for Thought at the Meeting Wednesday Night—John Armstrong McDowell, a Widely Known, Old Time Tobacco Man Passes.

PHILADELPHIA, December 10.—Some of the local perfesh are frightened almost into swearing off—and three weeks to go until January once. It all came about as the result of those wild, fatherless rumors that the dear old government is going to follow up its war bread experiments by establishing a war—get ready for the woist—a war cigar. It is to be made, according to the same unreliable, highly unauthoritative and distinctly unsatisfactory source, out of two parts have a-necticut and three parts prime Nevada sage brush. We sprung the tale first on Dan Ostrow;

"Quite an improvement," he said, rubbing his hands in great glee and gazing at the stogie he had just hurled into the corner with a malevolent gleam in his eye. "I's about time the government stepped in and cut down the amount of refuse in some of this war junk I'm getting."

Others say that straw and corn stalks used as bedding for cattle will be used, there being a shortage of cattle this year and a consequent overproduction of bedding.

Seriously, something will have to be done if all the smokers, including the soldiers in the army training cantonments, are to get all the smokes they want this Christmas. What with shortages of coal, boxes, labor and transportation, the situation here from the viewpoint of manufacturer, jobber and retailer is beginning to assume a dark blue tinge. Yahn & McDonnell, who are among the largest jobbers in the city, are still waiting for some goods ordered as early as last August. The bill of this and other firms for express tolls and telegrams will run into figures which, if you had it, Mawrus, you wouldn't have to do no worrying about your Christmas gifts.

Jobbers who succeed in getting in goods more likely than not get the wrong size packages, but nobody is doing much kicking on that score so long as the stuff comes in. Production is being kept up to the top notch possible with the growing shortage of labor, but orders—or rather pleas—for goods are piling up faster than the manufacturers can handle them.

Added to which, the cops are threatening to strike in this man's town for more money. What has that to do with the cigar business? Nothing, only "Gus," the mysterious personage who loitered up to a freight car at the Woodlawn station and thoughtfully extracted twenty-five thousand cigars which he took away from there on two motor trucks and later sold to a Philadelphia dealer who is now being held for trial for them. Gus is still at large. And also a coy burglar with a sharp saw cut a hole through the trap door—we can't figure why he didn't pry it open—the trap door, at any rate, of Hartman & Sons, of Third and Arch streets, Camden. Of course they didn't stop there. They went right on through to the first floor and pried up the safe. In it they found a box of cigars. They took the cigars and $100 in cash. Then they gathered up many boxes of cigars and went away. On the floor, when members of the well known cigar manufacturing firm arrived the next morning, was discovered a tray from the safe. In the tray was a collection of the family jewels worth more than John D. Rockefeller's Christmas cigars, which the burglars had overlooked. Of course that was in Camden, where they have good cops. Now what is going to happen if the cops in Philadelphia strike? Business houses might just as well leave the front door open with an obiliging clerk on duty to direct the burglars to the strong boxes.

All of this may or may not be discussed at the first regular meeting of the newly formed Tobacco Dealers' Association, to be held Wednesday night of this week at the Adelphia, in no less a place than the banquet room. But whatever comes up there is certain to be something of interest in the procedure. For one thing, Coates Coleman found he is too busy running a couple of farms, a big cigar store, and handling an estate on the side, so he resigned as treasurer. Franklin K. Sterner, one of the V. P.'s, has been suggested for vice-president, but it will be an open race. H. Lieber, sales manager for Bayuk Brothers, who had sent in twenty-five new members when we reeled to press last week, has come to bat this week with another list of twelve. There are als others coming in Wednesday night. Abou 200 dealers are expected. Whisper—afte the session there will be a buffet luncheo for the members.

At the time of skidding to press definit word had not been received from Charles F Whitrock, president of the Cincinnati Asso siation, as to whether or not he will be pres ent to tell the new association here how the do it in his town. However, he is expected

John Armstrong McDowell, one of th most widely known of the old time tobacc men in this city, died Sunday night at th Aldine Hotel, where he had made his hom for some years. Mr. McDowell was a mem ber of the firm of M. E. McDowell & Co. incorporated some years ago as the Durhan Tobacco Co., of which Mr. McDowell be came treasurer. When this firm sold ou to the American Tobacco Co. it was under stood in the trade that Mr. McDowell ha been offered the position of secretary, bu he declined. He was born in Willoughby Ohio, in 1835. Mr. McDowell is survived b a daughter, Miss Eliza A. McDowell. H was a member of the Union League and o the New England and Scotch-Irish Socie ties. For years he was a vestryman of St Stephen's P. E. Church and one of the man agers of the Beneficial Society. The Tariff Commission Reports to Congress

The United States Tariff Commission, which was organized for work April 1, 1917, has just submitted to Congress its first annual report. The commission is charged with the investigation of the administration and the fiscal and industrial effects of the customs laws of this country, including their relation not only to the federal revenue but to the industries of the country. It has power, further, to investigate commercial treaties, preferential agreements and economic alliances, and the conditions and causes affecting the competition of foreign industries with those of the United States.

The commission submitted during the extra session of this year to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives a report which recommended that Congress should take steps analogous to those which other countries have taken, and which are there known as "padlock" laws, whereby proposed increases in duties and taxes should go into effect before the enactment of new revenue laws, but subject to their being finally passed. The method adopted by Congress to attain the same end in the war revenue act of this year is to follow taxable articles into the channels of trade. But this does not reach smaller retail stocks and it has the further objection that it suddenly imposes great burdens and responsibilities on the Bureau of Internal Revenue. The commission repeats its recommendation for permanent legislation on this subject.

The commission has undertaken the task of drafting a revision and codification of the administrative laws relating to the customs in order to remove the existing duplications, contradictions and antiquated provisions. It has invited suggestions from Treasury officials, others in the public service, and business men an attorneys. The commission hopes to present t Congress a revision which, if approved and en acted into law, will result in clearness and sim plification in the form and substance of the cus toms administrative laws, increased efficienc and greater convenience for the public, and substantial saving of Government expenditur In this connection the commission is also inve tigating the question of free zones in ports a a means of expediting export trade and ove coming demurrage in ocean commerce.

The commission has undertaken to establis a catalogue of tariff information, somewhat i the nature of an encyclopaedia, which shall co tain as far as possible data for each importa article affected by the tariff. The data will in clude statistics on imports, exports, productio prices and cost of production, processes of ma ufacture and competitive conditions. Th catalogue is to be kept continuously up-to-dat A part of the general plan will be the establis ment of a tariff library in which will be ke books, pamphlets, letters, etc.

The commission is making a special surve of the chemical industry and expects to prese to Congress a detailed report showing the de velopment of the industry and especially o those branches which have been most stimula ed by the war. The investigation carried on b the commission will be especially devised so a to provide the information necessary for a leg islative readjustment to peace conditions. B direction of the president the commission taking the special census of chemical produc made necessary by section 501 of the act o September 8, 1916.

CHRISTMAS is coming, and it will be different from any Christmas in the history of the country; so many of our young men will either be fighting for our country or in training for the fight. There never was a time when cigarettes were in such demand.

The boys will be away from home, and what could be more welcome than cigarettes in his box from home? It must be the wish of every one who has some one dear to them in a camp in this country that on that day of all days he have every pleasure and comfort.

With this in mind, we have this year specially prepared packings of PALL MALL, LUCKY STRIKE, OMAR and LORD SALISBURY, as illustrated. They are attractive, practical and economical.

Your jobber will ship these Christmas packings as a part of your regular stock order. Display them—push them. They will be the biggest sellers in Christmas Cigarette Packings this year.

THE PALL MALL Magnum contains 100 plain and 100 cork tip. It is an irresistible gift purchase. Its rich, luxurious color scheme of red and gold, combined with the holiday dress, makes it a package of great appeal. No extra charge for this packing.

THE PALL MALL Library packing contains 100 cigarettes, either plain or cork tip. It is identical with the Magnum, except the size. It is going to be one of the biggest selling Christmas brands this year. Thousands of people who have 'their boys' or friends in the training camps know that the best is none too good to send their fighting lads of whom they are so proud.

OMAR. This Christmas box of OMAR contains 12 packages of 16s. Each package of 16 cigarettes sells to the customer for 15c., or $1.80 per Christmas box of 12 packages, as illustrated here. The outside wrapper is lithographed in attractive colors. The Christmas touch will make it sell on sight. All ready for mailing or delivery. No extra charge for Christmas box.

LUCKY STRIKE. This Christmas box of LUCKY STRIKE contains 12 packages of 16s. Each package of 16 cigarettes sells to the consumer for 10c., or $1.20 per Christmas box of 12 packages, as illustrated here. The outside wrapper is lithographed in attractive colors. The Christmas touch will make it sell on sight. All ready for mailing or delivery. No extra charge for Christmas box.

AN UNEASY FEELING IN SAN FRANCISCO

Neither Jobbers Nor Retailers Are Greatly Encouraged by the Present Outlook—Anticipate a Considerable Reorganization of Trade—California Is Manifesting More Opposition to Saloons—Marx Bros. Will Advance Prices on Manilas—A Scarcity of Snuff

San Francisco, December 5.—The retail trade in San Francisco is looking forward to the first of the year with a considerable apprehension. While the price of many five cent cigars have already advanced to six cents and in some cases seven cents, these prices have not generally taken effect in all the retail shops. Many of these dealers had a good stock of cigars on hand, bought before the advances were made, and they have not been pushing the cigar which was among the earliest to advance in price. As a consequence the real effect of the advance in prices has not been universally felt. There have always been places where the economically inclined could get his "smokes" at the old price. But with the first of the year all the prices will be in effect. Some of the dealers figure that this will mean a decided falling off in the cigar trade, and that many smokers will turn to pipes. One distributor said he believed that the falling off would amount to about 30 per cent, but other wholesalers and manufacturers' agents would not commit themselves to specific figures. Another matter which is threatening many of the smaller retail dealers is the growing hostility towards the saloon. While a majority do not believe that California is ready for total prohibition, a law which will soon be voted upon provides for the practical elimination of the saloon, and in the present temper of the people it may carry. Every saloon in this city has a cigar store in connection with it and if the saloons are closed it will close hundreds of small cigar stands. This would mean a readjustment of the trade. As one prominent dealer sees the handwriting on the wall the day of the small retailer, the small jobber and the small wholesaler is a thing of the past, and the business in the future will be concentrated in fewer hands, in larger retail shops carrying larger stocks served by bigger wholesalers with large capital. These changes, if they come, will not come at once, but it is asserted that this is the tendency throughout all lines of business, as one of the results of the war, and the cigar trade will not prove an exception.

Marx Bros., large and prominent importers of Manila cigars in this territory, say that shortly after the first of the year they will be compelled to raise the price on all Manila goods. No increase has yet been made by this firm, notwithstanding the f that freight rates have been multiplied times since the outbreak of the war Europe, that the cost of Manila tobacco greatly increased and that labor in t islands have demanded material increa which the factories there have been co pelled to meet. Owing to recent buying Americans in Manilla tobacco has advan nearly 200 per cent above the figure at wh it sold before the war.

H. L. Judell, who was reported as sick l week, has entirely recovered from the effe of his indisposition and has plunged into t midst of the local campaign which is be waged here to raise $150,000 to insure t cantonment at Camp Fremont, near Me Park. This money was promised by t mayor of San Francisco and some busine men to insure the construction of a sewa system at the camp in conformity with t State laws, and now the prominent citize are busying themselves to "make good."

The Philadelphia Hand Made and the Ho man Big-Perfectos will be advanced to t six cent class on the first of the year.

Mo Selig, salesman with Ehrman Bros. Co., who enlisted in the artillery branch the service about a month ago has put his application for transfer to the aviati corps.

Ehrman Bros. & Co. are finding it hard get goods delivered to San Francisco by re ular freight shipments and are ordering good many of their shipments sent here

BETTER THAN PREDICTED

The Wisconsin Tobacco Crop Is Curing in a Way That Causes Gratification and Relief.

EDGERTON, Wis., December 7.—It seems quite probable that the tobacco crop has cured out much better than was predicted earlier in the season, for we learn that a large portion has been removed for stripping during the recent casing weather than was thought possible would be ready until at least after the holidays. Information comes from Vernon county that the Bekkedal firm have already received sixty acres of the new crop and have assurance of enough ready for delivery to warrant the opening of one or more warehouses. However, freezing weather has now set in and it is not likely much more will be taken from the curing sheds until the next thawing spell. But quite a good start has been made in stripping where heavy stems are not so abundant. It is hardly probable there will be much warehouse work attempted in the southern section until after the holidays at least.

The shipments out of storage reach 550 cases and 2 cars of bundles from this market to all points for the week.—Edgerton Reporter.

TARIFF COMMISSION REPORTS

War disturbances, such as the effect of the war on the supply of raw materials, tendencies developing in different industries, new and increased establishments, changes in processes, and plans for readjustment after the war, are being specially considered by the commission.

The entrance of the United States into the European war has brought the activities of the commission, as those of every department of the government, into closer relation to war problems and conditions. Both our allies and our enemies are considering the possibility of commercial warfare, commercial neutrality, and commercial alliance. The Central Powers are considering the arrangement of an economic union for Central Europe. Imperial preference has been actively discussed in England and in her self-governing colonies. Far-reaching possibilities are suggested by the results of the Paris Economic Conference which met in June, 1916, and which provided for a differential treatment between allied countries, neutral countries, and enemy countries. In the act creating the Tariff Commission, the commission was specifically empowered "to investigate the Paris economy pact and similar organizations and arrangements in Europe." The commission is preparing an extensive report on bargaining tariffs, commercial treaties, and economic alliances. The United States has never had a consistent policy with reference to bargaining tariffs, whereas the countries of Europe have worked out several different systems. The Tariff Commission's report will provide the facts upon which Congress may found a method for using the bargaining power in American tariffs, and also upon which American commercial treaties may be adjusted to meet the conditions of the modern world.

In all that it has undertaken the commission is working in harmony with other departments of the government, thereby avoiding duplication of effort.

APPROPRIATIONS TO AID TOBACCO GROWERS

WASHINGTON, December 10.—In making recommendations for the ensuing year, the Secretary of Agriculture urges the appropriation of $84,900 for investigation helpful in the eradication of the tobacco beetle, boll weevil, etc. This sum to be expended under the direction of the Bureau of Entomology would be applicable to insects affecting Southern field crops.

Secretary Houston also asks for an appropriation of $32,000 for investigating and improving, likewise to investigate the methods of tobacco production. This appropriation is for the Bureau of Plant Industry.

REGULATIONS FOR AFFIXING CIGAR LABELS.

WASHINGTON, December 10.—The collectors of internal revenue have received the following instructions in connection with the printing on each box of large cigars legends concerning the class of tax payment.

The provisions of T. D. 2569, with reference to the label to be affixed to each box of cigars weighing more than three pounds per thousand, indicating the class of tax payment, are hereby modified so as to permit the printing or stamping of the required legend directly on the front of each box. The printing or stamping should be clear and distinct.

The dimensions of the label prescribed may be reduced in the case of wooden boxes containing twenty-five or less cigars, and also small packages not made from wood, on which it may be printed as part of other printing thereon. Each such label on small packages not made from wood, known to the trade as package goods, should be perfectly legible and should appear in a conspicuous place.

Boston Cigar Manufacturers Offer Terms

Would Pay the Price the Union Demands for Labor—But Propose That the New Schedule Shall Be Effective January 11—Cigar Makers Refuse to Go to Work Unless the Suggested Schedule Is Made to Apply Immediately—A Tobacco Fund for the "Blue Hill Boys."

BOSTON, Mass., December 10.—Cigar manufacturers here have acceded to the demands of the Union 97, effective January 11, 1918. This concession, however, has not been agreeably received by the cigarmakers, who want the new schedule of prices to go into effect at once. The manufacturers could not readjust their business so that the schedule could be effective immediately. A hitch occurred. The cigarmakers refused to go back to work unless the new schedule went into effect at once. Up to the present, the manufacturers are "standing pat," willing to take the cigarmakers back at the old schedule, and put the new schedule, according to the demands of Union 97, into effect January 11.

Boston was shocked by the horrible calamity at Halifax. Relief trains and steamers with all kinds of supplies were immediately dispatched from here. Money is now being collected and many are responding generously.

John A. Lappen, representing the Havana-American Co., is in Boston, calling on the Commonwealth Cigar Co. Kelley's Bouquet is Johnny's big seller.

Charles B. Perkins, of Charles B. Perkins Co., with Irwin Studwell, visited New York City last week.

Harry L. Rogers, who formerly conducted several cigar stands here, and who now is a successful manufacturer of leather cigar cases and novelties, was in Boston during the past week, booking orders.

Pedro de Cubano is the title of the cigar made by the American Exchange Cigar Co., and distributed by Stoddard-Gilbert Co., New Haven, Conn. The brand has been placed successfully all over the State of Connecticut, and is considered by Stoddard-Gilbert Co. to be one of their most active brands.

All the cigarmakers in New Haven, Conn., are on strike. Not a cigar has been made there for several weeks.

Carlos Stoddard, of Stoddard-Gilbert Co., is on the exemption board of New Haven, Conn., which has kept him busy night and day.

J. Freeman Saville, who was in an electric car accident last week, is getting along nicely, and believes that he will be able to come in to take care of his holiday trade.

John Henry, the Worcester, Mass. retailer and jobber, has taken on the La Constancia brand of Manila cigars, of the Philippine Co.

Charles T. Ellis, representing the American Exchange Cigar Co., made a trip recently covering Providence, New London, New Haven, Hartford, Springfield and Worcester.

Dubonnets are well distributed through this territory, so are Strathmores and Ranchos.

Bill Foster, who has the stand in the Ackerman Drug store in Hartford, certainly sells a bunch of Girard cigars. Bill smokes the himself, and can't help recommending the to his trade.

Cigars made in Western Massachusetts a gradually creeping into the Boston mark No special effort ever has been made to i troduce these cigars. They were simply p in by demand of customers who cover We ern Massachusetts, and smoke these ciga while there. Brands that are noticed in ma stores in Boston are the Rockingham, ma by M. H. Barnett, Springfield, Mass., and t Noble by the Noble Cigar Co., Westfie Mass.

Frank L. Hener, who has been with Charl T. Ellis for the past four years, starting stenographer, and working up to outsi salesman, in which capacity he has made go from the start, has enlisted in the Naval R serve. His many friends wish him all kinds luck. When the war is over, he will be w comed back, and his position will be open f him.

Favorita de Cuba, made by S. H. Furgat & Co., is sold in Boston by Charles B. Perki Co.

Phillip Morris Cigarettes in packs of o hundred, tastefully decorated, are big ho day favorites. Many department stores a displaying this package.

Bernard Lett Co., jobbers of Sanchez a Haya cigars, are getting some good siz orders on these cigars. Many sizes have be short shipped, but Mr. Lett hopes to have big shipment arrive next week.

temely scarce, but Shufelt, with his usual frethought, has taken good care of his local tade with tins of 1-40ths.

"This is the best I can do," sez he, "and I on't think you'll make any mistake by buy-ig all I can sell you. These goods may jump gain, you can't tell at this time."

It's the blame rubber stamp, that's what i is! Else the Doc Deane almanack is right, mmie Stuart is right, an' Tom Lawson, of os'on is wrong!

For whoever heard of Thursday, the 13th? Vhat if it is the 347th day of the year! With nly 18 more daily days to go, this unruly Thursday ought to play true to form, an' e, sure enough Friday, the 13th!

Naw, it ain't unlucky! Lissen ter what ruthful Tom, he of Bos'on shouts erboutut: You may as well try to spank out hell's fires ith a fly-swatter as to red-lantern the merican people about good luck and bad!"

So it looks as tho neither the rubber stamp or Cinco Jim cares a rap, as Tommy says, bout unlucky days like December 13th!

Because, that's the very time "Our Mister" ames T. Stuart has selected to interview ie Capital District trade for the final trip f 1917.

And, if 'twas bad luck to do it on the 13th, Our Mister" Jimmie certainly wouldn't queer is year's work for Otto Eisenlohr & Brothers y comin' thru for a Merry & Happy shake n' smile on no such date as this Thursday, the 3th, as he has it rubber stamped an' promised er postal!

"This is my Christmas call," admitted Frank Dearstyne, "and I have to offer Rex Armas, Seal Skin, Muriel, Que Placer, and the several other Holiday packings of our popular igar brands. Some of these goods are in 0s and 25s, tho, to tell you the honest truth, the Dearstyne Brothers Tobacco Co. can't supply all sizes just now."

"Like to the Pontick Sea,
Whose icy current and compulsive course
Whose no retiring ebb, but flows due on To the Propontick and the Hellespont—"

No, Shakespeare, you're wrong! 'Twas not the outraged Othello speaking his third scene, third act, to insinuating Iago.

On the contrary, like to the Pontick Sea, it was Uncle Dick! Yes, 'twas Uncle Dick Robe doing the Bob-Mantell to the dear old Hudson River, just a day or so ago!

For, you see, Uncle Dick and his niece, Sara, had just finished some Saint Brighton, with noodles and chicken a la sultan, with fixin's, at the Boulevard Rotisserie.

Then Uncle Dick, true to his instinct as Albany's best known cigarman, had passed the time-o-day with a number of ole frens in the Bruce Macdonald store, ultimately announcing his intention at seven bells of the cat-watch (about 3.30 P. M., you lubber)! to proceed to the river for a glance at his seafaring chum, Cap Peipenbrink.

Right there it happened! Ask Cap, he knows! Because, suddenly a cry from the float at the pierhead! It came to Cap Pep like this:

"Hey, Cap, hey! D'ye hear? I've lost me lid! Git a boat an' chase 'er! There she goes down the creek! It's the best an' oney Dunlop-Dicer I've got. Go an' git it! Go an' git it!"

Cap'n Pep responded like the true life-saver that he is! With a bound he manned the oars in his sub-chaser! Swingin' th' bouncin' craft head-on, th' Cap'n rowed for life!

He rowed an' rowed an' rowed! While Uncle Dick, bless 'is 'eart, jiggered up an' down the pier-float, yellin' encouragement to Cap like a bettin'-trainer at a bike race!

Now, you should know it, if Uncle Dick had-a-had his hydro-cycle at the pier, he'd a given the Cap some 'sistance. For, in the days of '92, when bicyclin' was bicyclin', an' not motor-cyclin', Uncle Dick won many a race on the fast Ridgefield track!

What's more, didn't Uncle Dick likewise ride up th' 90% grade of Wilson street, over cobbles, an' atop a dump-you-over high wheel, such as we uster ride when Rutherford B. Hayes was where Thomas W. Wilson is now?

Well, Uncle Dick calmed down at last, when neither th' Cap'n nor the hat could be sighted in the diminishin' distance.

That's the very instant he began to mutter the immortal lines erroneously credited by Bill Shakes to the wrong fellow.

For the hat was gone, an' th' Cap was gone! While, in th' hat, right under the sweat band (you know th' place)! Uncle Dick had deposited his will an' his thrift bonds, all of 'em!

Of course, there'd be no trouble 'bout th' will! That's understood. It was arranged long, long ago that Uncle Dick's niece, Sara, is to share the entire estate with herself, solely!

"But, take it from me," sez Uncle Dick, "it ain't the loss of the bum ole hat, with th' miscellaneous securities, which bothers me so much. No, it ain't that! But it's the worrin' I been doin' about Cap. Where is he? Mariners report his last appearance some where sou-by-sou-east of th' gulf stream, rowin' fer all he's worth to th' Virgin Isles, or th' equator, or som'where. I don't see why an' how he keeps it up! Sure, I know th' dicer looks som'thin' like one of those new fangled depth-bombs we hear about, but, shucks, th' holstein schnitzels needn't fear! There never was enough explosive in my head to sink a Baked Boston Bluefish!"

Meantime, men, Uncle Dick is wearing his velour fuzzy-wuzzy.

THE SMOKER.

CLASSIFICATION OF CIGARS

(A T. M. A. Bulletin issued December 10)

There seems to be some misunderstanding as to the amount of taxes to be paid on cigars intended to be retailed at 3 for 10 cents and hence attention again is called to the ruling of the Revenue Department as follows: (T. D. 2569)

> "In Section 400 the rate of tax to be paid on cigars weighing more than three pounds per thousand is based upon the retail price of each cigar, and it is provided in said section that the word 'retail' as used in this section shall mean the ordinary retail price of a single cigar.
> "The ordinary retail price of a single cigar is held to be the price at which cigars are or would be sold singly. Where cigars are manufactured or imported to retail at two or three for a certain price, the rate of tax payment is determined upon the retail price at which such cigars would be sold singly.
>
> "In the case of cigars which are sold only by the box and never retailed in less quantities, i. e., where the box is the unit of sale, the rate of tax to be paid thereon is to be determined by the maximum value of a single cigar obtained by dividing the box price by the number of cigars packed therein where the same brand of cigars is put up in different size packages.
> "In the case of imported cigars, the importer will be required to file an affidavit with the collector of customs setting forth the necessary information with reference to the retail price of the cigars when sold singly, and the importer will be held responsible for the proper tax payment of such cigars."

It seems to be perfectly clear that, except in cases where the cigars are done up and sold in standard packages where the package regularly forms the unit of sale, the test whether the cigars should be classed under A or B, or under any other class, is what a single cigar would be sold for, and as a single cigar of the 3 for 10 cents type cannot be sold for less than 4 cents, it would necessarily come within class B, for which the war tax is $1 per M.

It is respectfully suggested that in each case where there is any doubt as to the package coming within one class or another, such package be forwarded to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for a special ruling.

Concerning Classification Notices.

In our Bulletin No. 117 of November 10 we quoted the following from the new regulations of the Internal Revenue Bureau:

> "Under the provisions of Section 400 every manufacturer or importer will be required to affix to each box or container of cigars weighing more than three pounds per thousand a conspicuous label indicating by letter the clause of said section under which the cigars therein contained have been tax-paid, which must correspond with the tax-paid stamp on said box or container."
>
> "Such label shall be not less than one inch long nor less than three-fourths of an inch wide, and shall be affixed to the front of the box or container and shall bear the following legend:
>
> The contents of this box have been tax-paid as cigars of Class ———, as indicated by the Internal Revenue stamp affixed.
> In each such label the class shall be indicated by letter A, B, C, D or E, corresponding with the appropriate Rates of Tax."

Thereafter we asked for a modification of the regulation so as to dispense with the necessity of attaching labels and to permit the printing of the notices on the box fronts; and in our Bulletin 118 of November 22 we reported that our application for such modification had been granted with the provision that the imprint on the boxes should be in colored ink. The requirement for the use of colored ink was, of course, objected to, with the result that an official amendment to the regulation has since been promulgated, known as T. D. 2595, which reads as follows:

> "The provisions of T. D. 2569, with reference to the label to be affixed to each box of cigars weighing more than three pounds per thousand, indicating the class of tax payment, are hereby modified so as to permit the printing or stamping of the required legend directly on the front of each box. The printing or stamping should be clear and distinct."
>
> "The dimensions of the label prescribed may be reduced in the case

"Federal Reserve" Reports on Tobacco

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The Federal Reserve Board in its monthly report on business and agricultural conditions throughout the United States has the following to say in connection with tobacco:

"District No. 3—Philadelphia—The farmers have been quite successful this year, though they were very much handicapped by the lack of farm labor. Crops appear to be of good size and in excellent condition. Tobacco growers have been selling a good portion of their crop at exceptionally high prices. "In the burley tobacco regions the lessened crop in pounds is more than offset by higher prices, and the tendency is to dispose of the crop promptly. Indications are that tobacco manufacturers are making financial preparations for the handling of the crop, and the prospects show that the growers will have an unusually large money return on this year's crop.

"District No. 5—Richmond—Reports in the district continue to accentuate the disturbed conditions regarding labor, lack of transportation facilities, and abnormal conditions in many directions. Aside from these notes of uncertainty, the unprecedented high prices for tobacco, and other products have kept business generally up to high-water mark.

"Tobacco has been selling freely and some high grades bring unheard of prices; in some instances as much as $1 per pound, the average price being 30 cents to 35 cents.

"District No. 6—Atlanta—In the dark tobacco fields a large crop has been housed and buyers are offering as high as $21 per hundred, the low mark being $15. These prices are beyond expectation, the average offering being $18 per hundred."

DID SHAKESPEARE USE TOBACCO?

Probably this question had occurred to few minds until a local lecturer answered it in the negative, basing his opinion on the alleged lack of reference to the weed in any of the bard's writings.

The use of tobacco had not made great headway in the time of Shakespeare. It was in 1586 that Sir Francis Drake first took the herb to England and showed Sir Walter Raleigh how to use it, after which came the celebrated incident before Queen Elizabeth, and it was not until after the Virginia settlement that tobacco was commonly used in England, although Spain was becoming fond of it.

That Shakespeare did not use tobacco habitually may be taken for granted, but that he did not, with his inquiring mind, know something of the habit, even in an experimental way, is unlikely.

As a matter of fact, whether Shakespeare ever smoked or not, it can be said without fear of contradiction that he never used the telephone, had no automobile, never wrote on a typewriter, and was unaccustomed to railway journeys. But he knew men and women, their natures and their faults and foibles, things that existed before the lure of Lady Nicotine was known.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

The Kuhles & Stock cigar factory in St. Paul was tied up last week as a result of the walkout of 115 cigarmakers when the management refused to recognize the union. About 50 clerks, packers and machine operators remained at work. "The trouble has been brewing for a week, but we cannot recognize the union," said H. B. Kuhles, the secretary of the company. "There was no wage increase demand. The walkout is incidental to the general union labor agitation here."

For some unexplained reason J. M. Buckner, a large tobacco exporter, has withdrawn from southern Indiana, it is understood, and after ten days of the highest prices ever paid in that section the market dropped suddenly and for the past two days little tobacco has been sold. The market improved, however, Wednesday when other dealers began buying in larger quantities, although the price is still several dollars below the prevailing prices before the bottom dropped out of sales.—Owensboro, Ky., Messenger.

Damage to the building which will not exceed $1,000, and an indefinite loss on tobacco, of which there was stored an amount worth between $30,000 and $40,000, resulted December 6 from a blaze at the Northwestern warehouse of the P. Lorillard Co., at 106 First street, Madison, Wis. The fire originated on the second floor, in the rear, and may have started from the chimney; it was confined to that part of the building and water and smoke caused the greater part of the loss. "The tobacco may have suffered to the extent of $4,000 or $5,000," said George E. Gary, manager.

In China, one of the chief services of a poster is its visualization of a trade-mark or "chop." China has no trade-mark law, but every Chinese has a wholesome veneration for a chop which he has associated with some reliable product. Once a chop has been firmly established it is an extremely valuable asset. Chinese coolies, unable to read, often have been seen to purchase a package of cigarettes, go to a poster on a near-by wall, and carefully compare the design on the package with the design on the advertisement which is known to be genuine.

The situation in regard to the strike of the cigarmakers in New Haven, last week, was said to remain about the same, with neither the Union nor the Manufacturers' Association showing signs of giving in. The 13 firms, members of the association, have arranged to meet every Tuesday night during the strike to discuss the situation. All of the firms affected claim that they have stock already made up which will last for a considerable length of time. The striking cigarmakers show no signs of going back to work and the strike committee stated that the dues of all of the 22 members of the Union that are serving the country will be paid as usual.

RULES FOR INSPECTING PHILIPPINE LEAF TOBACCO

(c) Making of inspections.—The inspector shall open up a sufficient number of bales (2 out of every 100 bales will ordinarily suffice, but if the number of bales in the lot is less than 100, a greater percentage will be inspected) to determine whether the tobacco conforms with the classification and net weights stated in the application and marked on the bales. In case the classification of any of the tobacco is found to be different from that stated in the application, or the tobacco fails to comply with the requirements hereof as to packing and marking of the bales, the entire lot of tobacco shown in the application shall be rejected until brought within said requirements and submitted for reinspection. If the tobacco is of a lower class than that stated in the declaration, it will be considered as having been brought within the requirements of these regulations upon submission of a correct declaration and marking the bales with the true class; but this shall not be construed as permitting the mixing of tobacco of several classes. Inspection fees shall be collected on each inspection or reinspection. The tobacco offered for inspection must be stored in an accessible place and the person presenting the tobacco for inspection shall supply the labor required in moving the bales.

(d) Issuance of inspection certificates and collection of fees.—Upon completing the inspection, the inspector shall issue an inspection certificate on B. I. R. Form No. 506 issued in triplicate. The original certificate shall be delivered to the person presenting the tobacco, one copy shall be forwarded through the provincial treasurer to the Collector of Internal Revenue, and one copy shall be retained by the inspector. Not later than three days after the date of inspection, the person offering the tobacco for inspection shall present the inspection certificate to the deputy provincial treasurer (in Manila to the Cashier, Bureau of Internal Revenue), together with the amount of the inspection fees indicated thereon, and it shall be the duty of the collecting officer to enforce payment of the inspection fees within the time allowed.

The collecting officer will take up the certificate and attach same to his record of collections. In lieu of the inspection certificate taken up he shall issue a general receipt for the amount collected reading: "For Inspection Fees, Act No. 2613." The collecting officer shall likewise note on the inspection certificate as well as on the copy of same forwarded to the Collector of Internal Revenue the number of the receipt and date on which collection of the amount due was made.

(e) Affixture of inspection labels.—After the inspection certificate has been issued, the inspector shall supply the person presenting the tobacco for inspection with a sufficient number of inspection labels for affixture to the lot accepted, personally witnessing their affixture. The labels shall be attached by means of leaden seals and suitable wire. The wire shall be inserted through at least four pieces of the bejuco binder in such a manner as to make impossible the re-use of the seal if the packages are opened and repacked. Before shipping leaf tobacco which has been inspected, the inspector shall stamp the L-3 guia and guia stub with the words "Inspected, Certificate No. ——," which he shall fill in with the number of the inspection certificate. * * *

Section 20. Appeals.—If any person feels aggrieved at the classification made by a tobacco inspector, he may appeal to a provincial appraisement board appointed by the Collector of Internal Revenue to meet once each month such places as he may designate in the ord creating the board. In Manila the board sha meet as occasion requires. The method of pe fecting an appeal shall be for the party a grieved to pay the inspection fees due account of the inspection from which appe is made, and, in addition, to deposit with t deputy provincial treasurer an amount equ to the inspection fees. He shall file with t inspector within five days of the date of inspe tion a written statement announcing his disse from the inspector's decision and setting for his grounds for disagreement. The inspect shall forthwith transmit the papers to the cha man of the appraisement board, with his co ment, whereupon the board sholl proceed reappraise the tobacco or tobacco products, gi ing the inspector and the appellant a hearin if such action is deemed advisable by the boar The findings of the board shall be forward to the Collector of Internal Revenue for d cision. In case the tobacco inspector's decisi is affirmed, the amount deposited shall be tak up as inspection fees for the reinspection mad if reversed, the deposit shall be refunded.

In case the appellant desires to forward t tobacco or tobacco products to Manila witho awaiting the decision of the local board, t appeal may be transferred to the appraiseme board sitting at Manila.

The appraisement board sitting in the c of Manila will also be called upon by the C lector of Internal Revenue to advise with h in case a manufacturer formally objects to t decision, holding that samples submitted herein provided are non-standard, or forma objects to the grouping given to such sampl Section 23. Enforcement.—Section 13 of Act 2613 specifies the Collector of Internal Revenue as the officer charged with the enforcement of the provisions of said Act and of the regulations issued in accordance therewith; but the Director of Agriculture is charged with executing and enforcing the provisions of law referring to the cultivation of tobacco. Internal-revenue officers will bear in mind that the work pertaining to the securing of seeds and demonstration work among tobacco planters as to proper cultivation methods pertains to the Director of Agriculture, and they shall take part in this work only when delegated so to do by the Director of Agriculture, with the approval of this office. Tobacco inspectors and examiners and internal-revenue officers generally enforce the provisions of law relating to tobacco after it has been gathered. They will accordingly see that the prohibitions against improper curing, fermenting, packing and removal are enforced, and shall perform such other duties in connection with the tobacco after it is gathered as may be assigned to them in these regulations or by order from their superior officer.

Section 24. Penalties.—Any person who shall export or attempt to export from the Philippine Islands to the United States any tobacco that does not bear the inspection label hereinbefore required, and any person who shall knowingly violate any other provisions of this Act, or any of the rules issued by the Collector of Internal Revenue in accordance with said Act, or any of the rules herein promulgated, will be proceeded against under Section 14 of Act No. 2613, which provides punishment by a fine not exceeding five hundred pesos or by imprisonment not exceeding six months, or by both penalties in the discretion of the court.

Section 25. Effective date.—These rules and regulations shall take effect January 1, 1918.

LAW AGAINST SMOKING

Section 83-c of the New York Labor Law.

No person shall smoke in any factory, but the industrial board in its rules may permit smoking in protected portions of a factory or in special cases of occupancies where in its opinion the safety of the employees would not be endangered thereby. A notice of such prohibition stating the penalty for violation thereof shall be posted in every entrance hall and every elevator car, and in every stairhall and room on every floor of such factory, in English and also in such other language or languages as the fire commissioner of the city of New York in such city, and elsewhere, the commissioner of labor, shall direct. The fire commissioner of the city of New York in such city, and elsewhere, the commissioner of labor shall enforce the provisions of this subdivision.

Rules Relating to Smoking in Factories Rule 15.

The term "incombustible," as used in this rule, means articles, goods, wares or merchandise which will not support combustion.

The term "non-inflammable," as used in this rule, means articles, goods, wares or merchandise which will support combustion but which will not readily burn.

The term "contents," as used in this rule, means articles, goods, wares and merchandise, packed, stored, manufactured or in the process of manufacture.

The term "approved," as used in this rule, means approved by the Industrial Commission.

(a) Smoking may be permitted in a factory only upon written application by an employer, and after the issuance of a permit by the Industrial Commission. The permit shall state the conditions under which, and the place or places in such factory where smoking may be permitted, and shall be posted in a conspicuous place in the factory.

(b) Smoking, as provided in subdivision (a), may be permitted in cigar and cigarette factories for sampling, testing and experimental purposes, provided the factory building is fireproof or equipped with an approved automatic sprinkler system.

(c) In cigar and cigarette factories other than those specified in subdivision (b), smoking, as provided in subdivision (a), may be permitted for sam pling, testing and experimental purposes, in offices, sample rooms and separate rooms provided for that purpose and constructed as defined in subdivision (d).

(d) Offices, sample rooms and separate rooms in which smoking is permitted, except as otherwise prescribed in this rule, shall be enclosed by partitions of fireproof or fire-resisting material; provided, however, that smoking may be permitted in offices, sample rooms and separate rooms constructed of other than fireproof or fire-resisting material, if there shall be installed therein an automatic sprinkler system approved for this purpose. Manufacturing shall not be carried on in the offices, sample rooms or separate rooms provided for the purpose of smoking.

(e) In cigar and cigarette factories where less than six (6) persons are employed at manufacturing, smoking, as provided in subdivision (a), may be permitted for sampling, testing and experimental purposes, and the provisions of subdivisions (b), (c) and (d), as to structural conditions, shall not apply.

(f) Smoking, except as otherwise prescribed in this rule, may be permitted, as provided in subdivisions (a), where conditions are substantially as follows:

1. In buildings of fireproof construction where the contents are either non-inflammable or incombustible.
2. In buildings of mill construction where the contents are incombustible.
3. In factory buildings other than those specified in subdivisions 1 and 2, if in separate rooms set apart for the purpose and constructed as defined in subdivision (d).
4. In foundries and forge shops.
5. Smoking shall not be permitted in any tenant factory building which is not fireproof and equipped with an approved automatic sprinkler system, except as specified in subdivisions (b) and (c).

(g) In factory buildings or protected portions thereof in which smoking is permitted, there shall be provided fireproof receptacles, in which shall be deposited all waste paper and other inflammable waste materials.

(h) No permit shall be issued for smoking in any building, or the premises connected therewith, where explosives, as defined by subdivision 1 of Section 230 of Article 15-a of the Labor Law, are manufactured, used or stored.

(i) Where smoking is permitted, the use of celluloid eyeshades or cuff-protectors, or any devices of similar nature, is prohibited.

(j) Portions of any factory where smoking is prohibited, shall be posted as provided by subdivision 3 of Section 83-c of Article 6 of the Labor Law.

The Beneficial Influence of Tobacco

A strong argument for tobacco recently appeared in Lo Stomaco,, an Italian magazine devoted to food topics. The plea is chiefly remarkable as the work of a non-smoker and authority on diet. It is therefore free from bias, unless a refusal to be captured by the conscientious objector may be called bias. It is written in reply to a public demand, in answer to a general public discussion as to whether smoking is or is not injurious.

The writer has gathered the opinions of people who are well qualified to judge—medical and military authorities, publicists and members of the Government departments. Thus the whole question of the effect of smoking on health has been thoroughly threshed and ground in the mills of criticism. This is certainly a very practical and human study. It has a special value at this time.

The war is everywhere conspicuously and painfully associated with a raging propaganda for the cleansing of the soldier's life. Reforming idealists are fiercely intent on frightening not merely the soldier but the civilian at large into a discreet abstinence for reasons strictly hygienic. As regards smoking, the most sensible people believe that it is too common an event in our social life to call for any serious criticism.

The writer, Giuseppe Amalfi, sums up the case for and against tobacco. It is customary to speak ill of smoking. This is done now and has always been done. Yet most men and not a few women smoke. There has probably never been so universal and hospitable a means of pleasure. It reaches all the masses, the bulk of the nation, including every degree of education and wealth, ignorance and poverty. Some call it a vice, but it is only a peccadillo, or the most circumspect of vices. This must be true, for it reflects and reenforces the emotions and attitudes of the vast majority of every class in the country. It is certainly an important influence in the work of the pulpit, the rostrum and the stage.

There are not merely thousands of occasional habitues who go to smoking for inspiration, but millions of regular adherents. It is therefore absurd to say that smoking is harmful. An injurious effect of tobacco is not due to anything in the weed, but simply to the fact that a number of boys and ill conditioned men are in the habit of exceeding their rations.

The beneficial influence of tobacco is misunderstood by those who call it a drug. It is not a drug except in the sense that tea and cocoa are drugs. It is a medicinal substance in large doses, since it excites the juices of the stomach and promotes appetite and digestion. In some instances the effect of large doses is sedative and so smoking may diminish appetite. But in war even oversmoking has its uses, for it economizes food.

Experience of air raids and bombs shows that in war smoking has other uses It is soothing, and the effect of good tobacco, always excepting cases of idiosyncrasy pure and simple, is most stimulating to the nerves and the mind It is stated that the quality of the weed may be inferred from its power to quell agitation It is further said that the world-wide lessons of economy have had more effect in checking excessive smoking than all the lecturers, posters and propagandists in their crusade of the past fifty years.

It is therefore unjust to stigmatize smoking as a habit. With some people the word habit is a suggestion of wrong, a verdict an a sentence in one. Habits are usually th sign of peculiarities of disposition and are in volved in complexities of disposition. Bu smoking is open and cheerful.

Few men, if any, seek to hide the fact tha they smoke. In this respect smoking differ strongly from drinking, and is generally a antidote to vice. And of habits, which i the pleasanter and more beneficial, smokin or drinking? There is, apart from smoking hardly any way of appealing to millions o tastes and dispositions in all conditions o life. It follows that a habit which can b shared by every one in the possession of fiv senses is the most eligible for commo adoption.

BOSTON BREVITIES.

Mapacuba Cigar Co., gave to members of th firm and salesmen of Baker Bros. a compli mentary banquet at the Westminister Hotel in token of appreciation of the good work that the boys have done on the Prince Hamle line during the past six months. Prince Ham let cigars are now on sale in the fashionable hotels, clubs and retail stores.

A tobacco fund for the boys from the Blue Hill Avenue section of Ward 16, 17 and 18 has been assured through the organizing o an enthusiastic committee of the young men of that section. John T. Tully has been chosen chairman of the committee and Joseph M. Lally treasurer.

At the present time there are more than 200 boys from these wards in the various branches of the service. Arrangements have been made to tender them a reception at Intercolonial Hall, Roxbury, on Friday evening, Dec. 14. To this end steps are being taken to insure the presence of the boys from Camp Devens on that evening and a substantial sum will be raised for their comforts.

(Given to the American people by Collier's Weekly.)

Here on this tremendous errand far from the Christmas joys at home we shall be cheered to the task that is before us by your strength and by your patience. Your will and ours must join to fortify us in the sacrifices we must make and the blood we must give to the end that there may be restored peace on earth good will to men.

GIFTS TO FIGHTERS FREE OF DUTY.

WASHINGTON, December 17.—The British government has advised the State Department that gift parcels containing dutiable goods for American soldiers or sailors in Great Britain may be delivered duty free by parcel post if properly addressed and specifically described.

Parcels for sailors should be addressed to their ship, and those for soldiers to their regiments. When for Americans serving with British or Canadian armies or for American officers serving in British hospitals, parcels should be addressed in care of the "Committee for American Soldiers and Sailors of the American Red Cross, 154 New Bond street, London, England."

DIRE POVERTY DECREASES DESPITE THE WAR.

LONDON, December 17.—There is less pauperism in Great Britain now than at any time since 1877. According to official figures the number of paupers in England and Wales is 483,436, a reduction of 11,824 in three months, 33,440 in the year and 157,592 since the war began.

The figures for London, 71,560, also are fewer than since 1877, the decrease being 6,891.

BOSTON STRIKE ENDED

The strike settled, the cigar makers in Boston went back to work Wednesday. They compromised with the manufacturers by accepting an advance of $1 per thousand on perfectos, although they had asked $3.

Likewise they received an increase of $1 per thousand on Londres and panatelas. On nickel goods they were given an advance of 50 cents.

THE LATEST STEP TOWARD PROHIBITION

If the Amendment Is Ratified the Entire Country Will Go Dry—Congress Has Acted—The Result Depends on the States—And the Outlook Isn't Encouraging to the "Wets"

WASHINGTON, December 18.—The constitutional amendment for national prohibition was today finally submitted by Congress to the states, for ratification or rejection within seven years. The Senate completed Congressional action by accepting the resolution as passed yesterday by the House, 47 to 8, without a roll-call.

Senator Borah objected to accepting the House amendments, contending that Congress had no authority to specify the time in which the amendment was to be ratified, and that the Constitution gave no authority for providing that prohibition should become effective within one year after being accepted by the states.

"We have no such power as to say the amendment shall be ratified within seven years after being submitted to the states by Congress," said he. "It is either to be submitted to the states or not to be submitted at all. If it ever goes to the states they can ratify it whenever they desire."

The Senators who rose to indicate their disapproval were not noticed particularly as every one expected a roll call vote. None was demanded, and as a result tonight senators themselves are uncertain who voted against concurrence with the House amendments.

Only a serious food shortage or some other national calamity will force the dry element to demand special sessions of State Legislatures to ratify the amendments, Anti-Saloon League officers stated tonight. Only eleven States will have opportunity to vote for or against ratification during 1918, it was said. However, some ratifications may come from States which have no session slated for next year, as some Governors are understood to be determined to call the special sessions for that purpose alone.

Edwin C. Dinwiddie, chief legislative agent of the Anti-Saloon League, tonight estimated three years as the time required for ratification. "We have talked it over informally," he said, "and I believe that is a fair estimate. It may come sooner if we have to send very many more men to Europe and there is a growing demand to cut down the two and a quarter billion of dollars spent for liquor every year. A serious shortage of food also might hurry it through a popular demand to utilize the products used in manufacturing alcoholic stimulants for the manufacture of food."

Indicating the Line-Up.

In New York, important opponents of prohibition are quoted as follows:

HUGH F. FOX, secretary of the United States Brewers' Association, says: "Congress has lost the opportunity for constructive temperance reform by shifting the question to the States. Every Congressman knows that National Prohibition would not work, and most of them hope in their hearts that the States will refuse to ratify it. The sentiment of the people is unmistakably in favor of encouraging mild alcoholic beverages and discouraging the unrestricted sale of spirits."

WILLIAM H. HIRST, attorney for the New York State Brewers' Association and counsel for the Society of Restaurateurs of New York, declares that "National Prohibition by amendment of the Federal Constitution proposes to turn that sacred and august 'bill of rights' from an instrument setting forth general principles for the protection of the rights, liberty and pursuit of happiness of the people into one of legislative enactment concerning a mere detail of government. The ratification of the proposed amendment would annihilate our entire system of Government."

HENRY J. KALTENBACH, president of the New York State Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association, avers that "The action of the House is a triumph for the forces of intolerance and organized fanaticism. For at least fifty years the advocates of prohibitory laws have conducted an anti-liquor campaign consisting chiefly of falsified statistics, baseless assertions concerning alleged injurious effects of alcoholic beverages, confusing temperance and prohibition."

New York's Senate and Assembly are likely to present a strong combination against the ratification of the national prohibition amendment to the Constitution. While the action of the Congress releases Gov. Whitman from his pledge not to recommend any prohibition legislation in this State until the Washington issue had been settled, it does not in the least change the complexion of the Tammany-Barnes combination that will line up against ratification.

Kentucky will be the first State in the Union to vote on the new national prohibition measure. The General Assembly meets the first Monday in January and the bill is certain to be passed, submitting the question of statewide prohibition to the people. Practically every man who was elected to the legislature from rural districts received his office because he promised to vote for such an amendment to the State Constitution.

There is a big working majority for prohibition in the two houses. One hundred and eleven counties in Kentucky are already dry under the county unit law, which has been in force several years, and there seems to be no question about Kentucky voting dry.

Approval of Congress of the dry amendment to the Federal Constitution awakened political parties and factions in Illinois to the fact that they must meet the issue squarely. The trend all over Illinois is strongly against the saloon.

Chicago's dry election in the spring will attract national attention. "As Chicago goes so will go the nation," is the warning sent to liquor men all over the United States. The moral effect of the second city in the country going dry would be fatal in many States, wet campaign managers admit. For this reason one leader said, the wets "will turn heaven and earth" to keep Chicago wet.

The crucial point in the whole fight in Illinois will be the control of the fifty-first General Assembly, the members of which will be elected in November, 1918. The party candidates will be nominated at the primaries in September, 1918.

A majority of Missourians are opposed to prohibition, as they have twice demonstrated by defeating initiative amendments aimed at creating a dry State. The last vote was at the time of the last presidential election, and the State is expected to again turn down a dry amendment proposed through an initiative petition to be voted on in November, 1918.

A vast majority of the territory in the State is dry, but not of the voting population.

Governor Gardner of Missouri is a wet advocate. At the time of his election he made the statement that he would oppose any prohibition amendment passed by the State Legislature, because it would throw out of work thousands of brewery employees in the eastern part of the Commonwealth and would seriously affect the value of millions of dollars invested in brewing properties in the State.

Governor Cox of Ohio says that as the present Legislature was not elected on the prohibition issue the question of ratification rests on the attitude of the electors in choosing members of the Assembly in 1918. The Legislature is expected to follow the result at the polls after the people vote on Statewide prohibition. It is the claim of Ohio liberals that by virtue of the initiative and referendum they have the right to vote by a direct referendum on the Federal amendment. Based on last November's vote on prohibition the chance of the amendment being ratified is somewhat better than even.

Neither Governor Edge nor any other State official is willing to predict what action the New Jersey Legislature will take regarding the prohibition amendment. The session begins next month. Both parties already are pledged to more county home rule and the passage of a local option law has been predicted. This may lead eventually to the adoption of the amendment.

Advocates of prohibition in Pennsylvania will bend their efforts during the next ten months to the nomination and election of State legislators favorible to the passage of the dry amendment. The Legislature which will be elected next fall will be organized in January, 1919.

Governor Brumbaugh is opposed to calling a special session. He says it is a matter for the newspapers and prohibition propagandists to agitate if the public mind is in a hurry for the passage of the amendment in this State.

The battle will be a struggle between the drys and the Republican organization, which has derived much comfort and support from the liquor interests. The brewers, representing many millions of dollars capital, will fight with their backs to the wall. Passage of the amendment by the necessary two-thirds vote is considered doubtful.

It is probable that Texas will be one of the first of the States to ratify the prohibition amendment. Governor Hobby is considering convening the Legislature in special session the latter part of next month to act upon other specific matters and the amendment will then come up for vote. It is assured in advance that the amendment will meet approval by a good majority in both branches. More than two-thirds of the members of the House are pronounced advocates of nationwide prohibition and only one vote is lacking to make the Senate two-thirds in its majority in favor of the amendment.

The vote in Congress on the prohibition amendment was watched with interest in Milwaukee on account of the immense brewing industries and allied trades. Governor Philipp of Wisconsin would make no statement further than to say the matter would have to be decided by the people, probably at the election next fall. He said he would not include it in his call for the extra session, which is to be held in January for the purpose of choosing a Senator to succeed Senator Husting. The State now has local option for townships and cities, but not for counties, and more than half the territory in the State is dry. As to what will happen in the fall is a question. The statement of Assemblyman Frank B. Metcalf, secretary of the Trades Unions Liberty League, throws some light on the subject. He said: "This means that the labor unions will have to get into politics and fight for the next Legislature. It will cost us a good deal and we had much rather keep out, but the labor unions are lined up against prohibition the country over."

Straight prohibition was defeated in Californit by 100,000 votes in 1916. A bill to close saloons and prohibit the sale of whiskey and other hard liquors but to exempt light wines and beer will be voted on by the Legislature next year. It is believed that the Congressional amendment to the Constitution is certain to be defeated unless present sentiment changes.

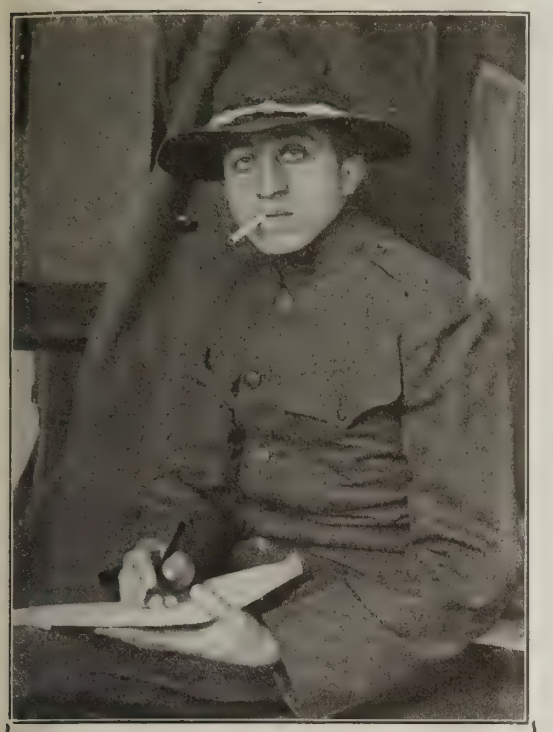
Indications in Delaware are that the prohibition amendment will be ratified by a vote greatly in excess of the required two-thirds. This forecast is also based on the vote on liquor legislation in January, 1917.

The prohibition movement in Minnesota has been growing steadily and many counties have voted out the saloons. The new Legislature will begin its session in January, 1919, and with a good representation of men from dry communities and men pledged to the support of dry legislation, the ratification of the national prohibition amendment by the lawmakers seems assured. This action would be especially sure if the State prohibition amendment is accepted by the voters next fall.

Massachusetts has not passed on the liquor question by popular vote or referendum for nearly forty-five years. In the early seventies a protest against the Prohibition Law resulted in the election of William Claflin as governor and the enactment of legislation which ended Prohibition liquor traffic control, and local option has been settled each time by legislation.

Connecticut is not likely to ratify the Prohibition amendment.

Maryland may be classed as uncertain, but advices from Baltimore are to the effect that prohibition is unlikely to be endorsed.



The liquor question has never come before the people of Nevada except by petition. In 1916 a petition was signed by two-thirds of the voters submitting the question to the Legislature of 1917, but by practically a unanimous vote of that body it will be submitted to the people by referendum at the general election in 1918.

No vote on Statewide Prohibition ever has been taken in Wyoming. The last Legislature unanimously submitted a bone-dry constitutional amendment, which is to be voted on in November, 1918. If adopted, it will be effective January 1, 1920. With 35 per cent of the voters women, the adoption is regarded as a foregone conclusion.

Rhode Island political circles at present are absolutely indifferent on the subject of national prohibition; that is, insofar as any concerted or organized movement regarding it is in evidence.

ANTUNG CONSUMES SOME CIGARETTES.

The Antung consular district comprises the southeastern section of Manchuria and is about twice as large as Vermont. It is mountainous throughout; its sparse population is almost entirely rural; and, except a 60-mile section of the South Manchuria Railway that traverses it in the south, and the Yalu River, its eastern boundary, the only means of communication with interior points is by crude native carts and pack animals. The city of Antung, the political and commercial center of the district, has a mixed Chinese and Japanese population of less than 50,000. It is located on the west bank of the Yalu River, 30 miles from its mouth, at the head of navigation for ocean steamers, and it is the point through which all rail-borne goods pass between China (Manchuria) and Japan through Chosen (Korea.) John K. Davis, American consul at Antung, reports that "the imports of foreign cigarettes in 1916 were 144,153,000, a gain of more than 260 per cent over 1915, occurring almost entirely in Japanese and Korean cigarettes and occasioned by the lower duty and freight rates.

FREDERICK RATH

In offering his life to defend his country Rath did about all a man may be expected to do. But he wasn't quite satisfied. Desirous of doing something for his comrades, and being of a musical turn of mind, he wrote a song called "When the Moon Is Shining Somewhere in France." From the outset it was a big favorite with the soldiers at Camp Upton. It is not unusual to hear a score of soldiers singing the chorus. Rath had given entertainment, but wanted to do more. So he arranged with his publisher to donate 25 per cent. of his royalties to "Our Boys in France Tobacco Fund." The song is featured now by well-known vaudeville singers. Below is the chorus:

"When the moon is shining somewhere in France,
I'll send a wireless to you.
I will say I'm O. K.
And I'm thinking of you, too.
Then when the moon goes sailing over the sea,
It will carry my message through;
And every time you see the man in the moon,
He'll bring my love and kisses back to you."

EXPERIMENTS IN TAMPA

With a Fluid Prepared by P. G. Fernandez—To Eliminate Tobacco Beetles—Success Sure, According to the Inventor.

After five years of experimenting, the elimination of the tobacco beetle from the worries of the cigar manufacturer and the smoking public is a matter of only a short time, according to P. G. Fernandez, who has a formula for a liquid which, so he claims, sterilizes the tobacco and makes the leaf immune against further attack without affecting the taste, aroma, smoking qualities or in any way harming the "weed."

The formula has attracted considerable attention, so much in fact that the government has sent three men to Tampa and experiments under the supervision of department of agriculture agents have been held in local cigar factories for the past two months.

These men, who have completed their labors in Tampa, have returned to Washington to complete their tests and make their reports to the department. "None of them will discuss the outlook, says the Tampa Tribune, "but the fact that they have remained throughout the period planned for the experiments indicates that the tests have been far from a failure."

According to Fernandez, the cost of freeing the cigars from the menace of the beetle will be less than twenty cents per thousand, where with any of the operations in vogue now, the cost runs from forty cents up, and some of them require a considerable outlay of capital, while his preparation can be bought as needed and there is no cost except for the fluid.

The cost of applying is nil, there being no added labor. A few drops of the fluid—from 8 per cent of the water volume up—added to the water with which the leaf is wet prior to being made into cigars, does the work, he claims. The preparation kills any live bettles, destroys the eggs and makes it immune against further attack, according to Fernandez.

Fernandez has registered a trade mark, four tobacco leaves with the word "notabug" across the front one, and declares that he is planning to put it on the market.

Fernandez says the Erlich Manufacturing Co. and the Tampa-Cuba Cigar Co. have been using the formula for several months and with success, while the experiments of the department of agriculture agents have been conducted in the Lozano factory and other places in Tampa, for two months, after eighteen months of investigation in Washington.

TESTING KANSAS LAW

Proceedings in the Case of the Kansas City Post, Which Published Cigarette Advertisements—Judge Pollock's Ruling.

Cigarette advertisements may continue to come into Kansas through newspaper and magazine advertising mediums, until a final decision is made by the United States District Court in the suit pending between the Kansas City Post and S. M. Brewster, Kansas Attorney General. Following the passing of a law by the last session of the Kansas Legislature, which prohibited any cigarette advertisements from being distributed in the State, the Kansas City Post secured a temporary order against enforcing the law while the case, testing the strength of the law, was being tried. Attorney General Brewster filed a petition to vacate and end the suit for want of equity October 25. Judge J. C. Pollock overruled the motion Saturday.

In overruling the motion, Judge Pollock justified his opinion on the ground that the Kansas City Post was engaged in legitimate interstate commerce. Cigarette advertisements are lawful in Missouri, where the paper is published, and are not circulated in Kansas with malicious intent, he ruled. Judge Pollock said the Kansas Legislature did not have power or authority to regulate papers printed in other states, but had complete power to prohibit such advertisements in Kansas papers.—Topeka Capital.

WILLIAM REILLY

Whose Sobriquet Is "Rag Time."

When men were urgently required, William Reilly, a seaman, detached from the battleship Michigan, did excellent work securing recruits for the navy. With permission from the Navy Department he appeared in uniform in leading vaudeville houses singing patriotic songs and urging young men to enlist. Reilly is credited with having brought more men into the service than any other agent. During his stay at the Palace Theatre in New York, it is said that he averaged forty recruits, daily.

Being "a born entertainer," he is ready to oblige and when he is aboard ship his shipmates never tire of hearing Reilly sing. During the few months that Reilly has been before the public he has become as well known as many vaudeville stars of long standing.

Although his enlistment will expire in the near future Reilly has no idea of quitting the service, he intends to re-enlist immediately. It could never be said that a sailor whose sobriquet is "Rag Time Reilly" is afraid to fight.

B. Wasserman Co. could have sold 250,000 more Coronas Perfectos had it been possible to obtain them. The 100,000 that Mr. Wasserman had in stock sold like Liberty Bonds. Unlike some importers, Mr. Wasserman ordered more goods for holiday trade this year than ever before, and still he has not half enough. Two automobiles and two wagons are inadequate to deliver all the orders on time. To add to his worries Mr. Wasserman has three of his men on the sick list.

Government Control of Railways

Suggestions of governmental control of the railways of the United States during the war, now being made by officials at Washington, lend interest to a compilation by The National City Bank of New York showing government ownership of the railways throughout the world. It shows that about one-third of the railways of the world are owned or controlled by the governments of the respective countries or states in which they operate, and that in Europe, Asia, Africa and the British Colonies more than one-half of the lines are government owned or controlled. In some cases, notably Germany and Australia, the railways are chiefly the property of the states or sub-divisions forming the general government, in others they are the direct property of the government. In Germany over 90 per cent. of the railways are classed as government or state railways; Austria-Hungary, 82 per cent.; Russia, 77 per cent.; Italy, 73 per cent.; Switzerland, 99 per cent.; the Scandinavian states, 44 per cent., and France at present, 17 per cent., while other parts of her system have been built in part or whole by the government and are operated by railway companies, and will later revert to the government. Of Europe, as a whole, 54 per cent. of the railway lines are classed as state or governmental railways; Asia, 70 per cent.; Africa, 65 per cent.; South America, 31 per cent., and North America but 5 per cent. In Australia 99 per cent. belong to the colonies, which form the Commonwealth of Australia; in New Zealand 99 per cent. are governmental; India, 80 per cent., and the British colonies as a whole, 55 per cent., while those of Great Britain none is owned by the government, though the entire system is now temporarily controlled by the government for war purposes. In Canada about 5 per cent. of the railways are government owned. In China portions of the railways are being constructed under agreements which will finally make them government property, and in Japan 79 per cent. of the railways are now classed as government lines. The principal countries which do not own or at least control any part of their lines are United States, Great Britain, Spain and Turkey, though in certain of the South American countries, notably Argentina, the share of the lines owned or controlled by the government is comparatively small. The cost of the railways of the world, including in this term first construction and equipment, is estimated at about 60 billion dollars, of which those of Europe are about 27 billion; North America, 21 billion; South America, 3½ billion; Asia, 4½ billion; Africa, 2 billion, and Oceania, 1½ billion.

The table which follows shows the total number of miles of railway in each of the principal countries of the world, at the latest date for which figures are available, and the number of miles owned or controlled by the government or the states forming the government; also approximate totals for the entire world and the various grand divisions. The figures show miles of road and do not include additional mileage in the form of second, third or fourth main tracks or yard tracks and sidings.

U. S. TOBACCO ACREAGE AND YIELD COMPARED

WASHINGTON, December 17 — The total acreage in tobacco, for the entire tobacco producing area of the United States, as of December 1, was 1,446,000 acres. The production per acre was 827.1 pounds and the total amount in sight 1,196,451,000 pounds. At a farm value of 24.9c. per pound, the total value was $297,442,000.

The above figures are not only well above those of 1916, but they also are far in advance of the average figures for the five year period from 1911 to 1915, inclusive. The total area under cultivation in tobacco as reported on Nov. 1, 1916, was 1,413,400 acres, and for the 5-year period, an average of only 1,209,600 acres. The production per acre in 1916 averaged 816 pounds and, for the 5-year period only 813.3 pounds. The total production as of December 1, 1916 was estimated at 1,153,278,000 and for the 5 years the average annual production was 983,723,000 pounds. The average price on the farm for all grades in 1916 was 14.7c., and for the 5 years, an average of only 10.4c. The total value of the tobacco crop at the farms in 1916 was $169,672,000,000, or more than one million dollars less than on the corresponding date this year. While the average value at the farm for the 5-year period was only $101,889,000.

The Health of Workers in Cigar Factories

Exhaustive Study Made in Philadelphia by Dr. T. Grier Miller and Dr. Henry F. Smyth—Preliminary Report Favorable to the Tobacco Industry—Findings Presented to the State Industrial Board for Its Guidance.

PHILADELPHIA, December 15.—A thorough and exhaustive study of the tobacco industry in this city is being made by the clinic for the study of occupational diseases of the University of Pennsylvania hospital, co-operating with the Division of Hygiene and Engineering of the State Department of Labor and Industry. This clinic was established a little more than a year ago, but has just made public, through the State Department of Labor and Industry, the result of its first special investigation.

Dr. T. Grier Miller, chief of the clinic, assisted by social workers and other physicians, recently completed a study of tobacco workers and reported his findings to the State Industrial Board for its guidance in the matter of rulings to be made by the board in connection with the industry. As a result of this study, on which a preliminary report has been made, Dr. Miller and Dr. Henry F. Smyth, of the clinic, have undertaken as the next step a study of the hygiene of the factories.

In general the preliminary report by Dr. Miller is highly favorable to the tobacco industry as a healthful occupation. The study included all workers from seven factories, whose total number of employes is about 2,500. Of these, 302 were women and 98 men. Of the men, 57 were cigar makers, 18 packers, 14 dryers, and 9 casers; of the women, 157 were cigar makers, 73 packers, 51 strippers and 21 banders. The male packers had been in the industry for an average of 14.6 years and in the immediate factory for 5.2 years, while the averages for all the males were 14.81 and 5.3 years.

"These figures," says Dr. Miller, "for the length of time in the immediate factory are interesting in view of the fact that many, even some of the employers we encountered, claim that these workers are not steady."

The report goes into minute detail as to the physical characteristics of the workers and the character of diseases found. Dr. Miller takes issue with previous records on this point, finding the tobacco workers more healthful than he had been led to believe before making his study. He calls special attention to the frequency of conjunctival congestion, wearing of the teeth and pharyngeal congestion. The first of these he finds distinctly abnormal and unquestionably due, in some measure at least, to the dust and fumes. But he holds that this does not provide the entire explanation and therefore is pursuing this study. Also, 70 per cent of the packers and banders show this congestion of the conjunctives and the throat, while only 50 per cent of the cigar makers do, and the cigar makers, Dr. Miller says, work in a "much more dusty and ammoniacal atmosphere." He finds wearing of the teeth "a pathological finding definitely incident to the industry as we have found it." Dr. Miller believes this is due to the action of the "gritty material of the tobacco, as well as the plant itself, getting into the mouth and acting like emery dust in slowly grinding down the dental surfaces."

Upon the highly important question of the lungs of tobacco workers Dr. Miller is extremely cautious, but his report shows a fairly healthful condition among the workers. That portion of it follows:

"My figures for slight apical infiltration, 13.7 per cent, should not be taken as synonymous with tuberculosis. Some of these cases may be tuberculosis, but I have not been able to prove any one of them to be. I have included five of them in my table of diagnoses as suspicious. None of these five had any sputum for examination and in no case could I get a chest X-ray, but their symptoms were quite in keeping with very early pulmonary tuberculosis. The others in this group had only vague physical signs without any other thing to suggest active trouble of any kind. Some may have old tubercular lesions of small extent and now definitely walled off and of no significance, while in other instances the infiltration may be only an exaggerated normal condition, or it is still possible that it may be due to some other cause. In six instances the apical signs were so definite as to justify us in concluding that they indicated old tubercular lesions which were at the time of examination entirely quiescent. The packers and banders showed their proportionate number of these pulmonary cases, 14.3 per cent against 15.2 per cent."

In conclusion the report says:

"This study of 400 tobacco workers has shown, then, no physical effects, aside possibly from two cases of eczema and three of brachial neuritis and some influence in the production of conjunctival and pharyngeal congestion, which are not common to this number of women generally or are explicable on the basis of faulty hygiene of the factories, correctable working habits, or inefficient personal hygiene.

"In view of these general conclusions it seemed desirable to study further these additional factors and Dr. Henry F. Smyth, now of our clinic, and I have taken up the study of the hygiene of the factories. Dust determinations have been made by means of a dust collecting apparatus recently perfected by the New York State Ventilation Commission. The dust from 400 cubic feet of air is collected at the respiration level and the number of particles estimated per cubic foot. The banding room had the lowest number of particles and the packing room was next in order, with the exception of the stripping room.

"We have also made a few determinations of the ammonia content of some of the rooms, and have found the banding room lowest and the packing room in an intermediate position. Further determinations may alter there positions. We have found as yet no temperature below 75 F. and the relative moisture has ranged between 45 and 50 per cent. The tobacco men are extremely anxious to keep the air moist and have installed in many rooms humidors. In spite of this we have found the rooms too dry, and curiously enough they could increase their relative humidity by reducing the temperature and at the same time make their rooms much more desirable to the occupants from both points of view. Also there is too much stagnation of air. Some employes complain of the humidors, but in view of our low readings for relative moisture, we are inclined to think that it is the stagnation of the air rather than the excessive moisture that is giving rise to these complaints.

"These facts regarding the hygiene of the factories are in keeping with our explanation of some of the diseased conditions found. I think that if we could study the personal hygiene of the workers in as thorough a way (and we have some facts of this nature which we are not attempting to present here) we would find there a second important factor in the production of disease. Finally, the habit of the cigar makers in biting out the ends of the cigars is not only objectionable on account of the possibility of disease transmission but also because it is uncleanly and produces an abnormal condition in the workers themselves (dental wearing). With these three factors eliminated we believe the cigar industry to be devoid of any serious detrimental influences upon the health of the workers, and we believe this to be especially true in the banding and packing departments. The banders have the distinct advantage of working in the cleanest rooms. The packers are favored by shorter hours, their good wages, and to some extent by their standing position. Both groups work with made cigars and so have no opportunity of getting the tobacco into the mouth and stomach.

"If these statements will hold for workers over 16 years of age we see no reason why they should not for those under 16 as well, and we think that your decision to allow or not to allow the latter to work in the cigar industry should depend upon these considerations which determine for you whether or not children should take up any occupation before that age."

THE FAME OF "CURLY JIM"

A Good Old Indian Who Ever Was the White Man's Friend—To Be Perpetuated by a Spokane Cigar.

A halo of smoke in the years to come will float from the city of Spokane as a tribute to the famous old Indian, "Curly Jim," known among pioneers as "the white man's friend."

"Curly Jim" is the official title of Spokane's municipal cigar to be turned out jointly by local manufacturers under the direction of the Home Industry Bureau of the Spokane Ad Club.

The name was selected from a list of over 700 submitted. It was sent in by several different people and the distribution of the prize money may be made in Red Cross memberships, according to the plan now under consideration by the executive committee of the bureau.—Spokane Chronicle.

THE SENATE CONFIRMS SNOW.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—The Senate has confirmed the nomination of Chauncey D. Snow, as First Assistant Chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce.

Mr. Snow, a Harvard graduate, a one time newspaper man, and connected with the bureau for the past seven years, is known as an exceptionally brilliant foreign tariff expert. He first became connected with the bureau as an assistant.

A Tune That Led to Fortune

Not always in plain speech is expressed an invitation to become rich. "The message brings advantage to him who understands," says a Spanish proverb. "However offered, profit is for those who know how to make it."

He was a drifter—a farm hand—a fellow who worked when he "felt like it." Having no great vices, nor much ambition, he plodded from place to place, earned a few dollars and then "took life easy" while his money lasted. When disposed to leisure his favorite loafing place was a small porch in front of an unpretentious cigar store.

His custom was to buy five nickel cigars at a time. Then, seated on a bench outside the store, he would smoke and strum for hours on an old guitar. Apparently his repertoire consisted of two pieces. Nor did much practice enable him to play well.

Some folks called him "lazy and shiftless." Others, more charitable, may have regarded him as a dreamer. Yet, seemingly he was untroubled by what people thought. He came from Missouri. But he didn't "have to be shown." Contentedly, he took things as they were. Five cheap cigars and an opportunity to torment the guitar supplied his requirements for a pleasant afternoon.

Satisfied, he smoked. Merely as a pastime, persistently he strummed one strain on the guitar.

Long reiteration of the suggestion of a tune drew unfavorable comments from people who passed. The music was so monotonous that no one in the vicinity cared to listen.

Until Logan chanced to enter the store, no particular attention was paid to the guitar player on the porch.

Who Logan is now, every American music publisher knows. But, then, Frederick Knight Logan lived in Oskaloosa, Iowa. A music teacher, a man of ability, ambitious to be a composer; up to that time he had achieved scant success.

Logan had been in a hurry. Coming into the store, he didn't stop to bestow a glance on the guitar player infesting the porch.

While Logan made his purchases and waited to receive his change, the playing continued outside. Annoyance was metamorphosed into interest. The trained ear of the music teacher detected beauty in the persistent repetition of one strain. But the music was so weird and unfamiliar Logan could not determine what tune the guitar player was attempting. Never before had the music teacher heard such a queer sequence of notes. As he listened intently, trying to associate the piece with something that he knew, he began to imagine the haunting quality that might be given to the music, if the notes were rearranged.

"Who taught you to play that piece?" Logan asked the guitarist, a few minutes later.

"Nobody at all. No one ever teached me to play," the farm hand answered good humoredly, for Logan had prefaced the questioning by the proffer of a ten-cent cigar.

"When did you first hear it?"

"Blamed if I know. So long ago, I don't remember. Reckon I heard it first when I was a kid, down at Cape Girardeau. Anyway, it's about the only piece I can manage on a guitar. That's why I keep playin' it."

Frederick Knight Logan who has been enriched by the famous Missouri Waltz

Suddenly reminded of his need for haste, Logan didn't remain to continue the conversation. As he hurried home, the melody kept running through his brain. All day, and late that night, the tune haunted him.

"If it appeals to me that way, it should be equally attractive to the average lover of music," he mused.

Logan sat down to the piano that afternoon and began to develop the melody. In two days he had turned it into a waltz. His mother thought it was the greatest waltz she had ever heard, and when she asked him what he intended to do with it, he said he would publish it himself.

"But you will be wasting money doing that out here," she said. "Why not send it to one of the big publishers in New York?"

"I don't want anything to do with them," he answered. "If it is half as good as I think it is, it will become popular no matter where it is published."

Logan gave the copy to a local printer and had orchestrations printed, some of which he sent to several orchestra leaders and moving picture pianists. For two months he hoped and waited.

Unknown to him, things were happening in Chicago. Fred Forster, the big music publisher, was receiving calls for the "Missouri Waltz." Orders for ten, twenty and fifty copies were received. Forster was guessing. In vain he tried to obtain the name and address of the publisher.

Experience told him that an instrumental hit was "creeping out." Sooner or later some big publisher would be associated with the winner. It would pay to get publication rights for the "Missouri Waltz." Forster conferred with his manager, A. Olman, the composer of "Oh, Johnny" and "Faugh-a-Ballagh," two songs that now are notably popular.

"See here! I've been getting a lot of orders for an instrumental number called 'The Missouri Waltz,' but I can't fill them because I don't know who publishes it. Either some small publisher or the author is putting it out. Get busy and see if you can locate it."

Olman spent two weeks sleuthing for the author and publisher. He was about to give it up as a bad job when he ran into a leader with an orchestration of "Missouri Waltz." Asked where he obtained the copy the leader told Olman that the "Missouri Waltz" was composed and published by Fred Logan in Oskaloosa, Iowa. The manager wired to his employer, telling of the discovery and asking for instructions. The reply read:

"The thing looks like a sure hit. Buy it for anything under five thousand dollars."

Olman went to Oskaloosa, but was unable to purchase the waltz. A telegram to Chicago caused the publisher to take the first train to Iowa. And before Forster left Oskaloosa he secured the publishing rights, paying an advance of $1,000 and agreeing to pay six cents royalty on every copy that he should sell.

Business associates, hearing the waltz and learning what Forster had done, told him he was crazy, as the waltz was the most idiotic piece of music they had ever heard.

"I'm glad you think so," Forster laughed. "But listen to what I have to say. I'm going to make that a high-priced number to sell for thirty cents a copy, and, what is more, I'm going to sell a million copies of it."

Forster made good. In less than a year he offered Logan $20,000 for his rights in the waltz, but Logan refused to sell. To date Logan has received nearly $50,000 in royalties from that vagrant tune. Now he is taking some of the money to play Santa Claus to a number of poor kiddies in New York. He is making he journey from Oskaloosa to New York City, ınd on Christmas Day will give a dinner at he Majestic Hotel to a crowd of poor children. There he will distribute shoes, clothing and baskets filled with food.

The success of "Missouri Waltz" seems to ndicate that one does not have to be a com-ɔoser in order to grow rich and famous. Good nelodies are scarce, and any time one can com-ɔose one or find it, be he an amateur or a pro-fessional, he can cease worrying about the high ɔost of living and play Santa Claus to others ess fortunate.

A NEW ORLEANS DEAL

W. R. Irby Branch of Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. Acquires Desirable Real Estate—About $100,000 Paid.

One of the largest single real estate deals in New Orleans for months was announced Saturday relative to the transfer of 45,000 square feet of ground space of the Haubtman & Loeb Co., Ltd., Magazine and Julia streets, to the W. R. Irby branch of Liggett & Meyers Tobacco Co., for approximately $100,000. The transaction was made through Latter & Blum, Inc.

The tobacco company will use the new property—occupied by Haubtman & Loeb as a machinery depot for boilers, pumps, engines and engine supplies—for a warehouse. It has a two-story building, the total floor space of which is 90,000 square feet. The W. R. Irby branch expects to expend from $30,000 to $40,000 in improvements and alterations. Favrot & Livaudais, architects, have the work in hand.

Expansion of business and consequent need for more room by the tobacco company caused the deal, according to W. R. Irby, president of the Canal Bank and Trust Company and president of the tobacco company branch. The new property and the present factory at Magazine and Julia streets will give the Irby branch almost the entire block bounded by Magazine, Julia, Camp and Girod streets.

PATRIOTISM IS DEMANDED

"Patriotism of a practical as well as a sacrificial kind is demanded from every household and from every business centre; but, above all, no spirit of depression, no spirit of despair, can for one moment detract, in a single degree, from a firm and grim determination to fight this war through to a successful finish. So long as Prussianism endures Americans all must do their utmost."—From the speech of Chairman William C. Breed at the Luncheon Meeting of the Merchants' Association of New York, at the Hotel Astor, December 13.

The Secret of the Turkey

Inducing cigar manufacturers to restrain any desire to be too liberal, the present price of tobacco may excuse Sol. Furgatch from giving a 22 pound turkey to every cigar maker employed in his factories at Christmas time, this year. Yet the great popularity of Vega del Rey cigars, which are smoked appreciatively in the picture, makes it possible for a fine turkey to grace the table of at least one cigar maker who acknowledges allegiance to Furgatch. The lucky cigar maker assured of a turkey dinner, when others may have to Hooverize, is Vincente Salana, a Spaniard. He is shown exchanging congratulations with Geronimo Plaza, an erstwhile employe of S. H. Furgatch & Co. Being a Cuban and a compatriot of Antonio Maceo, it happens that Geronimo Plaza is willing to fight to make the world safe for democracy. As a volunteer, he enlisted in the U. S. army. In the way of becoming a good soldier, Plaza wouldn't hesitate to attack Turkey with knife and fork, though the United States as yet has not declared war on the Kaiser's ally, the Sultan. How Salana obtained the noble bird is a secret, not too closely guarded, in the cigar factory of S. H. Furgatch & Co.

NEW ENGLAND'S OLDEST TOBACCO DEALER.

December 10 marked the passing of New England's oldest cigarmaker, salesman, retailer and jobber, when death took Joseph Robinson of Malden, Mass. He was eighty-three years old and spent seventy years in the tobacco business, starting with Chester H. Carruth at 46 Hanover street, Boston, then going with the old jobbing firm of James Quinn, at 294 Federal street, from thence to Joseph P. Manning Co., resigning from this firm he went in business with his son in Malden, Mass., and continued up to the day of his death. It was his custom to come to Boston every Wednesday, where he could be found at Joseph P. Manning Co. at 8 sharp. We was a grand old man, known and loved by thousands, who mourn his death.

LOGAN MADE MANAGER

Of the Cigar Department of the Behrens Drug Co. of Dallas—A Company Doing a Great Business

The Behrens Drug Co., of Waco, Texas, one of the largest wholesale drug concerns in the southeast, announces that on January 1 J. B. Logan will succeed W. W. Haynie as manager of the cigar department.

The Behrens Drug Co. entered the cigar field last April, and since then has built up a wonderful cigar business through Central Texas. It is said that the company is the largest handler of cigars in central Texas.

The Behrens Drug Co. is the largest handler of Porto Rican cigars in the southwest, excepting only the distributors of Portina and El Toro brands of the Porto Rican American Tobacco Co.

Mr. Logan is one of the favorite sons of Texas in the cigar business, ranking as an old timer, and having formerly represented A. Santaella & Co. in the southwest. Recently he represented the Beach Cigar Co. of Dallas, which position he gave up to assume his new duties.

He will make many changes in the present management of the cigar department of the Behrens Drug Co., which will be announced later.

W. W. Haynie, an energetic young man, since taking charge of the cigar department last April has made plenty of friends, and the large cigar trade done by the company is to a great extent the result of his efforts.

Bert Howe, Mr. Haynie's first assistant, has tendered his resignation to take effect immediately. For some time to come Mr. Haynie will remain with the Behrens Drug Co. in a general capacity.

The Behrens Drug Company concentrates on the products of the following manufacturers:

Louis Heitman & Co., Dayton, O.; Merchants Cigar Co., York, Pa.; Geo. Kohler & Co., Yoe, Pa.; Antonio Roig & Langsdorf, Phil., Pa.; Horace R. Kelly & Co., New York City; P. Lorillard & Co., New York City; Cien Porciento Co., New York City.

WORLD'S GREATEST WRESTLER IS DEAD.

Frank Gotch, retired world's champion heavyweight wrestler, who died Sunday at his home in Humboldt, Iowa, will be remembered by many as America's greatest wrestler. From the time that he won his title from Tom Jenkins in 1904 until his death Gotch never encountered defeat.

In his wrestling career Gotch faced over 150 opponents in scheduled matches and more than 200 more in exhibitions.

His two most noteworthy feats were his victory over Stanislaus Zbyszko in 1910 and over George Hackenschmidt in 1911. He astounded the wrestling world by pinning the elder Zbyszko's shoulders to the mat in six and one-quarter seconds. On September 4, 1911, he won two straight falls from the mighty Hackenschmidt, who was regarded at that time as invincible.

Gotch was born in Humboldt, Iowa, on April 27, 1878. He was only thirty-nine at the time of his death. He is reputed to have won a fortune of over $500,000 on the mat.

A MILLIONAIRE WHO DOESN'T CARE TO MAKE MORE MONEY

An Interview with Julius Rosenwald, of the Great Mail Order House

By JAMES B. MORROW, in The Nation's Business

A member of the Advisory Commission of the great Council of National Defense, the choice of President Wilson himself, Julius Rosenwald is bargaining for the leather, cloth and duck—many millions of pounds and many millions of yards—required by the American armies at home and in France. His services, of course, are free to the government. Specifically, such is his duty. In general, he shares the work of the war council as a body.

Mr. Rosenwald has none of the mannerisms supposed to be acquired with the amassing of large property. He is middling as to height and weight. His friendly eyes are a blending of brown and gray and his black mustache, shot with white, is clipped close to his lip.

Boast he has not, neither in his dress or conduct. I, me and myself are not his favorite pronouns. On his fiftieth birthday, which was five years ago, he gave away $687,000. Men who know his gifts to philanthropic and educational projects say that his annual contributions since then have totalled even a larger sum.

"It is a crime," he told the interviewer, "to pile up money after one has accumulated all that he needs for himself and his family. There is a stage where acquisition becomes a vice. Once that is reached, a man cannot part with any of his possessions, nor can he will it away. He keeps his estate together and at death hands it over to his wife and children, not that he loves his wife and children more than do other men, but that he can not overcome the infirmity which has weakened his will and character.

"I have my business," Mr. Rosenwald continued. "I want nothing more. Men, sound men, able men, come to me nearly every week with plans that I know are good. 'I wouldn't invest a dollar,' I tell them, 'even if I knew that my profits would amount to 100 per cent a month.' I am not interested any more in the making of money but I like the fun of giving it away."

Julius Rosenwald was born in Springfield, Ill., and on the street where Abraham Lincoln formerly lived. Later, the Rosenwalds moved to a house directly opposite the old Lincoln homestead.

"You were not compelled to split rails in your boyhood," the interviewer said, by way of experiment.

"No, but I peddled chromos," Rosenwald replied. "The nimble six-pence had to travel pretty hard to get away from me when I was a youngster. I did many things in the way of earning money. Satchels had to be carried and I carried some of them. Also I delivered papers.

"When Lincoln's monument was dedicated, I sold a pamphlet history of the acts leading to the event and made $2.50. General Grant was present and I saw him sitting in a carriage. He was the first man I had ever seen with kid gloves on his hands. They were yellow in color and I looked so long that I have never forgotten them.

"One summer I clerked in a store, where everything was either forty-nine or ninety-nine cents in price. I made my first investment along toward autumn that year. My brother was associated with me in the undertaking. I had $20 saved from my wages as a clerk, and he had about the same amount. We bought a set of china dishes for our mother on the twentieth anniversary of her marriage—had them unpacked and spread out when she came down to breakfast. That was a big day for us boys."

"But a bigger one for your mother," the interviewer asserted.

"And she is living yet," Mr. Rosenwald fondly said, "and writes to me every week and, although she is nearly eighty years of age, her penmanship is without a tremor or a blot."

At sixteen, Julius Rosenwald left home and the public schools of Springfield. Maternal uncles lived in New York. Thither he went and his mercantile relatives gave him employment, "but," using his phrase, "of a very subordinate character." Sweeping, possibly; dusting, no doubt and washing windows.

"One day," to give another snatch of his story, personally related, "I went to a wholesales establishment." He was a clerk by this time and entrusted with important commissions.

"Summer clothing for men—alpaca coats, duck vests and seersucker suits—was the exclusive line of this house," he said. "Business was brisk and the proprietors were in a cheerful and confidential mood. One of them told me that they had received that day sixty more orders, some by telegraph, than they could fill.

"I turned this information over in my mind and mentioned it to my uncles. Summer clothing for men, I thought, and they agreed, might do well somewhere else. A location was my first problem. Inquiry showed that a line of such goods had not been developed in Chicago.

"My father supplied me with funds and a cousin became my partner. We leased a loft on the third floor of the Farwell building. It was in the fall of the year and we began, in a modest way, the manufacture of thin clothing. In the January following we opened our selling campaign, deliveries to be made in the spring and early summer."

"How old were you?" the interviewer asked.

"Eighteen sixty-two from eighteen eighty-five leaves twenty-three and that was my age," Mr. Rosenwald replied. "We did well," he continued, taking up his story, "and nine years later I became acquainted with Richard W. Sears. Then the turning point in my life occurred.

"Mr. Sears was a year younger than myself. Born in a little Minnesota town, he learned to be a telegraph operator. A natural trader, and always an honest one, I want to say in passing, he began selling watches to the railroad men of his acquaintance. He would buy two or three watches and dispose of them to engineers, conductors and others.

"During his leisure time, while sitting at the telegraph instrument, he would write letters to the operators whom he knew and in that way laid the foundation for his mail-order business. He did so well that he left the railroad business and went into business for himself at Minneapolis, dealing only in watches and selling them by means of circulars and letters.

"Chicago, he thought, would be a better location and so he moved to that city. He had already proved the merit of his idea and was making money. Then, in a year or two, a man came along and offered him $125,000 for his business, provided he would agree not to sell watches again in his own name for a period of three years.

"Mr. Sears was only twenty-five at the time and the sum that he was offered seemed to be an immense fortune. He thought that he would never want any more money. So he sold out, invested $75,000 in farm mortgages, gave the mortgages to his mother and went to Mexico and California on a cavation.

"After traveling for six months, he returned to Minneapolis weary from idleness. A. C. Roebuck, who was much older than himself, formerly had been in his employment as a jeweler. Mr. Sears was attached to Mr. Roebuck and had great respect for his mechanical ability and his character.

"Under the contract he had made in Chicago, he was barred for three years from engaging in the mail-order business under his own name. So he organized the A. C. Roebuck Watch and Jewelry Co., and re-established himself in Minneapolis. Mr. Roebuck, neither then nor after had any financial interest in the business. He was always an employee on a salary.

"Once more Mr. Sears prospered. When he was free to do so, he changed the name of his firm to Sears, Roebuck & Co. He had widely advertised the old firm and believed that Mr Roebuck's name was of considerable value Therefore, he used it, along with his own, although he was the sole owner of the business.

"Mr. Sears returned to Chicago in 1895. Up to that time he had sold watches and jewelry exclusively. When he added a small line of clothing to his stock, I showed him samples from our factory. Thus our acquaintance opened. He told me about his business.

"I had a brother-in-law who was then looking for an opening. He and I went to Mr Sears and asked him if he felt like accepting us as partners. A bargain was soon made. Mr. Sears put a value of $140,000 on his stock, goodwill and so on. The price was satisfactory. I paid him $35,000 and my brother-in-law paid him $35,000. And so the three of us owned the business. We turned the company later into a corporation. Mr. Sears was elected president, and I was elected vice-president and treasurer. When Mr. Sears retired in 1908, I succeeded him. He died two years ago, a very wealthy man. Modest, always, and lovable, he was of great service, in my opinion, to the American people. He brought manufacturers and consumers together and saved the latter hundreds of millions of dollars."

The business of Mr. Sears in 1895, by his own statement, was worth $140,000. No money was afterward put into it. Expansion was made wholly with profits. The shares of the corporation today have a market value of $125,000,000. At least $25,000,000 has been taken out of the business in the form of dividends. Sales totalled $500,000 in 1895. They will be three hundred and forty times greater this year.

"Billions of dollars are yearly spent in this country by consumers. Our sales for 1917 will amount to $170,000,000, which is only a small drop in a big bucket. Take shoes, for example. I suppose the American people buy a thousand million dollars' worth of shoes annually. Our sales of shoes will not exceed, say, $18,000,000. Mail-order houses can not monopolize the retail trade of the United States, but they can, in a measure, regulate it as to prices and improve it as to service.

"There is room for all, and all, I hope, will prosper, provided, under the laws of good business, they ought to prosper."

G. S. In the last ten months John D. Rockefeller personally has applied $70,000,000 to war purposes. His money has gone to the Belgian Relief, the Liberty Loan, Red Cross and Y. M. C. A. This huge sum has no connection with the money spent by the Rockefeller Foundation.

New York State Capitol District, Dec. 17.—Flag number two, that square blue one, went up first. Then Forecaster Todd delivered the snow, the nice, deep snow, he had ordered. After which the Gay George shook out model number five, that other cheerful banner of white, with the black square in the dead center. Whereupon, the average cold wind velocity of the Capitol District gradually increased from low six miles an hour, to an imitation of the highest record here, somewhere around 70, nearly a mile a minute!

Such a storm as this would be commented upon in Bermuda as a horrible Barraconda. And the island which has no factories, no railroads, not even a trolley, to say nothing of the minus autos, might naturally be led to believe that here, at last, was a typical Arctic blizzard!

But, up this a-way, not quite 40 hours from Broadway, as Bermuda advertises her onions are, well, we-uns accept a thing like this, and merely call it winter, sometimes spelled with a cap "W".

Of course, most folk wish they were, for the time, either in Bermuda, Florida, California, or Fred Seely's Grove Park Inn, down there at Asheville, Nawth-Ca'oline.

Others, like Amundsen, Greely, Peary & Co., who may prefer weather around 70 degrees north, 97 west, are welcome to what the Capitol District now has.

Yet, if they're in business, tobacco line or any other, it's quite likely they'd quickly say the Bermudian-Asheville-Pinehurst combination would eventually induce more trade than the stuff this section is offering for climate during the closing days of 1917.

Perhaps, though, it'll be better. There are actually a few, a very few, shoppers and buyers wading through the snow just to see for themselves what the dealers have to sell in the way of cigars, cigarettes, pipes, tobaccos, and so on, for the Happy-Holidays, now almost in the chimney!

It's some satisfaction to discover one busy house. You know who it is? Yes, that's right—it's the Payn Tobacco Co., up there on Broadway, Albany.

They've got just about all they can do to get out the holiday boxes of Anndora cigars. And it's a pretty package, in the enamelled white paper, with the joyous red titles, ribbons, tags.

One item is bothersome, though. That is the present shortage of Private Bond boxes, which makes it almost impossible to issue Christmas editions of the firm's successful six-center in time for the rush of these last few days in the season.

Quiet is the word at the Hotel Ten Eyck, Albany. Most all the business rests expectant upon the coming of the State senators and assemblymen, with their cohorts, on New Year's day.

At the cigar stand, M. J. Canaday is still up in the air on the new stand to the east of the lobby. Workmen have been engaged with changes to the fixtures, while assistant adjutant-general Henry Hotaling wonders if the job will ever be completed.

Meantime, the single bit of cigar excitement at the tall Ten Eyck is the evening banquet. Notwithstanding bloodless Tuesdays, the Ten Eyck kitchens occasionally furnish one of those Eugene Christian eatless dinners, indorsed fully by Bert Ho-over There.

And, at the immediate side of each knife, fork, an' spoon, each gentleman present usually finds one, two, or three of Canaday's American Cabinet cigars, simply to take the curse off the otherwise plain and fancy lobster, a la Saugerties.

You know President McKinley used to smoke just one-half his cigar. But then, the Spanish war was only half a war.

"Wait a minute," requested Fleischmann, as he picked up his grip, "there's a place right here where I don't see any Que Placers. And the Metropolitan Tobacco Co. doesn't want such a condition to exist. So I'll be back again to tell you whether business is better if I land the order."

What if the boys are away from their usual State Capitol jobs? Scott Barton, of the Capitol cigar stand, doesn't worry about the loss of trade from these considerable smokers.

Not much! Because, instead of selling cigarettes at 10 to 20 per cent profit, Scottie is now putting out more candy than ever to the State's substitutes, who are girls.

Still, Brother Barton looks forward to the opening of his Senate floor stand, upstairs, just as soon as the Legislature convenes on January 1. Cigars sell then!

"Did you ever try to keep a drunken cigarmaker on a bench?" inquired Eddie Englebrecht, while he removed the band from an F. & D. perfecto. "Well, it was in my time with Van Slyke & Horton, before I went with Fitzpatrick & Draper, my present house.

"Wallace Horton was alive then," went on Eddie, snitching a light, "and he looked after the factory, as you probably know.

"And, upstairs, we had a fellow who was a pretty good cigar-maker, also a friend of the family.

"But he persisted in trying to corner the crop of Saazer hops, and, at the same time, play kelly-pool with all the bums in town.

"Of course, this got on Mr. Horton's nerves, so he was fired. Then, because his family needed what little money he did bring in, it was my job to get Boss Horton to put the slob back to work.

"This occurred again and again. He was fired and hired so much that I'd meet him going out with his board and knives just about as many times as I'd meet him coming back to work with the roll in his apron.

"And, you can believe me when I say Mr. Horton never saw me come into the office that he didn't say, off-hand like, 'Alright, Eddie, tell the foreman to put him back again.'"

Up there in West Albany at the New York Central shops, so many of the machinists have gone to help their Uncle Sammy that the remaining lads have raised a Christmas fund for each and every one.

Only a very small contrib was requested form the employees, but the amount raised totaled $168.

All of this will be expended in cigarettes, tobaccos, pipes, and so on, packed in individual boxes made, even to the spikes, right in the big car shops under the Watervliet avenue bridge.

"Now that Chesterfield cigarettes are moving with a Fatima-like demand," mentioned A. C. Bente, the Liggett & Myers specialty man, "I think the Duke Branch will find the same trouble with shipments we have had on the other big sellers. While waiting for stock, we'll all take the customary two-weeks' vacation over the holidays."

Smiling as always, cheerfully working over a batch of briar pipes in his North Pearl street headquarters, in Albany, jobber Sam Fulder communicated this:

"No, I won't go out on the road again 'till after January 1, but I'll probably be busy enough right here in the retail store with the holiday rush."

"These here pipes," he went on, "must be put in shape for the Christmas trade. And we've certainly got more than we need to supply the anticipated demand. For our stock is really too large in smokers' articles. Although the sale of pipes and accessories, particularly cigar holders, is very good indeed for the time and date."

'Way down yonder on Broadway, Albany, Manager Bobby Richford, of the Arcade Cigar Co., was extremely busy with his holiday window on Monday, last.

From present indications Bobby expects a fair business for gift goods. But the totals of last year are hardly looked for.

"Standard cigar brands, formerly five, now six-cents," said Gil Thompson, "especially Cincos, Bolds, Havana Ribbons, and Rocky Fords, don't sell with me as they did when the price was just the one nickel."

"And," continued this Clinton Square retailer, "I find that the people of Albany appreciate the old tobacco and cigarettes I'm still selling at the original prices. I bought rather heavily of this material, and I yet have lots of 5 and 10 cent stock on hand."

Some of the Albany newspapermen are having a lot of fun with Tobacconist-Mayor Stevens' patriotic proclamation about soiled and torn American flags.

For it appears that the Mayor issued an especial ukase on the subject of so many dilapidated National flags flying from local poles.

He simply directed the attention of the public to the affair by indicating the careless attitude of numerous families and firms in permitting such worn-out flags to fly from conspicuous positions about the city.

In fact, Hutchins, the Mayor's secretary even went to the bottom of the matter by inquiring of the military authorities about the proper disposal of these flag remnants.

At the State department of the Adjutant General's office they frankly admitted that no one there knew exactly what to do with flags which were no longer fit for display. But they said they'd look it up.

Other military sources here were appealed to with similar result until Hutchins called the naval recruiting officer. Ensign Hambsch was floored at first. Then he discovered, in the regulations, that all worn-out National emblems must be destroyed by burning them without public ceremony.

So all this discussion about the Flag caused much attention in the newspapers. And many torn and weather-beaten Colors were removed by their owners, to quiet criticism.

One item is bothersome, though. That is comment upon the fact that the Mayor himself flew a battered flag from his retail store at Broadway and State.

Whereupon, Manager C. J. Shaxby pulled it in, and removed the staff, also.

This made the critic extremely unhappy. For he immediately wrote to one of the papers ,requesting information relative to the Mayor's intention to replace the old Flag with a new one.

He said "Military-Secretary Shaxby" had hauled the Colors down, and he demanded that a new Standard be erected at once.

While the newspaper which started the racket remarked that it was Mayor Stevens' idea to have the public Flag in the Plaza, opposite the store, serve for all purposes.

PSYCHOLOGY OF SALES.

Probably in no other direction has the modern storekeeper displayed more ingenuity than in planning sales and making them "draw."

The human mind is so constituted that it likes to think it is getting something for nothing, or almost nothing. Occasionally people will grab at almost any bargain or scheme without a word of complaint or argument. Notice I have said "occasionally."

The department stores, dry-goods stores, clothing stores, and so on, have for a long time worked upon this susceptibility of the public mind, and a complete list of the schemes devised to take advantage of it, laid one on top of the other, would reach up into the air higher than a gun can shoot.

A crowd—that's it. Just a few big buyers won't make a sale. A crowd impresses the public with the bigness and the importance of the opportunity.

Nobody wants to trade in a dull, slow store. Somebody has well said, "the store that hasn't a lot of people in it can't get a lot more people in it."—George Argy in the Bulletin of Pharmacy.

The Troubles of Two Partners

A Quarrel Over a Stenographer—An Unsatisfactory Sale—A Warning to Others

(Copyright, 1917, by Elton J. Buckley.)

About two years ago, in a certain part of Indiana, two men formed a partnership for the purpose of doing a wholesale business. One was an inside man, the other an outside, and both had a wide acquaintance among the firms they must look to for business. It looked like an ideal team. Each man had saved money and both contributed an equal amount to the firm's capital.

The new firm did business from the start, and in six months was making a little money. In a year it was doing exceedingly well, and gave every prospect of doing better as time went on. When the business was eighteen months old, the partners had their first serious disagreement. It was not about anything connected with the business, but about a girl stenographer in the firm's employ. Both men were married. They fell out very deeply over the thing, and after several weeks of bitter wrangling, during which the business, of course, suffered, each man made the other a proposition to sell his interest, but neither of the propositions was accepted, and a deadlock resulted.

The business was going from bad to worse, when one of the partners went off one day and sold his interest in the firm to another salesman in the same line. The deal involved several thousand dollars, yet both parties decided that they could put it through without counsel—"it was just an ordinary sale"—and they got together in a hotel room and signed the papers which together they had drawn up. The buyer paid half of the purchase price in cash and gave a note for the balance. The seller in this case was the partner who had been at fault regarding the stenographer.

Following the deal, the buyer of the half interest took his papers to the store of the firm and announced to the remaining member of the partnership that he was his partner. How was that? Why, he had just bought out the other man's share. And he showed the paper in corroboration.

The remaining partner did not take kindly to the sale and at once consulted the firm's lawyer as to his rights. He was advised that despite the sale, he was not obliged to accept the new man as partner, that he need not work with him or accept him in any way.

Just here let me explain this most important drawback of partnership. It is well settled that a partner cannot sell his interest in the partnership to a third party unless the remaining member consents. He can sell something, but it is merely a half interest (if the seller held a half interest) in the firm's assets which remain after the business is settled up. This is from a leading case:—

> The legal power of a partner to make a transfer of his interest to a third party is unquestioned. The transferee, however, does not become a tenant in common with the other partner in any specific goods, but acquires only the interest his vendor had, which is his share of the residue after the affairs of the firm are settled and the debts paid, including debts due from the firm to a partner. Such a purchase does not make the buyer a partner in the firm without the concurrence of all the partners, either given expressly or implied from conduct.

To illustrate, A and B are partners. They fall out and B sells his share to C. The business cannot go forward with C in it unless A consents. All that C can legally demand, after buying B's share, is that the business be wound up, debts paid, and he be given half the balance. In other words, selling one's share to an outsider without his partner's consent, usually means the destruction of the business. It cannot possibly mean anything else unless the remaining partner agrees.

Now to get back to the Indiana case. The remaining partner served notice on the buyer of the half interest refusing to accept him, and the latter then consulted his own lawyer, who told him the same thing that the other lawyer told his client. He then tried to find the man he had bought from to rescind the deal, but found he had gone to New York with the idea of going to France. He finally found him, but he had spent some of the money and refused to give back the balance on the ground that the deal was bona fide as far as he was concerned.

The buyer then went back to Indiana to see about getting the only thing he could—one-half the assets after the business was wound up. He took proceedings to that end, the business was wound up and its assets sold, as the remaining partner had lost the chance he had had before, of raising the money to take the other half interest over. As would be the case with many businesses were their assets forced to sale, it brought enough to pay back the buyer of the half interest about one-fourth of his money.

This little deal had the following evil results:—

It cost the buyer of the half interest several thousand dollars in cold cash.

It put the remaining partner to much expense, inconvenience and loss.

It practically destroyed a going, profitable business.

It conveys a warning.

Among American men a good pipe is becoming more and more the emblem of peace, comfort and democracy.

It is gratifying to reflect that by far the most of these pipes carry the famous WDC Triangle Trade Mark as a token of quality and worth.

To the Jobbers and Retailers who have helped to place WDC Pipes in the hands and homes of American men, we extend our greetings and best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Prosperous Year of 1918.

Brief Bits of News from Boston

BOSTON, December 16.—Fire completely distroyed the drug store of Billings & Stover, Harvard Square, Cambridge, Mass., last Sunday. Inventory is now being made, and as soon as the insurance is adjusted the store will be rebuilt.

Fire in the building at Harvard Square, Cambridge, where Leavitt & Pierce, manufacturers of the Cake Box Mixture, are located, caused a smoke damage to the plant. Fortunately they had a large stock of Cake Box Mixture on hand, which will take care of orders until the factory is under way again.

The Wood Pollard Co. will close the store at Dewey Square Store in Boston. They are now disposing of groceries, and other stock at cut prices. The cigars handled by Wood-Pollard Co. will be sold by Walker-Reintel Co. occupying the store on the next corner. Wood-Pollard Co. will continue the store on Causeway street, opposite North Station. The South Station store will be divided into smaller stores.

The American House on Hanover street will be reopened by the former manager, Allen C. Jones, who with his father conducted this historic hostelry. About two years ago this property was sold for investment and plans were made for a large business block to be erected. Mr. Jones will remodel the old hotel and install many new conveniences, adding rooms and space in the famous Rathskeller. Plans are now being worked out so that the hotel can open some time early in February.

Frank Fallon, who, some months ago, joined the Commonwealth Cigar Co. distributors of the El Roi Tans, Preferencias, and Kelley's Bouquet, has resigned and has returned to his old connection with G. W. Faber, Inc., New York City. Frank has many friends in this city.

William McGreenery, the Merchant's Row retailer and jobber, is pushing El Arabe cigar brand, made by the Benito Rovira Co.

Frank D. Ware, who has charge of the manufacturing of Epicure cigarettes, recently visited Nate Ives, the New England representative.

Petitions in bankruptcy are recorded as follows: Royal Restaurant Co., Inc., Sales—Liabilities, $16,162; assets, $7,558, consisting of fixtures $7,258, and stock $300. Herbert E. Brier, druggist and grocer, Malden—Liabilities, $14,058; assets, $12,900, consisting of stock $8,000, fixtures $2,000; debts due, $2,500, and horses and wagon, $400.

REDUCING FAT STEMS

Zero Weather Halts Work on Tobacco in Wisconsin—Employees of General Cigar Co. Come to New York.

EDGERTON, Wis., December 14.—Zero weather that has prevailed so largely during the week has put an end to all activities in the country tending toward preparing the tobacco crop for market. What little has previously been removed from the poles has been stripped out, and nothing further can be accomplished until casing weather again comes. The freezing weather is gradually taking the moisture out of the fat stems, so it is believed there will be but few found in the later stripping. We learn of a few recent sales from first hands of crops that were not under contract, but at prices right up toward the top paid earlier in the season. There is not so much chance of the 1917 crop selling at cheaper figures, whatever occurs at delivery time.

Inquiry for cured leaf is plentiful enough, were local packers able to meet the demands, but only a few have stocks on hand.

The shipments out of storage reach 975 cases and 2 cars of bundles to all points from this market since last report.

Capt. L. W. Pearson, with the American Cigar Co. at Sparta, was a visitor in Edgerton Tuesday.

J. A. Jenson came home from the Ohio tobacco districts Monday evening.

R. J. Presnail, of Montreal, and M. J. Irving, of Hamilton, Ont., both connected with the Tuckett Tobacco Co., have been visiting the local markets of the State in search of cured leaf the past week.

The Government's final crop report of the year places the value of the topacco crop of the country at $207,000,000, the yield at 827 pounds to the acre, and the average price 24.9 cents, as against 14.7 cents in 1916.

Ald. John Dickerson, Van Ness Green and Arthur Shannon, all employees of the General Cigar Co., left for New York Wednesday evening for a conference at the general offices of the company. Mr. Green will spend Christmas at his old home in New Milford, Conn.—Edgerton Reporter.

Stein's store in Wall street has not the crowds of other years, but business is larger than last year, as each customer is buying in larger quantities. Two automobiles have been engaged to make deliveries on Saturday and Monday.

Benjamin N. Tevalin will open a cigar and stationery store at 472 Main Street, Middleton, Conn.

Overlooking the Icicles in Chicago

Retailers Don't Depend on "Fair Weather" Friends for Christmas Trade—Proud Cigar Salesmen Seen in Costly Fur Overcoats—The Tom Keene Brand Extensively Advertised in the Daily Papers—Many Stores Have Most Attractive Windows—Simon Lichtenstein Passes

CHICAGO, December 15.—With the coming of the cold weather, dealers are looking forward to better business. It has been very quiet but with Christmas close, the late buying soon will start. Jobbers are not finding any great rush and all report collections very slow.

Quoting Harvey Vreeland, of Benson & Hedges, "Now comes the time to see whether the moths have enjoyed their summer diet of sealskin." The below zero weather which stayed with us for several days made everybody get out furs and hustle to keep warm. Cigar salesmen are there when it comes to fur collars and cuffs.

With much regret is reported the death of Simon Lichtenstein, one of the best known cigar dealers of this city who passed away at his home, Sunday. For many years he conducted two well-known cigar stores located at 186 North Fifth avenue and 300 West Madison street. The funeral, held Tuesday, was largely attended by members of the trade. Mr. Lichtenstein is survived by a widow and two sons, Bert, who managed the retail store, and Ralph, who is city salesman for the jobbing house of Iwan Ries & Co. Simon Litchtenstein's friends were many. He was very popular, a keen merchant and a clean competitor. The business will be continued for the present.

Sig Mayer, the Lozano representative, is at present at headquarters in Tampa, going over matters for next year.

A late visitor was William Seidenberg of Francisco Arango & Co. William Waldmann, the Chicago representative, had him in tow.

When last heard from Sam Paley, M. Friedman and Harry Landfield, were still in Havana. They are expected back in Chicago shortly.

Roman O. Dobler of the sales force of Park & Tilford, came in with the snow storm. R. O. D. finished for this year, says he "can't kick at the business he has done" and he looks for a big increase next year.

Chicago Lodge, No. 4, B. P. O. E., is after holiday business. A neat notice has been sent to all the members stating they can buy their holiday cigars at the club house at jobbers' prices, plus ten per cent.

Steele Wedeles & Co. have sent out a folder to the trade showing the brands, sizes and packings offered for Christmas. Charles the Great, El Verso, Wm. Penn, Blackstone, Dubonnet, Portina, Tarus, Tom Keene and El Prosposo are featured.

Tebbetts & Garland, importers and dealers in fancy groceries, have increased their capital stock from $20,000 to $25,000.

"Everybody will soon be doing it—taking furloughs. That is, everybody but the poor office force," is the way Albert Frietag the stock man for Albert Breitung, puts it. Al is kept busy trying to fill the orders that pile in from stores and the city trade.

"A box of John Ruskin cigars to your soldier boy at camp will be appreciated." That's the way the newspaper ad reads right now on this favorite brand.

E. Regensburg & Sons have sent the trade a new price list of their clear Havana American brand. It lists 62 sizes.

The "Rock Island" has installed electric lights in the 5:53 suburban train. Sister Sue says it would be so much prettier to have Japanese lanterns.

Egyptian Straights, the 100 per cent pure Turkish cigarette, are putting out a new cut-out sign that is most attractive. It shows an Egyptian scene with the Pyramids in the background and scattered around the base ar several Arabs.

A service flag is hanging in the store of Geo. C. Knight; Frank Leach has joined the army and will shortly leave for France.

Harvester, record breakers, and Optimo Captains are big sellers with the house of Clarence Hirschhorn & Co.

Gato Keywesters in the favorita shape sell well in the store of Shoemaker & Co. This size is sold at retail two for fifteen cents.

It is no longer the Berlin Room in the Hotel Bismarck. It has been redecorated and renamed the Colonial Room.

La Preferencia Operas packed ten in a tin box, sell for 50 cents. Dealers find a good sale for this packing.

Col. A. Luebeck is still in the game. A. L. is a booster for the house of Ruhstrat Crowley & Co., and does a big business on Mozart and Charles Denby brands. Everybody knows the "Col." out this way. He has been in the selling game for many years.

A soldier package of Bull Durham tobacco is now for sale. It is all ready for mailing and contains 12 5-cent packages of the "Makin's of a nation." The box is wrapped with fancy paper.

The S. & F. Cigar Co. has bought out the Strauss Cigar Co., at 51st and Prairie avenue, Abe Simon, a well-known south side boy, is a member of the new firm.

Louis Tabak who used to represent the jobbing house of I. Briskin, is now at Camp Grant, Rockford, training for work "over there."

The Governor General Signs the Decree

In 1781, Vasco, the Governor General of the Philippine Islands, decreed that the government should have control of the production, manufacture and sale of tobacco. By this decree a monopoly was created which remained in operation a hundred years. Due to the strict enforcements of regulations, especially in the earlier period of its operation, the monopoly secured for Philippine tobacco an enviable reputation for quality throughout the world.

Careful supervision of the industry by the American government in the Philippines, together with the enterprise and the business sagacity of Manila manufacturers and importers, is building anew a splendid reputation for Manila cigars.

Permanent Export Permits Are Rescinded

Special Permission Now Must Be Obtained for Each Shipment of Cigars or Tobacco from Cuba—Partagas Secures a Big Order from Japan—Requisitions Also by the French Regie—Factories Busy—Leaf Market in Havana Continues to Be Active.

HAVANA, December 14.—A circular letter of the Secretary of the Union of Manufacturers, under date of December 13, announces that permanent permits to all countries are withdrawn again, and special permits must be obtained for each shipment before the goods can be delivered on the docks or put aboard steamers. This new order of the Board of National Defense may cause serious delays in the despatching of cigars and tobacco in the future. It is said that this measure was necessary to prevent blacklisted firms from doing business through third parties.

The leaf market continues fairly active, though the volume of business has been reduced. Remaining stocks for sale no longer admit of transactions so large as heretofore, independent of the prevailing high prices. Sales and pending transactions during the past week are estimated to be between 5,000 and 6,000 bales of leaf.

Weather conditions of late have been more favorable, as it rained in some parts of the Vuelta Abajo, particularly on the north coast, Saturday and Sunday. Present temperature seems to indicate more light showers. Judging from atmospheric conditions at Havana, it seems that the expectations of the vegueros will be realized, and that seedlings will become more plentiful and consequently lower in prices.

RECEIPTS OF LEAF TOBACCO FROM THE COUNTRY.

For two weeks ending December 6, 1917:

	Bales.
Vuelta Abajo	4,726
Semi Vuelta	987
Partido	8,678
Remedios	4,941
Oriente	86
Total	19,418

Since January 1, 1917:

	Bales.
Vuelta Abajo	188,877
Semi Vuelta	12,848
Partido	42,759
Remedios	141,935
Oriente	284
Total	386,703

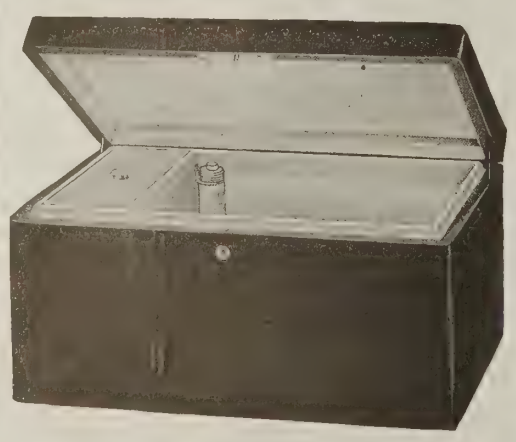
Regarding the receipts of Partido, it may be explained that the 8,678 bales had come in previously by carts and electric cars and were not reported at the actual time of arrival.

Exports of cigars per steamship Morro Castle totaled 616 cases, containing 3,215,725 cigars, which were consigned to the following countries, viz.: To Great Britain, 1,859,725; United States, 1,086,250; Australia, 99,400; Canada, 60,750; Portugal, 43,500; Argentine Republic, 33,900; British Africa, 25,500; St. Thomas, 5,700, and Brazil, 1,000 cigars.

Exports of leaf tobacco from Havana during the week ending December 1, 1917, totaled 7,545 bales, which were distributed to the following countries, viz.: To all ports of the United States, 5,440; to Canada, 78; to Great Britain, 430; to the Argentine Republic, 1,525, and to Uruguay, 72 bales.

Among the leaf buyers who arrived recently were: Jacob Labe, of John H. Goetze & Co., of New York; Felix Eckerson, of Felix Eckerson & Co., of Philadelphia; Francisco Arango, of Francisco Arango & Co., of Tampa. There are expected tonight or Saturday morning, by the Tampa boat, Angel L. Cuesta, Sr., of Cuesta, Rey & Co., of Tampa, and Leslie Pantin, accompanied by his family.

Marcelino Perez left for New York last Saturday, after having made various purchases of fine Vuelta Abajo vegas for the famous Tuval factory.



Vivian M. Myers, the vice president of the Cortez Cigar Company, returned to Key West. We hear that he purchased quite extensively of the best vegas of Vuelta Abajo and Partido in the market through Walter Sutter & Co.

Romeo y Julieta factory is very busy, but Don Ramon Arguelles had nothing of any special interest to report.

Partagas received a very fine order from the Bureau of Monopolies, of Japan, amounting to 350,000 cigars, all fine sizes, above $100 per thousand. The French Regie also ordered, besides the 100,000 cigars on hand, to be shipped either this or next month, 90,000 cigars additional for the months of March, April and May. This business, in addition to the other pending orders on hand for Australia, South America and other countries, assures the Partagas factory enough work for its cigarmakers.

Exports of cigars from Havana during the second half of November show an increase of a trifle over 269,000 cigars, compared with the same period of last year. The larger exports to Great Britain of nearly two and one-quarter million cigars were gratifying, although we are still almost thirteen million behind in our exports for the eleven months of 1917, as compared with 1916. The decrease in our shipments of cigars to the United States was more apparent than real, as a million cigars in a fortnight, of less orders to be executed, was more than we had expected during the height of the season.

Time May Work Changes for the Better

Meanwhile San Francisco Cigar Dealers Are Getting Such Small Change as They Can—Holiday Buying Started Late but Sales for the Season Promise to Be Normal—A Growing Demand for Manilas—The Police Are Helping Eaken Look for Lebow

SAN FRANCISCO, December 12.—The underlying situation in the tobacco business in San Francisco has not changed during the past week. The dealers, apparently, are no nearer unity of action on the prices to be charged for cigars. A majority, at least those who are serving a majority of the public, are charging the new prices, while others, especially those who have small stands and do a relatively small business, are still selling at the old price. By the first of the year all the old stock, even among those who are sticking to the 5-cent charge for $42.50 goods, will be practically exhausted. It is doubtful if these dealers will attempt to maintain the old charge when they have to pay the new price. Some of them may, as an advertisement for more expensive goods, but the general opinion is that if they do they cannot last long, for it is very generally believed here that before April 1 the old-time nickel cigar will be selling for 7 cents. In the meantime this underlying condition is being forgotten to a great extent by the demands of the Christmas trade. San Francisco has had an open and warm winter to date, and even as yet the people hardly realize that Christmas is not two weeks away. Christmas buying in all lines of goods, as well as in cigars, began late this year. The dealers stocked up as early as they could, and a week or two ago some of them were regarding their big stock somewhat ruefully. The past week, however, has seen a considerable increase in buying on the part of the public and it would now appear that the Christmas retail cigar business will be at least normal.

R. H. Manley, coast distributor for El Belmont Cigar, has just returned from an extended trip in the northern part of the State, especially in the region about Eureka, Humboldt Co. While there Mr. Manley appointed Robert Duffy, of Eureka, distributor for Humboldt and Del Norte counties. He says that the retail condition in Eureka is much more favorable than it is in this city. The dealers there are working together for the good of all, and there are practically no price cutters in the northern city. All former three for a quarter cigars sell for ten cents straight and other cigars in proportion. The people are satisfied and dealers are harmonious.

H. H. Manley, distributor of the Chancellor, is visiting the southern part of the State. His son, R. H., says that he is having an exceptional trip. Both the Manleys are having trouble to make deliveries, as the factories of the Chancellor and El Belmont are booked to capacity and oversold.

The Fatima, Chesterfield and Piedmont cigarettes are now being sold in tins of 100.

The Palo cigars, packed ten in a box-like carton, are proving very popular to the Christmas trade. Cigars packed in tens or twelves in the regulation wooden box are off the market here. Twenty-fives are so scarce that they are snapped up as soon as offered.

Mrs. B. Rothfuss has taken over the cigar stand in the Hotel Fielding and is doing a good business in her new venture.

H. L. Judell & Co. report that they have just received a good sized shipment of Fighting Bob cigars from Manila. General business is reported excellent. Three or four times as much as the firm can deliver has been sold, and the salesmen may be called in for a couple of weeks to give the deliveries a chance to catch up with the sales.

John W. Glenn, the Roi Tan king, with Ehrman Bros. & Co., reports a wonderful sale of the Roi Tan cigar. His only difficulty is in getting enough cigars to make deliveries.

Freight conditions on goods to Ehrman Bros. & Co. are reported very much improved. Whereas it formerly took at least two months to get a shipment of goods through, several shipments have recently arrived in approximately thirty days. This speeding up of freight is a source of great satisfaction.

Al Ehrman of the firm of Ehrman Bros. & Co., has recently returned from an extended trip to the East, where he mixed pleasure with business during his stay.

H. S. Solomon, of Ehrman Bros. & Co., is in the southern part of the State, busily sending in orders for Roi Tans and Optimos.

Sam L. Davis, of El Sidelo cigar, is in San Francisco visiting the trade.

M. P. Eaken, manager for the Gunst Cigar store at California and Front, the other morning employed a new bookkeeper named Oscar Lebow. When Lebow went to lunch that day he failed to return and investigation developed that $400 was missing from the cash register. The police are helping Mr. Eaken look for Lebow.

A cash register, fixtures and a vacant room is all burglars left Louis Tiano, who conducted a cigar business at 1800 Powell street, when they left his place of business early the other morning. The missing stock was valued at $300 and the cash register was rifled of $15.

TOBACCO IS SCARCE IN PARIS

"Paris is being denuded of 'tabac' with lightning-like rapidity," says the Paris edition of The New York Herald. "Three days ago if one filed to obtain the usual 'paquet à soixante pur la pipe' one strolled to the next tobacco sop and obtained it. Now one visits shop ater shop without obtaining package tobacco, ad perforce is compelled to accept the fearful ose mixtures taken from the depths of counter servoirs.

"In most shops chalked slates inform the pub- that there is no more Maryland cigarettes (rom Kentucky), caporal supérieur or tobacco smoke to be had. If a poilu makes the de- and, however, perhaps madame the 'patronne,' ght find a stray package in the dark regions the rear. Mere civilians on such occasions well to remain mum.

"For tobacco is helping win the war. Said e dealer:

"'Why the crisis? Simply because all the bacco in Paris has been commandeered at the arehouses and shipped off to the front by the n. The poilu must have his tobacco and aris must do without, as she did last winter here coal was concerned, in order to keep e front supplied.'

"Hitherto Brother Poilu has been supplied ith a very strong quality of alleged tobacco r three sous a package. Pipefuls of this exaordinary concoction of ragweed and chicory, hich poilus fraternally gave American soldiers the front are alleged to have put Sammy on s back as completely as if he had attempted smoke a gas bomb. And recently, as one ight have seen in the windows of a Parisian wspaper, this quality of soi-disant tobacco is been sprinkled with trouser buttons, bits of othing, straw and charred bits of wood.

"Brother Poilu howled his non-appreciation and howled long and often. So, rumor has it, Paris tobacco warehouses and docks at Bordeaux laden with Virginia tobacco sent over c. i. f. were denuded overnight and hustled off to the front ahead of howitzer shells and Y. M. C. A. secretaries.

"And so no more Levant, Orient weed, de luxe or Maryland and only a bit of caporal. Cigarette imbibers who hitherto have consumed daily from two packages up to packets of a certain number were allotted only three or four cigarettes at a time yesterday by tobacco dealers. The cigarettes sold two for a sou, four for a big copper.

"'And don't come back for four more!' warned one tobacconist. 'Remember, I know your face, you tête de Bouche!'

"Four of Paris' most famous tobacco shops—at No. 63 quai d'Orsay, No. 23 boulevard des Capucines (tabac de luxe), No. 15 place de la Bourse and No. 157 rue Saint-Honoré—were the centers of excitement recently.

"La Civette's was filled with a mob. One American ambulance boy with a bandaged hand was caught in the crush and assisted out grimacing with pain. The crowd consisted mostly of women, buying everything not nailed against the walls. During the day sign after sign was posted up notifying the public that certain brands were exhausted. One sign read: 'We Have No Tobacco; Try Our Pinard.' Toward nightfall even the cigars began to go, and by the box at that.

"In one quaint little tobacco shop much frequented by English officers there stands over a Dayton (Ohio) cash register a bust of Ben Johnson and beneath the quotation from 'Every Man in His Humor':

"'Odds me,' quoth Ben, 'I marvel what pleasure or felicity they have in taking their roguish tobacco. It is good for nothing but to choke a man and fill him full of smoke and embers.'

"But then the rare Ben never stood in the trenches all day with nothing to do but to smoke, nor did he know what comfort a pull at pipe or fag affords ragged nerves.

"As one tobacconist put it: 'I estimate that the consumption of tobacco has gone up 100 per cent since the commencement of the war. Soldiers in rest billets and in the trenches smoke three and four times as much as they did when engaged in before-the-war pursuits. The crisis is due, I think, both to this extraordinary demand at the front, to the drop in importations and to the fact that many French tobacco planters and cultivators are now at the front.'

"In this connection the Temps says: 'In 1914, in Dordogne, there were 9,418 planters who cultivated fields of 3,300 hectares in extent.

The Trade Advised by the T. M. A.

Regarding Import Licenses.

Secretary Charles Dushkind, who has been in constant communication with the War Trade Board in regard to the President's proclamation prohibiting the importation of tobacco without licenses, reports that in his last interview with the officers in charge he has been assured that the requirement to secure licenses for the importation of tobacco has been dispensed with by the issuance of a general license to the Customs Collectors of the respective ports covering all importations of tobacco from all of the prohibited countries excepting the Dutch East Indies, which includes the Island of Sumatra.

As to the Dutch East Indies, licenses will still be required, but assurance has been given that there will be no difficulty in obtaining such licenses subject only to the question of securing transportation facilities.

No licenses will be required even for tobacco grown in the Dutch East Indies if the tobacco be directly imported from another country.

Mr. Dushkind also states that he has reason to believe that the requirement for licenses in regard to imports from the Dutch East Indies, likewise, will be dispensed with soon.

Trading with the Enemy.

In making such importations, great care should be exercised in selecting the parties that we are trading with in order to guard against a violation of the Trading With the Enemy Act by trading with persons, firms, or corporations who are designated by the Government as enemies.

We are advised that the list of names recently published does not include all concerns with whom trading is prohibited, and that from day to day other names are added to the list.

It is, therefore, respectfully urged that in any case where the importer is in doubt as to the parties he is trading with, he should apply for a license to the Bureau of Imports, War Trade Board, Bond building, Washington, D. C., or he should write for information concerning the party involved.

"Non-Essential Industries."

In view of the apparent uneasiness due to the unwarranted apprehension that the labor, fuel and transportation situations are likely to bring about the classification of industries into Essentials and Non-Essentials, and the numerous inquiries that we are receiving asking for information, bearing on that subject, it is deemed advisable to issue the following statement.

While we feel that in the event of such classification being made, tobacco should and probably will, be placed on the list of essential industries, we have every reason to believe that such classification of industries will never come to pass. In fact, it is perfectly apparent from the public statements made by the officials charged with the responsibility of dealing with this subject matter that all propositions along that line have been emphatically turned down by the Government, and that such action is positively not now within the contemplation of the Government.

A few of the statements referred to may be cited, to wit:

In a statement made by Judge Rob S. Lovett, Administrator of the Prio ties Transportation Act, on Decem 4, he said:

"There is nothing in the order t says these less essentials shall not furnished with other cars, and noth which cuts off from them needed r terials. It simply aims to provide the transportation of coal and oth commodities vitally necessary to the v industries the cars most suitable for t purpose.

"Thus, there is no ground for the prehensions of the business man or consumer such as you describe. U mately it may be necessary to go f ther—";

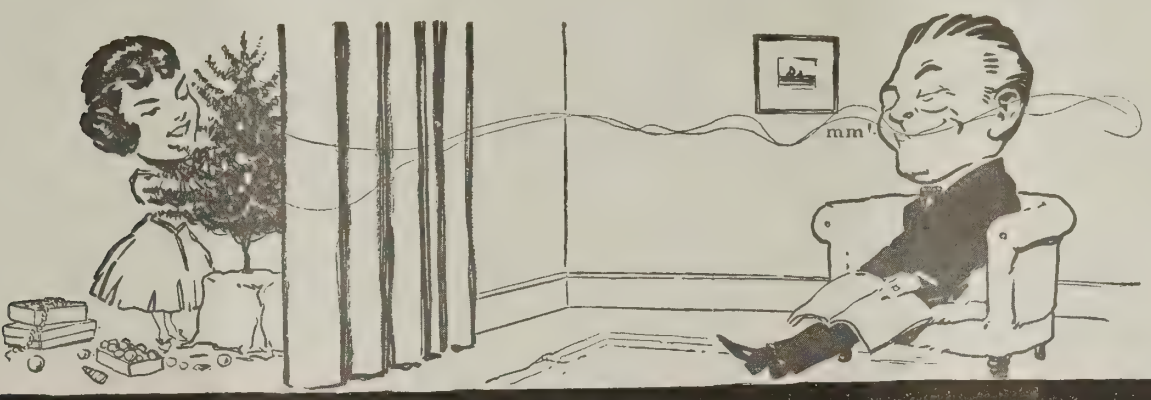
And in an official statement issued N vember 25 Judge Lovett said:

"The report that I am contemplat an order shutting off cars from the au mobile industry is without any foun tion in fact. I said a week ago tha did not have in mind any transportat order treating any industry as non-sential, since Priority Order No. 2 w as far as it seemed to me wise to go dealing with so-called non-essentials transportation orders. That statem still stands."

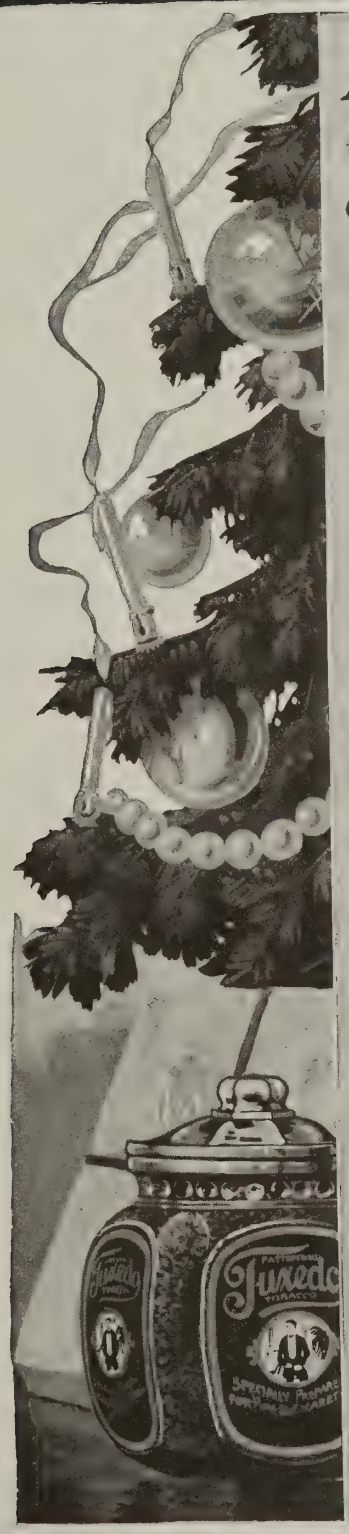
Among the speakers who addres the Convention of Chairmen of the va ous War Service Committees of United States Chamber of Comme held in Washington yesterday, at wh the T. M. A. was duly represented we

W. S. Gifford, Director of the Cou of National Defense; Daniel Willa Chairman of the War Industries Boa Council of National Defense; Harry Garfield, Fuel Administrator; Edwin Parker, Chairman of the Priorities Co mittee of the War Industries Boa and George N. Peek, Industrial R resentative, War Industries Boa

These gentlemen, together with Ju Lovett, practically constitute the G ernmental machinery that must pass a decide upon priorities and essentials, a it will be interesting to note some their remarks made in the course of th addresses.



Mr. Gifford said in substance t while it is obvious that some industr are more essential than others, it wo be foolhardy to injure any industry.



Mr. Willard, supporting the sta ments made by Director Gifford conce ing the wrong impression which has g abroad among the business men of country as to the so-called "non-ess tials," pointed out that some industr are and will be more essential th others in the winning of the war, bu has come to be generally understood Washington that there is no such th as a "non-essential" industry.

Fuel Administrator Garfield said thought had been presented to him t it might be necessary to cut off fuel some industries. A list had been p sented to him of between 500 and industries, in one of which $1,000,000 was represented, and which was calle "non-essential" industry. Dr. Garf said that he had refused to accept responsibility for calling that or other industry "non-essential," and s that no such list would ever be publish

Dr. Garfield startled his hearers proposing the idea that there might

Philadelphia Retailers Defer Proceedings

Important Work Put Over for the January Meeting—But Those Present Had a Most Pleasant Time—The Stress and Rush of Christmas Shopping—Complaints Concerning a Cold Deal—Various Burglaries Reported

PHILADELPHIA, December 18.—It's all wrong, Adolphus, that yarn about the way to a man's heart being through his stomach. You will know it is wrong when we tell you that despite the presence of unattached, free, gratis, for nothing and war-tax-proof eats at the meeting of the new Philadelphia association of tobacco and cigar dealers last week, only twenty-one of the said members turned up, appeared or otherwise made their presence known. But do not gather from that that there is anything of the weak-sister type about this association. With the new members trotted in by the indefatigable boys on the membership committee, the association now has a membership of seventy-five paid-up dealers.

There were all kinds of impromptu speeches at the meeting, but it was generally decided that details had better be left over for the first regular meeting, to be held the second Wednesday in January. Franklin K. Sterner, one of the vice-presidents, was voted out of that job and into that of treasurer, to take the place of Coates Coleman, who has too many other interests to handle it.

"It looks to me," said the new treasurer optimistically, after the meeting, "as if we're finally going to put over this association among Philadelphia dealers. Everything seems promising. At the next meeting we will take up in detail some matters of vital importance to the trade and everything ought to go swimmingly."

Just now most of the Philadelphia dealers are in the throes of the worst Christmas rush they ever knew. It was thought that with the unusually heavy buying winding up about the 15th of November for the boys in the trenches, the Christmas rush would be slightly less of a general mad house. But it didn't work out according to schedule, not by a durn sight.

The M. J. Dalton Co. is coaxing one express company to dig the railroads in the ribs and prod out a lil shipment of ten thousand imported smokes which are badly needed for the said Christmas rush. But the express company, of course, is powerless. Pretty much the same story is being told in every importing house in town.

As for the manufacturers, they also are hard pressed. Many of them are having daily rows with the fuel administrator trying to get enough coal to keep their plants working. So far none has closed down for lack of coal, but some have been dangerously near to a shut down.

As for the retailers, they are having extra troubles—especially the small guys. During the past few weeks Philadelphia has been contributing large sums, unwillingly, to the gentlemen of the burglar tribe. At least a half dozen small cigar stores in outlying sections have been pried open. Burglarizing is becoming as strictly fashionable as pink teas in the best society. The "big guns" apparently work only during the week ends, when most of the big hauls are made.

However, there is some sunshine in the offing. Along comes the Corn Exchange National Bank with a pamphlet telling manufacturers all about the kind of jobs that women can fill better than men. And under the heading of tobacco we find the following:

"The following is a list of processes in which women have, under suitable conditions, been successfully substituted for men during the present national emergency. In some operations it is found desirable to reduce the weights moved by the individual women below those formerly handled by the men they have replaced, and to use smaller trolleys or other receptacles:

1. Leaf damping, liquoring or wetting down, both at machines and at the floor processes.
2. Feeding leaf cutting machines.
3. Packing presses in roll and cake departments.
4. Plug filling and making.
5. Dressing or opening and spreading of cut tobacco.
6. Spinning.
7. Attending cigarette making machines under superintendence of remaining skilled men.
8. Soldering tins.
9. In various kinds of warehouse work, including packing for export.
10. Supervision—as forewomen."

Oscar G. Link, however, has left his berth as manager of the United Store in South Penn Square and has ventured into the haunts of Ryerson W. Jennings, a few doors away. Some weeks ago we had occasion to note the passing from that store of one of A. Schulte's strings, due to a difference of opinion between Mr. Jennings and the Schulte manager as to how a cigar stand should be run. Whether Mr. Link has convinced the said Ryerson that the stand should be separated from the restaurant which Mr. Jennings operates there, or not, we have not learned. It is a good stand, however, and Mr. Link should do well, as he has what the politicians call a "large following."

By way of keeping the record complete, it should be noted that the trouble down in the fifth ward which came to a head when Harry M. Cohen, a cigar dealer, was raided by strong-arm cops, is now in the lime light again.

MURIEL—and the Retailer's Profit

With a quality that pleases the consumer, with a popularity that permits a quick turn-over and a price that provides legitimat profit, Muriel Cigar is one of my best bets. ANY WISE RETAILER.

Neither Quality nor Advertising can make a lasting success of a cigar if the Retailer's legitimate Profit is ignored.

Every step in the wonderful development of Muriel—every new size, every new selling idea—considers first the Retailer's Friendly attitude.

All this excitement so rattled the boys at the . W. Stevens' store, when they trimmed their 'hristmas windows the other day, that they in-erted the transparent sign in the center panel ackwards, and it looked this way: "SRAGIC."

Undoubtedly, though, what the window man ieant to imply was, that the Flag matter be-ame "TRAGIC"!

Would you accept an order for a half-million igars? Sorry, sir, but it's impossible.

That, or practically that, will soon be the reply rom Boston to Louie Killeen, Schenectady.

For how can Waitt & Bond ship ten to fifteen ousand Totems to Killeen each and every week the serious strike in the Book-an'-bean town oes on as it is?

Then, too, there's the other jobbers in the lectric City to take care of.

Frumkin, Levy, and all the rest of the bunch, ell stacks of Totems. And the retailers also uy Totems in Schenectady like unto the quan-ity of the wives of Brigham Young.

While Blackstones, the big port de salut of the ouse, likewise go to Dorp in flocks even greater han the graduates of the town's Union Univer-ity. Though this other Blackstone law depart-ient of the college is located, rather curiously, n Albany, 17 miles away.

Still, the entire Capitol District, including Schenectady, Troy, and Albany, are all very uch interested in the outcome of this Waitt & Bond cigarmakers' strike in the city where they ometimes have cigar parties as well as tea arties.

George didn't go to Sunday-school! That is, f course, not last Sunday.

Rather, though, did he go to the post-office. To get and give a big bag o' mail in one of those here legal-lookin' portfolios, such as fellers carry who wear them astrachan collared coats, an' who seem to be on their way up Capitol Hill to extract Section 13 from the Poor Food Bill.

Just the same, sonny, George Thompson is busy. He's got all that weekly correspondence to attend to every week-end. And you know the number of men he bosses for Liggett & Myers.

"Getting back to business," resumed Paul Wessels, after a short digression upon Robert Burns, Owls and White Owls, "I really believe every dealer will be agreeably surprised by the usual holiday rush during the closing hours of the 23rd and 24th of the month. It's the old, old story, you know, about men letting those things slide, until the last minute compels action."

Can you do it? Can you speak five languages? Or can you understand any part of Russian, Polish, German, Yiddish, Italian, and the more popular Yankee-English?

Duker can. He even goes to police court occasionally to help Judge Brady untangle the affairs of such citizens as Czeslaw and Lukaszkiewcz.

And Duker has the nerve to say these Cossack names pronounce as they sound. Maybe he means they spell 'em so smooth so they'll flow like Ezra Kelly's watch-oil, which is made from the lower jaw-bone of a porpoise.

Anyway, A. N. Duker is no chump. Any boy like Duker, who'd rather study this Bolsheviki stuff than play Red Dog, talk wop-wrangle than dance the devil's doom, and try another lesson in dago rather than smoke a smoke—well, such a kid is pretty likely to go up top where his near-namesake, Duke, of the A. T. Co. used to be.

Especially so, on account of the fact Duker is already on first two or three rungs of the ladder, with a firm grip on the 'tother handles just a notch further on.

Because, you quite likely know, this is the chap who puts sugar in the coffee of the Bull Durham demonstrations.

Here, in the Capitol District, Duker spends at least two hours daily with his outfit, silver saucer, cup, bags of Bull, and the rest of the kit which shows smokers just how to sweeten their smokes, pipe or cigarette, with a dash of Durham.

On top of all this extra work, Duker walks 'bout an army march every day, selling Tuxedo and the other products of the American Tobacco Co.'s smoking department.

Particularly does Duker get the "signature of purchaser" on the five-inch line of Form 1600 from those foreigner merchants.

Explanation from Duker, however, soon convinces the imaginative smoker that good ole Bull is absolutely synonymous with sugar, though utterly unlike the sublime sweet.

"That's my hobby," retorted the late Anthony N. Brady, one day, when in the course of talk, a friend challenged the millionaire A. T. Co. promoter about his increasing capital, then over a hundred millions.

Which reminds the friend that Tony Brady, and his estate, had and still have immense holdings in the big concern whose $59,000,000 treasury common is to be issued, as required, up to $50,000,000 in Class B non-voting certificates. Even though the listed quotations on the old stock have shrunk some 80 points from high to date, the Albany interests are not alarmed about the condition of the monster tobacco company, whose current profits are reported very good, indeed.

"Good-bye, Good Roads, I'm going to leave you for a month or two," parted Sheriff William H. Keeler, shaking hands with Auditor Rhoddy Armington, of Keeler's Hotel.

"Down there in Lynnhaven, at my Virginia oyster beds," the Sheriff explained, "my aches and pains seem to leave me. But when I stay

HOSPITABLE MT. VERNON

Was Quick to Provide Shelter, Food and Smokes for Soldiers—The Good Work of Mayor Fiske.

Mount Vernon, N. Y., a city patriotic, again did a little "bit" for Uncle Sam last week, when the city officials announced they would be glad to receive 500 recruits from the overflow in New Rochelle, due to congested conditions at Fort Slocum.

The armory at Mt. Vernon was thrown open to the recruits and immediately the Red Cross chapter set to work to supply the men with plenty of food.

Mayor Fiske, who has already sent thousands of cigarettes to men in the service, and who has been termed "The smoking supply master for Mt. Vernon men in the army," made special efforts to provide smokes for the recruits.

From his own humidor, Mayor Fiske presented 500 cigars, also he gave hundreds of cigarettes, paying for them personally.

Realizing that these smokes would last but a short while, Mayor Fiske went to Proctor's Theater, Saturday afternoon and evening, and directed an appeal to the audience for funds to further the work of purchasing smokes for the men. And while the orchestra played "Over There," the girl ushers took up the collections.

Every request made to the Mt. Vernon people, whether to purchase Liberty Bonds, aid the Red Cross or in any other respect to help Uncle Sam, has been answered with speed. And the generous people did not fail on this occasion.

When the collections were counted it was found that $50 had been secured at the afternoon performance and that $195 had been donated at the evening show. With this money many cigars and thousands of cigarettes were bought and given to the men.

As most of the recruits had but little money, the donations of smokes came both as a surprise and as one soldier expressed it, "A Godsend." For five minutes, the men cheered the people of Mt. Vernon, after receiving the welcome smokes.

D. A. SCHULTE DOING HIS BIT.

Not satisfied with having distributed American flags to all who made purchases in his stores, and keeping boxes in the stores for the collection of tobacco certificates for the boys in France, D. A. Schulte, on December 10, turned over 5 per cent of a day's receipts to the Jewish Relief Fund, on another day 5 per cent to the Y. M. C. A. fund, and on a third day 5 per cent of the receipts of his 116 stores to the New York American Christmas Fund.

The Schulte stores are well represented in the service, for up to date twenty-eight men have answered the call to the colors, and twelve more are ready.

UP STATE TATTLE

here in Albany for the winter I continue to lose weight, and I can't afford, at my age, to throw away 35 pounds as I have done these last few weeks. So good-bye, Rhoddy, be a good boy."

Business at the Maiden Lane Keeler's continues dull, and the cigar stands share the repose. But the evening cabaret brings in enough trade to keep the place bright and lively, even though the Corona Coronas are not moving quite so fast as the D. & D. perfectos.

Now we know! It's quite apparent now just why the glass tops of the cigar counters in the Broadway store of G. W. Van Slyke & Horton have been covered, during the quiet hours, with books and papers.

For Al Fonda has been studying. No, he hasn't been interested in the tobacco culture reports of the Georgia-Florida crop conditions. Nor in the philosophy of Euthydemus and Dionysodorus. Not any of that dope. Plato isn't his teacher.

Because, in Plato's time, what did the chaps in the Greek cigar stores know about airships?

Nothing. So that's why Al Fonda had to look up and wrestle with instructors, in type and paper, who could compete with Glenn Curtiss, Orville Wright, and even little Miss Kate Stinson, who flew up in the air, right over the heretofore non-eagled Tehachapi mountains, down there in the California sunkist movieland.

For, Al Fonda, you should know, has been digging into aviation. Not at San Diego nor Hammondsport, but right here in Albany, with elbows head-deep in the subject between smokes on the Peter Schuyler box covers.

And Al leaves town in a day or so. To be gone 'til the war stops. Of course, he won't go up in one of them there parachutes right away. Of course not!

First off, he'll probably try a tied-to-the-ground balloon. While meantime, Al leaves his buddy, Mike Gorman, the V. S. & H. city salesman, down there in the store to counter the holiday rush.

Perhaps, if things get going too swift, Jim Horton will come downstairs. If he doesn't, Mike may go up in the air, like Al, only without the preparatory study in the books and papers, which have given Al Fonda this opportunity to become the Guynemer of the American Air Service.

THE SMOKER.

George Rosenthal, manager of the United Store at 1 Wall street, and his assistant, William Strauss, are kept on the jump every minute of the day getting out orders.

El Arabe brand is being rapidly and successfully placed with the trade throughout Greater New York. More than 600 stores in the metropolis now sell the old favorite in the new shade grown wrappers. And the percentage of repeat orders is unusually large.

The American Sumatra Tobacco Co. has sold all of its shade-grown Florida crop and about 75 per cent of its Connecticut crop. The other 25 per cent has been held back partly to have stock to go and come on and partly because the tobacco market continues to favor the seller.

S. E. Appelgate, vice president of the Strand Cigarette Co., left Tuesday night on a business trip to Baltimore, Washington and Philadelphia. Strand cigarettes are pushing to the front, and as soon as the machinery in the new factory is in working order a big campaign will be started.

The Farmers' Co-operative Tobacco Growers' Association met in Owensboro, Ky. Wednesday, to consider an offer for 8,000,000 pounds of pooled tobacco in Davies, McLean Ohio and Hancock counties. The price offered was not announced prior to the meeting, but it is expected to be around 17 cents a pound.

More than $30,000 will be received by Richard Leavell, of Hopkinsville, Ky., for his tobacco crop. He has contracted to deliver his entire crop grown on 110 acres and estimated to be 125,000 pounds. This is a record sale in dark fired tobacco both as to the size of the crop and price paid. It doubtless is one of the biggest ever known in Kentucky.

Thieves and robbers have profited to the extent of more than $2,000,000 by their operations in Chicago since the first of last January, according to police figures, made public Monday. This is said to be the largest harvest ever gathered here in a year by criminals. There were 14,000 burglaries of all description, twenty payroll robberies and ten bank robberies.

Milton Cohen, southern representative of E. M. Schwarz & Co., arrived in New York, this week, from St. Louis. He reports that business in his territory, during the past year, has been far above the average, especially for Mozarts. Wherever placed, the Mozart brand has been giving excellent satisfaction. Mr. Cohen will begin calling on the trade again after January 15.

A total of 305,000 pounds of tobacco were sold in one day last week on three loose-leaf floors in Henderson, Ky. Leaf ranged from $15 to $23, lugs from $12 to $18, and trash from $8 to $12.50. Severe cold weather, with the temperature around zero, kept many buyers off the floors. The average price was a fraction over 14 cents. One house has 250,000 pounds on the floor for sale Tuesday. Heavy snow will prevent large deliveries this week.

The management of Oppenheimer's cigar store at Battle Creek, Mich., has passed into the hands of Earl Watson, one of the oldest and most tried men in the Oppenheimer employ; Cloyd Smith, who was manager for the last three years, resigned to go into business for himself. Smith has opened a cigar stand in the City Bank Building. Watson was with the Oppenheimer company in Saginaw for 10 years. He went to Battle Creek two years ago as assistant manager of the store.

At the regular meeting of Oneida Cigarmakers' Union, No. 12, held Monday night in the Trades Assembly Hall at Oneida, N. Y., officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows: President, Joseph Robyns; vice president, Louis Reussow; Louis Ritter, corresponding secretary; De Verne Bender, recording secretary; Ernest Hunter, financial secretary. W. R. Ferguson declined a renomination for the office of president, he having served local 12 for the past 16 years as its presiding officer.

The highest price ever paid for a crop of tobacco in southern Lancaster County, Pa., was paid last week by Charles Hess, secretary of the Lancaster County Tobacco Growers' Corporation, who gave John Thompson, of Bart Township, thirty cents a pound through for seven acres, the tobacco to be delivered when shipped at the company's warehouse in Lancaster. The wrapper goods of another crop in another part of the county were sold for thirty-two cents a pound, but as the lower grades sold far below that figures, the price of the crop was less than Thompson's.

Two young robbers locked five men in a cigar store at State and Congress streets, Chicago, Wednesday evening a week ago, and escaped with $50, leaving the keys in the door so the police could liberate the prisoners. As the robbers stepped inside one drew a revolver and told the clerk, William C. Rose: "If any customers come in and you open your mouth I'll kill you." James R. Starr, of 17 North La Salle street; John McGinnis and two other men entered and were held up, but not robbed. Then the robbers took Rose's keys and locked the door.

The strikes of the employes of the Mi Carmen and the Kindling Cigar Manufacturing companies, in Milwaukee, which had been lingering for over six weeks, were adjusted Monday. The increases demanded by the workers in both factories were granted by the manufacturers, and range from 5 to 7 per cent. The workers feel that another big point has been gained in the settlement; they are assured better working conditions. The Kindling Co. will install electric fixtures and better the sanitary conditions in the factory. All of the workers of the factory have been taken back, with the exception of several strike leaders.

The sales of leaf tobacco in South Boston, Va., during the month of November were 3,642,601 pounds, which sold for $229,093.94, the average being $33.74 per 100 pounds. The sales for November, 1916, were 4,553,193 pounds, for $900,033.39, the average being $19.77 per 100 pounds. The sales for this season up to date were 13,260,512 pounds, which brought $4,090,182.45, or an average of $30.74 per 100 pounds. The sales for the same period of last year were 10,652,321 pounds, bringing $1,880,969.49. Increases this year over last: 2,608,191 pounds; amount, $2,209,212.96; average, $13.18 per 100 pounds.

Demands of cigarmakers for an increase in the wage scale of $1 for 1,000 cigars have been met by five Green Bay, Wis., manufacturers, and refused by two manufacturers. A half dozen men, out of twenty-four workers actually employed by shop proprietors, are not at work yet, according to the best available information. Union shops owned by Arthur A. Basche, Jacob Reis, Jacob Gigler, Louis Vilim and A. P. Van Schyndle are being operated, it is said. Union shops owned by John Huerth and Gus Schmidt are idle. Non-union shops are not affected by the workers' demands. The wage scale that has been in effect was $9 per 1,000 cigars of the five-cent variety; $13.14 per 1,000 for the ten-cent variety. The new scale presented by the union men to the proprietors calls for an additional $1 on both grades.

Now Whittier "Hands It" to Howe

A Discourse on Price Stabilization—And Comment on the Statement Issued by the National Retail Drygoods Association—A Characteristic Interview with the Secretary of the American Fair Trade League

WASHINGTON, December 15.—Action on the Stephens Standard Price Bill early in the new year was confidently predicted here today by Edmond A. Whittier, secretary-treasurer of the American Fair Trade League. When asked for a reply to the statement issued by the National Retail Dry Goods Association concerning the recent complaints filed by the Federal Trade Commission against the Mishawaka Woolen Co. and the Cudahy Packing Co., he said: "It is difficult to comment frankly on Secretary Howe's statement without seeming harsh, but it is certainly unfortunate that anyone should permit himself to discuss so complex a question as the public policy of price stabilization without being sure of his facts and stating them fairly.

"For instance, Howe is quoted as saying: 'The fact that advocates of price maintenance are seeking a new law is in itself evidence that the present law (the Clayton act) prevents their doing what they would like to do without laying themselves open to prosecution.' This certainly indicts Mr. Howe's intelligence, or his sincerity, for everybody else knows, even if he does not that the Stephens Bill was introduced and actively supported in Congress a year before the Clayton act was drawn. Moreover, it will be difficult for Mr. Howe to find anything in the Clayton act which even remotely involves the Stephens Bill stabilization principle for the prevention of predatory price cutting. Rather, the whole theory of the Clayton act is believed to support that principle and to eliminate cut throat competition and unfair discrimination.

"Again, if Howe's statement was based on actual knowledge of present Governmental activities, he would not permit himself to say: 'Price-fixing is in the air. The Government fixes the maximum price at which goods shall be sold, whereas our price-fixing, trade mark friends desire even more authority than the Government possesses.' "He would know," continued Whittier, "that the chief 'price-fixing' authority, Food Administrator Hoover, has repeatedly stated that the fixing of maximum prices has been unsuccessful in nearly all other countries but that the fixing of minimum prices, to curb and eliminate price-cutters, has proved beneficial and a necessary safeguard and encouragement to production. To accomplish this the Government, through Mr. Hoover, has already fixed a minimum price on wheat.

"All of Mr. Hoover's argument and work has been in the direction of price stabilization, which seems so distasteful to Mr. Howe and his price-cutting friends that he entirely avoids discussing it. All that the Stephens Bill seeks is a guarantee to producers and distributors of a living wage and to consumers of a competition in excellence between rival manufacturers.

"There are some things that Mr. Howe does know that he has failed to tell us, although we have asked him repeatedly. For example, he has, on several occasions, and after his attention was called to the error, made the deliberate statement that retailers were overwhelmingly opposed to price maintenance and has so far ignored our challenge to name even two hundred and fifty such merchants in the whole country out of the total of the two million or more. Mr. Howe does not represent, in my opinion, the sentiment of even a majority of his own association, but rather the attitude of a sensational price-cutting minority who are jealous of their present privilege of using standard goods as advertising bait to lure the public to buy other merchandise. That, possibly, is why he doesn't want to talk about one subject which he perfectly well understands."

Damage estimated at $2,000 was done by a fire which destroyed the cigar factory owned by Louis Schreiner, in West Duluth, Minn., at 9:30 o'clock Wednesday, a week ago. There was partial insurance. The building was a combined factory and warehouse located at 5416 Ramsey street.

Yahn & McDonnell, of Philadelphia, are ordering 5,000 cigars every ten days from the Old King Cole Co. A. W. Haines, of Baltimore, is using 25,000 a month. Jos. Snyder & Co., of Buffalo, use about 6,000 a month.

The "United" Store at 1 Wall street established a record for a single day's sale, Saturday; receipts totalling $12,000 were recorded by the cash register.

T. M. A. ADVICES

combined action by agreement in each industry with the purpose of reducing the consumption of coal and said he would be glad to make such an arrangement if the business men present wished to do so. He gave figures to show that coal is being produced and supplied to all industries in larger quantities than in normal times, but that the United States is still 50,000,000 tons short of the unusual demand. These figures led him to suggest willing, co-operative conservation as the only method by which American business can get out of the hole it is in for want of coal.

Mr. Peek spoke of the necessity of co-operation between the Industries Board and the manufacturers. No industry, he said, will be classified as non-essential, but he said there are, however, many non-essential portions in some industries,—odd sizes and styles,—and that cutting down these non-essential portions will strengthen industry and prove beneficial to the Government and the public at large.

While it is thus perfectly apparent that there is no likelihood of classifying industries into essentials and non-essentials, it must, nevertheless, be remembered that the fuel and transportation situatons may render it necessary for the Government from time to time to issue priority orders as has been done in the past, givng preference and priority in the supply or transportation of coal or in the use of freight cars or other transportation mediums to what may be termed war essentials.. Such orders, however, do not preclude other industries from securing fuel or transportation. They simply mean that such other industries must fall in line and wait their turn after the war essentials have been supplied.

Thus, while all industries other than those engaged in manufacturing or producing war essentials may from time to time suffer a shortage in fuel or delay in transportation, there is really no ground for any apprehension that there may be a classification of industries into essentials and non-essentials.

WOULD REDUCE CONGRESSMEN'S SALARIES.

WASHINGTON, December 17.—A bill to reduce salaries of Senators and Representatives from $7,500 to $5,000 during the war was introduced today by Senator Kenyon of Iowa and referred to the Appropriations Committee.

INVITATION TO MAKE TRACKS.

Samuel McGowan, paymaster general of the navy, became disgusted one day at the number of men in Washington seeking bombproof war jobs.

"The town is overrun," he remarked sarcastically, "with men having flat feet and great executive ability."

AND HE GOT A ROBERT BURNS.

Franklin P. Adams, famous humorist and newspaper colyumist, is wearing a captain's uniform and devoting himself to the so-called Intelligence Section of the Army War College in Washington.

"And I like it so well," insists Adams, "that I hate to think of ever doing anything else."

F. P. A. now limits himself to one jolt a day. The morning after his assignment to army duty he approached the first major he happened to see and inquired of him if he cared to contribute anything to the soldiers' tobacco fund. "Certainly. Certainly," agreed the major.

"Then," suggested Adams, standing at attention, "I wish you would let me have one of your cigars."—Collier's Weekly.

THE PRICE OF A SACK OF TOBACCO.

The article printed by The Houston Press, Saturday, showing an apparent hold-up by a retailer on a sack of Bull Durham tobacco, has raised considerable rumpus among tobacco men in Houston. Jobbers explained to The Press some of the reasons why prices are so much higher than they were a few weeks ago.

The case of the sack of Bull Durham which sold for six cents, when the American Tobacco Co. had put a note in the inside saying it should be retailed at five cents, calls for more explanation. The amount of tobacco in the Bull Durham sack has been reduced from one ounce to seven-eighths of an ounce.

This new size sack is made to sell at five cents with the war tax covered. In other words, the tax is taken out of the tobacco. The dealer who charged six cents for this new sized sack made an extra cent profit which can not be charged to the manufacturer.

Until the larger sacks are disposed of they will have to sell at six cents. But in the meanwhile there is no excuse for charging six cents for the small sacks. The purchaser can tell what size he is getting by looking on the government stamp, where the weight is printed.—Houston Press.

ANTICIPATE YOUR WANTS.

The railroads of New England have recently revised their freight schedules so that many towns that heretofore have enjoyed daily service have now been reduced to three, and in some cases two deliveries a week.

Many local express companies have discontinued business during the past month, partly due to excessive rates which their clients could not afford to pay and in other cases where the railroad charges were prohibitive. Added to this, different lines of business have been obliged to discontinue salesmen, partly due to their forces being depleted by the draft, and also shortage of merchandise.

The railroad situation is becoming more desperate every day and to those of our friends who wish to keep their stock in good order we advise them strongly to anticipate their wants well in advance, allowing for delays in delivery.—Manco Record.

When Lou comes back his position will be open for him with his old house.

Fritz Schoepke, who conducts a big buffet at 212 South Clark street, is running strong on Lucius and Hansel & Gretel cigars. A big window display is showing off both these sellers.

John Christian says "Girls and billiard balls kiss each other with about the same degree of feeling." John is doing a land office business with the brands controlled by his house, Steele Wedeles & Co. He has a large following with the down town trade.

Frank Braynard, manager of G. W. Faber, Inc., leaves on the 24th for a visit to the New York House of Faber.

Myer Bernstein, a cigar dealer of Rockford, Ill., paid Chicago a visit this week.

James Steenbock, of Grosvenor, Nicholas & Co., New York, has finished for this year.

I. Briskin, former head of I. Briskin, the jobbing house, who disappeared last August, has been located in Los Angeles, Cal. It is reported that he has wandered all over the country in the last four months. At present he is suffering from mental troubles and will remain on the coast until he has recovered.

I. R. Cohn, who recently opened at 50 West Lake street, is showing a fine Cuesta Rey display. Harvester, San Alto, Cyrilla, Robert Burns, Tom Moore and other popular lines are to be found in his cases.

A neat counter sign has been delivered to the trade bearing the ad of the Wellington pipe.

Jose Vila, packed five in a mahogany box and selling at 75 cents, is going well with many dealers. The cigars contained in the box are the regular londres size.

Very attractive Christmas windows are seen in the following stores: Best Russell chain; Shoemaker & Co.; Dolan Segar Shop, Wengler & Mandell, A. Schulte chain, United Cigar Stores, Monroe Cigar Co., F. Couthoui, L. Widducks, Fred L. Wells, Ed. Kirsch, Lilienfeld Brothers, James H. Wells, Harmon Cigar Co. chain, Schermerhorn & Co., and the stores of Albert Breitung.

Walter Tobin now carries a full line of Pera cigarettes.

Clayton Keffer, manager of the Hamilton Club, is showing the members a fine line of imported cigars. Several brands in many sizes are on display.

Joe Hayden is a proud daddy these days. Joe's son who joined the army is now a first lieutenant. Hayden is the cigar manager of the Chicago Athletic Club, whose main brand is the well-known Cherry Circle clear Havana cigar.

Tom Keenes are featured by an army of dealers. The newspapers are carrying big "Keene" ads at present.

Franklin's Club House have advanced in price. They now go to the trade at $36.00 less two per cent. H. B. Franklin Co. are the manufacturers.

Chas. Barker Co., the south side jobbers, are placing Rustic bough Havana style stogies with the trade. They retail two for five cents.

Sight Drafts are being offered for a short time only in the Schermerhorn stores for five cents each.

Iwan Reis & Co., 104 North Fifth avenue, are showing Romeo Garcia mild Havana cigars. Business is good with Reis & Co.

Looks as though the dealer of cigars is in for a new license since the city is so short of cash. They are going to put on a lot of new taxes. The latest report is that the tax on cigarettes will be $100 or $200 per year.

Arthur Ford, better known as "Art," is getting up a mammoth minstrel show. Talent is taken from the Rookery building, and Ford is connected with the Breitung's store in this building. The proceeds will go to the tobacco fund for the Sammies. Art is going to ride astride ye ancient bicycle doing tricks as his part of the programme.

James Wells, the druggist, is boosting Dulce. A big window display of this brand is seen at his Jackson and Fifth avenue drug store.

Constitutional prohibition was defeated in e October election in Iowa by 932 votes. The o ficial canvass of the votes, just completed, g the "wets" much cause for rejoicing.

Well, John, since you are very seldom r resented I thought I might as well let rest of the bunch know that you are still existence. "Ohio Flats" are selling bigger th ever with the local trade and John Colk is the cause of it. John is one of those r quiet boys who gets there without a lot noise.

Harmon Cigar Co.'s store, No. 3, at 1 South Dearborn street, is showing a big wind of Romeo Garcia rough and ready short smok They retail at ten for 25 cents.

Lucius, Hansel & Gretel and Flor de Me del are big sellers here. H. L. H.

Oscar S. Veit Passes Away

Oscar S. Veit, for the past four years connected with Gans Bros., died last week at 201 West 107th street, New York, and was buried Sunday in Salem Fields, Cypress Hills. Mr. Veit leaves a widow and two married daughters, Mrs. Albert G. Gans, Mrs. A. Sherwin, and a son, Bob Veit.

Mr. Veit was a past president of the Salesmen Association, an active members of the Independent Retailers' Association, and belonged to the Masonic Order. His lodge and all branches of the tobacco trade were well represented at the funeral.

He began his career as a cigar maker. Later he purchased a factory and went into business for himself.

Prior to going with Gans Bros., Mr. Veit was with Bondy & Lederer for a number of years, and then represented Roy Straus & Co., the Tampa firm, when they had a New York office.

Speaking of the deceased, J. M. Gans said that Veit was the most conscientious salesman he had ever known. It was nothing unusual for Veit to work seven days a week. He took a keen delight in work, and was never willing to let up until he had produced results.

Oscar Veit was an entertaining speaker always. His speeches frequently were the chief feature of many trade meetings. In his leisure he wrote a great deal of poetry. Gans Bros. have lost a valuable employe and the trade will miss an active, friendly and most sincere worker for the common good.

Norfolk Tobacco Plant Burned

The British-American Tobacco Co. had a plant in Norfolk, Va., destroyed by fire on December 16, with an estimated loss of $500,000. All the machinery in the place was put out of commission, and a large stock of cigarettes ready to be shipped to China were destroyed. The fire was caused by crossed wires.

The company did not own the buildings, which formerly were an old paper mill, but had rented them. Work has already been started on a new plant, but for the present the three hundred and fifty employes are out of employment.

"Chopping Up Our Country"

A PLEA FOR THE REPEAL OF A PERNICIOUS LAW

By Rex Beach

This new postal rate upon magazines and periodicals will make the cost of transportation to subscribers in various sections of the United States almost prohibitory. Most of the great publishing houses are in New York, Philadelphia or Boston. A few are in Chicago and other parts of the Middle West; a few on the Coast. No longer will magazines and periodicals sell for the same price in the West and South as in the East, for the War Revenue Bill increases the postal rate no less than nine hundred per cent for those western and southern sections of the United States.

Magazine publishers have never protested and do not now protest against any proposed war taxes that affect all businesses alike. They are willing and anxious to pay any excess profits taxes, income taxes—any and all that Congress sees fit to levy. Many of them have offered to give all of their profits while the war lasts. This Zone Postage Law, under the guise of tax raising, unfairly singles out a certain percentage of publishers to be specially taxed—a class already heavily burdened. It demands of them not a five per cent tax on their profits, not a sixty per cent tax on their excess profits during war times, but more than all the profits which these publishers derive from all sources whatsoever!

America is approaching a crisis that will test her strength, her courage, her solidarity; a crisis upon which may hinge her destiny and the destiny of the world. Now, above all times, you, Mr. General Reader, must be assured of a free and an independent press, for this is your war. Your son's life, your own existence is in the scales. Our great newspapers and our national magazines are the finest, the cleanest in the world. They constitute the greatest force for good, the greatest medium of education that we possess. They are the cement that holds us together. Any attempt to throttle those magazines and newspapers is a matter of such sinister importance that I, for one, do not believe you will tolerate it.

Do you want to see your favorite magazine destroyed forever as a result of a vindictive effort to punish it for its fearless defense of your rights? That is what will happen unless the Zone Rate Bill is repealed or greatly modified at the next session of Congress. Some few magazines will survive in case it is not repealed—those which are strong enough to absorb into their general overhead expense the tremendous increase in postal rates. The influence of those few magazines will be strengthened, a monopoly will be created, but the majority will go under and never come up. Do you want to see that?

The Constitution of the United States was drafted with the announced purpose of fostering the Arts and Sciences. Under it, America has built up a literature to be proud of and has developed a body of honest, honorable, self-supporting men and women who live by their pens. When Congress destroys the magazines of America it destroys the men and women who make those magazines, who help to mold the thought of the nation and who help you to interpret the many problems of our complex existence. Do you wish to see the writers of America destroyed? That is what will happen when the Zone Postal Rate goes into effect, for we writers—the most of us—derive the largest part of our living from the periodicals. Without them, few of us could survive.

Do you realize what a large part the periodicals and the writers of America are playing in the conduct of this war? They have brought it home to us, they have welded us to our Allies. Without propaganda we could not fight. All are doing not only their bit, but their utmost, and the power of their printed words is incalculable. What of our two Liberty Loans, not to speak of those to come? In floating the first and second loan the government sought publicity; and it was given. We authors gave freely of our time, our energy, to promote the sale of bonds, and articles from our pens appeared as reading matter, not as advertising copy, in all the publications of America. Newspapers and magazines gave freely of their space, they devoted their highest talents to the cause.

All of this was done without charge. That the government should ask this assistance merely proves that it needs the aid of the far-reaching arm of the magazines and periodicals. Nevertheless, while it is calling for that aid it deliberately paralyzes that strong arm by this Zone Rate. What process of reasoning lies behind such legislation?

This is no time to divide America, to create zones, to draw boundary lines that separate one state, one territory from another. If ever the East needed to know the trend of thought in the West, now is the time. If divisions and sub-divisions in our country are to occur, surely that should be postponed until we have passed the present crisis. Maine must know about Wisconsin; California must hear news from Georgia. Yet how, except through the thundering presses of the land, is the trend of our national thought to be disseminated?

If this Bill is allowed to stand, a burden will be placed upon the backs of magazines of national circulation so heavy that few will be able to bear it. Even farm journals, the women's papers, and trade papers of many kinds will be forced out of business. In seeking unwisely to gain greater revenue by an increase in postal rates, less revenue will accrue, for the periodicals through their mere existence open up endless avenues for governmental profit and taxation. They are, therefore other things are.

Numerous efforts have been made in the past radically to increase second-class postal rates. Commissions were provided by Congress to study the problems involved. They reported against the "Zone System."

In an interview given on the occasion of the last effort to increase the postal rates on the advertising sections of magazines, Woodrow Wilson, then Governor of New Jersey, was quoted as saying:

"It must be that those who are proposing this change of rates do not comprehend the effect it would have. A tax upon the business of the more widely circulated magazines and periodicals would be a tax upon their means of living and performing their functions.

"They obtain their circulation by means of their direct appeal to the popular thought. Their circulation attracts advertisers. Their advertisements enable them to pay their writers and to enlarge their enterprise and influence.

"This proposed new postal rate would be a direct tax, and a very serious one, upon the formation and expression of opinion—its more deliberate formation and expression just at a time when opinion is concerning itself actively and effectively with the deepest problems of our politics and our social life.

"To make such a change now, whatever its intentions in the minds of those who propose it, would be to attack and embarrass the free processes of opinion. Surely sober second thought will prevent any such mischievous blunder."

The Zone Postal Tax was jammed through Congress without due consideration, and is now a law. Unless it is repealed or modified, it means destruction to magazines and to authors, it spells a widespread ruin to many allied businesses, and it deeply affects you and your welfare.

You are intimately concerned, for the problem belongs to all of us. The remedy is in your hands. Telegraph or write your Congressman, urging him to use his influence to do away with the iniquitous Zone System as applied to second-class matter.

CUBAN CROP ASSURANCES

More Tobacco Comes Out

HAVANA, December 21.—Activity in the leaf market has continued unabated, but stocks of leaf for sale in the open market are now so much reduced, one cannot expect from now on to see big purchases, such as have been made during the past month or two. Transactions during the past two weeks were even larger than anticipated, as according to the declarations of leaf dealers, only very reduced supplies were, purchasable. However, as it always happens, when prices are high, hidden stocks turn up unexpectedly from the country. The receipts from the country are still fairly large, owing to the scarcity of labor. The several packings have continued longer than usual.

Last week's report referred to the drought in the country. But since it has rained sufficiently in Santa Clara province, the Remedios crop may be considered assured, and the yield is likely to be larger than last year. The grounds were in excellent condition, and according to the statement of one large planter, packer and buyer of this class of leaf for the American market, we may count upon a good quality of leaf in the year to come, unless unforseen conditions arise. If there were any surplus stocks in the market, a reaction in prices might occur, but there are none to speak of now. Prices paid for the first seedlings were higher than ever. Upon the later transplantings will depend, in part at least, the cost of production later on, and thus create a lower average.

As far as Vuelta Abajo is concerned, the outlook is not much improved yet, except on the North Coast, where they had had rains, but the Tierra Llana districts were suffering from drought, according to the latest reports. As the rains have been from the northeast, they did not reach the lowlands in the Vuelta Abajo, south of the mountain ranges. It would be a calamity if the Tierra Llana districts did not produce a fairly large crop this year. However, as we have had showers and drizzling rains here in Havana for nearly the entire time during the past week, we have not lost hope yet that matters may improve in the Vuelta Abajo ere long.

The Partido crop may be considered secure from any further harm, as rains have fallen. One planter, who had made his transplantings upon well fertilized fields, and under cheesecloth during the second half of October, is going to commence cutting the ripe leaves by the end of this month. His farm is an exception, as cutting in general in the Partido section may not take place until the second half of January.

Exports of cigars, per S. S. Mexico, totaled 529 cases,, containing 2,731,122 cigars, which were consigned to the following countries, viz: To Great Britain, 1,672,480; to the United States, 864,625; to Uruguay, 71,692; to Canada, 54,000; to British Africa, 30,000; to the Argentine Republic, 22,100; to Gibraltar, 10,000; to Bermuda, 4,225, and to Egypt, 2,000 cigars.

Exports of leaf tobacco from Havana during the week ending December 8th, 1917, totaled 6,255 bales, which were distributed to the following countries, viz: To all ports of the United States, 4,298; to Canada, 876; to Great Britain, 68; to Uruguay, 273, and to Chile, 740 bales.

Among the leaf buyers who arrived this week were: Angel L. Cuesta, Sr., of Cuesta, Rey & Co., and Manuel Garcia, of Perfecto Garcia & Bros., both of Tampa, and Marco Fleishman, of S. Rossin & Sons, of New York.

Leslie Pantin, the Portuguese Consul-General, did not arrive on Saturday evening, as the train from New York to Key West had been delayed again, and only got here on Sunday morning. He was accompanied by his family.

Otto Eisenlohr & Bros., Inc., had purchased, during the stay of Louis H. Eisenlohr, in our city, 2,200 bales of second capaduras of Remedios, and some 300 barrels of stripped fillers.

Hijo de Diego Montero bought 2,063 bales of leaf tobacco for export to the Argentine Republic and Uruguay, in the last two weeks.

Walter Sutter & Co. reported their purchases of leaf, for account of their customers, during the past fortnight, to have been 4,471 bales, partly bought in town, and partly in the country.

Leslie Pantin secured another 1,795 bales of leaf, for account of his customers, in the past two weeks.

The Cuban Land & Leaf Tobacco Company added 1,225 bales of tobacco to its former large holdings.

Hinsdale Smith & Co. were buyers of 1,213 bales of Vuelta Abajo and Remedios leaf, during Ted Smith's stay in Havana.

Sobrinos de A. Gonzalez bought 1,105 bales of leaf for export to the Argentine Republic and Chile lately.

Romeo y Julieta purchased 575 bales of Vuelta Abajo vegas, which had not been grown by the irrigation system.

Allones, Ltd., purchased and shipped 902 bales of leaf to the Argentine Republic in the last two weeks.

Mark A. Pollack bought 494 bales of leaf, for account of clients.

Starlight Bros. managed to procure about 500 bales of prime Remedios leaf.

Jose Suarez & Co. received 287 bales of leaf, on previous contracts, for account of customers.

Principal sellers were: Aixala & Co., 2,712 bales of Vuelta Abajo and Remedios; Tomas Benitez Leon, 2,160; Herrera, Calmet & Co., 950; Muniz & Gonzalez, 900; F. Ezquerro, 725; Jose F. Rocha, 684; Gutierrez & Foyo, 610; Pastor Sanchez, 560; Jose C. Puenter & Co., 550; Muniz Hermanos, 486; Suarez Hermanos, 472; Peso & Co., 380; Selgas & Co., 221, and Leon & Delgado, 190 bales of leaf tobacco.

Most of the factories in Havana still are busy on English orders. The holiday orders for the United States have been filled already, although quantities of current sizes remain there to be dispatched. Besides, the factories have unfilled orders yet for Spain, France, South America, Australia, South Africa and other minor countries. So far no prolongation on the outstanding British orders appears probable.

Romeo y Julieta is working in splendid shape for Great Britain and other countries. Don Pepin intended to leave Spain yesterday, bound for Havana.

Partagas is doing great work right along and, having also good orders, after the end of this month, may keep on working as heretofore.

Punch, Belinda, Hoyo de Monterrey, Calixto Lopez & Co., Por Larranaga, Ramon Allones, La Corona, and C. E. Beck & Co. are all busy.

C. del Peso & Co., the new owners of Flor de Tomas Gutierrez, are making excellent progress. Their cigars are fully up to the standard of "Vuelta Abajo" factories. They have purchased much fine tobacco from the Vuelta Abajo.

ROSAM.

W. A. Hollingsworth, the Woolworth cigarist, will enlarge his store in the building by cutting through to Vesey street, much more than doubling his present capacity. New humidors, showcase and a special pipe department will be added. Mr. Hollingsworth intends to have the finest cigar store in the country. All the plans are ready and about January 15, 1918, will be the opening date. His Christmas trade has been a big surprise to him, enormous amounts of cigars were sold.

Harry Tenney and One Day's Royalty

Harry Tenney, a popular New York song writer, knows what it is to be out a cigarette, and he thinks that unless every one does his bit the boys in trenches may run out of smokes just when they need them most. But rdless of what others do, Tenney is going to do his little bit, and he has nged with his publishers, Jos. W. Stern & Co., to donate 25% of his lties from his latest song, "Send Back Dear Daddy to Me," to the "Our in France" tobacco fund.

Receiving money from a song of this kind is very different from getting nue from a song published by a fund or an individual, as Tenney's song is le at all five and ten cent stores, department stores, and other music counters iis country and Canada, as well as being featured by headliners in the leville world.

The photograph, taken in the Strand Cigarette factory, shows the cigarettes one day's royalty from Tenney's song will send to boys in the trenches.

Big Business of the Five and Ten Cent Stores

e appeal to the small economics of life by the five and ten cent stores is irresist- ays American Industries. "Regardless of sons taught by these institutions in past ve regard them as most valuable adjuncts life to which the American must submit during the next few years. They teach n in thrift and offer opportunities for al economics of the right kind that are catered to in no other way. Savings and thrift campaigns are the order of the day. We are told that the war can be successfully carried on only by the exercise of the most rigid economy and by diverting our savings to the cause of war. The 'five and tens' are going to be a wonderful help in doing this."

The very nature of the business and the appeal to the smallest of coinage assures this type of enterprise a stability uninfluenced by depressions. It assures it added stability in periods like this, when people are compelled to economize, when failure to economize is regarded as an unpatriotic act. During the period of the war these stores should be doubly popular.

The four largest five and ten cent stores, the Woolworth, Kresge, Kress and McCrory, operate altogether 1,270 separate stores widely distributed. Some idea of the magnitude and continued growth of their business may be had by an inspection of the following table:

Year.	Woolworth.	Kresge.	Kress.	McCrory.	Total.
1914	$69,619,669	$16,097,571	$11,897,929	$4,929,164	$102,544,333
1915	75,995,774	20,943,300	12,429,590	5,613,987	114,982,651
1916	87,350,000	26,175,000	15,325,844	6,449,349	135,300,193
Total					$352,827,174

Altogether, these four corporations handled, in the foregoing three years, an amount of money equal to 7,056,543,480 nickels, or 3,528,271,740 dimes. Some conception of this volume of coins may be had from the fact that the total coinage of these pieces by the mints of the United States in a single year is but about 30,000,000 nickels and 6,500,000 dimes, and that there is now in circulation in the entire country but approximately 750,000,000 nickels.

The manager of a chain of tea and coffee stores once was heard to remark that if he could make a net profit of a cent on every sale he would be making a profit beyond his wildest dreams. We presume the "five and tens" are satisfied with far less profit, indeed there is nothing startling about the profits they do report, nothing like a cent a sale. War profits are not for these corporations. They seem to seek the consistent profits that conservative merchants depend upon, whatever the season or state of trade, war or peace.

Nor has the business reached its maximum growth for, in point of fact, it is still very youthful. Ten years hence it should, with the increase in population and through constant expansion in the number of stores, double its present sales since it is a business that holds a strong appeal to economizing purses of millions of thrifty men and women.

AT THE PISTOL'S POINT

About $80 in Cash Was Taken From a United Cigar Store in Milwaukee—Two Robbers Got Away.

Two men held up the United Cigar store, Third and State streets, Milwaukee, Friday night, forced the clerk into a back room at the point of a revolver, took about $80 from the cash register and made their escape.

The holdup occurred at 9 o'clock and within plain view of pedestrians. The store is situated so that a full view of the interior can be had through the windows from both streets.

There were no customers in the store when the men entered. Both walked up to the counter and asked to see the telephone directory. One of the men went towards the directory which lay on the end of the counter while the other pointed a gun at the head of Louis Heup, the clerk, and told him to hold up his hands. He then ordered Heup to back into a room at the rear of the store and held him there while his accomplice took the money from the cash register.

As soon as the robbers left Heup telephoned to the police department. He claims to have recognized one of the men, and furnished descriptions of both to the police.

One manufacturer says "the price of shade grown wrappers make clear Havana popular."

AS THE YEAR CLOSES

Gains and losses, joy and sorrow, benefit and trouble, good fortune and disappointment, in some measure, we all had during the year about to close. If 1917 was not entirely lucky, the year brought many things to be thankful for; even a pessimist will admit that worse could have happened.

In the tobacco trade, only a few, perhaps, have made "big money." Yet, in the various divisions of the industry, the number of failures was surprisingly small.

The chief complaint is high prices. But the demand for cigars, cigarettes, smoking tobacco and snuff never has been greater or more urgent. Making sales is the least of a manufacturer's difficulties, today. And there is a much larger amount of money in circulation. Reports, everywhere, are made concerning a scarcity of labor. Yet outputs are increased and practically all important factories are operating to capacity.

Because our country is at war, determined to achieve victory at any cost, business is being brought down to a war basis. All must expect to pay high taxes, everyone should be prepared to make patriotic sacrifices.

Concerning Coal Production

That the present coal shortage in the United States is due to causes other than lack of output, is indicated in a compilation made by the National City Bank of New York, which estimates an output of 1917 greater than in any earlier year and shows that the United States actually produces nearly 45 per cent. of the coal of the world. In 1860 we were producing less than 10 per cent of the world's coal output; in 1870, 15 per cent.; in 1880, 21 per cent.; in 1890, 34 per cent; in 1910, 43 per cent.; in 1916, 44 per cent., and the 1917 record when completed will probably show our share of the world's output fully 45 per cent.

The coal production of the United States grew less than a half million short tons in 1830 to 2,000,000 tons in 1840; 15,000,000 in 1860; 71,000,000 in 1880; 158,000,000 in 1890; 270,000,000 in 1900; 502,000,000 in 1910; 590,000,000 in 1916, and estimated at 650,000,000 short tons in 1917.

Pennsylvania is by far the largest coal producing state, her total output aggregating nearly 250,000,000 tons against about 80,000,000 in West Virginia, 60,000,000 in Illinois, 23,000,000 in Ohio, 21,000,000 in Kentucky, 17,000,000 in Indiana and 15,000,000 in Alabama. Practically all of the anthracite coal produced in the United States is mined in the state of Pennsylvania, where it forms about one-third of the total output. Present indications are that the anthracite production of 1917 will aggregate about 100,000,000 short tons out of a total coal production of approximately 650,000,000 tons in the entire United States.

The United States has been for many the world's largest producer of coal. In the year preceding the war and the latest no year for world production, the United S produced 570,000,000 short tons against 000,000 in Great Britain; 306,000,000 in many; 60,000,000 in Austria-Hungary; 45 000 in France; 36,000,000 in Russia; 25 000 in Belgium and 24,000,000 in Japan. total world product of that year was 1,478 000 tons, our share of that total being app mately 38 per cent. In 1916 our share o world's product was about 44 per cent. a 1917 will presumably approximate 45 per

The United States is quite naturally the est coal producer of the world. Accordi the bank's statement its coal supply far ex that of any other country, her estimated s being 3,527,000,000,000 short tons against 000,000,000 in Great Britain, the next la producer; 164,000,000,000 in Germany, ranks third as a coal producer. C supply ranks next to that of the U States and is estimated at 1,500,000,0 short tons, or less than half our own China's output of coal is extremely sm trifle of 15,432,000 tons in 1913, accordi the bank's statement. So large is our s that according to the Geological Surve quantity of coal produced from the min the United States since coal mining beg century ago, is but about one-half of 1 per of the original supply, the entire output o mines from the beginning of coal mini 1800 to the end of 1917 having been 12,00 000 tons out of an estimated supply of 3 000,000,000.

Notwithstanding the fact that we have the world's largest supply and are als world's largest producer of coal, our e are much less than those of certain other tries having a much smaller supply. Britain's coal exports in 1913, the latest n year, amounted to 82,000,000 short ton Germany's about 37,000,000 short tons, the United States in the fiscal year 191 ported but about 23,000,000 short tons. the beginning of the war, however, ou exports have shown a slight increase, b been in 1917 about 20 per cent. more th 1913, while those of Great Britain mea declined and those of Germany were, of c confined to trade with the adjacent n countries. The total value of coal ex from the United States in the fiscal yea was $83,000,000 against $65,000,000 in of this $85,000,000 worth exported in 1917 000,000 went to Canada, $5,000,000 to about $7,000,000 to South America and 000 to Italy.

The quantity of coal consumed on the of the world by vessels engaged in interna trade and the navies of the various count estimated by the bank at about 75,000,00 per annum, valued at approximately $25 000, these figures relating to conditions p ing the war. The total quantity at the p time is doubtless materially less, both by of the reduction in the number of vesse gaged in ocean transportation and the f fact that many of the vessels are now us for fuel instead of coal.

Team Work Wins

It ain't the guns nor armament
Nor funds that they can pay,
But the close cooperation
That makes them win the day.

It ain't the individuals
Nor the army as a whole,
But the everlastin' team work
Of every bloomin' soul.
